BATTLE IN FAR EAST MIGHT BE DISASTROUS TO PEACE MOVEMENT

Efforts Being Made to Keep Opposing Armies Apart.

Oyama Has the Russians Encircled In a Big Net.

Announcement of Plenipotentiaries Will Soon Be Made.

Washington, June 19.—While the progress of the preliminary negotiations for peace between the Far Eastern belligerents is necessarily slow at this stage of the proceedings, it is known that President Roosevelt hopes they practicaly may be concluded before he shall go to Oyster Bay for the summer. His desire to facilitate, in every possible way, the negotiations induced him to reconsider his original plan to go to Oyster Bay this week. After his visit to Worcester and Williamstown, Mass., where he will go to attend the commencement exercises of Clark university and Williams college, he will return to Washington, arriving here next Friday morning. It is expected that if nothing unforeseen shall have occurred in the meantime, some definite announcement of the status of the negotiations may be made soon after his return. There is a possibility even, that the selection of the plenipotentiaries of both Russia and Japan may be announced before the president leaves tomorrow for Massachusetts.

A final determination of the seat of the conference having been reached, the president, in common with the political world, is awaiting the action of the belligerent nations as to their peace envoys. With that part of the program, the president, naturally, has nothing to do. When the selections have been made the names of the envoys of the respective government will be communicated to the governments in interest, and formally announced to the world. It is the hope here that arrangements for the conference may proceed with such facility as to avert a general engagement in Manchuria between the forces of Gens. Linevitch and Oyama. The precipitation of a great battle at the present stage of the peace negotiations would be regarded here as the most unfortunate error of judgment, an error which might imperil seriously the negotiations. Indeed, it is believed that in some quarters, that whatever might be the result of such a conflict, it would arouse so much bitterness that the negotiations, the status of which are now so favorable, would collapse.

It can be said that the president is giving no heed to irritating personal references to him which have appeared in a part of the Russian press. His conduct of the peace negotiations thus far has been as nearly directly as possible with the emperors of the belligerent powers and the arrangements concluded, represent their personal views as well as his own. The reference to the president by an important St. Petersburg newspaper as a "broker" is regarded here as most unhappy, although it is known in Washington that it does not reflect the sentiments of the St. Petersburg government. Such comments serve, however, to accentuate the desire of the president and of the powers generally to avert, if possible, another serious engagement on the Manchurian battlefield, lest the conciliatory efforts heretofore may be rendered fruitless through the utterances of the Russian press, backed as they may be by the powers of the war party in the empire.

WASHINGTON SELECTED.

Russia Definitely Accepts City as Meeting Place.

St. Petersburg, June 19.—Russia has finally and definitely accepted Washington as the meeting place of the Russian and Japanese plenipotentiaries, the foreign office having waived its request for reconsideration at the personal direction of the emperor, whose desire to give the fullest and fairest opportunity to President Roosevelt's proposal for a peace conference is hereby manifested.

After his conference with Ambassador Meyer, Count Lamsdorff, the foreign minister, went to Peterhof and laid the matter before the emperor, who, on learning that insistence on The Hague might endanger the negotiations, directed Count Lamsdorff to inform Ambassador Meyer that Russia would accept Washington.

It was after midnight when the foreign minister returned from Peterhoff, but Ambassador Meyer was forthwith notified and a cipher dispatch was prepared and sent to the state department at Washington at an early hour yesterday morning.

The result is looked upon as a decided triumph for American diplomacy.

RELIGIOUS HOLIDAY

At St. Petersburg Attracts the Russian Mind.

St. Petersburg, June 19, 5:40 p. m.—This was Whit Monday and a great religious holiday. Private as well as public business was suspended. At the foreign office only half a dozen officials were on duty and they declared that Russian had not yet been apprised of Japan's wishes as to the time of the peace meeting or the number of plenipotentiaries, but the officials indicated that Russia would be found willing to meet Japan's wishes. Any number of plenipotentiaries from one to three is agreeable to Russia. In addition to the names of Ambassador Nelidoff and Count Rosen, the name of Prof. De Maartens, professor of international law at the university of St. Petersburg, and a member of the international arbitration court, is now mentioned, as also is the suggestion that Count Cassini might possibly be one of the plenipotentiaries. If the impression which prevails at the foreign office that Japan intends to send Marquis Ito and possibly other statesmen from Japan is true, it is pointed out that the meeting cannot occur within a month. In the meantime, so far as indicated here, there has been no moves in the direction of a suspension of hostilities. No confirmation has been received here of the report from Godzyadani of June 17, that negotiations for an armistice had been begun between Field Marshal Oyama and Gen. Linevitch. On the contrary, the latest news from the front leaves little doubt that Oyama's columns are in motion and disquieting rumors are current here regarding the position of the Russian army according to which Oyama has succeeded in pushing both his flanks far forward, respectively opposite Kuanchengtsu and Kirin, whence he can draw a noose around troops below this line.

LIAO YANG WOPENG RETAKEN.

Headquarters of the Russian Army, Godzyadani, Manchuria, June 18, (Sunday.)—The Russian cavalry have retaken the town of Lia Yang Wopeng.

The Japanese occupied the village of Sumiencheng on the main road to Changtufu and Mamakai in the morning of June 16, but they did not succeed in crossing the river. At 3 in the afternoon, the Russians recaptured Sumiencheng, three squadrons of Japanese retiring in a southwesterly direction.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Kalamazoo, Mich., June 19.—Lightning early today struck a wagon in which employes of a circus were sleeping at Augusta, killing W. J. Currier of Flint, Mich., and injuring five others. All of the injured were badly shocked but will recover. Three of them, John C. Egrist and R. Kenzie and Roy Weatherby are paralyzed.

FRANCE AGREES TO JOIN CONFERENCE

Over Morocco If an Agreement on Points Can Be Reached.

Berlin, June 19.—Premier Rouvier has informed Prince Radolin, the German ambassador at Paris, that France is inclined to accept the invitation to take part in the proposed conference on Morocco, provided the German and French governments can reach a mutually satisfactory agreement as to the precise points to be considered by the conferes. The conviction will be able to agree on this program. Although earnest differences of view are yet to be reconciled, the authoritative judgment of the foreign office is that they will all be overcome by negotiation. M. Rouvier has thus yielded to Prince Von Buelow on two essential points, on which M. Delcasse, the former minister, had refused the invitation to take part in a Morocco conference. M. Rouvier first consented to reopen the question, and second, agreed to take part in the conference, provided the protocol is in conformity with French interests. This will be accepted by Germany, which will limit the deliberation of the conference. Great Britain, supporting France, had also refused to join the proposed conference, but Foreign Secretary Lansdowne has, it is understood, stated that if France accepted, Great Britain would also accept. A great diplomatic battle is in progress, with the probabilities leaning toward the German success.

No adequate view of the German feeling at this time can be presented without making note of the very general belief in naval circles that Germany is seeking an excuse to check the great progress which is making in the German sea armament. This view is widely expressed among naval officials of all classes. It is their view that Great Britain would be willing that France should suffer defeat on land, if Britain thereby was given a chance to destroy the German navy. As a result of this feeling there is great activity in the German navy and it has never been so alert or so perfectly ready for defense as now. A plausible explanation for this alarmist view is that Admiral Tirpitz has been anxious to test the preparedness and speed with which the navy could be placed upon a war basis and therefore desired that the officers should feel the thrill and stimulus of an immediate cause to bring out the best that is in them.

Paris, June 19.—Official quarters here today show a feeling of confidence concerning the early adjustment of the Franco-German controversy, which is in marked contrast with the agitation and depression of the last week. It is definitely stated that the negotiations between Premier Rouvier and Prince Radolin, the German ambassador, give promise of accord within the present week. This, doubtless, will be for an international conference, with the scope clearly defined, so as not to give the slightest prejudice to French interests or obligations, but rather to supplement the international agreements France heretofore has made. The conversations between M. Rouvier and Prince Radolin are proceeding in the most amicable spirit, with a feeling manifest on both sides to reach an agreement.

A singular development of the situation is the attitude of the Socialists, under the leadership of M. Jaures, who joined hands with the Nationalists in resisting any extreme demands of Germany. The Socialists heretofore have been foremost in seeking a Franco-German approachment, but they now maintain that this sentiment should not lead the government to permit Germany to dictate her own terms concerning the foreign policy of France.

MEN OF WAR GATHER AT ST. PAUL

St. Paul, June 19.—Assistant Secretary of War Robert S. Oliver and party, including representatives of army and marine corps arrived in St. Paul, today, in a special car over the Northwestern road to attend the meetings of the Interstate National Guard association, to be held in Armory hall here.

The first session was called to order at 10 o'clock by Gen. Gobin of Pennsylvania, first vice president, in the absence of Gen. Dick of Ohio, who is ill at his home. Gen. Dick notified the local committee last night that unless his condition was much better before the convention he would not attend the meeting. When the convention was called to order, Col. John Lawler, chaplain general of the Minnesota National Guard, delivered the invocation and Governor Johnson and Mayor Smith welcomed the delegates to the state and city.

BOY KILLED BY PITCHED BALL

Minneapolis, June 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Earl Dagnault, 813 University avenue southeast, was almost instantly killed by being struck by a pitched ball. The game was being played on the old university campus between teams of the American Bridge company and the Harrison & Smith's.

Dagnault, who was playing centerfield for the bridge company, came to bat in the fourth inning. Pitcher Schrieder of the opposing team sent in a swift inshoot, which struck the young man squarely over the heart. He staggered back and fell. Every effort was made to revive the lad, but he died before the doctor arrived.

WISCONSIN WET

Madison, Wis., June 19.—An enormous downpour of rain occurred here last night, accompanied by heavy wind. The streets were flooded with nine inches of water in places. Sidewalks were carried away and cellars flooded. Reports from surrounding country here are that thousands of dollars of damage was done by the storm. The chief damage was by hail which covered ground inches deep. In some places, all windows on the north and west sides of the buildings were destroyed and roofs splintered beyond saving. Fruit trees were completely stripped. Grain was pounded into the mud and killed. Corn and tobacco crops are almost a total loss. Floods caused by the enormous downpour of rain levelled the hay crop in many meadows and buried the hay under a layer of mud. Some stock and much poultry was killed. A number of persons caught in the storm were badly injured.

GENERAL SYNOD IS IN SESSION

Delegates From Evangelical Lutheran Churches Hold First Meeting.

Pittsburg, June 19.—The four days' session of the general synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church in America, convened today with devotional exercises. Nothwithstanding the warm weather all the 260 delegates were in their seats. The first business was the biennial report of the board of church extension.

The report was the best in the history of the work of the board. For the two years ending April 20 last the total receipts were $145,194 an increase over the report of 1903 of $12,320. The total assets were $471,869 which includes $274,869 on the books as overdue loans. During the biennium fifty-two churches were aided by loans and 203 received donations, an increase of 72. The amount raised by the 25 synods in two years was $69,772 which was $13,663 less than the apportionment.

Recommendations were made that the apportionment for church extension remain for the next two years at twenty cents per member, the same as now and that the apportionment for a parsonage fund be five cents per member.

INDEPENDENT ASSOCIATION

Of Telephone Companies Will Hold Meetings In Chicago.

Chicago, June 19.—Delegates to the convention of the National Interstate Independent Telephone association, which will open here tomorrow, are arriving. No fewer than 1,000 delegates and exhibitors are expected during the week, and every known phase of the telephone business will be exploited. One of the leading questions to be discussed at the meeting is the possibility of installing an independent company in New York city, it is declared, and the subject of uniform toll rates for inter-connecting telephone plants will be another important topic. The association has divided the territory into districts, which will be represented by delegates, and the advantages of standardizing equipments and operation will be fully discussed, with a view of satisfying the largest possible number of companies.

FOREIGN FIRMS

Are Ordered to Depart From Port Arthur.

Chefu, June 19.—American and European firms still in Port Arthur have been notified by the Japanese authorities to depart and to remove their merchandise. Many of the firms are now arranging to charter steamers for that purpose.

RIOTS AT LODZ.

Two Persons Killed and Thirty-Six Wounded.

Warsaw, June 19.—Two persons were killed and thirty-six were wounded in a conflict between troops and Socialists at Lodz yesterday. A procession of 2,000 Socialists carrying red flags was stopped by Cossacks. The Socialists thereupon fired and the Cossacks replied and then charged with drawn swords into the thick of the procession. The disturbances were renewed this morning at a factory in the suburb of Baluty which the troops have cut off from communication with Lodz.

SECRETARY TAFT

To Be Made Chief Justice, Says Rumor.

Washington, June 19.—Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller is to retire from the supreme bench and is to be appointed by the president as a member of the international board of arbitration. Secretary of War William H. Taft of Ohio is to be appointed chief justice of the supreme court to succeed Justice Fuller.

This information comes in such a way as to command confidence in its authenticity, especially in view of the fact that President Roosevelt is known to have told one of his confidential advisers recently that he would appoint Secretary Taft chief justice.

It has been well understood for some months that Secretary Taft's appointment as chief justice was probable in the event of Justice Fuler's retirement during the present administration, and that the only thing to preclude it would be Mr. Taft's decision to remain in the cabinet with a view to becoming a candidate for the Republican nomination for president three years hence.

ATTENDANCE AT FAIR HAS BEEN 245,382.

Portland, June 19.—A total of 245,382 persons have passed through the gates of the Lewis and Clark fair since the opening day, according to the official statement of the admissions department of the exposition. These figures are up to and including June 16. During the past seven days the total number of admissions are 101,420. Wednesday, "Flag day," was marked by the largest attendance since the opening.

Appear Individually and Ask to Be Taken Back.

Nothing to Say About Deliveries to Boycotted Firms.

Indication That Strike Will Soon Be Called Off.

Chicago, June 19.—A pronounced break in the ranks of the strikers occurred today. For the first time since the strike began many weeks ago, there were numerous instances where striking teamsters applied individually for former positions without waiting for the strike to be formally declared off. This was especially true at the lumber yards. George K. Wenig of the Wenig Teaming company said today: "Many of my old teamsters have asked for their positions. Not one of them said anything about deliveries to the boycotted firms. I have done nothing yet in the matter, and shall not do anything until I consult with the other employers."

There were indications today that the teamsters' strike would come to an end before the close of this week. The announcement was made, from a source high in the councils of the union, that the strikers will be allowed to decide for themselves whether the strike shall be called off without conditions or be allowed to continue.

Present plans, which will be set on foot officially tonight at the special meeting of the teamsters' joint council, contemplate a referendum during the next few days, by which each of the teamsters may decide for himself whether he has had enough of the warfare.

One of the strongest arguments in favor of the referendum, it is argued, is the fact that the peace terms of the employers contain demands diametrically opposed to the principles of the teasters' organization and that the drivers would rather call off the strike than agree to them.

Negotiations are in progress between the Freight Handlers' union and more than a score of railroad companies for a new agreement. Over 4,000 members of the organization are demanding an increase in wages amounting to 10 per cent. The scale now ranges from $1.75 to $2 a day and the present agreement expires July 1.

The peace party of the striking teamsters was busy today outlining plans for forcing an end of the strike. Tonight "the steering committee" appointed Saturday at the meeting of the anti-Shea and anti-strike elements, will endeavor to carry its point in the teasters' joint council meeting, even if it has to keep the deliberations in progress all night. Calls have been sent out to command a full attendance at the joint council and there are many who predict that the way for peace in the industrial division will be paved at tonight's session.

T. B. Beebe, head of the "steering committee," will lead the fight for peace. The first move of the "anti-strike" teamsters will be to have the whole matter referred to the national executive board of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, with full power to act.

THE STEAMER CITY OF COLLINGWOOD BURNS

Is Totally Destroyed By Flames---Two Deckhands Lose Lives.

Collingwood, June 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer City of Collingwood was totally destroyed by fire here early today. Fire was discovered at 2 o'clock, and spread so rapidly that the officers and crew had to escape only in their night clothes. Several had to jump overboard into the bay, where they were rescued by firemen. Two deckhands were cut off entirely on board the burning craft and they were burned to death. The entire contents of the boat were lost. The burned boat arrived on her regular run at 10:30 last night, having released the steamer Britannic from Campbell, where she had stranded in the fog during the afternoon. She tied up at her dock, waiting for morning to unload her cargo of general merchandise.

The City of Collingwood was one of the best of the Canadian fleet of passenger boats. She was built in 1893, and after taking a party to the World's fair that year in Chicago, she was put on the Georgian bay tourist route. She was owned by the North Shore Navigation company of Collingwood, and was valued at $80,000. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

BOYCOTT OF AMERICAN GOODS EXTENDS RAPIDLY IN CHINA

Tien Tsin, June 19.—Two important meetings were held yesterday in the native city in connection with the anti-American propaganda. The meetings were attended by 600 students, representing twenty-six colleges. Several resolutions were passed, among the most important being:

To boycott American goods, to stimulate Chinese manufactures, to circulate anti-American literature, and to record results.

Other bodies, representing 200 members from the commercial guilds of seventeen provinces have signed an agreement under a mutual bond to forfeit 50,000 taels if any member is reported purchasing American goods.

SHOWER OF STEEL KILLS BATHERS

New York, June 19.—Two deaths already have resulted from the shower of steel and clouds of steam which followed the boiler explosion near the banks of the Hudson river on the upper West side yesterday. The victims were Joseph Morgan, colored, a fireman, whose death resulted from scalds and Frank Marone, 18 years old. Marone, with three companions was swimming in the Hudson when the shower of debris fell over the water. He was not seen again and the police who have investigated the case say it is certain that he was struck by a flying missile and instantly killed or made helpless and drowned. Four other persons who were injured are in a hospital in a serious condition. Twenty others who were treated by physicians are at their homes and two men are under arrest and will be held pending an investigation of the explosion. One of the men held by the police is Daniel Barry, assistant engineer at the subway construction company's power house where the explosion occurred. He is one of the four seriously injured. The other is John L. Keaveny who says he is only a clerk for the company and says he had nothing to do with the operation of the plant.

ATLANTIC WINS AUXILIARY RACE

Island of Heligoland, June 19.—The American schooner yacht Atlantic won the race for auxiliary yachts from Dover to Heligoland completing the course in forty-one hours, twenty-six minutes and twenty-four seconds. The annual race from Dover to Heligoland was won by the schooner yacht Susanne, owned by Huldschinsky of Germany. Time forty hours, forty-three minutes and forty seconds. The yawl Therese, owned by Felix Simon of Germany was second in forty hours, fifty-eight minutes and fifty seconds. The American built schooner yacht Navahoe owned by George W. Watjens of Germany was third in forty-two hours, twenty-eight minutes and thirty-two seconds, and the British schooner yacht Sunshine, owned by L. H. Solomon, was fourth, forty-two hours, forty-three minutes and forty-eight seconds.

The decision of the judges is that the Susanne wins the annual Dover-Heligoland race, with the Therese second and the Navahoe third. Emperor William was to have seen the finish, but remained on board the imperial yacht Hohenzollern at Cuxhaven on account of the thick fog prevailing.

AN UNDERSTANDING

Finally Reached By Rival Mining Companies.

Spokane, June 19.—Fred Bradley, executive head of the Bunker Hill and Sullivan lead mine at Warner, Idaho, has also been made general manager by the Federal Mining and Smelting company of the Cour D'Alenes. His appointment is regarded as signifying that the American Smelting and Refining company interests, which controls the Federal have also succeeded in getting an important influence in the Bunker Hill and Sullivan. Mrs. Victor Clement, widow of a former manager of Bunker Hill recently sold about 35,000 shares of Bunker Hill for nearly $1,000,000 to the Guggenheims.

For a long time the Bunker Hill and Sullivan vigorously fought the American Smelting and Refining company, but the appointment of Bradley to be manager of the Federal is considered evidence that the two corporations have reached a friendly understanding, whereby one man may manage both companies.

POLICE OFFICER FOUND GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Norfolk, Neb., June 19.—Policeman Ault, who killed "Kid" English at Bonesteel, S. D., during last summer's rush to that place, has been convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to two years at hard labor in the Sioux Falls penitentiary.

MAN HANGS HIMSELF IN A FREIGHT CAR.

Chicago, June 19.—The body of S. G. Harger, Randolph, Iowa, was found suspended to the rafters of a box car in the Erie yards here today. The body was hanging from the rafters by the rope. The man was tattoed on his right arm while in his pocket was found a paper with his name and "Randolph, Iowa." The body was that of a man apparently 56 years old.

BARNES NAMED FOR NEW RATE COMMISSIONER

Madison, Wis., June 19.—Governor La Follette today named James B. Barnes of Rhinelander as third member of the new railway rate commission in place of N. P. Haugen, whose nomination was not confirmed by the senate last week. Mr. Barnes is a Democrat and a prominent lawyer. He was one of Governor La Follette's attornies in the suit before the supreme court involving the question of the use of the words "Regular Republican" on the official ballot at the last election. The senate has agreed to confirm the appointment of Mr. Barnes.

RECEIVER IS APPOINTED FOR CHICAGO GRAIN FIRM

Chicago, June 19.—Fyfe, Mason & Co., a grain firm prominent on the board of trade, went into the hands of a receiver today. Notice was posted at the board notifying all persons having trades with the firm to close the trades at once.

The application for a receivership was made voluntarily by Fyfe, Manson & Co., who are said to be involved to the extent of between $70,000 and $80,000. Ulric King, president of the grain and stock protection bureau was named as receiver.

WILL MAKE PUBLIC

The Correspondence In Santa Fe Rebate Case.

Washington, June 19.—A conference was held at the White House today between the president and Attorney General Moody in respect to the policy to be pursued in the Santa Fe rebate case, with which Secretary Morton is connected. At the conclusion of the conference, which lasted more than an hour, Mr. Moody said he was not in a position yet to discuss the matter. He went over with the president the correspondence which has passed between himself and Messrs. Harmon and Judson, the special counsel appointed to investigate the case, and which will be made public in the near future.

The president has agreed with the attorney general as to the publication of the details of the correspondence, and it is expected that he will supplement, in an official announcement, the statements made in the letters which have passed between Messrs. Harmon and Judson and the department of justice.

CANADIANS WELCOMED

Windsor, Eng., June 19.—King Edward and Queen Alexandra gave the heartiest welcome this afternoon to the 103 Canadian women and the 175 members of the Canadian Manufacturers' association, who arrived at Liverpool yesterday on board the Allan liner Victorian, from Montreal and Quebec, and whose presence at Windsor was commanded for today. The party was met at the railroad station by seventy carriages, provided by the king, and was shown the Victoria mausoleum and other sights. The visitors were then received on the east terrace of the castle by their majesties, the king saying, so that all could hear: "Welcome to England. Welcome to Windsor. I hope you will all enjoy your visit to the old country."

FORMERLY OF SUPERIOR.

W. M. Graham of Grand Rapids Ends Life.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 19.—William M. Graham, a prominent and wealthy attorney, who came here three years ago from West Superior, Wis., shot himself early today. He had been suffering from insomnia and nervous breakdown and is believed to have been temporarily deranged. Mr. Graham had extensive business interests in the South and West.

RAILROAD NEWS

New York, June 19.—The Twentieth Century limited train on the New York Central road arrived in this city from Chicago at 9:27 a. m. today, three minutes ahead of time. It left Chicago at 2:30 p. m. (central time) yesterday and made the run in 17 hours and 57 minutes. This was the Twentieth Century's first trip as an 18-hour train.

From Albany to Hudson, for a distance of thirty-one miles, the train ran at the rate of nearly seventy miles an hour, thirty-one miles being made in twenty-nine minutes. On another stretch between Castleton and Hudson twenty miles were made in eighteen minutes.

The new train brought to this city seventy-two passengers, many of them prominent railroad men. They declared that, despite the great speed the ride was easy and pleasant.

James N. Hill, son of J. J. Hill, president of the Great Northern and vice-president of that road, was among the passengers.

Chicago, June 19.—The first westbound trip on an 18-hour basis made by the Twentieth Century limited over the Lake Shore road was finished five minutes ahead of time. The train was due here from New York at 8:30 a. m. and glided into the La Salle street depot at 8:25 a. m.

The train averaged one to five minutes ahead of the schedule all the way. The average running time for the entire distance was 52 1-4 miles an hour. Outside of stops the train occupied 17 hours and 9 minutes in making the journey between New York and Chicago.

TO REMOVE BRIDGE.

Will Take Great Northern Draw To Houghton.

The old Belt Line steel drawbridge over the St. Louis river at New Duluth, owned by the Great Northern railroad, is to be taken to Houghton and placed in the position formerly occupied by the Portage lake bridge, which was knocked over as a result of being struck by a large lake boat last April. The removal will be accomplished by means of a scow and tug.

The Northwestern Engineering company, with headquarters in Duluth, has closed a deal with the Great Northern, through J. C. Doyle, general manager of the Northwestern concern, whereby the local company purchases the bridge. The contract calls for the removal of the piling in the St. Louis river, which was put in place at the time the structure was built. It was principally owing to the piling that the bridge has been left standing so long at New Duluth, because if the bridge had been taken down the piling would also have had to be cleared from the river. This meant considerable expense, and when negotiations were on for the purchase of the bridge provision was made in the contract for the removal of the piling.

The bridge has not been in use for the past six or eight years. The Belt Line road, over which all the Great Northern ore trains were originally run, was abandoned when the new Fosston branch of the same road was completed, and all traffic was diverted to the new line. The rails of the Belt Line and most of the bridges were removed, but the draw across the St. Louis was left standing.

The railways at Houghton have been under an expense of about $100 a day since the destruction of the Portage lake bridge, and traffic across the channel is handled at present by ferry boats and rafts. A Milwaukee firm has the contract for building a new steel bridge over the channel, but until that is completed the old Great Northern structure will be used. It is just about the right length for the purpose required. The pivot circle at New Duluth will be taken along with the rest of the bridge for temporary use, for the pivot circle at Houghton was also destroyed by the collision.

After the new steel bridg is completed the old one will be taken down Lake Michigan, it is understood. The date of the departure of the scows from Duluth has not yet been set. The contract calls for it being in use twenty days after leaving Duluth. It is believed that it will take a week to put it in position after its arrival at the Michigan town.

MELBA AND DUSE

To Be Wedded Soon, Say the Gossips.

London, June 19.—The love affairs of two famous artists are occupying the attention of the theatrical world. Mme. Melba, it is said, is about to be married to Lord Richard Neville, aged 43, youngest son of the marquis of Abergavenny. While aide de camp to Lord Tennyson as governor general of the Australian commonwealth Lord Richard met Melba on her recent Australian tour, and since her return to London the acquaintance has been renewed with such fervor as to give rise to the rumor mentioned.

Then Eleanore Duse and Jean Worth, the Beau Brummel of Parisian fashion and the autocrat of women's attire, are devotedly attached to each other. Duse has been staying at the Savoy and Jean Worth has been coming to London twice a week from Paris, while they are reputed to write to each other twice or thrice daily. He worships her great talent and never tires of eulogizing her, while she takes great interest in his daughter, for he is a widower. When asked when the marriage may be expected, the reply was: "They are sympathetic and in unity, why marry? Gabrielle D'Annunzio is a back number now."

BACHELORS SCARCE.

Trap Set By Maidens of Belgian Village.

New York, June 19.—A Brussels cable to the Herald says: The small commune of Ecaussinnes, in the Brainault province, is determined to combat race suicide. Eligible bachelors being scarce in the neighborhood, the marriageable girls there invited unmarried men the world over to a monster picnic last Monday.

Many accepted the invitation. The bachelors were shown the sights, entertained lavishly and serenaded.

In the evening there was a banquet and torchlight procession and dancing on the village green. The registrar and his clerks are now preparing to publish the banns.

THE FINAL HEARING

Board Will Confirm the West Superior Street Assessment.

Contract For Tile and Cement Walks Again Let.

The board of public works this morning held the final hearing on the preliminary assessment for the West Superior street pavement.

The assessment, which is based on eighty per cent of the engineer's estimate of the cost of tar macadam pavement, amounts to a total of $89,327.52, which is the largest assessment levied for five or six years past.

Of this amount $16,942.31 is paid by the city out of the general fund for property that is exempt or not benefitted by the improvement. This sum, which amounts to nearly one-fifth of the total, is an exceptionally large proportion to be borne by the city. Its size is caused by the large amount of railroad property exempt from taxation and assessment, and the large amount of property located high up on the rocks, which will be but little benefitted by the improvement, and which is therefore not assessable for its full share.

This leaves the sum of $72,385.31 to be paid by the property owners along the proposed improvement.

The assessment was not confirmed this morning, owing to a number of protests which were received, but the hearing was adjourned until this afternoon, when final action will probably be taken by the board.

It is highly desirable to get the preliminaries through as rapidly as possible, as the assessment need not be paid until forty days after it has been confirmed, and the contract cannot be let until the assessment is collected. Work cannot therefore be commenced until after August 1, and everything will have to be rushed with all possible speed in order to get it done this year.

Bids were also opened this morning for the third time, on the contract for laying the tile and cement walks in the city during the present summer. On the first occasion the bids were deemed too high by th council, and rejected. On the second advertisement no bids were received, and the board was directed by the council to advertise a third time. Two bids were received and opened this morning.

The lowest bidder was the firm of Sang & Preston, which submitted a bid of 17½ cents a square foot. This is one-half cent lower per foot, than the bid received on the first advertisement.

The contract was awarded to Sang & Preston by the board, and sent to the council for approval.

CLAIMS NOTE WAS NOT PAID

L. Hammel & Company Bring Action to Recover $425.

Judge Dibell is listening today to the evidence that is being introduced in the suit of L. Hammel & Company against David Turnbull, Morris O'Brien and the S. C. Jackson Lumber company.

The action is one brought by the Hammel company to recover on a note for $425 alleged to have been given by Turnbull & O'Brien in September, 1903, for six horses used in their logging work for the S. C. Jackson Lumber company at Tenstrike, Minn.

The complaint alleges that the note was indorsed by the lumber company and that by reason of this indorsement it became responsible for its payment. It is asserted that the note was never paid although payment was demanded of the parties defendant.

In a separate answer Mr. Turnbull admits the purchase of the horses and claims that when he and O'Brien completed their logging contract in April following the purchase of the horses, they turned over their horses and equipment to the S. C. Jackson company, the agreement being that the lumber company was to assume certain obligations and debts of which the payment of the note was claimed to one of them. Mr. Turnbull asks that the Hammel company be given judgment against the lumber company and not as against himself.

The S. C. Jackson Lumber company sets up in its answer to the complaint that it never had any knowledge of the note, never bought the horses and that if its indorsement was given on the note it was not authorized and must be void for the reason that the matter was never before the proper officials of the company and they could not and did not authorize an indorsement.

It was claimed in the testimony this morning that the indorsement of the lumber company was written by Mr. Jackson himself, who was at that time the president of the company.

T. M. Partridge of Minneapolis, former vice president and general manager of the lumber company but who is now president of the S. C. Jackson company, testified that he had no knowledge of the purchase of the horses and did not know of the company's indorsing any note of Turnbull & O'Brien. Mr. Partridge admitted on cross-examination that even while he was vice president and general manager of the lumber company all its transactions had to be approved by himself. As to the two notes on exhibit, one comprising the first given for the horses, amounting to $400 at interest and the second at $25 at interest given later, both bearing the indorsement of S. C. Jackson Lumber company, Mr. Partridge claimed that he had seen the first note in July, 1904, but that he had never seen the second note until this morning.

According to his testimony the stockholders and directors of the S. C. Jackson Lumber company were S. C. Jackson, Harriet Partridge and T. M. Partridge.

L. Hammel & Company are represented by Bert Pealer. Mr. Turnbull is represented by Shiabel White, and the S. C. Jackson Lumber company by W. W. Bardwell of St. Paul.

Would Be Groom Meets With Disappointment at Clerk's Office.

"I regret to say that it will be impossible for you to get married in this county," were the words that Deputy Clerk of District Court Victor Dash had to address to a would-be bridegroom this morning.

That the information was very unpleasant was evident from the disappointed look that overspread the young man's countenance, but the court official was firm, even though he tried to soften the blow as much as possible by explaining that it was the fault of the law and not of the office.

The applicant was a young man, residing in St. Louis county, and the young lady who he wishes to marry, and who with friends accompanied him to the courthouse this morning, resides in Pine City.

Under the provisions of the state law it is required that the license must issue from the county in which the bride resides, if she is a resident of this state. It often transpires that the parties wishing to get married forget that clause, or get it twisted, and apply for a license in the county where the groom resides.

The couple refused a license this morning talked of going over to Superior, but this was given up when it was explained that they would have to wait five days in Wisconsin before the marriage service can follow the license.

After discussing the situation, the wedding party finally decided that they would have to pack Cupid in a grip and hie back to Pine county, which they did on the afternoon train.

Company Regains Possession.

In findings filed this morning in the action brought by the Brunswick-Balke-Collendar company to recover possession of a bowling alley equipment from E. C. Podman, and formerly operated in a Superior street location, Judge Dibell holds that Bodman wrongfully retained possession of the goods and that the title to the same is vested in the Brunswick-Balke-Collendar company. He fixes the value of the equipment at $500. The stuff was seized by the sheriff some time ago and the company brought action to determine rightful possession.

KING'S AUTO IN A WRECK

New York, June 19.—A San Sebastian cable to the Herald says: Some picturesque details have come to light concerning King Alfonso's automobile trip to Pamplona and the accidents on the way. Near Eligondo, when the king was driving back, his automobile knocked down a donkey. The automobile was almost overthrown and sustained damages which it took an hour and a half to repair. King Alfonso and his companions escaped without injury.

On the road to Usurbil a dog was run over and killed by the king's automobile. As the royal party was leaving the limits of the ancient Kingdom of Navarre a soldier on guard hailed the automobile and demanded the payment of some old duties, called "portazgos," levied on all vehicles that pass.

A peasant near Eligondo recognized the king. He approached him without ceremony and shook hands with him, and, referring to the rumor of the king's marriage, congratulated him on his forthcoming wedding.

During the few days that King Alfonso remained at San Sebastian he walked frequently in the streets, accompanied by a friend in civilian dress, and enjoyed going round like a "bourgeois," entering confectioners', stationers' and tobacco shops.

In one shop he met a supposed anarchist and was greatly amused at the meeting.

You may have known some particular store very well yesterday—and yet hardly recognize it today. New goods! Let the ads. keep you posted.

ENORMOUS NUMBER

Of Americans Who Are Automobiling In England.

New York, June 19.—A London cable to the Herald says: The number of Americans who are automobiling over here this summer, is something enormous. Persons of means are coming to consider an automobile as a necessary part of their equipment, and think nothing of running back and forth between there and Paris by way of Dieppe or Boulogne.

Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, who came over on her car the other day with her sons, had a very pleasant trip.

On the same day Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Spalding and family and Mrs. Boardman of New York all came over in a big car.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Armour of Chicago, who went over to Paris about a fortnight ago, came back yesterday in a new forty-horsepower auto.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Loring, Miss B. Hammer and Miss Heaslip of New York and Baron Branka left a day or two ago in a big automobile for a tour in France.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. McFadden of New York, who arrived last Saturday on the Campania, came on to London leisurely in an automobile early in the week.

Col. and Mrs. George Harvey and Mr. and Mrs. J. Harper, who have been touring in France in an automobile, have returned to Claridge's.

RAILROAD NEWS

New York, June 19.—The Twentieth Century limited train on the New York Central road arrived in this city from Chicago at 3:27 a. m. today, three minutes ahead of time. It left Chicago at 2:30 p. m. (central time) yesterday and made the run in 17 hours and 57 minutes. This was the Twentieth Century's first trip as an 18-hour train.

From Albany to Hudson, for a distance of thirty-one miles, the train ran at the rate of nearly seventy miles an hour, thirty-one miles being made in twenty-nine minutes. On another stretch between Castleton and Hudson twenty miles were made in eighteen minutes.

The new train brought to this city seventy-two passengers, many of them prominent railroad men. They declared that, despite the great speed the ride was easy and pleasant.

James N. Hill, son of J. J. Hill, president of the Great Northern and vice-president of that road, was among the passengers.

Chicago, June 19.—The first westbound trip on an 18-hour basis made by the Twentieth Century limited over the Lake Shore road was finished five minutes ahead of time. The train was due here from New York at 9:30 a. m. and glided into the La Salle street depot at 9:25 a. m.

The train averaged one to five minutes ahead of the schedule all the way. The average running time for the entire distance was 38 1-2 miles an hour. Outside of stops the train occupied 17 hours and 9 minutes in making the journey between New York and Chicago.

TO REMOVE BRIDGE.

Will Take Great Northern Draw To Houghton.

The old Belt Line steel drawbridge over the St. Louis river at New Duluth, owned by the Great Northern railroad, is to be taken to Houghton and placed in the position formerly occupied by the Portage lake bridge, which was knocked over as a result of being struck by a large lake boat last April. The removal will be accomplished by means of a scow and tug.

The Northwestern Engineering company, with headquarters in Duluth, has closed a deal with the Great Northern, through J. C. Doyle, general manager of the Northwestern concern, whereby the local company purchases the bridge. The contract calls for the removal of the piling in the St. Louis river, which was put in place at the time the structure was built. It was principally owing to the piling that the bridge has been left standing so long at New Duluth, because if the bridge had been taken down the piling would also have had to be cleared from the river. This meant considerable expense, and when negotiations were on for the purchase of the bridge provision was made in the contract for the removal of the piling.

The bridge has not been in use for the past six or eight years. The Belt Line road, over which the Great Northern ore trains were originally run, was abandoned when the new Fosston branch of the same road was completed, and all traffic was diverted to the new line. The rails of the Belt Line and most of the bridges were removed, but the draw across the St. Louis was left standing.

The railways at Houghton have been under an expense of about $100 a day since the destruction of the Portage lake bridge, and traffic across the channel is handled at present by ferry boats and rafts. A Milwaukee firm has the contract for building a new steel bridge over the channel, but until that is completed the old Great Northern structure will be used. It is just about the right length for the purpose required. The pivot circle at New Duluth will be taken along with the rest of the bridge for temporary use, for the pivot circle at Houghton was also destroyed by the collision.

After the new steel brdig is completed the old one will be taken down Lake Michigan, it is understood. The date of the departure of the scows from Duluth has not yet been set. The contract calls for it being in use twenty days after leaving Duluth. It is believed that it will take a week to put it in position after its arrival at the Michigan town.

To Be Wedded Soon, Say the Gossips.

London, June 19.—The love affairs of two famous artists are occupying the attention of the theatrical world. Mme. Melba, it is said, is about to be married to Lord Richard Neville, aged 13, youngest son of the marquis of Abergavenny. While aide de camp to Lord Tennyson as governor general of the Australian commonwealth Lord Richard met Melba on her recent Australian tour, and since her return to London the acquaintance has been renewed with such fervor as to give rise to the rumor mentioned.

Then Eleanore Duse and Jean Worth, the Beau Brummel of Parisian fashion and the autocrat of women's attire, are devotedly attached to each other. Duse has been staying at the Savoy and Jean Worth has been coming to London twice a week from Paris, while they are reputed to write to each other twice or thrice daily. He worships her great talent and never tires of eulogizing her, while she takes great interest in his daughter, for he is a widower. When asked when the marriage may be expected, the reply was: "They are sympathetic and in unity, why marry." Gabrielle D'Annunzio is a back number now."

BACHELORS SCARCE.

Trap Set By Maidens of Belgian Village.

New York, June 19.—A Brussels cable to the Herald says: The small commune of Ecaussinnes, in the Brainault province, is determined to combat race suicide. Eligible bachelors being scarce in the neighborhood, the marriageable girls there invited unmarried men the world over to a monster picnic last Monday.

Many accepted the invitation. The bachelors were shown the sights, entertained lavishly and serenaded.

In the evening there was a banquet and torchlight procession and dancing on the village green. The registrar and his clerks are now preparing to publish the banns.

On the road to Usurbil a dog was run over and killed by the king's automobile. As the royal party was leaving the limits of the ancient Kingdom of Navarre a soldier on guard hailed the automobile and demanded the payment of some old duties, called "portazgos," levied on all vehicles that pass.

A peasant near Eligondo recognized the king. He approached him without ceremony and shook hands with him, and, referring to the rumor of the king's marriage, congratulated him on his forthcoming wedding.

During the few days that King Alfonso remained at San Sebastian he walked frequently in the streets, accompanied by a friend in civilian dress, and enjoyed going round like a "bourgeois," entering confectioners', stationers' and tobacco shops.

In one shop he met a supposed anarchist and was greatly amused at the meeting.

ENORMOUS NUMBER

Of Americans Who Are Automobiling In England.

New York, June 19.—A London cable to the Herald says: The number of Americans who are automobiling over here this summer, is something enormous. Persons of means are coming to consider an automobile as a necessary part of their equipment, and think nothing of running back and forth between here and Paris by way of Dieppe or Boulogne.

Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, who came over on her car the other day with her sons, had a very pleasant trip.

On the same day Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Spalding and family and Mrs. Boardman of New York all came over in a big car.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Armour of Chicago, who went over to Paris about a fortnight ago, came back yesterday in a new forty-horsepower auto.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Loring, Miss B. Hammer and Miss Heaslip of New York and Baron Brasika left a day or two ago in a big automobile for a tour in France.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. McFadden of New York, who arrived last Saturday on the Campania, came on to London leisurely in an automobile early in the week.

Col. and Mrs. George Harvey and Mr. and Mrs. J. Harper, who have been touring in France in an automobile, have returned to Claridge's.

Last evening the song service at St. John's English Lutheran church was well attended and the program of sacred music, which was presented under the direction of Mrs. J. L. Murphy, was most pleasing. A large number were present and the collection for the evening will aid materially in the music fund. The numbers in which the chorus choir appeared were particularly interesting and enjoyable. To those who have watched its progress a marked improvement in phrasing and enunciation was evident, and the work was most pleasing. The double male quartet of the church appeared in three numbers. Miss Grayce Frances Turner sang two numbers pleasingly. A cornet solo was given by Charles Helmer. Rev. Murphy, pastor of the church, gave a short address on the value of music in church work, and spoke of the greater appreciation which is being given the finest and best in music in connection with the church. The service was a most interesting and pleasing one.

A HOOPSKIRT BLOCKADE

Two Young Women Delay Traffic and Police Called.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 19.—Two young women wearing hoopskirts have blockaded a street car line for half an hour, suspended business in a department store, almost created a panic, caused many men to suffer from stiff necks and necessitated assistance from a detachment of police before the young women could again reach the safety of their carriage. The venturesome moulders of fashion were Miss Genevieve Tucker and Miss Henrietta Herbert of Herbert.

The two young women reached the center of the shopping district in Miss Tucker's carriage, and there was nothing about their appearance, so long as they sat still in the carriage, to excite comment, but when they alighted the trouble started. They tried to enter the storm doors at the side entrance of the store, but could not get through. Then they went to the front.

A great crowd had collected, blocking the street car tracks and stopping all traffic. Once inside the store, clerks stopped their work, left their customers and joined the throng. The floorwalkers grew excited and requested the young women to retire. They tried to, but could not; their hoops, which were not the modern three-featherbone skirts, but regular crinolines, interfered.

The house policeman was called, but he was powerless. In desperation he went to the street and blew his whistle. Two other officers responded, and with drawn clubs they made an opening through which the girls passed.

Several thousand persons watched them as they got into their carriage. It looked like a balloon going up. One old woman, who wore 'em years ago, declared that, in addition to pretty stockings, the girls wore pantalettes. The police officers got into the carriage with the young women, who were driven around side streets until the crowd was lost.

The girls were badly frightened and promised not to appear on the street in hoopskirts again.

EXTRA SALESPEOPLE WANTED.

The Sale of the Burrows Stock Starts Wednesday!

It will not be possible to throw open the doors tomorrow, as we first intended to do. The legal transfer of the Great Eastern store to the Columbia Clothing Co. will probably be made today, and we need another twenty-four hours for preparation. All the old Burrows price tickets remain undisturbed, but every garment will have a new Columbia tag and the comparison of the two should be all the argument needed to perfect quick sales and many of them. It is not necessary to dwell at length upon the high character of the Burrows merchandise, for every man, woman and child in Duluth knows their sterling value.

Every Article Reduced In Price!

When we open the sale there will not be a single thing that goes at the old Burrows price, excepting only goods with contract retail prices, which we are bound to maintain, such as the $5 Knox hats. Many of the reductions will be so extremely radical that when you see them in the papers you may be inclined to exclaim: "Another clothing store fake!" Whatever you think, look anyhow. Our selling-force will not apply Bowery methods to razzle-dazzle you into buying, and any mistake in fitting, etc., which might occur in a rush, can be corrected at leisure, according to well-established Columbia methods. The Burrows stock is so large and extensive that no one need fear of getting left, even if he does not come during the first few days. In fact, we would like it much better if you take your time.

The Columbia
Clothing Company.

ARE NEGLECTED.

No Sermons Are Written For Saints.

Margaret Deland, writing about earthly saints in the June Harper's Bazar, says all the sermons are for sinners, and the saints are entirely ignored. No sermons were written for the ten righteous men of Sodom. Why, she asks, should saints be left to the dangers of saintliness? She declares they need warning—to say nothing of comfort and commands—as well as the black sheep. And then she proceeds to preach a little sermon to the saintly ones.

Married life presents the finest opportunities for the development of saintliness, though she admits spinsters have a chance to attain it. Physical indications of sainthood may vary, but there is one unfailing spiritual sign by which a saint may recognize herself—it is the spontaneous, instinctive, almost automatic impulse to serve and sacrifice. "That impulse, that heavenly unselfishness, is the outward and visible sign of inward and spiritual grace. It is the seal of saintliness."

In the expression of this divine impulse the saint meets with no opposition. The world is always ready to help her along. It is not so with other virtues which sometimes sinners try to cultivate. The world holds out no friendly hand to assist us to cultivate the plodding virtues of truthfulness, honor, courage, but when it comes to self-sacrifice, who of us will not allow, nay, assist, a friend to sacrifice self.

Whenever a sinner feels a stirring in the direction of hindering an act of self-sacrifice, the saint neatly nips the little budding impulse of self-sacrifice by anticipating him in the service. The wife and mother waits on husband, son, daughter, hand and foot, exhorts them to self-enjoyment, keeps them comfortable in spite of their own carelessness and neglect, and cultivates their selfishness to a degree that precludes any possibility that they will ever become saints themselves.

It is just here that if the saint were not so good she would be better. It is just here that she needs admiration and remonstrance. She must be taught not to be so good, or at least, not follow a course generally called "good" by the willing sinners who are made comfortable by it. But the honest truth is that in this one thing she is not good, this dear, kind woman, whom we all love and whom it would be greatly to our moral advantage to copy—in moderation. If we would only acquire her impulse of self-sacrifice (but not use it as recklessly and selfishly as she does) how much better the world would be! But the saint for her betterings, must be brought face to face with the horrid fact that she is selfishly unselfish. She must be made to realize that though she is growing in grace, it is at the expense of her family. She must be made to see that she is a grasping, unkind wife and mother; that she seizes all the opportunities that make character, and claims for her own pleasure all the opportunities for the joys that are born of the sacrifice of self.

THEODORE DODDEN, BACHELOR

By Zoe Rinehart.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Theodore Dodden was traveling salesman for the firm of S—— Brothers, wholesale dealers in dry goods. Theodore Dodden, bachelor,—that was the cognomen he always gave to himself when he thought of himself. He would have had it engraved upon his cards had not the Mr. Theodore Dodden consumed the available space.

Bachelorhood was Dodden's real profession. He gloried in it. He lived for it—made a fine art of it. If any new acquaintance chanced to remark, "Never been married, sir?" the reply was given as though the question had been, "Ever been in the penitentiary, sir?" You could never offer a more irremediate insult to Dodden than to intimate the possibility of his having ever dreamed of that step of consummate idiocy.

Whether he ever formulatd a philosophy of the universe under a regime of bachelorhood, I cannot say. I have suspected at times that he was at work on something of the sort. At any rate, it was his firm conviction that every wise man kept his bark of life clear of the rocks and shoals of matrimony. Dodden had a good many friends and acquaintances among the fools of earth; that is, the maried men, but in his presence they were all made to feel the infinite superiority of his wisdom. Dodden knew every skeleton in the closets of these various fools of his acquaintance. The hollow rattling of their spectral members and their ghostly grinnings were a pleasant part of his after-dinner pipe dreams. And every divorce case—Dodden kept a complete record of them—was a public triumph of the principles of Theodore Dodden, bachelor.

But there came at last to him a certain fiery ordeal, that changed the course of his life, and—presumably—altered some vital opinions of his.

Dodden had been to the town of M—— spending one of his rare vacations with his married brother. It might be mentioned that the parent stock of the Doddens had only produced one Theodore, bachelor. All his brothers and sisters had gone the way of all the earth, that is, got married. Dodden had spent a fairly enjoyable week and was sitting in the depot waiting for the train that was to carry him back to his jolly bachelor quarters. His visit had furnished him some matter for thought. And he was a little surprised at the persistency with which the piquant face of his brother's wifes' sister came up before his sedate bachelor mind's eye.

He decided to take a turn on the platform. Before he could carry out his purpose, however, he found himself, for the moment, otherwise diverted. The quiet waiting room had been invaded by a gay party of young people. They were in high spirits, indeed, were even boisterous. Dodden thought, and he soon observed that their laughing banter was directed toward a particular young man, who apparently had no recourse but to take their badinage in perfect good humor. And quite merciless they were to the helpless but beaming prospective bridegroom, for such Dodden soon guessed him to be. Dodden had seen enough of bridal parties and prospective bridegrooms in his time, so he left the waiting room and took his projected stroll outside. In a moment the scene was forgotten. He boarded his train when it came, and arrived in town in the early dusk.

After seeing to a few business affairs, and finding that his trunk had been sent up early in the afternoon as directed—it having come in by an earlier train—he made his way toward his bachelor rooms. He was surprised to find them brilliantly lighted, but supposing his man wanted to give him a cheerful reception, he thought little of it. His astonishment grew when he mounted the stairs and the door of his sitting room was thrown open, showing a brilliant scene within. In the room were groups of men and women, who turned with eager and joyous faces toward the open door. Dodden, nonplussed as he was, recognized them as his most intimate friends with their wives and sweethearts. He saw that his den beyond has been turned into a dining room, and a table was spread there, sparkling as for a feast. Dodden could scarcely believe his eyes, when he saw his modest apartments turned into this place of gaiety.

Peterson rushed out to meet him. But something at sight of Dodden's face made him stop short, perplexity and surprise changing on his face.

"Why, old boy," he cried, "where's the—the lady?"

"The lady!" gasped Dodden.

"Yes, the lady," repeated Peterson. By this time a number of the others had come forward, and Dodden found himself the center of a questioning circle.

"Where is she—your wife?"

Dodden had a queer sensation in his throat. Then it seemed to go to his knees. He thought he must be the victim of some sort of a conspiracy. He could not decide upon the stand he ought to take. A cold sweat started out on his forehead. He staggered and made a clutch at the banisters.

"My wife! Why, Peterson—Longworth—ladies—you know I have no wife."

"Now, Mr. Dodden, you are playing a joke on us," said a reproachful feminine voice. "Where have you left her? You may as well confess. We know all about it."

"My friends," he said in a weak trembling voice, "I swear to you, I do not know what you mean. I—there has evidently been a mistake. I have," with an attempt at dignity, "I have always been a bachelor."

Dodden's honesty and his wretchedness were not to be doubted. Astonishment swept over the party. There was a dead silence, then Peterson said: "But your trunk, Dodden, how do you account for your trunk?"

"I am not aware that there is anything the matter with it," said Dodden.

Dodden, still in a maze, allowed himself to be led to where his trunk had been deposited in the afternoon. He gazed at it mutely. Fastened to its sides were two large placards on which, in glaring letters that could be read a block off, were the words, "Make way for Hymen," and "Behold the Bridegroom Cometh." It was further adorned by a motley array of old shoes of all sizes and descriptions.

"You see old fellow, we thought—there really does seem to be a mistake—"

"We thought you were married," interrupted a merry voice, "and we planned a little surprise for you and your bride—and you aren't—Oh! it's so funny!"

There was a peal of laughter, but it was smothered at sight of Dodden's miserable face. He sank into a chair. Then a great light burst upon him. There flashed before him the incident in the waiting room at M——, the prospective bridegroom and the gay party that had come to wish him god-speed. His trunk must have gone earlier on the same train as his, Dodden's. The friends of the bridegroom, instead of the bridegroom's trunk, had by mistake decorated his—the trunk of Theodore Dodden, bachelor. He saw it now. But it was too much, too much. His friends quietly slipped away. They expressed many regrets for their error, but in the midst of the profuse apologies could be heard stifled feminine laughter.

Left to himself, Dodden sat and thought it all over. He probably arrived at the conclusion that he had reached the limit of a bachelor's humiliations, and that there could be no worst now.

Before he slept that night he wrote a letter to his brother's wife's sister, very humbly asking her to become—Mrs. Theodore Dodden.

PAINED TO FIND

That Bossy's Upper Teeth Were Missing.

Port Jervis, N. Y., June 19.—Mrs. M. J. Moore of New York bought a house at Monticello, five years ago, and fitted it up in fine style. She bought a horse, chickens and a cow. The cow was of high breed and cost a snug sum. When Mrs. Moore went to New York recently for a short stay she left her brother in charge of the place. He fed the cow a hot mash on the recommendation of a neighbor. Next day he was astonished to find that she had no upper teeth. Upon Mrs. Moore's return she was much incensed that her brother should have been fooled into feeding the cow the hot mash and destroying her upper teeth. "Poor Bossy," said she. "How will she eat now?"

She sold the cow and went about to find another. Much to her astonishment she found that every cow she saw had no upper front teeth.

"They all must have been fed hot mash," she said. She told her troubles to George Armstrong, a veterinary.

Mrs. Moore bought Bossy back.

Two immense audiences with the boxes all filled, and standing room at a premium, were what greeted Chauncey Olcott at the Lyceum Saturday. "A Romance of Athlone" was the play but it was Mr. Olcott's singing rather than his play that drew the people. The play is, however, a very pleasing one of the Irish drama class and those who enjoy that style of entertainment found it delightful. The parts were fairly well taken, though Mr. Olcott's support is not all that could be desired in some instances. Mr. Olcott himself has a pleasing part and plays it in a winning way. In the final act he takes part in a duel in which some very pretty fencing is exhibited.

The songs which Mr. Olcott gives drew thunderous applause and encores were insisted upon in every case. The familiar "Wild Irish Rose" was among the numbers, and a delightful lullaby by Mr. Olcott was one of the charming things.

THE POLLARDS.

Among the big notable additions that have been made to the Pollard Lilliputian Opera company since its former tour are the Pollard twins, Freddie and Johnnie, who are the cleverest singing and dancing juvenile comedians in the world. Teddie Macnamara is another of the sparkling little fun-makers who comes as a stranger, but who can be depended upon to win favor at his first appearance, for he is regarded as a younthful phenomena by the audiences in Australia, Manila, China and Japan, where the organization has been both successfully touring previous to entering upon its American engagement. The Pollards appear at the Lyceum all of next week, opening Monday.

JAPANESE MOVING

Continue to Advance and Drive In the Russians' Screens.

Lidiaputzy, Manchuria, June 19.—The Japanese are advancing from the center and westward and are driving in the Russian screens South of Pallitun. Further west, they turned the Russian extreme right at Liao Yang Chungheng Saturday night, flanking the Russians out of position after a night long fight. The Japanese force consisted of an infantry division, four batteries of artillery and thity squadrons of cavalry. Gen. Mistchenk's cavalry subsequently retrived some of the lost ground. During Mistchenk's operations Prince Frederick Leopold of Prussia, representing Emperor William with the Russian army, received his baptism of fire.

According to information received at headquarters the Japanese are moving northwest from Korea in three columns, which include 50,000 infantry and corresponding forces of cavalry and field and mountain artillery. These columns are heading for Chuatsami, Kmesan and Kenshaw to complete the line of Oyama's army stretching from the Mongolian frontier to the Sea of Japan.

SEE THE PRESIDENT.

Jap and Russian Ministers Visit White House.

Washington, June 19.—Minister Takahira of Japan had a brief conference with the president this afternoon at the White House. He declined to say what the nature of his conference was, but that it was of some significance, was indicated perhaps by the fact that Count Cassini, the Russian ambasador, shortly after Minister Takahira's departure, also went into conference with the president. Upon leaving the White House Count Cassini was equally uncommunicative as to his visit, but said in reply to a question that the names of the plenipotentiaries of Japan had not been furnished him, nor did he communicate to the president the names of the plenipotentiaries of Russia. The negotiations, he added, were progressing.

CZAR REITERATES

Promise of National Assembly to Zemstvo Delegates.

St. Petersburg, June 19.—Emperor Nicholas received the zemstvo deputation this morning. The reception took place at noon in the Alexander palace at Peterhof.

Prince Troubetskoy, president of the zemstvo congress of the Moscow government, in behalf of the Moscow delegation, addressed the emperor in a long speech, in which he described the serious conditions existing in Russia, which have caused the zemstvo to approach his majesty direct. The emperor evidently was much impressed. M. Federoff, representing the St. Petersburg delegation, also spoke. The emperor replied, expressing deep regret at the great sacrifices consequent on the war, and above everything at the disaster to the Russian navy. In conclusion, the emperor said: "I thank you, gentlemen, for the sentiments expressed, and I join in your desire to bring about a new order of things. My personal wish, and my will as emperor to summon a national assembly, is unshakeable. I await with anxiety the carrying out of this my will. You can announce this to the inhabitants of the towns and villages throughout Russia, and from today you will assist me in this new work. The national assembly will establish, as formerly, a united Russia, and the emperor will give the supreme support of conditions based on the principle of Russian nationalism."

Upon completing his remarks, the emperor graciously greeted the individual members of the delegation, shaking hands with them and having a few cordial words for each, even such radicals as M. Petrunkevitch, president of the agricultural society, who has spent many years in exile as a result of his liberal views; M. Rodichcff and Prince Shakoffsky, as the "anarchist prince," being greeted without the slightest evidence of imperial displeasure.

ENORMOUS DEMAND FOR GERMAN GUNS.

Berlin, June 19.—The war in the Far East is causing such a demand for artillery that the German artillery manufacturers are overrun with orders. The Krupps' Essen works have orders for the delivery of 300 guns monthly for nearly two years. The company, which only recently built another artillery foundry, making eight of those buildings, must begin soon to construct a ninth artillery foundry.

Race For Supremacy.

It is interesting to watch the race for supremacy among Minneapolis-St. Paul-Chicago trains. First place is securely held by the Pioneer Limited and the second place by the Fast Mail. Both trains are entirely owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. There are three other fast trains via this line from the Twin Cities to Chicago every day, and there is no extra fare to ride on them. Address W. B. Dixon, northwestern passenger agent, St. Paul, for further particulars, lowest rates, etc.

To lose is often merely not to find—as a business chance or bargain missed, and thus lost, through failure to read the ads.

AN ANNUAL DEFICIT

Line Connecting Australia and Canada Is Losing Investment.

Ottawa, June 19.—The all-British cable project which was consummated nearly three years ago with a great flourish of trumpets by the optimists favoring the venture has not proved satisfactory to the colonies concerned in the big enterprise and has been a deep disappointment to its promoters.

In the Canadian house of commons, during the consideration of the vote for an appropriation of $125,000 as Canada's share of the deficit incurred by the operation of the Pacific cable, Sir Wilfred Laurier explained that it had cost nearly $10,000,000 to construct and lay this cable. This amount had been borne in the following proportion Australia, six-eighteenths, Great Britain, five-eighteenths; Canada, five-eighteenths, and New Zealand, two-eighteenths. The net receipts of the cable have been about $380,000. The most important feature in the Canadian prime minister's statement was that the expectations of those who initiated the enterprise had not been realized.

The cable was first proposed by Sir Sandford Fleming of Ottawa in 1874. The cable, as now laid runs about 8,000 miles, reaching from Doubtless Bay, Queensland, Australia, to Bamfield Creek, British Columbia. It was opened Oct. 31, 1902. Sir William Mulock, postmaster general for Canada, is now on his way to England to attend the Pacific conference, which takes place June 21. The others concerned have been ready for this conference for nearly a year, waiting upon the convenience of Canada. One of the questions which will come up for consideration is that of how to make the cable pay better and to wipe out the great annual deficits.

The report of the minister of marine for Canada, which has just been submitted to the Dominion parliament concerning the shipping of Canada for the fiscal year of 1904, does not afford any very encouraging prospect for the future of Canada's shipping industry.

The report shows that the total number of vessels of all kinds, sail, steam and barges, remaining on the register books of the Dominion on Dec. 31 last was 7,152, measuring 672,888 register, or net tons, being a decrease of 10,309 tons, as compared with last year. The registered tonnage of the Dominion in 1878 was double what it is today. Assuming the average value to be $30 a ton, the value of the registered tonnage of Canada last year was $20,185,140.

It is stated that the unprofitable condition of the British markets for cattle has caused a demoralized tone in the Canadian live stock markets. Canadian exports have, it is reported, found the business disastrous during the last few weeks, and exporters and drovers have lost much money.

It is shown that the prices paid for the commoner grades of export cattle have been especially low. Last week some sold at Liverpool as low as 9 cents, and few reached higher than 11½ cents. Three years ago the lower grades of cattle sold at London at 14½ cents and the best steers at 16 cents. Since that time the trend of prices has been downward. An improvement in the British market conditions would be immediately felt in Canada, but as the industrial situation in the old country continues dull it is not expected that there will be an immediate change. Cattle were difficult of sale upon the principal Canadian markets this week, and it is expected that buyers will hold off until the outlook shows improvement. The heavy losses sustained by Canadian drovers during the last few weeks will make them exceedingly cautious for the present.

DISAPPOINTING

Were the Results of the Zola Sale.

Paris, June 19.—The sale of a part of the furniture of the late Emile Zola was held last week at Medan. It was remarkable for the fact that the whole sale realized only $670. As Mme. Zola had kept most of the important relics for herself, small interest was taken in the auction. Only 200 people, mostly small bric-a-brac dealers were present. The hat rack of the famous novelist fetched 2 francs, and other small articles of household furniture similar prices.

NEW DIRECTOR

Of the French Conservatoire National a Reformer.

New York, June 19.—A Paris cable to the Herald says: The appointment of M. Gabriel Faure as director of the Conservatoire National de Musique et de Déclamation is causing much gossip in theatrical circles. The new director, who takes office in August, is the organist of the Madeline. He married the daughter of Fremie, the great animal sculptor. He is credited with the intention of making sweeping reforms. For instance, he will insist that notable historians, like M. Le Bargy, who hold the title of professor at the conservatory, but rarely if ever give any lectures, shall either hold classes regularly or resign.

Little success is attending the production of "Les Role Americains" at the Vaudeville, which stages prominent Americans under transparent disguises. Thus "Mr. Karnadger," the hero, gives libraries broadcast like Andrew Carnegie. The authors of the piece are both prominent on the boards. Severin Maica Malafayde is really Severin Mars, the famous pantomimist. He himself plays the role of the poet "Anibal Chiking." His collaboratrice is Mme. Camille Clermont, an actress, who created the role of Fanfar in "Famille Benoiton."

A truce has been concluded between the Dramatic Authors' society and the theater trust, which the society endeavored to boycott by refusing its authorization to perform any plays by any of its members. The society has now consented to give the Folies Dramatiques management permission to perform its plays during the next three months, after withholding it for two years. M. Porel, manager of the Vaudeville, Mme. Rejane's husband, has also scored, the society having agreed to abandon its claim to the $200 annually which all Paris managers have hitherto paid.

AQUEDUCT,

Held As Ancient Marvel, Pronounced Modern.

New York, June 19.—A Paris cable to the Herald says: For many a year archaeologists have expatiated on the wonderful constructive skill of the ancient Romans as shown by the aqueduct of Cohaillot, and many are the papers on the subject read before various learned societies.

But they observe a discreet silence now, for an investigator, studying the archives of the Hotel de Ville, has discovered that the aqueduct is comparatively modern.

The document, the authenticity of which is undoubted, shows that it was constructed by Bernard Palissy in 1557, by order of Catherine de Medicis.

TRAIN HELD ON BOUNDARY.

How French and Belgian Officials Avoided Extradition.

Paris, June 19.—A peculiar legal process has just taken place on the frontier between France and Belgium. Officials of both countries examined two men charged with robbery in Brussels. One was arrested in Brussels and the other in Paris. According to French law, confronation of the two men was necessary. Thereupon, in order to dispense with extradition proceedings, the officials placed a railway car just on the frontier line with one suspect in each end, one thus being in Belgium and the other in France.

The officials were careful during the proceedings to keep the men within their respective countries.

PARIS HOSTILE

To the Visit of Dowie, Zionist Leader.

Paris, June 19.—"Un grand success de gaete" is predicted by the French press for Dr. Dowie if, as announced, he dares visit Paris to purge it of sin. The invasion of the Zionist leader is looked forward to without fear or trembling. The only question is as to where the meetings shall be held. If properly approached, says one writer, the managers of the Folies Bergeres or the Moulin Rouge might be pleased to lend their halls and suspend one variety show for another.

DELAY IN PAVING.

Road Roller Breaks Her Back on First Street.

The road roller which has been used on West First street in the paving thereof, and owned by P. McDonnell, broke her back today and is disabled. She was wheeled into a hollow place at the corner of First street and Fifth avenue west to flatten it out and there she stuck. Jack screws were put under her lift her out, when the top of the engine over the front roller snapped off straight across. It will delay the work some.

PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

When James Gordon Bennett, the elder was editor of the Herald, Robert Bonner, publisher of the New York Ledger, was struggling to build up its circulation, and decided to try a little advertising, says the Kansas City Journal.

He wrote an advertisement consisting of eight words: "Read Mrs. Southworth's New Story in the Ledger," and sent it to the Herald marked for "one line." Mr. Bonner's writing was so bad that the words were read in the Herald office as "one page." Accordingly the line was set up and repeated so as to occupy one entire page. Mr. Bonner was thunderstruck the next morning. He had not to his name money enough in the bank to pay the bill. He rushed excitedly over to the Herald office, but was too late to do any good.

In a short time the results of the page announcement began to be felt. Orders for the Ledger poured in until the entire edition was exhausted and another one was printed. The success of the Ledger was then established. Ever after that time Mr. Bonner was an ardent believer in advertising and a liberal purchaser of space.

You can talk to all kinds of people through Herald wants ads. If you are looking for purchasers, renters, employes, boarders, roomers, or anything, the quickest, best and cheapest way is to talk to them through these inexpensive and effective "want fillers." That's what most people who have a want of any kind do.

DRINKING AT BARS

In London Is Declining and Temperance Workers Rejoice.

Big Decrease In the Consumption of Liquor Reported.

New York, June 19.—A London cable to the Herald says: London is assuredly becoming very temperate. Hotel proprietors of late years have been lamenting the great decrease in the consumption of wines, and now it appears the old custom of drinking at bars is going.

In the West end, at any rate, the disappearance of one of the largest, most magnificent and most popular bars in all London, the Criterion, in Piccadilly, has been one of the wonders of the week an dthe cause of great rejoicing among temperance reformers.

The man about town would as soon have expected Piccadilly Circus itself to be removed off the face of the earth as the Criterion bar, yet it has gone, unhonored and unwept.

Its disappearance marked the progress of a peaceful revolution in the habits of Londoners, which will please the admirers of the continental way of supplying refereshments.

"The day of the bar is over," said the manager of the Criterion restaurant. "Men no longer want to stand up at a bar merely to drink, and I am not sorry the bar has gone. Men of good class would no longer frequent it, so we have swept it away. Its place will be taken by restaurant drinking. The bar is doomed in the West end of London.

"In the last twenty-five years drinking has decreased quite 50 per cent. Men now prefer a place where they can eat as well as drink, and in a few years I think all the West end bars will have been superseded by saloons for solid refreshments as well as liquid."

Another instance of the passing of the stand-up bar is the new Gaiety restaurant in the Strand, where the place of the bar is given over to small tables, at which men may be served with food as well as drink.

On the other side of the Strand, in the new Savoy building, a wine house has adopted the little table system. As an interesting corollary to this there was issued yesterday an official report showing an extraordinary falling off in the amount of spirits consumed per head in this country.

The total consumption of spirits in 1903-04 was 42,168,021 gallons; 1904-05 it sank to 40,076,652 gallons. Going back five years to 1899-1900 the total amount of spirits consumed was 48,025,415 gallons, figures which emphasize the remarkable character of the decrease, which has been almost constant since that date.

For the first three months of the present year the decrease in whisky alone has amounted to some hundreds of thousands of gallons.

"The fact seems to be that we are witnessing a change in the habits of the people," declared the chancellor of the exchequer on the occasion of the last budget. Henry Walter Gilbey of the wine and spirit firm of W. & S. Gilbey says: "In two or three West end clubs that I know personally there has been an extraordinary falling off in the returns from liquors. In one case the fall is about $3,500 a year; in another club of about 500 members the decerase is $2,500."

GRAND OPENING

Will be held at John A. Erickson's new confectionery store, Tuesday afternoon and evening of June 20th, 1905, corner of Twenty-first avenue west and First street. Carnations given away after 8 o'clock p. m. All are welcome.

In attempting to gain indorsement for the creation of a board of traveling auditors, the administration met with partial defeat, as it did in the matter of changing laws for the collection of assessments from new members, the clerks declaring for the employment of auditors, but with the restriction that they consist of experienced camp clerks nearest the scene of operations in each state, no auditors to be sent out from headquarters at the society's expense. The law committee's recommendation for collection of assessments was rejected, and the old section, though considered faulty was indorsed. The convention approved the proposed change in section 125, providing for summary removal of incompetent camp clerks and the appointment of temporary clerks. Speeches were made by Head Consul Talbot and others.

Alfred O. Crozier, a delegate to the head camp of Modern Woodmen of America and a member of the committee on resolutions, announced today that he would introduce a resolution calling for a monster fraternal demonstration at Madison Square garden, to be in the nature of a protest against the alleged extravagance and mismanagement of offices of certain life insurance companies in tampering with the policy holders.

WHITELAW REID

Buys French Auto For Use In London.

New York, June 19.—A Paris cable to the Herald says: Whitelaw Reid has just bought in Paris, through his representative, a forty-horsepower automobile. This will be taken to London for city use.

The Touring club of France has come to the conclusion that the development of cycling and automobiling tends to supplant riding and driving, so, with a view to the rehabilitation of the horse, it is organizing a large touring party to go to Trouville early in August on horseback and in carriages.

The committee includes Baron Du Teil du Havelt, Duc De Noailles, Comte Rene de Beaumont and other leading horsemen. A large number of invitations have been sent to members of the smart set. The daily runs will average forty kilometers and the numerous large studs on the route will be visited by special permission.

At Juvissy during the auto-boat races last Monday the chief feature was the achievement by the Dubonnet, which broke all records, winning the Coupe de Paris and covering the flying kilometer in 1:06 1-5. The Dubonnet covered the mile in the same way in 2:20 2-5.

TWO DEATHS FROM HEAT

Eastern Cities Are Suffering From Torrid Temperature.

Pittsburg, June 19.—At noon the thermometer registered 89 degrees and was steadily rising. Two deaths and several prostrations were reported up to noon.

New York, June 19.—When today began with a temperature of 73 and growing hotter as the sun rose and with a humidity of 90 degrees, New Yorkers prepared for another sweltering day. Steadily the temperature climbed until at 11 a. m. it registered 82, but, in the meantime, the humidity had dropped until at that hour it registered the same as the thermometer and the dreaded oppressiveness was partially relieved, but the humidity still was uncomfortably high. The worst suffering was experienced in the crowded tenement house sections of the East side.

TO NOMINATE A NEW TICKET

Republican Organization of Philadelphia to Try to Save Itself.

Philadelphia, June 19.—The Republican city campaign committee held an unusual meeting today to consider a demand from citizens that the party ticket to be voted for in November be changed. The candidates are: Sheriff, Henry C. Ransley; coroner, John B. Lukens; city commissioner, Hugh Black and Jacob Wildemore.

At the conclusion of the meeting, which was secret, it was announced that a sub-committee of three, consisting of Chairman James L. Miles, David Martin and David Lane, had been appointed to meet a similar committee from the "committee of twenty-one," as the citizens who signed a letter to the city committee demanding a new ticket, have been designated. The committee is also empowered to see the candidates and endeavor to induce them to withdraw.

Today's action is the result of a letter written on June 13 and signed by twenty-one Republicans more or less prominent in local business affairs, urging the leaders to co-operate in the nomination of a new ticket that would have the confidence of the Republican voters of Philadelphia.

The nominating of a new ticket will not cause a withdrawal of opposition to the Republican organization under the leadership of I. W. Durham. Mayor Weaver and his friends who were formerly strong allies of the organization are believed to be hostile to any move that will continue the present leaders in power. In addition the committee of seventy, a strong reform organization, is perfecting itself in every ward with the declared intention of placing a ticket in the field, independent of what Republican organization may do. The reform leaders are apparently confident of their ability to defeat the regular Republican ticket and they claim they will have the support of Mayor Weaver and practically all of the office holders appointed to take the places of the men removed since the mayor's war on the organization leaders began.

Five policemen and one fireman were discharged today. The men had been found guilty of charges preferred against them. Isaac Fleming, who for twenty-seven years has been foreman of the city hall laborers, was also dismissed for neglect of duty. The Methodist preachers at their weekly meeting today adopted a resolution, asking Governor Pennypacker to remove from office State Insurance Commissioner Israel W. Durham.

PROTECT THE GAME.

The Herald recently published a brief editorial reference to a statement by a range newspaper that as fast as new fishing and hunting grounds are opened up in the northern part of the county, the vandals that destroy game by wholesale are upon the ground with traps, seines and dynamite.

This is a matter that the state game and fish commission should look into at once, and it will be a clear dereliction of duty if it does not. Practically the only good hunting and fishing grounds left in the state are those that are or were until lately remote from the settlements. As county roads and railroads are pushed into the backwoods, these ground are being opened up and made available for sportsmen. If the attentions of the commission do not follow the roads into the wilderness, it will be but a short time before these spots, too, are spoiled as most of the older sporting grounds have been.

The settlers, as a rule, do no harm. Even if they kill fish and game out of season, as a rule it is only that they may eat, and what the settlers eat will not make much difference in the game and fish supply. But it is the market-hunters and fishermen who take unfair means of killing game, who should be watched. By the use of dynamite it is possible to practically annihilate the fish in a lake or stream in a few days.

The defense of the commission will be that it has not men enough to cover the ground, which is not much of a defense. The state appropriates money lavishly for the protection of its game, and fines and fees assist to make up a handsome figure yearly. Most of the game wardens are scattered through thickly settled country where public sentiment is always a strong protection to fish and game. If three-quarters of its available men were put into the newly opened fields they could do twice as much good as they could anywhere else.

Aside from the regular salaried game wardens, there should be some way of having a game warden in every community and every settlement, who would be paid a percentage of the fines he succeeded in collecting. Such an array of game wardens would be a wholesome and effective army, that would practically put a stop to all serious depredations of this nature.

Furthermore, if by any chance the commission is active enough to capture any of these vandals who are despoiling the newly-opened hunting and fishing grounds, punishment should rest upon them heavily enough to deter others from following their example.

VALUE OF SILENCE.

A Swiss inscription says: "Sprechen ist silbern, Schweigen ist golden," which resolves itself into the trite and familiar "speech is silver, but silence is golden," which has been dinned into our ears from youth up until it has ceased to have any meaning to many of us because of the familiarity of its sound.

But it has meaning, and a valuable one, too, a meaning that may be generally understood, but is not generally appreciated. Many a reputation for deepest wisdom is built upon nothing more substantial than the faculty of keeping owlishly, consistently silent, thus concealing how little the great man knows. Everybody has suspected such a thing as this, but nobody ever heard of a reputation for wisdom being possessed by a man who did not even know enough to keep still, and conceal how little he knew.

The tongue is truly an unruly member, and it has a way of walking off by itself and doing things that the mind that should control it heartily disapproves. Most anybody's tongue, if neglected, will keep right on doing business and getting its owner into trouble. A story of how somebody got into trouble by keeping still would have every element of originality, while stories of those that got into trouble because they talked are so commonplace that they cannot get a hearing.

The man afflicted with dumbness is about a thousand times better off than the man afflicted with a tongue that works too easily.

AND WHY NOT?

Hamilton W. Mabie, the well known essayist, in a recent magazine article said that the day will come when the North will erect statues to Lee and Stonewall Jackson, and when the South will honor the memory of Abraham Lincoln in a similar manner.

Some commentators seem to regard this as a strong prophecy, and one that cannot be fulfilled until a marked change in sentiment, North and South, has been effected.

Yet why should it not be fulfilled, and that without any radical change in sentiment either North or South? Are we not far enough separated from the bitterness of battle to recognize genius even in those who were once enemies, but who are now brothers?

So far as the North is concerned, if it cannot recognize the military genius of Lee and of Stonewall Jackson, as readily as it recognizes that of Grant, Sherman or Sheridan, it can be nothing but blinding prejudice that is in the way, and surely it is not the experience of many observers that such a prejudice exists. Lee and Jackson were Americans, just as much as Lincoln and Grant were Americans, and even though they followed the Lost Cause and were our enemies upon the field of battle, do we permit that to blind us to their genius? Do we not rather, while regretting their error, take pride in their greatness as military leaders?

On the other hand, surely the South realizes that in losing Lincoln it lost its best friend at that juncture. There is probably not a Southerner of that generation who does not now realize that if the hand of the assassin had been stayed, there would have been no carpet-baggers, no oppression of Southerners, none of the horrors of Reconstruction days. They know that he would have met the problems attendant upon peace gently, lovingly, with a heart full of tender sympathy with the trials of a subdued foe.

Surely nothing could be more fitting than that the South should rear monuments to Lincoln while the North pays tribute to the greatness of the Southern military leaders, who, even if they fought against us, did it with a bravery and judgment that command admiration in this day, when the incidents of the war can be looked upon calmly.

CIRCUMLOCUTION.

The announcement that President Roosevelt is going to turn the departments at Washington inside out, examine their workings minutely, and see if they cannot be operated upon business principles, is one that has been feared in Washington for a long time. Indeed, it was freely predicted prior to the last election that if Roosevelt was re-elected there would be a "rattling of dry bones" in the departments.

And it is high time somebody went through those Circumlocation Bureaus down at Washington and endeavored to rearrange them upon a modern basis. It is a fearful task, one that a man without abnormal energy might shrink from, but it is necessary, and it will bring the man that does it the cordial dislike of the inmates of the ant-hill that is to be disturbed and the gratitude of the republic, so far as that counts for anything.

The law says department clerks shall work seven hours a day. Up to Roosevelt's time they had begun at 9, quit at 4, and had taken half an hour for lunch, making only six and a half hours of actual work. He decided that seven hours meant seven hours, and announced that closing hours would be 4:30 instead of 4 o'clock. As all of Washington's social fabric was built upon the basis of a 4 o'clock finish to the day's work, there was a terrible outcry, but the order still goes.

It is a common saying among those who have witnessed something of departmental methods, that if a firm or a corporation were handling the government's business it would do twice as much work with half as many people. This may be slightly exaggerated, but it is within hailing distance of the truth. During the many years of the present order of things, a system of red-tape, of "soldiering," of petty office politics, of shirking duty and responsibility, has grown up until it attends and impedes the progress of every government function. There is one office in Washington, that of the military secretary, Maj. Gen. F. C. Ainsworth, that is up to date in its work. This is such an uncommon thing that it is a source of incredible wonder in departments that are months and years behind in their work and don't care whether they ever catch up or not.

There are clerks enough. They are getting in each other's way, there are so many. What is needed are modern methods of doing business, a brushing away of the cobwebs, and a clearing away of the red tape that hampers nearly every operation of the departments.

WHAT'S THE GAME?

This is just a controlling portion of the 1,000 shares of the society's stock, which at par amounts to $100,000. The par value of Ryan's purchase is $50,100.

Dividends on the stock are limited by law to 7 per cent, which will make Ryan's purchase earn $3,507 per year.

He paid for this stock $4,000,000. Is it wonderful that people are asking why he should pay so much for stock with earnings so limited?

Why did he pay so much? Gentle reader, this is getting into the realms of "high finance," about which the common people are not supposed to know anything. Even if you are a policy-holder, and are entertaining a dim suspicion that if the purchasers of this stock make more than $3,507 a year out of it they are getting something that belongs to you, the answer is the same. You are not supposed to bother your head about such things. You should leave them to those whose business it is to handle "high finance."

You say it looks to you as though the so-called reorganization was a good deal of a bluff, and you fear it is simply a financial juggle in which the quickness of the hand deceives the eye. But you must remember that Paul Morton has said that he intends to conduct the affairs of the society for the best interests of the stockholders, which is a very good rule, and one you ought to be satisfied with—if he is able to follow it. But you are hardly to be blamed if you fear that it will be difficult for him to follow it and still let the purchasers of stock worth $50,100 reap dividends on the $4,000,000 they paid for it.

The theory of the limitation of the earnings of the stock is that every dollar above the 7 per cent that goes to the stockholders is to go to the policy-holders in dividends. If the holders of those 501 shares are content with 7 per cent, doubtless the policy-holders will get what they are entitled to. But if they want dividends on their $4,000,000, it looks a little as though they would have to get it some way out of the part that is due the policy-holders.

Hotel Gossip.

"The American people are needlessly alarmed over the reports that the development of more electrical power at Niagara Falls will injure the natural beauty of this world-famed scenic spot," said Herbert R. Fuller of Niagara Falls at the Lenox. Mr. Fuller, under the auspices of the Niagara Falls board of trade, is giving an illustrated lecture on "Natural and Industrial Niagara Falls," appearing at various places through the country, the object being to create a more widespread interest in the waterfall and get more visitors there. His services for tonight have been engaged by the local Sons of Veterans, at Stemway hall.

"While the power plants require quite a large amount of water," he continued, "not enough of it is taken to very greatly decrease the volume of the water fall. Three new power plants, which, in the aggregate, will develop 400,000 electrical horse-power, are now being constructed on the Canadian side of the river, but they are backed almost entirely by American capital. The power will be transmitted across the stream into the United States by means of cables stretched under the suspension bridge, and will then be distributed by other cables to any point within a radius of a hundred miles or so where it is needed, thus benefitting numerous small towns. Niagara Falls is already one of the leading manufacturing centers of the world, and before many years have passed it will rank first in this respect, owing to the cheapness of the power at that point. It is a fact not generally known that $10,000,000 was expended on the power plants now in use there before any returns were received on the big investment of capital. Now the electrical energy is sent over 100 miles away and is largely used in Buffalo, where even all of the printing presses are operated by it.

"In spite of all that has been said of Niagara Falls there are still some features about it that are not very widely known. For example, not a great many people are aware that the falls have worn back through solid rock for a distance of seven miles, and that they are still receding at the rate of a few inches each year. Experts tell us that it took 35,000 years to cut through the seven miles. The Horse Shoe falls are receding at a more rapid rate than are the American falls, owing to the fact that the bed of the former is softer than the latter. For this same reason the Canadian falls are three feet lower than the others.

"But the work of nature at this point is scarcely more wonderful than the work of man, and is at present attracting little more attention. The great industrial plants which have been established here since the development of the power are something marvelous, and are of as much interest to the stranger as are the falls themselves. The largest of these are the natural food conservatory, where shredded wheat biscuits are made, the carborundum factory where the new abrasive material, second in hardness to the diamond, is manufactured, the Carter-Crume counter check book factory, and the Union Carbide company, which makes the carbide for calcium lights. The International Paper company also has a very large plant. It is interesting to note that the carborundum is composed of such simple, every-day materials as salt, sawdust, sand and coke, electrically fused.

"The natural food conservatory claims the distinction of being the largest food factory in the world and the finest industrial plant in the world. This concern places all its faith in advertising, as everybody who reads the newspapers and magazines must know, and offers every inducement to attract visitors to its plant, which was visited by 70,000 outsiders last year. Guides are regularly employed by the company to show visitors about the place, the management acting on the theory that the factory itself, with its cleanliness and ideal working conditions, is the best kind of an advertisement. Like the National Register company at Dayton, Ohio, they have numerous educational features in connection with the factory, including an auditorium on the fourth floor which has a seating capacity of 1,000 persons, for the use of the employes. This auditorium is also given free for the use of conventions from any part of the world, another advertising scheme. The employes have lectures, concerts and dances here. Numerous fine bath rooms are among the conveniences afforded the employes, who number about 500."

John H. Langton, who was the first clerk employed at the Spalding hotel, is now holding the position of manager of the Belvedere hotel at Baltimore, Md., where he was attracted from the Grand hotel in New York by the offer of a handsome increase in salary. Mr. Langton is known by nearly every old resident of Duluth, and his name and face and friendly ways are familiar to the traveling public, or that part of it which has visited the Northwest in the past, or almost any other portion of the country, for he has been employed in numerous places. He is particularly noted for his wonderful memory. The Baltimore News has the following to say of him:

"Since Mr. Langton has been in charge of the big house that stands guard over the Maryland club he has received a steady stream of old acquaintances, and it has got to be something of a joke with his friends. If he didn't meet the man in Minneapolis or St. Paul or St. Louis or New York or Kalamazoo or Duluth or San Francisco or somewhere else, it was an accident.

"The other day Mr. Langton was standing at parade rest in the lobby when a man accosted him.

"'Isn't this John Langton?'

"'It is,' and you are George Klinck. Living in Baltimore now?'

"'Yes; but do you remember when you saw me last?'

"'I certainly do. It was when I was in the Clarendon at St. Paul, twenty-two years ago.'

"And they talked over old times. Later Mr. Langton was hurrying to the elevator to answer a call for ice water when he ran bump into another old acquaintance.

"'Why, hello, Frank Frady!' he said. 'I haven's seen you since 1887, in St. Paul!'

"'Well—er—you've got me.'

"'Langton—John Langton, Clarendon.'

"'Oh! Why, how are you, Langton!'

"Frank Lewis of London was at the Belvedere a few days ago.

"'Another acquaintance of Clarendon days in St. Paul,' said Mr. Langton. 'I haven't seen you since 1884.'

"The late Frank Blane, city editor of the Chicago Tribune, took a walk down State street with Mr. Langton back in '87 and published an article stating that the hotel man had called 147 persons by name and business, stating just where he had met each one, in an afternoon's stroll. It's training does it, but it's easier for some people than for others."

The Weather.

You who pause in your work of advancing or retarding humanity—whether you think it or not, you're doing one or the other—to complain about the weather, and permit its inclemencies to interfere with your manufacture of history, go out into the woods these days and see how little attention nature pays to a little thing like that. She is progressing grandly through the procession of the seasons, and is now at the height of one of her most glorious periods, the creative one.

You will notice, for instance, that the variety of coniferous trees that they make Christmas trees from looks much more like a Christmas tree now, because there is perched on the end of each branch an upright tuft that looks marvelously like a Christmas tree candle at a distance. It is this year's new growth, of a lighter green than the rest, and the length of the candles shows you how little nature permits a bad mood to retard her work. You who stick to the streets do not believe it, but there are even roses, wild roses, in full bloom, and promises of many more in the swelling buds.

Another Sunday better suited for staying indoors than for outdoor excursions was succeeded by a glorious Monday. Saturday evening the wind veered to the southwest, the skies cleared, and you would have bet money on there being a fine Sunday. In the night the wind, with a sardonic laugh, sneaked back into the northeast long enough to spoil Sunday, but it was back in the southwest again this morning, leaving only a popular lack of confidence in its promises to show for its trick.

The prospects are good for tonight and tomorrow, when the weather man expects to see partly cloudy weather with possibly scattered showers. It will be warmer tonight, and cooler Tuesday afternoon or night. The winds will be fresh, and from the westerly or northerly quarters.

Following were the maximum temperatures recorded during the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

United States Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, June 19.—Forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Tuesday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity—Partly cloudy tonight and Tuesday with possibly scattered showers. Warmer tonight. Cooler Tuesday afternoon or night. Fresh westerly to northerly winds.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, June 19.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Tuesday: Wisconsin—Generally fair tonight and Tuesday, except probably showers in north portion.

Minnesota—Generally fair tonight and Tuesday, except probably showers in north portion. Warmer tonight.

LINES TO A SMILE.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Somebody says the Russians have no such word as 'hurrah.'"

"Well, we are a good deal more interested just now in finding out whether they have any such word as 'enough.'"

Washington Star: "Are you happy, now that you are rich?" asked an old-time friend.

"I don't know as I'm happy," answered Mr. Cumrox; "but I'm dead sure I'm not as discontented as I would be if I was broke."

New York Sun: Lot and his wife were fleeing from Sodom.

"He-he," they snickered, "this time we leave instead of the cook."

"No," said Brooks. "They have accumulated so many bones that everybody has forgotten its existence."

Detroit Free Press: Bosh—Blanket stammers frightfully; but there's one time when he never hesitates.

John—When's that?"

Bosh—When he comes for the rent; he's our landlord.

Detroit Free Press: Shaver—Do you believe that "early to bed" makes a man wealthy?

Old Boy—Well, er, yes. You see if he goes early to bed it keeps him from squandering his money at night!

Reflections of a Bachelor.

People always have good manners when they tell you how superior you are to others.

There is so much natural cussedness in some men that they would rather make a 10-cent piece crookedly than a dollar bill fairly.

Irresistible Mr. Pulcher.

Springfield correspondent in Heron Lake News: John Pulcher is quite a ladies' man. We met him last Sunday out riding with three young ladies and another one walking behind the buggy.

What Happened to Joe.

Castelville, Mo. Review: Joe Henderson has a broken rib. He walked up behind the north end of a mule headed south.

For Use, Not Beauty.

Kansas City Journal: A Sedalia girl who is taking singing lessons asked her teacher: "Do you think I can ever do anything with my voice?" The professor very cautiously replied: "Well, it may come in handy in case of fire."

LITTLE BOY BLUE.

But sturdy and staunch he stands;
And the little toy soldier is red with rust,
And his musket molds in his hands.
Time was when the little toy dog was new,
And the soldier was passing fair;
And that was the time when our Little Boy Blue
Kissed them and put them there.

"Now, don't you go till I come," he said,
"And don't you make any noise!"
So, toddling off to his trundle bed,
He dreamt of the pretty toys;
And, as he was dreaming, an angel song
Awakened our Little Boy Blue—
Oh, the years are many, the years are long,
But the little toy friends are true!

Aye, faithful to Little Boy Blue they stand,
Each in the same old place—
Awaiting the touch of a little hand,
The smile of a little face;
And they wonder, as waiting the long years through
In the dust of that little chair,
What has become of our Little Boy Blue
Since he kissed them and put them there.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS

Perham Enterprise: If Roosevelt is going to make it a non-partisan cabinet, he ought to get Bryan as a running mate for Bonaparte.

Fertile Journal: If you have born in you that happy temperament which makes it possible and easy for you to always look on the bright side of every situation in life, and be happy under all circumstances, then it is your privilege to strive in every way you can to impart this sunshine spirit to those about you in your own home and among your own friends, which is better than the keeping of this good cheer all for your own enjoyment.

St. Peter Herald: The state railway and warehouse commission is still investigating oil rates. The board has learned that discriminations have been made against the independent shippers, but there is still the chance that it will doubt the veracity of the evidence.

Anoka Herald: A diploma is a fine thing to have but it is not indispensable. The business man in whose employ you hope to be does not pay as much attention to your sheepskin as to your ability to work.

Sauk Center Herald: There is a good deal of discussion in the Republican ranks about "a man to beat Johnson." If with our Republican majority of 75,000 we cannot elect any good Republican our party better take a vacation for a few years and take lessons in practical politics in the kindergarten of the Democrats.

Brainerd Arena: President Castro has a system of government ownership that he considers practical and entirely satisfactory.

Little Falls Herald: Get the fortune—discuss how you got it afterward, for then you will have it anyway. If you stop to think about methods in the first place you may not get the fortune. This seems to be the argument now fashionable.

Fairmont Sentinel: A boy doesn't have any period in his life when he wants to spell his name Henrye or Tommye but girls you know, are different.

Cannon Falls Beacon: The arrogant attitude maintained by the railroad magnates during the present agitation of the rate question has made more socialists in one year than the regular propoganda has made in ten years.

Red Lake Courier: Senator Horton has announced his intention of going after the congressional nomination in the St. Paul district. The Horton bill will not be used as a campaign document.

Park Rapids Clipper: Some people would appreciate it if the congressmen, in addition to sending them seed, would also come around and hoe the garden. And the one would be about as sensible as the other.

FOR MEN ONLY.

Frank M. Eddy in Sauk Center Herald: No matter how much of a reprobate the old man is, a dutiful daughter never tunnks her lover quite as perfect as her father.

No woman ever falls in love with a perfect man. He is too much like herself.

If most married women knew what other women think of their husbands they would mighty seldom get jealous.

A woman likes to have a man tell the truth about every woman in the world except herself.

The pleasures of wealth are doubled and the pains of poverty are halved when shared by a loving woman.

A woman just loves to make excuses for the bad breaks of those she loves.

When a young man has powder on his coat lapels it is a sign of an engagement.

Had Happened Before.

Harper's Weekly: A learned clergyman was talking with an illiterate preacher, who professed to despise education.

"You have been to college, I suppose?" asked the latter.

"I have, sir," was the curt answer.

"I am thankful," said the ignorant one, "that the Lord has opened my mouth to preach without learning."

"A similar event occurred in Balaam's time," was the retort.

The Conshohocken Josher.

Los Angeles Times: "Blast all those people who write to point out errors in the papers," a reporter said.

He frowned, sipped his strawberry sundae, and went on:

"I was put in a new department last week. They gave me a column of 'Items of Interest.' It seemed to me that I made it as attractive and striking a column as the paper contained. And what was the result?"

He made a gesture expressive of bitterness and sorrow.

"Did any of the editors compliment me? No. Did any of the reporters? No. The only response that my column evoked was a letter from a Conshohocken josher. I had written that, during the summer months, a baby died of cholera infantum every three minutes, and this letter quoted my paragraph and added:

"'Please give me this baby's address, as, if it is still dying, I want to take my wife down to watch it for an hour or two.'"

SO YOU CAN'T.

You can splurge and you can bluster, you can keep yourself a-stew,
You can tell the world in thunder tones just what you mean to do;
You can plan, you can palaver, you can brag and you can boast
Till your name is never mentioned but to hand you out a roast.
You can grumble over grievances that haven't touched you yet,
And in intervals of grumble you can sit around and fret.
But whatever you accomplish in that fuming, fussing way,
You cannot, with all your worry, do tomorrow's work today.

All your fussing over futures only makes the present weak;
And the steam you need for work today will take a quiet sneak.
Though you bellow like a bullock with a gaudy in its ear
You can never do tomorrow's little stunts until it's here.
So you'd better keep your shirt on, looking round about to see
What there is you may be doing ere today take wing and flee;
For you'll always find it working just exactly as I say;
You cannot, with all your worry, do tomorrow's work today.

—S. W. GILLILAN in Baltimore American.

No Time Like the Old Time.

There is no time like the old time,
When you and I were young,
When the buds of April blossomed,
And the birds of Springtime sung;
By Summer suns are nursed;
But, oh, the sweet, sweet violets,
The flowers that opened first!

There is no place like the old place
Where you and $ were born;
Where we lifted first our eyelids
On the splendors of the morn;
From the milk-white breast that warmed us,
From the clinging arms that bore,
Where the dear eyes fastened o'er us
That will look on us no more!

There is no friend like the old friend,
Who has shared our morning days;
No greeting like his welcome,
No homage like his praise!
Fame is the scentless sunflower,
With gaudy crown of gold;
But friendship is the breathing rose,
With sweets in every fold.

There is no love like the old love,
That we courted in our pride;
Though our leaves are falling, falling,
And we're fading side by side.
There are blossoms all around us,
With the colors of our dawn,
And we live in borrowed sunshine
When the day-star is withdrawn.

There are no times like the old times,
They shall never be forgot!
There is no place like the old place;—
Keep green the dear old spot!
There are no friends like our old friends,
May heaven prolong their lives;
There are no loves like our old loves—
God bless our loving wives!

—OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

This County's Claims.

Minneapolis Journal: It is a foregone conclusion that St. Louis county will ask for some place on the state ticket next year. After the big vote it gave Dunn, as well as the whole ticket, it will insist on recognition. It is considered likely that Odin Halden will be in the field, either for auditor or treasurer, and Duluth may offer a candidate for clerk of the supreme court. However, the range towns are jealous of Duluth, and they are reported to be getting together to support P. E. Dowling of Eveleth, a member of the last house, for lieutenant governor. Dowling is said to be quite willing. He is traveling about the state on business, and is already laying some wires, it is claimed.

The Governor's Ad.

Minneapolis Journal: Governor Johnson, although acting in perfectly good faith, may not induce the representatives of Russia and Japan to come to Minnesota to draw up their treaty of peace, but he has given Minnesota, as a summer resort, some valuable advertising. The governor's telegram to the president and his offer of the new capitol as a meeting-place, where weather conditions would be altogether pleasant and agreeable during the summer months, gets into the news columns of the papers all over the country, occasions general remark and calls attention in a very effective way to the attractions of Minnesota in summer.

Governor Johnson has given the state a good advertisement and one which, if properly followed up, would ultimately be of great advantage to the business interests of the entire state.

GAMES TODAY.
Fargo at Duluth.
Grand Forks at Winnipeg.
St. Cloud-Brainerd at Crookston.

Our warm human sympathy gushes forth in big chunks toward the cities of St. Cloud, Brainerd and Fargo in their tribulations which have been caused by the sad news sent out from Duluth Saturday and yesterday.

These cities are represented by baseball teams. The St. Cloud-Brainerd nine, in particular, was a promising young aggregation which had aspirations regarding pennants and such things. But that was before it hit Duluth. The White Sox brought the newcomers in the league out of their dream with a rude jolt. Five games out of six were lost to the Champs and the hyphenated team is down among the subway bunch now.

Fargo came next, and the team that Perry Werden made infamous, looks like another victim.

The first game was still another of those nerve-racking finishes in which the opposing pitcher is allowed to work along from inning to inning, gradually gathering a sense of security about him, until the better part of the game is over, and is then knocked down in the mud, trampled on and generally put to the bad.

A man named Johnson was the victim selected by the White Stockings Saturday. For five innings the Champs deluded him into the idea that he was a pitcher. Meanwhile the men from various towns had collected five runs, by careful and laborious work. Two came in the first inning on a hit batsmen, singles by Ripley and Nehr, and a two-baser by Spicer.

Two more came in the second on a base on balls, a sacrifice and two singles.

The fifth and last tally by the visitors came in the middle round when McShane, after making a circus stop of Howell's line drive, threw wild to first. O'Dea dropped McShane's throw on Wing's grounder, and second and third bases were occupied. Howell came in on Ripley's slow infield hit.

Then in the sixth something happened, and happened quick.

Errors by White allowed Weller and Menelco to go safe. O'Dea went out on a long fly, and Neighbors drove out a long single, scoring Weller. Erickson struck out, and then McAleese drove one of Johnson's feeble shoots over the fence for a home run. McShane singled and went to second on a wild pitch. Mullen hit safely and McShane scored. Bennett was hit in the ribs, but Weller, up for the second time, was an easy out.

This dizzy little lunch party continued in the seventh. Menelce led off with a two-bagger, and Captain Arthur received one of Johnson's shoots in the back. Neighbors singled scoring Menelce and McAleese unnecessarily rubbed things in by cracking out a two-bagger, which cleared the bases. He scored himself a moment later.

The details of the slaughter:

In the second game Earl Lowe, of local corner lot fame, made his initial appearance. For a debutante in fast company Earl appeared to be about the cheese. For the first two or three innings he looked like a man who has just dined off cucumbers and mince pie, but this gradually wore off as the game progressed, and he settled down like a veteran. In the tenth inning, with the score tied, the bases full and nobody out, the Duluth boy dragged himself out of the chasm by striking out three batters in quick succession.

Aside from this feat, the feature of the game was the ability shown by Captain Arthur to get a hit when it is needed. As a pinch hitter, the genial Duluth captain is all to the good. In the eleventh inning with two men out, and your Uncle Silas hovering some place around the base lines waiting for somebody to bring him home, Artie hit one of Spicer's shoots so hard and so fast that Si had his sweater on and was half way to the car before the ball was recovered.

Lowe was a little late in getting started. He passed White, and allowed Ripley a hit. The next three men were outs, but White came in on an error.

During the next seven innings he allowed but two safe ones.

Meanwhile the Chumps were collecting a few off Spicer. Bennett singled in the third, went to second on Weller's base on balls, and scored on a hit by Captain Arthur.

Another came in the fourth on two errors and a single.

In the fifth, Weller singled, and Captain Arthur was again there with the willow, slamming the ball over the fence for a homer.

The Champs then sat back for a breathing spell, with the score 4 to 1 in their favor.

But Lowe struck some rough sledding in the eighth, when he passed White. Three singles followed, and two runs came in. The score was tied in the ninth, when Hanson drew a base on balls, and was worked around the diamond by his team mates.

Then Mr. Lowe showed his nerve in the tenth, after giving the fans heart palpitation, and the eleventh opened with the score tied, and only four minutes left to play, in order to allow the visitors to catch a train.

Bennett opened the last half of the inning with a single, and after Weller and Menlece had been retired, Captain Arthur did his little stunt and his first extra inning game of the season, was over. The score:

Yesterday the Blind Piggers from up Fargo way struck town, and gave Mr. Neighbors, the Duluth center fielder, a chance to show what he could do.

Ever since the team came home, the fans have had a suspicion that Neighbors knew how to play baseball, and yesterday he proved himself to be the fuzzy, downy peach.

Perry Werden's orphaned mob gave the Sox the worst scare they have had in weeks, and nearly rung in one of the deathbed rallies on which the Champs believed they had a copyright. Had it not been for the work of Mr. Neighbors, the prohibitionists would be rejoicing in having the first "horse" on the Sox.

Erick Edward and a gent named Berrigan were the opposing slingers, and they put up a pretty battle.

Duluth butted into the game in the fifth inning, when the long gentleman from Fargo passed Bennett and Weller. Menlece was an easy out, and Captain Arthur continued his bombardment of the day before, by banging out another single, scoring Bennett. Weiler scored when Berrigan tried to catch him napping off third, and hove clean through the baseman.

The water wagon crowd broke into the game in the third when Donovan tore off a two-base hit, and scored on singles by Traeger and Rose.

For four innings the score stood thusly, but in the eighth, Captain Artie again bobbed up with a single, went to second on a sacrifice, third on an infield hit, and scored on a long hit by McAleese.

The ex-rowdies started their trouble in the ninth. French banged a hot one down the line to McShane, which the Irishman stabbed with one glove, and then tried to pick a kid off the right field fence. By the time O'Dea had recovered the ball, French was roosting on the third bag trying to recover his breath.

It was a case of "in again, out again" with Mr. Finnigan who batted for Berrigan, and Donovan also died at the plate. Mehl sent a one to Mullen, which the outfielder dropped and French scored. Traeger leaned against one of Erickson's swift shoots, and shoved it into deep center, while Mehl tore around the sacks for the plate. Neighbors sprinted something under a quarter of a mile, shoved out one mitt and the ball hit it. It gave a bounce up from the mitt and then Mr. Neighbors shoved both hands under it. After juggling it for a moment while the fans held their breath, he grabbed it, and the game was over. The score:

Crooks Drop Third Straight Game to Fargo.

Crookston, June 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a game of ball lacking interest and ginger, the Fargo team Saturday took the third of the series and sixth consecutive one which the Crooks have lost on the home grounds. The features of the game were Traeger's two-bagger in the first inning and the double play from Grodebish to Schlatter. Although securing less hits and making three times the number of errors as Crookston, Fargo played good ball. Crookston's errors were costly.

Maroons Open Long Home Series With Victory.

Winnipeg, June 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Maroons took their sixth straight game here Saturday, defeating Grand Forks in the opening game of a long home series.

Bond struck out sixteen men for Grand Forks, establishing a new league record, but he allowed the home team hits when they meant runs. Four two-base hits all counted in the score.

A sensational catch by Howells which retired the side in the ninth, was the feature of the game. The score:

HARD LUCK STORY

New Captain and Four Players to Be Secured.

Crookston, Minn., June 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Crookston baseball team, which now decorates the tail end of the percentage column in the Northern Baseball league, has, without a doubt, been the most unfortunate team in the Northern league, this season. Of the twenty-nine games played, but eight have been won, and in not a single game where the score has been close has the Crookston team been lucky enough to win. Crookston at the present time has one pitcher, Sorenson. He is one of the best in the league, but notwithstanding this fact, Sorenson has not won a single game he has pitched. One of the chief causes of the loss of so many games is lack of team work. The players have been shifted about several times, and the attempts to strengthen the team by the signing of new players has been unfortunate in nearly every instance. The error column has been visited too regularly, and the errors too frequently have been very costly.

The outfield as now constituted, with Olson in left, Ludvig at center, and Gridenich in right, will do. Mueller at third is hitting very poorly, and fielding his position but fair. Leighty at short is somewhat erratic, but is improving steadily. He has the best arm of any man in the team, and though given to fumbling, generally recovers quickly, and his arm does the rest. Schlatter at first is also playing a somewhat erratic game, fielding his position well, but is not keeping up his reputation as a willow wielder. Sperry, behind the bat, is doing good work, and is also hitting the ball fairly well. His record as a base runner is the best on the team, and he has a long list of stolen bases to his credit. The third pitcher, Collette, pitched one game, in which he passed eight men, and jumped the team the night following.

The chief trouble of the team at the present time, however, is the internal dissension. Capt. Livingstone, who plays second base, has failed to hold the confidence of his players, and no good results are expected until a new man is selected in his place. It is probable that Schlater will be selected as captain of the team, the first of next week, when four new players will don Crookston uniforms. Patterson, who played first last year, will be here to play third, and several others in his class, who will be added, should assist the team in climbing the percentage column at a remarkable rate when once started.

Dorn, Crookston's crack pitcher and the pride of the city base ball enthusiasts drew his check last Saturday, played a game of craps with First Baseman Schlatter his bosom friend, won $23 and stole out of town on the midnight train with his suit case and pack. A month of good feed and a bunch of bills was too much for the lanky gentleman from the South and he shifted his feet without orders. He will be blacklisted and unless recompense is made with the Crokston team will be barred from playing league ball again. Dorn's departure leaves Crookston with only one pitcher, Sorenson, and he is discouraged after having pitched seven games and pulled in nothing but defeats. He attempted to leave last Friday but officials of the team took his baggage from him at the depot and made such dire threats that he returned from the Forks whither he had gone. But then Friday was the day before pay day.

MANAGER IS MOBBED

McGraw Narrowly Escapes Violent Treatment at St. Louis.

St. Louis, June 19.—At the conclusion of the St. Louis-New York National league baseball game yesterday a crowd of spectators of the game set upon Manager John J. McGraw of the New York team, and had not the police interposed it is probable McGraw would have suffered violence. He was struck with an umbrella but not injured.

While the New York players were entering an omnibus by the side of which McGraw was standing, a crowd assembled and began jeering McGraw. He replied and instantly the crowd set upon him. Somebody struck McGraw on the shoulder with an umbrella and this was followed by a shower of stones. A number of officers hurried up and dispersed the crowd, one man being taken away by a police sergeant, but was later released. The omnious was accompanied from the grounds by several policemen and there was no further trouble.

Duluth Loses Two Games Because of Outlaw Pitcher.

Change Is Made In the Northern League Umpires.

Because of Pitcher Harris, alias Smith, an outlaw from the National Association of Baseball Leagues, and of a yellow pup, Duluth may lose three games which have been chalked up to her credit.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Northern league was held in the city yesterday, at which Managers Day of Crookston, Lamb of Winnipeg, Samisch of Fargo, Wright of St. Cloud-Brainerd, Spansfield of Grand Forks and Van Praagh of Duluth and President Kent and Secretary Selby of the league were present.

Harris, it is understood, is a contract-jumper from the Southern league, and an outlaw. Consequently the two games he won for the Duluth team will doubtless be thrown out by President Kent to whom the matter was referred. Harris also lost a game to Crookston, but this game will be let stand.

The yellow pup affair was also referred to the president. It has to do with the game against Grand Forks, when a mongrel cur ran out on the field and grabbed the ball. But Duluth had already won the game, and it is doubtful if the victory will be thrown out.

The change has not yet been made in the league standing given in today's paper.

The question of umpires was also discussed, and Long, who has been with the Duluth team for a number of games, drew his release, owing to the large number of protests which have been received. In spite of the roasting that has been handed out to Long, it is the opinion of some of the regular fans that the league will have a hard time filling his place. He has made a few decisions which appeared wrong, but in the main his work has been very good, although not up to the mark of that of "Ollie" Anderson, who has made a reputation for himself this spring.

Egan is the name of the new man who has been engaged in place of Long.

GOES AFTER SHIP FERN

Commander Guy A. Eaton of the Minnesota Naval reserve, left Saturday evening for Washington where he and Congressman J. Adam Bede will inspect the training ship Fern that is to come to Duluth and ascertain the number of men and the quantity of supplies that will be needed for the trip up the Atlantic coast and on the St. Lawrence river and Great Lakes.

A paid crew will accompany the Fern from the Norfolk navy yards to Ogdensburg, N. Y., and some of these will be retained to act with some of the reserve navigators from Duluth, who will meet the boat at Ogdensburg.

The main body of the reserves will meet the boat at Sault Ste Marie, Mich., and in this detachment there will be just as many of the members of the two local divisions as may be able to get away. The Lake Superior cruise is to last about a week.

Owing to the limited amount of funds available for the purpose and because of cost of repairs to the boat, the expenses of the trip are being held down as much as possible and for that reason the proposed trip of the local reserves to the navy yard or to Ogdensburg was abandoned. The reserves will be under pay all the time that they are out on service and as the money for the purpose comes out of the amount appropriated by the legislature some curtailment of the former plans of the naval reserve has been found imperative.

Next season it is expected that the Duluth reserves and the Fern will take part in the Great Lakes naval maneuvers with the Dorthea, of Chicago, the Hawk of Cleveland, the Yantic, of Detroit, the Essex of Toledo and the United States cruiser Michigan, stationed at Mackinac.

TAKES OWN LIFE

Corpse Had Evidently Been There For Several Days.

Hanging from a short rope attached to the roots of a tree on the steep bank of Chester creek, the partly decomposed body of an unknown man was discovered yesterday afternoon by M. Casey, a dairyman, who was looking for some stray cows.

Casey was attracted to the spot by the barking of his dog, or otherwise the body would not have been noticed, as it was covered by a tangle of underbrush.

Beside the body was an empty whisky flask, from which the man had evidently been drinking before committing the act.

Coroner McCuen was summoned and viewed the body as it lay. There were no marks of violence on it, and he was convinced that it was a clear case of suicide.

This opinion is confirmed by the fact that the rope was a new piece of clothes line, evidently purchased for the occasion. The man had apparently tied the rope about his neck with a slip noose, after fastening it to the roots of the tree, and then cast himself forward.

The body was removed to Durkan & Crawford's morgue, where it was viewed by a large number of persons this morning, but identification has not yet been established.

The man was apparently about 40 years of age. He was dressed in a dark suit of clothes, a checked cotton shirt, white collar and black felt hat. His head is partly bald, and his hair a dark brown. His chin was clean shaven, but he wore a sandy mustache. He would weigh about 175 pounds.

In the pockets of the man's clothing were found a leather purse, containing $1.80, a gold filled watch, and a long German pipe with a china bowl.

LEAVE FOR CAMP

Third Regiment Will Be In Lake City Tuesday.

The Band Has Already Reported For Duty In St. Paul.

The Third Regiment band, which left over the Northern Pacific for St. Paul yesterday, today reported for duty before the national convention of state militia officials in the Saintly City. One delegate from each state will attend the convention. Adjutant General Fred Wood will represent Minnesota. The band numbered twenty-eight pieces when it left Duluth. It will join its regiment for service at the annual encampment at Lake City tomorrow morning, when the companies will leave for the camp grounds in a special train from St. Paul.

The Duluth companies will join the remainder of the regiment in St. Paul early Tuesday morning, leaving here tonight at 11:15 o'clock over the Great Northern. Companies A and C will be in command of Majs. F. E. Resche and H. V. Eva, Capts. K. A. Franklin and Richard Little and Lieuts. Whitaker, Kjall, Knollton and Olson.

It is expected that Companies B of Anoka, D of Zumbrota, G of Princeton, D of Olivia and I of Crookston will either report at St. Paul or board the special for the camp grounds en route. The company at Brainerd was allowed to lapse from the service, so the regiment is one company short.

The camp grounds at Lake City will be vacated by the First regiment today, while the Third will return home June 27. The Second regiment, with two batteries of artillery and a company of engineers, will go into camp for eight days July 5. On the last day of the encampment the regimental shoot, in which seven men from each company will participate, will be held.

According to general orders issued by Col. Van Duzee the daily routine will be as follows:

First call for reveille, 5 a. m.; reveille, 5:15 a. m.; assembly, 5 a. m.; sick call, 5:30 a. m.; mess, 6 a. m.; fatigue, 6:40 a. m.; first call for guard mounting, 7:40 a. m.; assembly, 7:50 a. m.; adjutant's call, 8 a. m.; drill, 9 a. m.; recall, 11 a. m.; mess, 12 m.; first sergeant's call, 1 p. m.; officers' school (battalion), 1:30 p. m. mess, 6 p. m.; first call for parade, 6:40 p. m.; assembly, 6:50 p. m.; adjutant's call, 7 p. m.; band concert, 8 p. m.; first call for tattoo, 9:50 p. m.; taps, 10:30 p. m.

WOMAN JOINS HUNT FOR POLE

Miss Mamie Babb to Go With Peary to North.

Norway, Me., June 19.—Love for adventure and a desire to be the first woman to reach the North pole has caused Miss Mamie Babb to abandon school teaching, to sail, she says, with Lieut. Commander Robert E. Peary in his quest of the North pole. From the peak of the explorer's new steamer will float an American flag, presented to Miss Babb by her pupils at the Little School at North Harpswell.

"What danger can there be in such a journey?" she asks when the perils of an Arctic trip are pointed out to her by relatives, who are opposed to her going. "I shall be the first woman to reach the pole, because I know Mr. Peary will find it this time."

Mrs. Peary and her daughter, Marie, 12 years old, also will be passengers on the Roosevelt, but they will return home when the steamer arrives at the point where relief suppy stations are to be established. Miss Babb says she will stick to the ship until the end.

"If the men stand the trip I guess I can," she says.

Miss Babb is 30 years old, tall and handsome. For several years she has lived with an uncle and aunt at West Brook, who are greatly averse to the trip she is about to take.

Miss Babb has always been a friend of Mrs. Peary, and as a stenographer has done much of Lieut. Peary's clerical work. She has read much about the frozen regions. She has prepared maps and routes for the coming trip, and all have been approved by Mr. Peary when submitted to him for examination.

When Peary came to Maine last year to make arrangements with the shipyards for the construction of the Roosevelt, he called upon Miss Babb and explained to her in great detail what he intended to do on his next trip toward the pole. Invariably any changes in the itinerary which Miss Babb made were heeded by Peary, who submitted the revised details to the Arctic club of North America, which is financing the forthcoming trip.

After Peary's second attempt to reach the pole failed he abandoned the project, thinking that it would be impossible to get another leave of absence from the secretary of the navy. Miss Babb counseled against his resolve, and, taking the matter in her own hands, obtained the secretary's consent for another leave of absence. Then it was that she began to think what a nice journey the voyage would be for a woman to make.

Miss Babb talked with her relatives and when she had gained the opinion of several persons she flatly told Peary that she intended to make the trip with him if quarters could be fixed up for her on the Roosevelt. If not, she was going anyhow.

Miss Babb went to her home in West Brook Saturday and at once began preparations for the trip. She will sail from here this week for New York, where the Roosevelt will be tied up until July 4. She will look after the installation of the wireless telegraph apparatus, and will operate the instrument while in the Arctic regions. She has learned telegraphy and stenography, and is an expert at photography. Much of the data concerning the trip and all the pictures of interesting points visited along the line will be her work, as well as all the press matter concerning the expedition.

TWENTY-THREE WERE KILLED

In Saturday Night's Wreck on Western Maryland Railway.

Baltimore, June 19.—The death roll of Saturday night's disaster on the Western Maryland railway now foots up twenty-three and his number is likely to be increased from among the list of those greviously mangled.

All the dead were employes of the railroad returning to their homes in the small towns along the railway to spend Sunday. The train, which was No. 5, passenger, westbound, carried a large number of passengers, all the coaches being filled. As many of the workmen as could do so went into the baggage car, the remainder of the gang of thirty-five finding places on the platform between the mail and baggage cars and between the latter and the tender.

In the neighborhood of Patapsco station near Westminister, the Western Maryland has many curves and that just west of the bridge crossing the Patapsco rivers a sharp one. An extra freight made up of heavy coal and provision cars, was running East, should have taken a siding to allow No. 5 to pass. Such were the orders. Why they were disregarded will never be known for those who should have seen that they were obeyed are dead.

The passenger train was running at a speed of thirty miles an hour and the freight was making good time. Just West of the bridge they came together with terrific force, the three engines being piled on one another.

The fearful impact drove the passenger tender into the baggage car and demolished it and the mail car. Along the track on both sides were scattered dead and frightfully mangled men, these latter, more fortunate than those who had been in the baggage car and on the engines, for most of them were still pinioned in the wreckage out of the immediate reach of helping hands.

Heart rendering shrieks from the injured quickly brought to the scene the inhabitants of all the farm houses nearby. Farmers wives and daughters made bandages of their clothing and household linen and worked heroically amid the blood and grime.

Medical assistance was received from Westminister and later a relief train from Baltimore, carrying physicians and supplies. As fast as they could be taken from the wreckage the dead were placed aboard the train from Westminister and taken to that town and Union Bridge. The more seriously injured were brought to this city.

WOMAN SUES

For $20,000,000 Estate and Historic Battlefield.

New York, June 19.—Seeking to establish her claim to a $20,000,000 estate, which includes a tract a mile and a half long and half a mile wide through the heart of the city of Quebec, and eight acres of the famous Palns of Abraham, Mrs. Caroline Lambert Campbell, wife of William A. Campbell, assistant superintendent of schools in Brooklyn, has engaged counsel to push her case in the Dominion courts.

The property was escheated for three generations by the British government in 1760. In 1887 the privy council refused a joint application from representatives of the Catholic church, the Church of England and the citizens of Quebec asking that $150,000 rental held by the British government should be equally divided between the two churches in Quebec.

The privy council, with the assent of Queen Victoria, decided that the heir would in time appear and that the property and its usufruct from the time the decree of escheat terminated in 1865 belonged to the heirs of Louis Joseph Lambert, who gave largely of his vast fortune to the French in the French and Indian war. When the English conquered he was deprived of his estates and those of his wife, the Demoiselle Genevive De Villeray, who inherited 103 acres in Quebec City from her father.

Mrs. Campbell claims descent from Augustine Lambert, with whose life the escheat ended. He had removed to the United States and after his demise some of the heirs tried, but failed to recover the property. It is said by Mrs. Campbell that the estate is entailed, so the most she hopes to secure is a life interest. On her death the claim passes to her first cousin, Henry Lambert, president of the Grand Avenue National bank of Kansas City, who makes his home in St. Louis, Mo.

FIRE AT FLOODWOOD.

Floodwood Hotel Is Burned to the Ground.

Floodwood, Minn., June 19.—The Floodwood hotel, one of the oldest and largest buildings here, was burned to the ground yesterday afternoon. A defective chimney is the cause. The loss will reach $3,600, partly covered by insurance. The building was owend by Nels Pauls.

At one time the entire town was threatoned, but the fire department and volunteers worked energetically and the flames were confined to the structure, where they originated.

DIOCESAN MEET

Begins With the St. Luke's Graduation Business Meeting Wednesday.

The annual convocation proper of the Duluth diocese of the Episcopal church will be held Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock in St. Paul's church, but as a matter of fact the graduation exercises of the nurses of St. Luke's hospital is regarded as a part of the convention and will be so considered. As this graduation takes place tomorrow evening it may be considered that the convocation of the diocese begins at that time. Rev. Theodore Sedgwick, rector of St. John's Episcopal church of St. Paul, will be the orator of the graduation exercises. Mr. Sedgwick is said to be one of the most eloquent men in the church.

Another clergyman who will be heard here in connection with the convocation will be Rev. Irving Johnson, rector of Gethsemane church of Minneapolis. He will preach the annual sermon to the Women's Auxiliary to the Board of Foreign Missions on Thursday evening. Mr. Johnson is said to be one of the finest pulpit orators in the Northwest. The Women's Auxiliary to which he will preach, will hold its annual meeting during the time of the convocation, gathering in Trinity Mission church.

The convocation proper will begin Wednesday morning with communion administered by Bishop Morrison at 8 o'clock in Trinity chapel. The first business session of the convocation will be held that morning at St. Paul's church at 10 o'clock, after being opened with morning prayer. The business session will take up that morning and afternoon. In the evening a public meeting will be held in St. Paul's church at which "The Sunday School Side of Home Mission Work" will be up for discussion. It is expected that Rev. Theodore Sedgwick of St. Paul, Rev. Irving Johnson and Rev. C. E. Haupt of Minneapolis, will take part in the discussion. Mrs. William S. Bishop of Duluth will also speak on "The Sunday School."

The convocation will be closed with a reception held by Bishop and Mrs. Morrison. Dinner will be served in the vestry of St. Paul's church by the Ladies' Guild Wednesday noon.

The Duluth diocese takes in 57,000 square miles, including all of Minnesota north of and including Big Stone, Grant, Pope, Stearns, Benton, Mille Lacs, Kennebec and Pine counties. It is expected that fully 100 delegates will be present.

ROYAL ARCANUM FLAYED.

Milwaukee Man Charges Officers With Fraud.

Milwaukee, June 19.—G. W. Hazleton, one of the oldest members of the Royal Arcanum in Wisconsin, who was formerly United States district attorney and is now court commissioner, has come out in an open letter strongly attacking the methods employed by the officers of the Royal Arcanum, and charging that the scheme to change the rates is fraudulent and dishonest; that its officials are incompetent; that there are big leaks in the handling of the funds and that stripped of all disguises the new plan is a clear attempt to "freeze out" the men who have been the mainstay of the order for years.

Mr. Hazelton demands the removal of headquarters from Boston and that the books of the Boston office be thoroughly examined. He charges that officials have adopted a "summer resort" scheme by means of which they and their families have been rusticating at the expense of the society, and wants to know where the $1,400,000 assessed the 360,000 members annually for mere expenses goes to.

A TEST EXPERIMENT.

Peculiar Power Possessed By a New Medicine.

Of new discoveries there is no end, but one of the mose recent, most remarkable and one which will prove invaluable to thousands of people, is a discovery which it is believed will take the place of all other remedies for the cure of those common and obstinate diseases, dyspepsia and stomach troubles. This discovery is not a loudly advertised, secret patent medicine, but is a scientific combination of wholesome, perfectly harmless vegetable essences, fruit salts, pure pepsin and bismuth.

These remedies are combined in lozenge form, pleasant to take, and will preserve their good qualities indefinitely, whereas all liquid medicines rapidly lose whatever good qualities they may have had as soon as uncorked and exposed to the air.

This preparation is called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and it is claimed that one of these Tablets or lozenges will digest from 3000 to 3,000 times its own weight of meat, eggs and other wholesome food. And this claim has been proven by actual experiments in the following manner: A hard-boiled egg cut into small pieces was placed in a bottle containing warm water heated to 98 degrees (or blood heat); one of these tablets was then placed in the bottle and the proper temperature maintained for three hours and a half, at the end of which time the egg was as completely digested as it would have been in a healthy stomach. This experiment was undertaken to demonstrate that what it would do in the bottle it would also do in the stomach, hence its unquestionable value in the cure of dyspepsia and weak digestion. Very few people are free from some form of indigestion, but scarcely two will have the same symptoms. Some will suffer most from distress after eating, bloating from gas in the stomach and bowels, others have acid dyspepsia or heartburn, others palpitation or headaches, sleeplessness, pains in chest and under shoulder blades, extreme nervousness as in nervous dyspepsia, but they all have the same cause, failure to properly digest what is eaten. The stomach must have rest and assistance, and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets give it both, by digesting the food for it and in a short time it is restored to its normal action and vigor. At the same time the Tablets are so harmless that a child can take them with benefit. This new preparation has already made many astonishing cures, as for instance, the following:

After using only one package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets I have received such great and unexpected benefit that I wish to express my sincere gratitude. In fact, it has been six months since I took the package and I have not had one particle of distress or difficulty since. And all this in the face of the fact that the best doctors I consulted told me my case was Chronic Dyspepsia and absolutely incurable as I had suffered twenty-five years. I distributed half a dozen packages among my friends here who are very anxious to try this remedy.

MRS. SARAH A. SKEEL,
Lynnville, Jasper Co., Mo.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents for full sized packages. A little book on Stomach Diseases mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

GENERAL MAXIMO GOMEZ.

Havana, June 19.—Gen. Maximo Gomez died at 6 o'clock Saturday evening. Gen. Maximo Gomez, who commanded the Cuban forces during the insurrection which broke out in 1895 and ended with a complete independence of the island, when on May 20, 1902, the control of Cuba was formally transferred to the new Cuban government, was born at Bani, Santo Domingo, in 1836, and came of a Spanish family. He began life as a cavalry officer in the Spanish army in Santo Domingo and served during the last occupation of Santo Domingo by Spain.

The first day of mourning for Gen. Maximo Gomez was characterized by cloudy weather and occasional rain sprinkles. The flags of every nation represented in Havana are half-masted over the legations and consulates and from Cabanas fortress a gun booms every half hour. In every street there are long rows of Cuban flags draped in mourning and even the poorest tenements have crepe in the windows. The Spanish club joined in the mourning by hoisting the Castillian flag at half mast.

The body of Gen. Gomez was taken to the palace, where it now lies in state in the principal salon surrounded by great masses of flowers sent by relatives, friends, comrades, the government departments and social and political organizations. The body is guarded by a detachment of rural guards and several of the general's friends are acting as a guard of honor. There was a procession of visitors to the palace yesterday, but the face of the general was not exposed after it was finally looked upon by the members of his family. Band concerts and performances in the theaters, which are customary on Sunday, as well as all social gaieties were wholly suspended.

Congress, at a special session early yesterday morning, decided that the period of mourning shall continue for three days during which time public business will be suspended. Both houses appropriated $15,000 for the funeral which will take place Tuesday.

MILLER WAS ACQUITTED

Former County Treasurer of Itasca Found Not Guilty.

Grand Rapids, Minn., June 19.—Charles C. Miller, formerly county treasurer, was acquitted Saturday afternoon on a charge of embezzlement from the county. The jury was out fifteen hours. The defense rested Friday at 4 o'clock, and the addresses to the jury occupied the time to 10 Friday night. The judge charged the jury to weigh the evidence and not let sentiment rule the verdict.

Five more indictments are pending against Miller and will be prosecuted, probably in another county.

The trial of E. J. Holler for the embezzlement of $200 from a homesteader making proof before him as a United States commissioner, will be tried at this term.

HE SEES PERIL TO THE NATION

Washington, June 19.—"This is an inquiring and skeptical age," said Justice David J. Brewer of the supreme court of the United States Saturday. "Everything must face the question, 'What for or of what profit?' There are many grave questions that we Americans, or rather our descendants, must face. They are coming to us with an overwhelming force at present."

"What are they?" was asked.

"Tremendous immigration and the spirit of conquest, which means annexation and colonization. Probably very few thinking Americans realize the great responsibility that the nation assumes in allowing a million immigrants a year to come into the country and to tincture our national life.

"It so happens that the greater part of the immigration is of people who have been brought up to regard the government under which they live as an enemy, a thing to be fought, an institution to struggle against. They do not realize the difference between liberty and license.

"You cannot mix oil and water. You cannot make a Latin nation an Anglo-Saxon nation, and that is why I see danger and trouble and the use for high statesmanship in the conduct of the United States in the immediate future.

"It is well known that I have bitterly opposed the annexation of the Philippines, Hawaii and Porto Rico. I cannot see how any right-thinking American can do else than oppose it. This government, this nation, was founded as a protest against the colonial system, and now we go establishing colonies of our own. If there is anything more antagonistic to the founding of the government than the present trend of national events I cannot conceive it.

"The 'big stick' is swung almost too vigorously. Much as I admire the president, I am not in accord with many things that he does or that he instigates. It is not the purpose of this government to interfere and meddle with things that do not concern us. It is our business to mind our own business."

"Would you advise selling of the islands to the Japanese government?"

"Most assuredly. It would be the simple way out of a complex difficulty. I am strongly inclined to believe that we will either have to sell them if we can or give them up when we must. The Japanese nation amalgamates with the people of the Philippines, or will amalgamate with them much more readily than we Americans possibly could."

"Do you seriously think that the time will ever come when there will be a woman president of this country?"

"We have little doubt of it. It is one of those theoretical things that is working out in a practical way every day. I can see no good reason why there should not be a woman president of the country. I can see a great many good reasons why there should be one. However, I question if it come in the near future, but it is an incident that might happen at almost any time. Women have shown their capacity for handling big affairs in colleges, schools, railroads and banks."

"Do you think to maintain our position as a world power the army should be strengthened and the navy increased?"

"I do not. I cannot conceive why we should have an army at all, except a mere skeleton. Of course we should have an abundance of trained officers in case of an emergency. An idle military class seems to me absolutely antagonistic to the principles of the country. We don't need soldiers here. All we want are citizens. No foreign power would ever think of attempting an invasion of the United States."

LITTLE BUSINESS TALKS.

Robert Bonner, publisher of the New York Ledger, and one of the greatest advertisers of his time, made his first great venture in publicity by chance, according to Modern Advertising. He wrote an eight-word announcement of a new story that was to run in the Ledger, and sent it to the New York Herald, marked "one line."

His writing was so bad that "one line" was mistaken for "one page," and the eight words, set up over and over again, occupied an entire page when the issue was printed. When he saw the "ad." Bonner was filled with dismay; but the announcement built up an enormous circulation for his paper and made him a firm believer in liberal advertising.

SHE WANTS A DIVORCE.

Crookston, Minn., June 19.—Mrs. Gus. Schuneman, wife of Gus Schuneman, the popular Crookston traveling man, has begun suit for divorce for non-support and cruelty, and papers in the case were served here Saturday upon Mr. Schuneman. Mrs. Schuneman, a little over a year ago, went West on an extended trip during which she was supposed to visit friends and relatives upon the coast. About the time of her departure a well known man of the town disappeared and was found to be short in his accounts. Warrants were issued for his arrest, but although Pinkerton men were detailed on the case no trace of him could be found.

THEY TAKE FLIGHT

Eagles Bring State Convention to Close and Go Home.

In spite of the fog, cold northeast winds and intermittent rains of yesterday afternoon, the Fraternal Order of Eagles brought its convention and celebration to a close with a boatride on Lake Superior.

The steamer Easton was chartered for the ride, which was participated in by 400 people. The Calumet & Hecla band accompanied the excursion and furnished the music for the trip out and back. The boat was run out about twenty miles, the return to Fifth avenue dock being made at 6:30 o'clock in time to permit the band and copper country people to catch the evening train for the copper country. The Easton then ran about the harbor for several hours with the other visitors.

The boulevard drive was had as planned yesterday morning, but owing to the heavy fog that prevailed the trip was not as enjoyable as it might have been in pleasant weather. The Calumet & Hecla band accompanied the Eagles on the drive and played a number of selections along the route.

A vast crowd attended the band contest and grand ball at the armory, Saturday evening, for the benefit of Duluth Aerie, No. 75. The feature of the evening was, of course, the band contest, but considerable amusement and entertainment was also had out of the award of the other prizes.

Three bands entered the contest, the Calumet & Hecla band from the copper country easily winning the first prize of $200, with twenty-three points. The second prize of $100 went to the Marine band of Superior, with seventeen points. The Journal band of Minneapolis, composed of newsboys, came in for the third prize of $25, with twelve points to its credit. Each band played three selections.

The $100 prize for the best dressed aerie went to the copper country aerie. The drill corps from Minneapolis won the $100 prize for being the best drilled aerie and the Grand Rapids aerie carried off the $100 prize for having the aerie present with the largest number, the Duluth and Superior aeries being barred from competition in this event.

George Wormwood, the popular White Bear delegate, won the $5 prize for being the largest Eagle, and Edward Whipple of Minneapolis secured a like amount as being the smallest Eagle. Jack Dunn was given $5 for being the handsomest Eagle and Bob C. Grady of Minneapolis was given the $5 prize for being the homeliest Eagle.

Although late in starting, the Eagles' parade Saturday afternoon was a very successful affair. It was engineered by Conductor Harry B. Gouth of the local aerie, who acted as grand marshal. He was assisted by Frank Stutsman.

The procession, which started from the city hall and countermarched at Eighth avenue west, was headed by a platoon of police followed by the Calumet & Hecla band. Following in order came the city officials and aldermen in carriages, the officials of the order, delegates, the Journal band, the Minneapolis Drill corps with its famous banner, the Grand Rapids band and delegates, La Brosse band, delegates, the Marine band and a number of Eagles in carriages.

In the second division, headed by Flaaten's Third Regiment band, was the Duluth aerie of Eagles, followed by a number of carriages containing visitors.

The visiting Eagles said many complimentary things about the success of the convention and the splendid hospitality all was accorded them. They realize that the Duluth Eagles could not make the weather any better than it was, and declare that they had a splendid time in spite of the bad weather. Had there been more sunshine and warmth the officers of the association are convinced that the attendance would have been very much larger. They claim that the attendance had during the three days of the convention was good evidence of the growth of the order, and predictions are freely made that the order will show a phenomenal growth in Minnesota within the coming year.

The Eagles claim that this convention and the publicity that has been given in regard to the principles and working of the order have done much to remove any prejudice that might have existed, and have caused many to seek admittance to the aeries.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS

The St. Paul lacrosse team won the first game of the series for the Carding cup by defeating the Calumets of Chicago 50 goals to 3 at St. Paul, Sunday. Although the field was a sea of mud and there were frequent showers, the game was replete with brilliant work and was in no doubt up to the final sounding of the whistle.

In sight of hundreds of pleasure seekers at Priester's park lake, at Bellevile, Ill., Sunday, two unknown men fell out of a row boat and were drowned, the bodies not coming to the surface. After several hours fruitless endavor to recover the bodies a sluice was cut and the large lake is being drained.

As the result of a quarrel among members of a fishing party on the Dane river, ten miles south of Poplar Bluff, Mo., Charles Booth, Charles Vanderpool and Cleveland Parrett were shot and instantly killed.

By the explosion of a boiler in the air-compressing plant for subway construction at New York Sunday more than a dozen persons were injured, at least one of whom will die. The most seriously injured are: Daniel Barry, assistant engineer in charge; Joseph Morgan, fireman, probably will die; Edward Altenisla, John Amato, Edward Elwood.

Four hours after Frank Burns, an employe of the Klusman Ice Cream company, had been electrocuted at Cleveland, Sunday, while trying to adjust a dynamo, Nicholas Johns, another employe of the same concern, met a similar fate, while working with another electrical machine 200 feet away from the first.

The engagement is announced of Miss Frederica Vanderbilt Webb, only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Seward Webb, to Ralph Pulitzer, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer.

Carl Drennan, aged 17, of Joplin, Mo., and Carl Phoenix, aged 20, of Cherryvale, Kan., were killed by a train four miles west of Las Animas, Colo. The youths were sleeping beside the track with their heads on the ties.

Herbert Ochsenrider, 21 years of age, committed suicide Sunday at Bluffton, Ind., by hanging himself with a clothes line. Before committing the act he wrote his obituary, selected two pallbearers, stated where he wished to be buried, requested that two familiar songs be sung at his funeral, and named the Rev. T. A. Brooks to preach his funeral.

NATIVES ARE MASSACRED

A Brutal Outrage Perpetrated on the Siberian Coast.

San Francisco, June 19.—News of a terrible massacre of 150 natives on the Siberian coast has been received here in a letter from Petropaulovski, on the coast of Kamtchatka. A Morogravlenof has written to his brother, a resident of this city, that in the early part of the year the natives in one of the small settlements down the coast, which he does not name, observed a yacht or schooner drop anchor in the harbor, and her coming was hailed with cries of rejoicing. Off the vessel came a number of small boats. The natives could see the crew piling what they thought were supplies into the smaller craft. Then men pulled for the shore. During that or the next day there was heard the firing of arms, and later on smoke and fire were observed. This led to investigation from Petropaulovski and other towns on the coast, and a horrible tale of pillage and massacre was brought to light.

About the streets of the settlement, writes Morogravlenof, were strewn the bodies of 150 of the inhabitants, shot and cut to pieces by the pirates, who, under the pretence of friendship, had gained a landing on the coast. Robbery was their only motive, for every hut had been ransacked and anything of market value was taken. Who the marauders were those who managed to make their escape could not say, beyond giving the information that some Japanese were in the party. When Morogravlenof sent his letter the people of Patropaulovski feared an attack on that town.

HUGE TASK.
It was a huge task to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease, as that of C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Ia., but Electric Bitters did it. He writes: "My kidneys were so far gone, I could not sit on a chair without a cushion; and suffered from dreadful backache, headache and depression. In Electric Bitters, however, I found a cure, and by them was restored to perfect health. I recommend this great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver or stomach." KENTUCKY ROMANCE

That Is to Culminate Before the Bar of Justice.

Trial of Flinchems and John Swanson For Murder.

Owingsville, Ky., June 19.—On Monday, Jnue 26, there will be called in the Lee circuit court, at Beattyville, a case that has attracted attention throughout this and other states because of the many strange features surrounding it. William Flinchem, his sons, John Ransom and Berry Flinchem, and John Swanson are charged with the assassination of young Lewis Mays and throwing his body over a high precipice, where it lay for months exposed to the elements before being discovered. The case possesses many elements of romance.

In the mountain fastnesses of Lee county lived Lewis Mays, who was the sole support of a widowed mother, and who was exceedingly poor, even as the mountaineers count the possession of worldly goods. In the neighborhood lived the Flinchem family. The Flinchems were considered the cream of society in that secluded section. But young Berry Flinchem, passing by Mays' little mountain home, saw Mary Mays and became smitten with her charms. When the timid Mary listened to his pleadings the wedding day was set for a date not far distant.

One day young Lewis Mays, passing the Flinchem residence, chanced to spy young Amy Flinchem, a pretty maiden. She looked with friendly eyes upon the stalwart figure of Lewis Mays, and he looked at her with eyes unawed by her superior social station.

One day when Mays asked her a certain question and told her a story that is as old as earth itself, yet is ever new, the pretty mountain girl said the word which made the sky bluer and the sunlight brighter to him. And in answer to her pleadings the young man forsook his wild young companions and began to work steadily to provide a home for his bride-to-be.

One day last summer there was a feud battle in Lee county, in which one man was killed. Mays and Flinchem had taken part in the battle, it is alleged, fighting on the same side. The man killed was on the opposing side. When he died his friends charged that it was a bullet from Berry Flinchem's rifle that had caused him to bite the dust. This could not be proved, though, as only Lewis Mays saw the actual killing, and it was on him alone that the commonwealth of Kentucky depended to tell the truth when the case came to trial.

The Flinchems, however, were easy in their minds, for hardly would a brother-in-law of a man swear his life away. And Lewis Mays, blind in his love for pretty Amy Flinchem, agreed that it was best that he should be "absent" when the case came up for trial. But one day Berry Flinchem and Lewis Mays had a violent quarrel and Lewis Mays then and there defied the whole Flinchem family and stated that he would tell the truth upon the witness stand.

Then it was stated that the Flinchems became angry. They stalked around their mountain home, and grim mutterings and threats were heard. Amy Flinchem sat in her room and heard her grizzled old father and big brothers talk of what they intended to do to Lewis Mays, and then she sent word to Mays that he must leave the country. This he refused to do and laughed at the girl's fears.

One day last September Lewis Mays started to a near-by field to cut corn. At night he did not return, but no uneasiness was felt, because he might have sepent the night with a friend. But the next night and the next he did not return, and it was at last concluded that he had listened to his sweetheart's pleadings and left the community to escape the wrath of the Flinchems.

One day last March the case was being discussed near one of the Flinchems, and he, who had been drinking, made a remark to the effect that "Lewis Mays will never be seen again," and laughed a blood-curdling laugh. Lee county has a good, fearless set of officers, and when they heard of the remark they began to take notice. Many remarks that were considered trifling at the time when made by the Flinchems were put together, and one day a posse of officers went out to Simcoe, the Flinchems' home, and arrested the whole family, including the girl. When they were placed in jail at Beattyville all seemed anxious to confess and place the blame on each other. Searching parties were sent out, but no trace of Lewis Mays' body could be found. Every valley and mountain fastness in all that section was raked as with a fine-tooth comb, but with no result.

One day Josie Townsend, a mountain shepherdess, missed a lamb from her flock. The day was cold and dreary, but she felt that she must find the lamb that was lost and bring it back safely to the fold, even as the Shepherd of Biblical times did. And through the darkening valleys, with grim old mountains looking down on her, she searched. For a long time she looked, and then, just as she was returning to go home, she saw something stretched out in a narrow stream which trickled among the mountains after falling over a miniature Niagara.

At first the girl was frightened, but then she thought it was the stray lamb and approached the object. It was not a lamb, but a man's body. She was not of the fainting sort of a girl, so she grasped a sleeve and turned the body over.

At last a mystery of months was solved. There lay the body of Lewis Mays. A great gash was in his throat, and his head had been crushed by a blow from a heavy rock. A rope which had been tied around the neck lay near. The body was horribly bruised from its rough journey down the cliff. The body was in a good state of preservation on account of having lain in the cold water so long, and the identification was perfect. The news was carried to Beattyville, and the Flinchems confronted with the evidence. Again all confessed their parts in the killing, laying the actual murder on the others. And then the Lee county officers went to the Flinchem home and asked the children about it. Bill Flinchem's children stated that every day for months their father made them go to the top of a cliff and look over to see if a man was lying below. They had gone and always saw the body. They showed the officers a path that led to the edge of the precipice, and when the officers followed this they saw the ledge of rock whereon Lewis Mays had lain. The evidence was complete.

At the trials it was shown that Berry Flinchem and John Swanson had cut Mays in the neck, struck his head with a rope, with which they dragged his body to the precipice and threw it over, where it had lain so long. After hearing the evidence, Amy Flinchem, who was at first suspected of complicity in the murder, was released from custody. The Flinchems and Swanson were indicted for murder, and Monday, June 26, they will be tried for their lives. The crime is almost without parallel in the mountain country.

DYING OF FAMINE

is, in its torments, like dying of consumption. The progress of consumption, from the beginning to the very end, is a long torture, both to victim and friends. "When I had consumption in its first stage," writes Wm. Myers of Cearfoss, Md., "after trying different medicines and a good doctor, in vain, I at last took Dr. King's New Discovery, which quickly and perfectly cured me." Prompt relief and sure cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, etc. Positively prevents pneumonia. Guaranteed at all drug stores. Price 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Trial bottle free.

SQUADRON SAILS FOR JONES BODY.

New York, June 19.—Rear Admiral Sigsbee's squadron, which was detailed from the North Atlantic fleet to bring the body of John Paul Jones, the first admiral of the American navy, to this country, started on its voyage to France yesterday. The squadron, consisting of the flagship Brooklyn and the cruisers Chattanooga, Tacoma and Galveston, arrived at the naval anchorage off Tompkinsville about two weeks ago and remained there pending the arrangements by the French authorities of the ceremonies incident to the embarkation of the body of the admiral at the port of Cherbourg. The signal to get under way was made from the flagship at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and the squadron, headed by the Brooklyn, steamed in column through the Narrows and an hour later passed out of Sandy Hook.

The remains of the great admiral will be carried aboard the Brooklyn amid the salutes of the French and American warships and placed on a flag-draped catafalque erected on the deck forward of Admiral Sigsbee's quarters, after which the squadron will proceed for Annapolis, where the final interment will take place.

OLD PEOPLE

Their Pains and Ailments

Any taint of the blood quickly shows itself with old people, and troubles, which a younger, more vigorous constitution holds in check, take possession of those of advanced years. A mole, wart or pimple often begins to inflame and fester, terminating in a sore that refuses to heal. Wandering pains of a rheumatic character are almost constant, the joints get stiff and the muscles sore, while sleeplessness and nervousness make life a burden. The natural activity of the body is not so great in old age and all the organs get dull and sluggish, failing to carry out the waste matters and poisons accumulating in the system and they are taken up and absorbed by the blood, rendering it weak and unable to properly nourish the system. There is no reason why old age should not be as healthy as youth if the blood is kept pure and strong. S. S. S. is purely vegetable and is the safest and best blood purifier and tonic for old people, because it is gentle, but at the same time thorough in its action, purifying the blood of all poisons and foreign matter, strengthening it and toning up the entire system by its fine tonic effect. Almost from the first dose the appetite increases, the general health begins to improve and the pains and ailments pass away.

I had a severe attack of La Grippe, which left me almost a physical wreck. To add to my wretched condition, Rheumatism developed. In a short time after beginning S. S. S. I was relieved of the pains and have gained in flesh and strength and my general health is better than for years. I heartily recommend S. S. S. for all blood diseases.

PYTHIANS HONOR MEMORY OF DEAD

Memorial Services and Sermon Held as Annual Event.

Rev. F. G. Clark of West Duluth Orator of Occasion.

Kitchi Gammi, North Star and Diamond lodges, Knights of Pythias, took part in the beautiful memorial services of the order which were held yesterday in honor of the dead brethren. The graves of dead Pythians were decorated in the morning at Forest Hill cemetery, home-grown flowers and a small tri-colored flag of the order being planted on each grave. The ceremony of decorating the graves is a most impressive and beautiful one. The grave of the late lamented Rev. Dr. C. C. Salter was beautifully decorated and in doing so Col. J. B. Gibson quoted:

"In behalf of one who was a brother to all mankind, a friend of the friendless, we bestow on his grave this tribute that his blessed memory may be everlasting."

In the afternoon at K. P. hall, the annual memorial services were held and Rev. F. G. Clark, pastor of Asbury Methodist church of West Duluth, preached the annual sermon. A program of sacred music was given as well as the sermon and it proved very impressive. Chancellor G. B. Storms of North Star lodge, presided and the invocation was given by Prelate W. H. Lamson. A quartet consisting of Messrs Coughlan, Cochner, Warden and Bracken then sang "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep." Chancellor Commander Storms gave a short opening address and the quartet again sang, rendering "There Will Be One Vacant Chair." After Mr. Clark's address the quartet sung 'Lead Kindly Light," during which the officers placed sprigs of myrtle on the altar in the center of the room. The uniform rank, which sat in the center of the hall in the form of a triangle, also deposited sprigs of myrtle on the altar. The closing number was "May Our Slumbers Be All Blest" by the quartet. Rev. Mr. Clark's address was an eloquent one and was full of the meat of thought. He delivered it in an impressive manner and spoke as follows:

"For the sake of clearness, we will divide our subject in three heads, history, object and destiny.

"Historically, we are young; our birth bearing date of 1864, makes us the youngest of the great fraternal orders. But this is not against us. On the contrary, rather in our favor, since the newest thing is always the best, embodying in itself all that has gone before, besides having something especially its own, to live for which, it came into existence. Age may carry many excellent things, but it is to the young we must look for the best. Old governments are handicapped by outgrown customs and antiquated laws, weighted down with useless offices and an ornamental aristocracy, and a thousand other things that hinder progress and divert strength.

"Old churches are cumbered with dogma, and stiffened with formality, until the spirit of the living God can no longer use their rusty machinery as organs of speech to the world. These are chiefly valuable for their preservative qualities. Some governments and churches, and even lodges are but an airtight preserving jar, which, while it prevents decay, prevents growth also. While they preserve intact what is sealed in them, nothing new can get in and nothing old can get out. Some of the states of Europe today, as well as those of Asia, are simply the sealed can of specimens of government, put into them in the far away past.

"All institutions have this tendency to self-sealing, and by the tightness of their conservatism, defy all growth. They cease to be sensative toward anything except a new idea, and this acts upon them like the touch of the hand upon the sensitive plant—causes it to close against the intruder.

"Revolution is necessary when evolution is impossible. Some governments must be broken to pieces before they can be made better. If a seed finds itself sealed up in a can and cannot grow, it must burst the can or die. If a church or government fails to keep pace with progress, revolution is justifiable in that government. Revolution in Russia would be justifiable today.

"The last church, the last government, the last lodge, is the best one. The last machine is the best one. There has been a steady advance in the construction of machinery, from primitive times until now. The last machine, in any line of work, embodies all that has gone before, and has some distinct advance upon all else, which constitutes its especial value. Here stands a laborer, digging in the dirt with his shovel, and in his weak way trying to move the mountain. Here is a man manipulating a steam shovel, throwing his three yards of dirt as often as the pady did his five pounds. By his side is the man with the steam crane, handling five-ton rocks as easily as the boy shoots his marble. These are moving their mountain much faster than the laborer, but they are only a step in the upward march of man to the Christ, who removes mountains entire, by simple act of faith.

"This is the greatest generation yet on earth. My father may have been wiser in his generation than I, but I belong to a wiser generation, and to merely keep in touch with the spirit of this age is an advantage he did not have. Our fathers got along with very crude devices, until we grew up and showed them a more excellent way. With all their splended work in the past, the best thing they did was to bring the present generation on the stage of action. We are the best actors that ever graced this great stage—the world. There may have been an occasional great actor in the past, but he was so poorly supported that his play didn't make much of a hit. And then, too, whatever part we may bear in this great drama of life, and however well we may acquit ourselves, nothing will equal in its effect upon human progress the generation growing up at our knees. The new generation is the last invention, and it embodies all that has gone before, and will show some especial worth of its own. What God has in store for the immediate future will be expressed in the lives of these little ones, who shall in a few years occupy the center of the stage. The steps in the progress of the world is from generation to generation. You can't teach an old dog new tricks, so God wastes no time on him, but reveals his new trick to his brightest pup. We may be justified in calling Pythianism the brightest pup in the fraternal litter, since it is the youngest. God had a new fraternal trick, or truth, to show the world. The old lodges were sealed against it, so He created a new one to represent it in the world. May we be faithful to the trust reposed in us.

"The oldest lodge in the world is the human race itself. It is the first secret society and the poorest. It has one virtue, however, it has kept the secret of its organization intact, against the combined curiosity of all the generations of men.

"Back of the veil of birth, in a council of unborn spirits, who had for their object the exploitation and colonization of this planet, a secret order was formed, the laws and principles of which, constitutes human nature in its raw state. Now since these unborn spirits, had very little knowledge of this world and no experience, they did not succeed in making a set of laws and principles that are fully applicable here. We are not long here when we discover, that we are not equipped in the best possible way for living in this life, and we set about improving our nature. We find that to live up the rules of the prenatal lodge into which we were initiated at birth, would be to court disaster. No man dares to live out his nature, in this world. He has that within him, which he must curb or kill, at his peril. Feed human nature upon exactly what it craves, and it will feast, half its time upon the misery and suffering of the world. Let the condition of the world be but an expression of the passions of the human heart, and one-half the world will be constantly devastated by war, pestilence and famine. For we belong to a race, which has traits of nature that delight in human suffering, and find sweetest music in the groans of those slain by its revengeful spirit.

We need not think that we are any exception to this universal rule: We were all initiated into this great lodge, and our first nature was formed by its rules. Whatever you find in your own nature, you may find in the nature of every man you meet, though in varying quantity. When we see a Nero sitting upon his regal throne, enjoying the spectacle of dying thousands, we must remember he was of our race. He was but giving full expression to the nature that is common to us all. When the Alabama mob burns a negro at the stake and exults in his dying groans, remember they are the same blood as the men of Minnesota. In other words, we would do the same under like circumstances. When you find this pleasure in suffering in one place you may be sure it is in yourself, hungering for expression. If human nature was what it should be, these organizations for the purpose of bettering it would not be necessary. The object of this organization, then is to better human nature. It proposes to examine human nature in the light of experience, and reorganize it, on a higher plain, by leaving out those principles of human nature found to be inimical to the race, such as malice, revenge, hatred, avarice, cruelty, etc., and emphasize those principles we have found to make for strength and happiness, such as friendship, charity and benevolence. We hope to form an organization, through which human nature, passing, will partake of its nature and principles and be the better for the experience.

"We may say here that the K. P. lodge is presumptuous in thus setting itself the task of improving upon the works of the creator. But there is a sense in which God is not the creator of human nature. That is, He did not create it for us. The nature He created for us was a much better one than this, but we threw it aside for the one we have now. The lodge formed behind the veil of birth, did not make human nature better, but worse. It weakened his better nature and added to them those principles we find so damaging to our welfare here. It is a sacrilege to charge God with making for us the nature we have. This nature of ours the image of God! Nonsense! It would seem that some of nature's journeyman must have made us, we imitate God so abomibly.

"So we try to improve upon human nature in the light of experience, because we instinctively feel that the job was bunglingly done in the first instance. A just God would never have put hatred, malice, revenge and cruelty into our nature and then hold us responsible for the use of them. To be a good man, one must starve half his nature. The only way to live is to mortify the deeds of the body.

"But in our striving to better human nature, we find we cannot cut loose from the old life. The pre-natal organization still imposes its authority, and every child born into the world is formed by its principles. A parent who has joined the K. P. lodge and lived according to its principles until they have transformed his life, will find his child born with the old nature and each generation must become K. P's. for themselves. As yet, the higher K. P. life has only been engrafted upon the old parent stem, and instead of breeding after itself, goes back to the original stock for its nature.

"The sour crab apple tree growing on the hill may have the scion of the pippin or winesap grafted upon it, and fruit of the combination tree will be of the nature of the graft, with scarcely a suggestion of the sour crab of the parent tree. She winesap fruit is delightful to my palate, and I save its seed and with fond anticipation plant it in my orchard. When the tree thus planted bears its fruit, I am disappointed to find it goes back to the original crab for its nature, and I have no suggestion of the winesap, whoso seed I supposed I had planted. The old nature reasserts itself in the seed. This accounts for preacher's children being no better than others. The seed of the race is not effected by the individual life; at least, not much. And that is what makes reform work so slow and discouraging.

"But it does effect it some. The experiences of this life do get back into the councils of the life before, and the generations are growing better. But it requires strenuous living. That must be an emphatic life that sends its echoes back through the deadened wall of the pre-natal world, and mixes its wisdom with the councils of a previous life. But it may be done and that is the destiny of the K. P. lodge. Brethren: Would you like to so transform the race that the generations who are to come will, from birth, have the nature of K. P's? Then the living of our principles must be very emphatic. Our principles must enter our lives in transforming power.

"To so live that our lives will have an influence in the world beyond the grave is easy. To so live that our lives will have an influence in the world beyond the cradle is not so easy. But this is our destiny, let us address ourselves to it."

PRAYED AT DOG'S GRAVE.

Charlotte Guss Hoyt Was Probably Insane.

Tiffin, Ohio, June 19.—The attempt to overthrow the will of the late Mrs. Charlotte Guss Hoyt, formerly of Eaton Rapids, Mich., who left to cats and dogs and a judge nearly all of her large estate, which was received from her two millionaire husbands, is proving a sensational court case.

Attorney Johnson in the opening statement for the plaintiff said that Charlotte Hoyt, after she came from New York to Tiffin, consumed habitually four bottles of champagne daily; that she drew $50,000 from the Russian government and $50,000 from the English government annually for acting as a spy. She made the trip to New York after the death of Lord Pauncefote to resign her imaginary employment as the English spy.

At that time, Mr. Johnson said, Judge Bunn, to whom she left a large portion of her estate, and her physician, Dr. Swigart, considered the advisability of applying for a guardianship and committing her to the Toledo state hospital for the insane.

She frequently sent for the police because imaginary burglars were in the house. She set up an altar at the grave of her dog and horse, alternately praying and cursing there. Also it was said she suffered delirium tremens and that there was a taint of insanity in the family, one relative having died in an asylum and another having committed suicide by drowning.

Miss Jennie Williams, Mrs. Hoyt's nurse, who was with her during her last illness, disappeared from the home of her brother-in Tiffin and is probably in some other state, out of the jurisdiction of the trial court. Whether she was unwilling to testify and left voluntarily, or has been spirited away, is not known.

The plaintiffs have a deposition secured after detectives had tracked Miss Williams for nearly a year through several states.

LAND OFFICE ON THE WANE

The Next Few Years Will Witness a Great Change.

Washington, June 19.—Within a very few years that great and somewhat complex department of the government known as the general land office will undergo a material change.

By 1908 all of the available public land outside of the arid regions and the forest reserves will have been taken up and covered by some sort of an entry or purchase.

The irrigation of the arid regions will shift the work of the land office to those sections of the country where large projects are being carried out, but, compared with the work of the past fifty years, it will be merely a pastime to look after the irrigated regions.

Next year there will be several consolidations of land offices, and several of them will be abolished.

The St. Cloud office in Minnesota is falling off in business, but the Crookston and Cass Lake offices, owing to the opening of Indian lands, do a good business, while the Duluth office, since a large area was taken out of its jurisdiction, continues to keep up a pretty fair average.

Eventually, Crookston and Duluth will be the only offices in Minnesota, unless there is a change of policy by congress concerning the Chippewa forest reserve.

This reserve was never created by the president, and is entirely a result of the Morris act of 1902. Under the operation of that act, vast tracts of land are overflowed by the war department in keeping up the water in the Mississippi, while the Indians are pressing their claims for the forest preserve lands in the United States supreme court.

As an indication of the decadence of the land office, A. C. Snaw, for years chief of the public lands division, has, at his own request, been transferred to the bureau of forestry. Within twenty years all of the available vacant land will be under control of that body.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Isaac Johnson Meets Death at Deer River.

Bemidji, Minn., June 19.—Isaac Johnson, aged 15, was killed at Deer River by lightning during an electrical storm that occurred in that city. The young man is well known in Bemidji, having at one time held a position at Peterson's confectionery esatblishment, and the news of his death will be received with sorrow by a large number of friends in Bemidji. He is a stepson of William Smallwood of this city, and Mr. Smallwood received a message announcing the death of the young man, and left for Deer River to take charge of the remains. The body will probably be taken to this city for interment.

GREAT ICE HOUSES ARE BURNED AT PEWAUKEE.

Pewaukee, Wis., June 19.—The great Armour icehouses were struck by lightning last night and practically destroyed, leaving their contents of 200,000 tons of ice to go waste. In addition to the icehouses the residence of the superintendent, the barns and the boarding house, with fifty rooms, were destroyed. The loss is between $255,000 and $300,000. Insurance is not known.

The icehouses were probably the largest in Wisconsin. Each of the great houses is protected from fire by a water tank, but the lightning set all of the houses on fire at once, and the water tanks were practically worthless. The Armour company employs a force of 400 to 500 men in the winter harvesting the ice and in the sumer a crew of twenty-five men is employed handling the ice in the company's refrigerator cars.

PRINTERS MAY STRIKE.

St. Louis, June 19.—The St. Louis Typographical union yesterday rescinded its action of June 8 accepting a contract calling for a nine-hour day and an advance of $1.50 a week in wages for the union job printers, and by a declaration to abide by the ruling of the executive council of the International Typographical union abrogated the contract which had been signed with the employing printers. The decision was voted at a general meeting attended by about 700 members.

In the present crisis the question of whether a lockout and strike will follow in a few days hangs on the decision of the Typothetae to enforce its program of nine hours a day.

ORDER FOR HEARING APPLICATION FOR APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATOR.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis, ss.—

On receiving and filing the petition of Amelia Leckey of the County of St. Louis, representing, among other things, that John Albert Leckey, late of the County of St. Louis, in the State of Minnesota, on the 12th day of May, A. D. 1905, at the County of St. Louis, died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this county at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is the widow of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to Amelia Leckey granted;

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before said court on Monday, the 10th day of July, A. D. 1905, at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate office, in the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said county.

Ordered further, that notice hereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth in said county.

By the court,

DAVID H. LAWRENCE,

Judge of Probate of Lake County, Acting Judge of Probate of St. Louis County, Minnesota.

(Seal Probate Court, St. Louis Co. Minn.)

Duluth Evening Herald—June 12-19-26.

WHEAT IS LOWER

Excellent Weather In Winter Wheat Country —Liverpool Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, July 19.—Sentiment in wheat was largely bearish today and there was a decline in prices. Excellent weather is reported from the winter wheat country, and the Northwest is sending reports that rains have done less damage than had been feared. The Liverpool market was higher, closing ½d lower to ½d higher. London was unchanged and Paris ½@¾c lower.

The July option fell ⅜c in Duluth, ¼c in Chicago, ¾c in Minneapolis and New York, ¼-⅝c in St. Louis and ⅝c in Kansas City. The September option fell 1½c in Duluth and St. Louis, 1¼c in Chicago and Kansas City, 1¼-⅜c in Minneapolis and ⅞c in New York.

Car receipts at Duluth were 9 against 32 last year, and at Minneapolis 175 against 302 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 184 against 334 last year. Chicago received 6 against 27 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 288,504 bus, last year 402,474 bus. Shipments 283,603 bus, last year 227,377 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 18,553 bus.

The visible supply last week decreased 1,421,000 bus., and is now 16,782,000 bus., against 16,343,000 bus. last year.

World's shipments of wheat last week were 11,744,000 bus., against 11,388,000 bus. the previous week and 12,394,000 bus. last year. The amount on passage decreased 424,000 bus.

In the Liverpool market corn closed unchanged to ⅛d higher. In the Chicago market September corn closed ⅝c lower. September oats closed ¼-⅜c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 728,910 bus., last year 543,280 bus. Shipments 483,875 bus., last year 697,466 bus. Clearances were 68,895 bus. The visible supply of corn last week decreased 467,000 bus., and is now 2,921,000 bus., against 5,123,000 bus. last year. World's shipments of corn were 2,490,000 bus., last week, against 3,795,000 bus. the previous week and 4,192,000 bus. last year. The amount on passage decreased 270,000 bus.

In the Duluth market trading was light, and the most of it was in the old September option, which has been rather duller than the new September heretofore. It opened ⅝c lower at 88⅞c, advanced to 89½c, and fell back to 88⅛c closing there, a decline of 1⅛c. The new September opened ⅝c lower at 84¼c, and fell steadily to 83c at which price it closed a loss of 1½c. The July option opened ⅝c lower at $1.12, advanced to $1.12¾, and then receded, closing ⅝c lower at $1.12.

Durum wheat declined 1c. There was some increase in cash offerings of wheat and sales were on the basis of July price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was dull. The July option advanced 2c to $1.47, and then closed unchanged at $1.45. September closed unchanged at $1.29 and October ¼c lower at $1.26½.

Oats fell ¼c.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Excellent Weather Creates Bearish Feeling In Market.

Chicago, June 19.—Excellent weather for harvesting created bearish sentiment in the wheat pit here today. In addition a report from Minneapolis stating that recent rains had done little damage to the spring grown crop caused some selling. July opened ⅛@⅛c lower at 88¾@⅞c to 88⅝c. After selling off to 88⅜c, the price rallied again to 89c. Higher prices at Liverpool was the cause of a fair demand from commission houses. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 190 cars, against 312 cars last week and 361 cars a year ago.

During the last half of the session the market became extremely weak as a result of numerous bearish reports from the West and Southwest. One of these advices claimed that the wheat crop of Kansas would be 15,000,000 bus in excess of last year's yield. The market closed almost at the lowest point of the day. Final quotations on July were down 1¼ at 87¼@88c after the price had touched 87¼c.

The large percentage of grain of contract grade in today's arrivals caused a weak undertone in the corn market. Weather conditions was a further aid to the bears. July opened ⅛@¼c higher to ⅛@¼c lower at 53⅝c to 54c. Later the price touched 53½c. Local receipts were 529 cars, with 144 of contract grade.

On liberal profit-taking brought out by an estimate of large receipts for tomorrow the market became quite weak, July selling off to 53c. At the close July was down ⅝@⅝c at 53⅛c.

Weakness of wheat had a depressing effect on the oats market. Pit traders were moderate sellers. July opened ⅛c higher to ⅜c lower at 31c to 31¼c and sold off to 30⅞c. Local receipts were 122 cars.

Provisions were a trifle easier in sympathy with a slight decline in the price of live hogs. September pork was off 5c at $13.06. Lard also was down 5c at $7.47½. Ribs were a shade to 2½@5c lower at $7.82½ to $7.85.

New York, June 19.—First prices in the stock market generally were small fractions higher than on Saturday. The market showed no sign of animation and the ticker came practically to a standstill within a few minutes after the opening. A decline of in American Car and Foundry was the widest change recorded.

Stocks which are usually the medium of profitable trades were not dealt in half a dozen times during the first hour. The undertone of the market was firm and the only semblance of activity was in the Wisconsin Central stocks. The common moved up 1 and the preferred 1¼. United Railway and Investment preferred and Enamelling preferred also rose a point and Great Northern preferred 2. Ontario & Western fell off 1 and American Car and Foundry 1¼.

The leading speculative stocks moved slowly upward from ⅝ to ⅞, the latter figure for Union Pacific. The slight activity centered in the stock. St. Paul, Reading, Pennsylvania, United States Steel preferred and Copper. Northwestern rose 2, New York Dock preferred 1½ and Steel Foundries preferred and Metropolitan preferred and Metropolitan Securities 1. The bond market was dull and irregular at noon.

Better prices were obtained for stocks, the demand lifting them almost imperceptibly until some of the leaders ruled ⅞ above Saturday's close. Of these United States Steel preferred, Brooklyn Transit and Tennessee Coal were the most prominent. Steel Foundries preferred increased its rise to 2 points, while Northwestern yielded an earlier gain of as much. New York Dock rose 2.

What little there was of interest in the late market developed in stocks that have no bearing on general sentiment. Pennsylvania was the only favorite stock that moved substantially. Pennsylvania, St. Paul and Western Union improved ⅞. Atlantic Coast Line 1. Knickerbocker Ice 2 and Wheeling & Lake Erie 1½. St. Louis Southwestern ran off 1⅞ and General Electric 1½.

A rise in the tractions and a few specialties held the rest of the market steady in the final hour. Brooklyn Transit and Manhattan rose about 2 and Metropolitan Street Railway 1⅜. Knickerbocker Ice gained 3. New York Dock preferred 2½. Biscuit 1¼. Union Pacific preferred 1⅜. C. C. & St. Louis 1 and Bag ⅞. Westinghouse Electric 1 and General Electric and Virginia Iron 2. Profit-taking made an impression on railroad stocks in the final dealings. The close was somewhat irregular.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed strong and generally higher, and while no great volume of business is being done, the market nevertheless seemed to display stubborn strength. Railroad earnings continue up to expectations, and aside from the Far Eastern war and the Equitable matter, there seems nothing in sight likely to increase selling pressure. However, a little aggressive buying could undoubtedly give the short interest an uneasy time.

• • •

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today had a better tone and showed a little strength. Tractions were more active and advanced. The market generally was dull and there was an absence of outside interest. We look for continued dullness until there is favorable news.

• • •

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has shown some slight increase in activity and a decided improvement in tone today. Advances were scored all through the list, and at the close leading stocks all showed gains. Foreign news was decidedly better. The feature of the market was Brooklyn, which ran up two points on good buying.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 19.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 6@10 points, following higher cables, but met with heavy realizing at the advance and reacted to about the closing figures of Saturday, following which it rallied again to the opening figures on a renewal of bull support and room covering. The demand was considered fairly good, though temperatures were unfavorable in some spots, and there was a report that the demand from June shorts was diminishing, which, with the expectations of a bearish weekly report tomorrow, caused some selling on the second advance.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 9.35; middling gulf, 9.40. Sales 26 bales. Futures closed steady: June, 8.48; July, 8.56; August, 8.61; September, 8.68; October, 8.75; November, 8.79; December, 8.84; January, 8.86; February, 8.89; March, 8.94; April, 8.97; May, 9.01.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market showed good strength today, although the trading was very limited. During the morning session Wisconsin Central was the leader, but later the Tractions were taken hold of and advanced easily. Coppers held well with the exception of Greene, which opened up at 23, but under New York selling declined to 21⅞. Utah declared a dividend of $2, an advance of half a dollar from previous payment.

• • •

Butte, Montana, to Paine, Webber & Co.: The North Butte transfer of title will pass to the company tomorrow. We understand a party who holds high position in mining world in this city made examination of the property a few days ago and figures $8,000,000 of ore in sight. It is a great buy at present prices. You can safely advise your friends to buy right now.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, June 19.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $136,823,679; gold, $67,955,862; silver, $31,472,954.

REAL CULPRITS ARE SCREENED

Scandal In Regard to Supplies For the British Army.

London, June 19.—Mr. Choate's testimony in his New York speech to the immaculate purity of English public departments sounded bitterly ironical on its publication here simultaneously with the issue of the Butler reports on the scandals in connection with the South African war stores.

The report roughly reveals that about $35,000,000 was lost in a few months through corruption and criminal waste in dealing with unused war stores. But far the most serious aspect of the scandal is the resolute efforts of War Secretary Forster to hamper the inquiries of the committee and prevent them from reaching the "man higher up." The committee says:

"Further search may enable the investigation to reach that hitherto impenetrable background where some deeper calculator has his abode. We have had to conduct our inquiries subject to numerous difficulties and several limitations, and time has not been allowed us in which to extend our investigations into the great body of the transactions."

Even now War Secretary Forster prefaces the report with the statement that its findings are vitiated by the fact that the evidence was not taken on oath, an omission which is understood in political circles to have been prearranged by the war office in order to lessen the force of disclosures known to be inevitable.

The government made superhuman exertions to keep the report secret, and it is only revealed now through the action of the public accounts committee of the house of commons, which includes men of all parties. This committee, dissatisfied with the war office explanations of the disappearance of large sums of money and stores, demanded further information, and this report, after great difficulty, was furnished.

A serious feature is that Lord Kitchener is responsible for originating the extraordinary system under which the same contractor bought stores from the army and sold the same stores at the same time back again at a fabulous profit. This has greatly shaken confidence in Kitchener's administrative capacity and caused misgivings over the action of the imperial government in acceding to his demand for practically autocratic control over all branches of the Indian army service, in the face of a strenuous resistance from generals who have served all their lives in the Indian army.

NORWEGIANS IN NEW YORK

To Hold Mass Meeting to Endorse Norway's Act.

New York, June 19.—Invitations have been issued by a committee of Norwegian residents of New York city to Norwegian societies, churches and prominent men in Greater New York to attend a mass meeting of Norwegians in Brooklyn next Saturday evening. It is the intention to adopt a set of resolutions at the meeting and to forward them to President Roosevelt expressing sympathy for the Norwegian movement, together with a petition that the United States be the first of the powers to recognize Norway as a sovereign state. Resolutions also will be sent to the Norwegian storthing with congratulations on their action during the recent crisis in Norway.

ETRURIA SUNK

Goes Down In Few Minutes—Crew Escapes —Large Loss.

Sault Ste. Marie, June 19.—During a thick fog which has prevailed on the upper lakes for the past week, the steamers Etruria and Amasa Stone collided yesterday, 10 miles off Presque Isle light, in Lake Huron. The Etruria was damaged so badly that she sank within a few minutes, her crew narrowly escaping with their lives. The Etruria was struck on the starboard side, abreast of the No. 9 hatch. Many of the crew were asleep in their berths, but were awakened by the crash and reached the deck in time to escape. The Amasa Stone was bound down from Duluth to Lake Erie with a cargo of iron ore and the Etruria was taking a cargo of soft coal from Toledo to Lake Superior. The lost steamer, which was commanded by Capt. Jos Green of Buffalo, was one of the largest type of lake carriers, registering 4,553 tons, and was built at Bay City in 1902. She was owned by the Hawgoods of Cleveland, and was valued at $240,000. The Amasa Stone, which escaped any serious damage in the collision, is a steel steamer of 6,482 tons and went into commission this spring. She is valued at $360,000.

The steamer Amasa Stone, which sunk the Etruria in Lake Huron off Presque Isle yesterday, came out only last spring and in her short career on the lakes has been most unfortunate. She belongs to Samuel Mather of Cleveland and is one of the largest type of boats on the lakes. Her captain is George Mallory, well known at all lake ports.

On her first trip up here she ran ashore at Corsican shoal at the foot of Lake Huron and now has sunk one of the big liners. Presque Isle is a veritable graveyard for vessels, many wrecks being at the bottom there.

As to the Etruria, it is believed here that the sinking is that of the largest boat that has ever became a total loss on the great lakes, and that her cargo is the heaviest ever a total loss on the lakes—not the most valuable but contains the greatest number of tons.

It is noted that this year there has been a regular chapter of accidents on the lakes and a great number of collisions for this early in the year. It is claimed that there has been more fog on the lakes this year than in many years before and with the greater number of ships in commission, the danger has grown correspondingly.

SAILS RIGHT ALONG.

Fog Does Not Stop Dynamite Loaded Boat.

Detroit, June 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Dorothy with her cargo of 900 tons of dynamite, passed up Detroit river at midnight, after taking on fuel at Smith's coal dock. Her trip from Wilmington, Del., to the copper region of Houghton is being watched with much interest. Although thick weather continues to prevail at many points the Dorothy with her cargo paid little attention to it, but continued on her long voyage. Vessel captains will doubtless give the huge torpedo a wide berth, when they find her in their vicinity.

WANT MORE FOR CORN.

Chicago, June 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Shippers again are offering 1¾ cents on corn, while vesselmen are holding out for 1⅞ cents. If any business was done at the former figure, it was kept under cover.

WOLVIN'S RECORD BEATEN.

Ashland, June 19.—Special to The Herald.)—The steamer E. H. Gary broke the cargo record of Lake Superior yesterday, clearing from Ashland for Chicago with 10,629 gross or 11,904 net tons of iron ore. This beats the record of the Augustus Wolvin from Duluth to Erie last year by 348 tons.

THE POPE'S EYE IS ON AMERICA

New York, June 19.—A Rome cable to the World says: There is much speculation in ecclesiastical circles here owing to the fact that more than a dozen members of the American hierarchy are now in Rome. Among them are the archbishops of Philadelphia, Dubuque and Vancouver, and the bishops of Concordia, Sioux City, Iowa; Omaha, Wheeling and Belleville. They have all been received in private audience by the pope, some of them more than once, and are daily visitors to the offices of the propagandia and to the palaces of the cardinal members of that congregation.

It is surmised that some of these American prelates have come here in order to pay their customary visit "ad limina," but as the canon law of the church does not oblige them to come to Rome for this purpose oftener than once in five years, and several of the same prelates have paid a visit to the Vatican since the election of Pius X., it is the general opinion that the pope has summoned some of them to Rome to answer to complaints and to receive official suggestions regarding the conduct of their dioceses.

It is known that with the exception of the archbishop of Philadelphia, who is especially relieved by the pope from complying with the usual requirements of the curia, all have filed with the congregation of the propaganda their official reports as to existing conditions in their dioceses. As usual, these reports will be examined by a special commission appointed by the congregation, which will pass upon them and submit its findings to the pope.

Every one of the bishops is obliged to remain in this city or very near it until the pope has passed his final judgment on their work, and each will then be summoned to a farewell audience to hear the Vatican's opinion personally from the pope himself.

It is a common saying now in Rome that is it easier for an American Protestant or even a minister of a dissenting church to obtain the privilege of a private audience from the pope than it is for European Catholics or even priests and bishops who do not have to cross the Atlantic to come to Rome.

This goes to show that just now Pius X. is bent on obtaining all possible information regarding the church in America by holding prolonged interviews with all the prominent visitors from the United States who happen to come to Rome. One instance of this was given last week when Bourke Cockran of New York obtained a private audience with the head of the church. Pius X. entertained his visitor for nearly an hour in his private apartments, and it is said that having learned of Mr. Cockran's intention to visit the Philippine Islands, he discussed with him the whole situation regarding the church in the archipelago. It is known that Mr. Cockran is to use all his influence and knowledge of the law to bring about an early settlement of the questions of church properties in the islands. He has expressed himself rather forcibly about the schism of Aglipay and the efforts made by his followers to hold as their own the church property of many parishes.

WATCH THE FUNDS

County Commissioners Favor Roads For Actual Settlers.

Will Not Open New Roads For Land Speculators.

"I believe that the county road funds should be spent largely in those parts of the county that are settling up instead of districts where there are practically no settlers and where land speculators are attempting to get roads put through in order to get rid of their property," declared one of the members of the board of county commissioners the other day, in referring to various petitions that have been presented for new roads.

This expresses the sentiment of the whole board as at present comprised, and the commissioners are watching closely the petitions that are being presented, with a view of weeding out those in which an examination of the route shows the claim for a road to be based more on the desires of land speculators than the needs of actual settlers.

That the county road fund is not large enough to meet all the needs of the new agricultural districts that are being opened up or to make all the repairs that are demanded on old roads already established into older settled communities, is generally recognized and the road problem is receiving more attention every year as the northern part of the state is filling up with settlers.

It is claimed that in earlier days the commissioners were sometimes rather too liberal in the matter of new roads, and that roads were ordered here and there when the fund had not enough money to warrant the work being started. It is said that the records of the proceedings of the former county boards will show where roads, which have never been constructed, were ordered. It happened that these were ordered in a country that is not yet, perhaps, settled up to any extent, consequently the demand was never pushed very hard.

In recent years there has not been a meeting of the county board where there have not been several road petitions presented. As a rule these have had great merit as shown by the action of the commissioners in granting the requests where possible to provide the funds. Occasionally a disagreement between the settlers themselves as to the best route or the discovery by the county board road committee that the new highway would not benefit anybody particularly but some people residin in town who desire to sell their wild lands, causes the commissioners to turn down a petition.

Should the amount of funds raised by the township for road purposes cut any figure with the board when it comes to making an appropriation out of the county funds for the district comprising the township? This is a question that is looked at from different points of view by some of the commissioners and usually bobs up when the annual road appropriations are made for the road districts.

Some of the towns, notably in the range district, derive a large fund for road purposes from taxes while in the other rural districts of the county, districts which may, perhaps, be settling up much faster than the range districts, the township resources for roads are limited.

The taxpayers living in the range district, even though the latter may receive a large township road fund, claim they are taxpayers in the county and are entitled to receive their proportion of the county road apportionment, regardless of the township road funds available.

The more thickly settled communities outside the range districts which derive so large a revenue from the mines, hold that their claims for county road funds are stronger for the reason that they are developing the agricultural possibilities of the county establishing farms and building up communities and have practically no source of revenue for a road fund.

SERIOUS OPERATION

Hibbing, Minn., June 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. D. D. McEachin, wife of the manager of the Itasca Mercantile company, had a serious attack of strangulated hernia yesterday. Dr. Stewart of Duluth was brought to the city on a special train and an operation was hurriedly performed at the McEachin home. Mrs. McEachin is very low from the results and her recovery is doubtful.

ELABORATE EVENT

Ninety-One Children Take Communion at St. James' Church.

Services and Decorations Are Both Extraordinarily Fine.

Ninety-one children received first communion yesterday at St. James Catholic church. Fifty-two of them were girls and thirty-nine were boys. The services and music were elaborate, and Misses Alice and Bridget Martin and Miss Celia Vaughn are to be congratulated on the excellent training they gave the children for the event. Everything was as orderly as could be imagined. The communicants received at the morning service the scapular of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

The decorations of the church were nothing short of magnificent. The altar in particular, and in fact the entire church, was a mass of palms, cut flowers, home grown plants and other decorations. The aisle ends of the seats were also beautifully ornamented and the chancel of the church was decorated with white and yellows ribbons.

The singing of the children was extraordinarily good, and M. J. Flahertrault's offertory solo was given in excellent voice and was very pleasing. Miss Marie Tims was organist, except when the children sang, at which time Miss Eva Baker presided at the organ. Little Miss Barbara Pecault played the violin.

In the evening Father Kelly preached on "The Scapular of the Blessed Virgin Mary." The music in the evening was of a high class also. The attendance at both services packed the house and even the aisles were full.

Heavy Transfers.

The transfers of last week show some heavy buying in West Duluth property. Louis Loeb, Thomas Lowry and others made some large purchases of land and it is rumored that other heavy purchases are still to follow. West Duluthians are curious to know what this means. They believe it means an era of prosperity for West Duluth and that these buyers have an inside tip as to what is going to happen.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The brick masons who were brought here from Chicago to reline the blast furnace with brick, have finished their work and will leave for home today.

Mrs. Al. Flasher and Miss Nettie Juveland returned today from Zumbrota, where they attended the funeral of their brother, Hans Juveland, formerly of West Duluth.

Mrs. G. J. Mallory and daughters, Gertrude and Charlotte, left yesterday for an extended visit in Toronto, Ottawa, the Sault, Coburg, and Perth, Ont.

Matt Doyle and bride have returned from their honeymoon trip to Chicago, Milwaukee and other points. They will leave today for their home at Eveleth.

The family of George C. O'Brien of Fifty-first avenue west and Ramsey street, who have been quarantined with smallpox for a long time, are able to be out, the quarantine having been lifted.

Lauermann sells shoes.

Russell Cox, the boy who was hurt by being struck by a street car about a week ago, is home from the hospital and is well on the way to recovery.

A man named Tisch received a bad rip on his left thumb while working this morning at the Red Cliff Lumber company's mill.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sidders of Lincoln, Neb., who have been visiting friends in West Duluth, will leave on Wednesday for Portland, Or. Mrs. Sidders was formerly Mrs. Lizzie Murray of West Duluth.

YACHT RACES.

Mahon and Earnshaw Winners In Saturday Contests.

Owing to the light wind of Saturday the Duluth Yacht club races in the afternoon were not as exciting as they otherwise might have been. North Wind, sailed by Henry Mahon, finished first in the Class A race, in which the twenty-eight footers took part. Frolic, sailed by H. A. Earnshaw, won in the Class B contest.

It took the North Wind just three hours and nine minutes to go twice around the bay course, which measures five and one-half miles. Feather, sailed by Dr. Lynam, was second, and Scud, called by Roth, was third. Banishee and Whirlwind did not finish within the time limit. Spray, sailed by Fred Smith, was second in the Class B race. The smaller boats have a triangular course of their own, and Saturday they sailed twice around it. It is not so long as the other course.

The lunch room in the new club house is meeting with great favor. It was well patronized on Saturday, the opening day, and a very good meal was set before the hungry yachtsmen.

THOUSANDS OF BARRELS OF NAPHTHA ARE BURNED.

Lima, Ohio, June 19.—A 85,000-barrel tank containing 33,600 barrels of naphtha, valued at $5 a barrel, was struck by lightning today and the fire whistle of the Standard Oil company's refinery brought a thousand men from their homes to protect other property. Less than a thousand barrels of oil could be pumped from the tank before it became too hot to handle and the loss is figured at nearly $200,000.

NO SECRET ABOUT IT.

It is no secret that for Cuts, Burns, Ulcers, Fever Sores, Sore Eyes, Boils, etc., nothing is so effective as Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "It didn't take long to cure a bad sore I had, and it is all O. K. for sore eyes," writes D. L. Gregory of Hope, Texas. 25c at all drug stores.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Pierre Young Man Determined to End His Existence.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Pierre—James Johns of this city last night took a quantity of oil of sabina with suicidal intent. He first attempted to secure strychnine and then to borrow a revolver, but failed. He is yet alive, but is not expected to recover. His sister some years ago committed suicide by hanging.

Deadwood—As a sequel to the recent Farnham murder case, two witnesses are under arrest for perjury with a good chance of being sent up. They are Nick Spento, an Italian from Central City, and Walter Young, a colored porter of this place. They both testified that Mrs. Farnham and Richard Galvin, who was shot by Farnham, were unduly intimate. These cases will be tried to endeavor to establish the good character of Mrs. Farnham.

Is Thomas F. Carroll, now held in the Lawrence county jail, Charles Lennox or Alfred Carroll, the murderer of Ed Thurlow, on the Centennial prairie, near this city in 1892? There are many who believe that he is the murderer of the young cattleman. He admits that he was in Butte, Mont., in 1902, at the time that Lennox broke jail, and he also admits that he is a cousin of Alfred Carroll, and that he is familiar with the stabbing affair thirteen years ago. He steadfastly asserts that he can establish an alibi.

Sioux Falls—John P. Plunkett and Edward Lynch, doing business at Rapid City under the firm name of Plunkett & Lynch, have filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in the United States court in this city, both as individuals and as copartners.

A similar petition has been filed by Rozelia G. Hunt, a milliner of Pierre. She places her liabilities at $1,290.55 and assets at $980.

Frank C. Wood, a salesman of Brookings, also files in voluntary bankruptcy. His liabilities amount to $1,581 and assets to $246. Carl Dittman, a merchant of Mount Vernon, schedules his liabilities at $3,004.97 and assets at $4,400.

Any doubt that it was the intention of Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart of New York to become a member of the divorce colony in Sioux Falls has been removed by the purchase by her of a cottage which she will occupy while establishing a bonafide residence. The property is the handsome cottage of Mrs. Flora Bigelow Dodge, another distinguished New Yorker. Before occupying it she will have several alterations made, including the addition of two large rooms. Mrs. Stewart brought thirty-five trunks with her. This is perhaps the greatest number ever brought here by a "colonist."

Alcester—A business man was induced to cash after banking hours, a $100 check for a traveling man from Chicago. The check turned out to be bogus and the sheriff is trying to locate the traveling man under the stimulus of a $25 reward offered by the victim.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—"The drawback allowed by the United States treasury department on Canadian wheat has not been the benefit to the farmers of that region that had been expected," was the statement made by F. O. Fowler, manager of the Grain and Produce Exchange at Winnipeg. Mr. Fowler is here as a witness in a smuggling case. "The Canadians," he said, "expected a greatly increased trade with the United States as a result of Secretary Shaw's order, and have been disappointed in results. The shipments were much smaller than estimated."

The resignation of I. B. Penniman, director of music at Fargo college, has been accepted, and he will move to Omaha to accept a similar position in the First Congregational church

Lidgerwood—Benedict M. Wohlwend, a well-to-do farmer, is dead.

The house occupied by Charles Merrill was struck by lightning and the iron roof of the city lockup was blown off in a recent storm.

AMERICAN BUILT BOAT WINS.

Dover, Eng., June 19.—The Herreshof designed American built composite cutter Sonya, belonging to Mrs. Turner-Farley of Southampton defeated the composite cutter Britonmart, designed on the Clyde. For this contest the course was twenty-five miles around the Varne buoy, south of the Goodwin lightship and return to Dover.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Sault Ste. Marie—Many strange things have happened around the locks at the Soo, but last week the men there employed were given the most difficult problem of their experience. The water during the day rose and fell from two to three feet. At times it would rise so high as to flow over the gates, and then it would recede till it went down below the regular water mark. The same thing has happened once or twice before, but never to such a great extent. Alexander G. Burns of the weather bureau, when asked regarding the matter, said the asmospheric pressure at the other end of the lake was greater; causing the water to rise. Then it changed about and the result was just the opposite. In other words the atmospheric pressure kept changing, causing the water to rise and fall. This circumstance is considered by marine men a positive sign of a heavy thunderstorm.

Crystal Falls—A number of bicyclists at Crystal Falls have purchased attachments for their wheels by the use of which they are able to ride on the railroad tracks. They have boycotted the train, and a protest from the companies is not unlikely.

Gladstone—E. V. White of Gladstone is the possessor of an almanac for the year 1781. The only advertising in it is that of Quaker meeting near Philadelphia. It contains some fairly funny stories, and a table of money for reckoning the exchange value of New York currency, Spanish dollars, guineas and pounds sterling, all fractional. This is enough to make an ordinary man's head swim. A few years ago a shilling was 12½ cents on the York side of the Hudson, and 16 2-3 in Pennsylvania and it behooved a traveler to bethink himself when bartering.

Menominee—A special election will be held at Menominee on the 30th to give the people an opportunity to vote on the question of the purchase of the K. C. company's property, to be used as mill sites for concerns locating at Menominee. It is proposed to issue bonds to the amount of $30,000. Ostensibly the land is to be purchased for use as a public park.

Grand Marais—L. G. Kirby, formerly an instructor in the Grand Marais schools, has taken up his residence in the Philippine islands. He has signed a three-year contract to teach school in Uncle Sam's Far Eastern possession.

TO MUCH MEDICINE.
THE excessive and indiscriminate use of medicines, in these days, cannot be too strongly condemned. The food you eat, if properly digested, is all the tonic you need.
The system is continually wronged by over-eating and over-drinking, and the debilitated condition aggravated by dosing with harsh, nauseous drugs and medicines.
Only common sense is needed. The food MUST be digested and the bowels MUST NOT BE allowed to clog. Preserve your health by preventing these conditions.
Constipation surely leads to Indigestion, Biliousness, etc., and these conditions when neglected affect the condition of the blood, debilitate the system, rendering it susceptible to more serious ailmens, and less able to resist such attacks.
CALIFORNIA PRUNE WAFERS if taken as directed, will positively cure the most obstinate case of Indigestion, Torpid Liver, Constipation, Biliousness, etc., so as to stay cured. 100 Wafers 25 Cents. Sold by KUGLER, Your Druggist,

THE NORWEGIANS' REPLY TO SWEDES IS CONCILIATORY

Would Have the Union Dissolved Without Any Bitterness.

President of Riksdag Says Hope of Union Has Vanished.

Christiania, June 20.—The address to King Oscar and the riksdag, adopted by the storthing yesterday and the Swedish people generally, in reply to the long letter which the king sent June 13 to the president of the storthing, M. Berner, is of a conciliatory character. As the same time, however, it indicates the unalterable determination of the storthing to adhere to the action taken in dissolving the union with Sweden. The text is as follows:

"Your Majesty: Norway's storthing respectfully begs to address your majesty and through your majesty Sweden's riksdag and Sweden's people as follows:

"What has been happening recently in Norway is the inevitable result of a combination of late political events and cannot be altered, and it is as certain that neither of the two peoples is desirous of returning to the former condition of union, the storthing is of the opinion that it ought not to reconsider the various questions of the constitution and public law that have been brought up in your majesty's note to the storthing's president in connection with tre solutions adopted and on which the storthing and the government have already expresed themselves in detail.

"The storthing recognizes fully your majesty's difficult position and never for a moment has doubted that your majesty's decisions are in accordance with what your majesty has regarded as the rights and duties of the crown. At the same time the storthing is desirous of addressing an appeal to your majesty, the riksdag and the people of Sweden with the object of contributing to the peaceful carrying through of the dissolution of the union and the safeguarding of the friendship and concord of the two peoples of the peninsula. The storthing has seen from expressions of opinion in Sweden that the resolution which the storthing felt it to be its duty to the fatherland to adopt in declaring the union of the two kingdoms dissolved, has in form and action been considered mortifying to Sweden. That never has been its intention. What has happened and had to happen in Norway was merely the inevitable maintenance of Norway's constitutional rights. The Norwegian people never intended to assail Sweden's honor. As your majesty in council, May 26, declared you were unable to sanction the storthing's unanimous resolution for the establishment of a separate Norwegian consular service and as no Norwegian government could be obtained by your majesty the constitutional state of Norway was so far disjointed that the union could no longer be maintained. On Norway's storthing was, therefore, imposed the necessity of procuring without delay a government for the country. Every other course was closed, all the more so as your majesty's Swedish government had, April 25, explicitly declined to enter into new negotiations with the dissolution of the union as an alternative in the event that it was found impossible to arrive at an agreement in regard to a new form of union.

"The storthing as already stated and the Norwegian people do not feel any bitterness or animosity against your majesty or the Swedish people. The statements to the contrary which possibly were uttered on occasions have wholly and solely been grounded on dissatisfaction at Norways position in the union and that source of bitterness and animosity would disappear with the dissolution of the union its effects also would vanish. Ninety years of cooperation in material and intellectual labors have awakened in the Norwegian people feelings of sincere friendship and sympathy for the Swedish people. These feelings will with Norway no longer occupying a position offensive to her national independence once more grow apace and insure the entrance of a mutual understanding between the peoples. In the belief that the Swedish people share these views, the storthing suggests to Swedish people share these views the storthing suggests to Sweden's constitutional authorities that they enter on the negotiations requisite for a final settlement on the dissolution of the union with the recognition of Norway's new status and her rights as a sovereign state. The storthing is itself prepared to meet every fair and reasonable wish that may be put forward to safeguard the kingdom's independence and integrity.

"Constitutionally the two peoples henceforth will be separate, but at the same time the storthing is fully convinced that this will lead to the development of a good and trustful relationship for the defence of their mutual interests.

"If the future settlement can be attained without bitterness and prejudice the storthing is convinced that what has happened will prove for the lasting welfare of the people. For the sake of the north, the storthing addresses this appeal to the people which by its magnanimnity and chivalry has attained for itself, such an eminent place among nations and with which the Norwegian people desire most sincerely to maintain good relations."

Stockholm, Sweden, June 20.—The sessions of both chambers of the riksdag were opened today. Baron Essex took the chair in the upper house by right of seniority. He announced that Counts Sparre and Lundeberg had been reappointed by the king respectively as president and vice president of the house. The proceedings in the lower house of the riksdag were opened with a short address by M. Medin, the senior member, after which Premier Ramstedt announced that King Oscar had reappointed M. Swarthing and M. Pehrson to be respectively president and vice president of the house. President Swarthing made a speech during which he said that the hope of Sweden in regard to the union had vanished and Norway's negation of the union had been accomplished in such a manner that it would be very difficult to make any attempt to reopen the negotiations. The president was sure the members realized fully their responsibility towards the nation and the future. He hoped, however, that a result of the proceedings of the riksdag would record the honest desires of Swenden.

There was no undue excitement in either chamber or in the precincts but the large crowds gathered in front of the parliament building showed the keen public interest taken in the outcome of the session.

Stockholm, June 20.—The council of state, at a meeting today, adopted a proposition which will be presented to the riksdag tomorrow. According to the best information, the main points are that Sweden refuses to recognize the one-sided dissolution of the union by the storthing, but the government asks the riksdag for authority to enter into negotiations with Norway in orred to establish the basis for a dissolution on which both countries can mutually agree and the amicable relations of the two countries be maintained.

ITALIANS THREATEN STRIKE FOR TWO MORE HOURS WORK

Crookston, Minn., June 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—All of the Italian laborers along the Great Northern line between this city and Winnipeg, who are employed on the extensive improvements being made on the line, struck yesterday, not for more wages, or for fewer hours, but for permission to work twelve hours per day instead of ten hours, as they have been doing.

This unusual and altogether unheard of state of affairs, the disposition of the workmen to work from 6 a. m. until 7 p. m., threatens to tie up all of the work along the road, as the Great Northern officials in this city are averse to allowing the men their own way in the matter, and insist that the ten-hour a day schedule be lived up to. Twelve hand cars, filled with laborers of the dusky race, mostly foremen of the gangs, came to this city to confer with Great Northern officials, and during the interview threats were made that unless the 12-hour day was allowed all of the men would be pulled off and the work tied up.

The company pays the men $1.60 per day and provides them with cars in which to sleep. Nearly 1,000 men are involved, and are scattered from here to St. Vincent.

BIG LOG RAFT TO GO TO SHANGHAI

San Francisco, June 20.—A log raft containing 10,000,000 feet of spars and piling is to be towed across the Pacific to Shanghai during the summer. This is the gigantic plan of a new company just formed under the laws of British Columbia, and which is a branch of a raft company of this city. The latter concern is said to have been very successful in rafting lumber from northern points to San Francisco. Except for an accident to the first one or two big rafts, which broke loose, all the huge rafts have been brought safely to port. But they are, nevertheless, looked upon with considerable fear by seafaring men and shipowners, who regard the bulky rafts as positive menaces which should be prohibited from going to sea. The new company, despite this opposition, will send to Shanghai a larger raft of big logs than has ever yet been put together. From present plans it will be towed by one or more of the most powerful tugboats of San Francisco, accompanied by a collier or oil steamer with fuel for the tugs.

HAY AT HIS DESK.

Washington, June 20.—Secretary Hay, who returned to Washington yesterday after a prolonged absence abroad, and who last night had a conference with the president, was at his desk in the state department today. The secretary attended to a large amount of correspondence which had accumulated during his absence. He expects to leave in a short time for his New Hampshire home.

WAR IN THE FAR EAST TO GO ON WHILE PEACE IS TALKED AT CAPITAL

But Little Hope That an Armistice Will Be Arranged.

Japanese Expect to Start Representatives on June 30.

Tokio, June 20, 10 a. m.—Discussion of the meeting of the peace plenipotentiaries continues through Washington with indications of an early completion of the details. There has been a series of conferences between the elder statesmen and the cabinet to consider the conditions and discuss the selection of plenipotentiaries. It is thought to be possible to complete the details, appoint the plenipotentiaries and organize a staff of assistants in time for them to to sail on the steamer Empress of India June 30, from Yokohama for Vancouver, (a voyage of about two weeks.) It is expected that the party will number a dozen. In the meantime military activity will continue. Important developments in various directions are expected speedily.

AGAINST ARMISTICE.

Great Britain Wants Linevitch's Army Destroyed.

St. Petersburg, June 20.—The Novoe Vreyma today printed a dispatch from London, in which its correspondent declared he was in possession of information to the effect that the British were advising Japan against the conclusion of an armistice. "Russia," the dispatch added, "is not considered to be sufficiently weakened. Great Britain hopes that Field Marshal Oyama will succeed in destroying Gen. Linevitch's army, and thus relieve her of the nightmare that the army may later be shifted to the borders of Afghanistan for operations against India."

The radical Nashashism asserts that that the "Phantom of financial exhaustion hanging over Russia" is really the greatest friend of peace, and draws a harrowing picture of 90 per cent of the empire's population, living as their forefathers did in the sixteenth century, growling under the constantly increasing debts piled up by militarism and the adventures of the autocracy, which clever bookkeeping can no longer conceal.

"Russia," the Novoe Vreyma continues, "is reaching the end of her ability to borrow for the purpose of prosecuting the war. Here is the real secret of the hope of peace. Russia's poverty must decide the issue when the plenipotentiaries meet."

London, June 20.—While undoubtedly the people of England would like to see a general battle in Manchuria before an armistice is declared, since it is felt certain that Field Marshal Oyama would score another victory, the Associated Press is assured that the British government has not given Japan any advice as to what course to pursue, as alleged by the Novoe Vreyma of St. Petersburg. In fact, that government has done nothing beyond supporting the president's endeavors to secure the earliest meeting of the peace plenipotentiaries, and the submission by Japan of terms likely to be acceptable to Russia. With overwhelming forces at his command, it is felt in military circles that Oyama is in a position to deal a most crushing defeat to Gen. Linevitch.

The recent movements of British cruisers in the Far East are taken to mean that the admiralty has again undertaken to notify the Russian cruisers of Foreign Minister Lamsdorff's instructions that there is to be no further sinking of neutral ships, at any rate ship owners are much relieved.

CHANCES OF ARMISTICE

Are Considered Very Slender By the Russians.

St. Petersburg, June 20, 2:10 p. m.—The only hope for an armistice pending the meeting of the peace plenipotentiaries seems to rest with President Roosevelt and even that is considered slender. So far as known the president has not taken a positive step in this direction. The impression here continues strong that Japan only with great reluctance could be induced to forego the advantages of her strategic position which, despite the tone of the official advices from the front, is regarded as being altogether favorable to Field Marshal Oyama, and agree to a suspension of hostilities for at least six weeks, during which time thousands of reinforcements would reach Gen. Linevitch and Vladivostok would be strengthened with munitions and supplies to withstand a siege. Indeed, it is suggested that Japan deliberately planned to postpone the meeting long enough to give Oyama a chance to administer to the Russians a fresh defeat on land in order to rob the war party in Russia of their last card and facilitate acquiescence to her terms.

Considering the situation, therefore, President Roosevelt's triumph will be all the greater if he could now succeed in crowning his work by an agreement which would at least prevent another bloody battle, pending the show of hands at Washington. At the British embassy the Associated Press was informed that Great Britain had not offered Japan any advice on the subject.

Brig. Gen. Barry and his colleagues, in view of the prospects of a general engagement, are hastening their round of official visits in order to get to the front in time to witness something of the fighting. They have already called on several of the ministers. Tomorrow the American officers will be received in audience by the emperor, at Peterhof.

NO EXPLANATION

Of St. Kilda Incident Can Be Furnished Yet.

St. Petersburg, June 20.—Neither the admiralty nor the foreign office are able to furnish any explanation of the sinking of the British steamer St. Kilda by the Russian auxiliary cruiser Dnieper, for which Ambassador Hardinge has already demanded payment, except that it may have been due to the demoralization of Admiral Rojestvensky's defeat as specific orders were issued a year ago to avoid a repetitin of the Knight Commander incident. Great Britain offered through Ambassador Hardinge to deliver instructions to the Dnieper and Rion which are on their way to Port Said, by means of British ships as she did in the case of the cruiser Smolensk and St. Petersburg.

NO DEVELOPMENTS

Expected at Washington For Next Few Days.

Washington, June 20.—Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, left Washington this morning for Tufts college, Mass., to deliver an address and to receive, at the commencement, the degree of doctor of laws. He does not expect to return to Washington until Friday, and will leave Mr. Hioki, the first secretary in charge of the legation. In view of the absence of the president for the next few days, no development in the negotiations is expected.

It is expected that if the plenipotentiaries adjourn to a summer resort, as is expected, unless Washington has unprecedented August weather, none of the diplomats representing the neutral powers will follow them. There have been formal exchanges between the ambassadors here on the subject, and it is their opinion that it would be in bad taste for any diplomat not directly interested in the conference, to go to New England for the purpose of following the negotiations. This unanimous decision on the part of the diplomats commends itself to the bilegerents, who have already expressed a wish to conduct their negotiations directly with each other, and without the interruption of the other powers. It is also in accordance with the president's wish, as understood in diplomatic circles, that the plenipotentiaries be given a free hand. In case there should be an irreconcilable point of difference calling for outside assistance the plenipotentiaries will appeal to the president for help. Otherwise, they will conduct their deliberations directly between themselves.

ONE MORE EFFORT

Made to Save Mrs. Rogers From the Gallows.

Windsor, Vt., June 20.—Forty-eight hours before the time set for her execution, Mrs. Mary M. Rogers, under sentence of death in the state prison here for the murder of her husband, will be taken to the local courthouse on the writ of habeas corpus, instituted by her attorneys and granted late last night in Brattleboro by Judge Wheeler of the United States circuit court.

Attorneys for the condemned woman declare that should Judge Wheeler deny any relief when the writ comes before him Wednesday, an appeal will be taken to the United States supreme court. Such an appeal will have to be allowed by the circuit court, pending which, a further delay in the execution will be necessary.

MOROCCO ASKS THE UNITED STATES TO JOIN CONFERENCE

Which Is to Adjust Its Affairs With Other Countries.

An Answer Will Not Be Made Without Investigation.

Washington, June 20.—The state department today received a dispatch from Mr. Gummere, minister to Morocco, transmitting a request from the government of Morocco that the United States participate in a conference on the affairs of that country. The request is similar to that which has been sent to other governments.

The reply of the United States will be discussed at the cabinet meeting, but it is not expected that any decision will be reached, because the United States will first desire to know the scope and purpose of the conference. Other governments have replied in substance that if all the great powers participated they would also accept.

The interests of the United States are only commericial, it is said, while those of Germany and France are political. Consequently the United States does not have such interest in the conference as the governments of Europe.

MODERN WOODMEN INCREASED 121,639

Milwaukee, June 20.—The head camp of Modern Woodmen of America opened its fourteenth biennial convention here today with between six and seven hundred delegates, representing over 11,000 camps and nearly 700,000 members, present. After addresses of welcome, the convention proceeded with the presentation of reports.

The report of Head Consul A. R. Talbot was devoted to a review of the work during the biennial term. Speaking of the work of the medical department, he favored the discontinuance of the state head physicians, all applications to go to the supreme medical directors at the head office. The expenses of his office for 1903 were $11,683, and for 1904, $24,189. Total $36,503. Appeals on behalf of 210 distressed members were received and the contributions were $21,949. He spoke in favor of the foresters department and recommended the amendment of the bylaws prohibiting local camps or foresters teams from holding Sunday picnics or excursions under the auspices of the society, with a penalty for disobedience of expulsion or revocation of charter. He recommended the order of junior woodmen as beneficial to the boys. He favored an interval of three or four years between the meetings of the head camp, in the interests of economy.

During the biennial the new members numbered 121,639 and 1,482 new camps were chartered. The society, he said, now includes 14.53 per cent of all those eligible for membership in the states in which it is organized.

The insurance in force at the close of the biennial term aggregated $1,136,676,500. The society paid 7,051 death claims, amounting to $12,663,603, as against 5,860 claims, amounting to $10,746,435 during the term preceding. The receipts of the benefit fund totalled $12,567,703, as against $7,670,988 during the preceding biennial. The balance at the close of the term was $807,587. The receipts of the general fund were $1,674,299, as against $1,503,011 during the preceding term, the balance being $289,994. The lapsed (beneficial) membership during the two years was 117,415, and the lapsed insurance, $176,462,500.

The average per capita payment to the benefit fund was $1.36½, against 80 cents during the term preceding. The increase was due to the new rates becoming effective Jan. 1, 1904, when the rates of the members were increased from 25 per cent to 75 per cent at the various ages. There were 2,991 deaths from accident and 804 deaths from suicide. Of the latter 248 were farmers—30.8 per cent of the total number. The farmers also led in accidental deaths, 855.

Was Making a Reply to Address of Welcome to Chicago.

Chicago, June 20.—Simon P. Sheerin, secretary of the Democratic national committee from 1880 to 1896, dropped dead on the floor of the convention hall in the Auditorium hotel today while making an address before the delegates to the convention of the National Interstate Independent Telephone association. Death was due to apoplexy.

Mr. Sheerin was president of the new long distance telephone company of Indianapolis, and had been selected by the convention arrangements committee to reply to an address of welcome by a representative of the city of Chicago. As Mr. Sheerin went to the speaker's table, he jokingly remarked that he was unable to make a long speech without notes and asked the pardon of those present while he read his response to the address of welcome. He had proceeded well along with the reading when he suddenly stepped backward and fell to hte floor, expiring within a few minutes.

Mr. Sheerin, a moment before his collapse, remarked to Col. J. D. Powers of Louisville, Ky., temporary chairman of the convention, that he was not feeling well. The convention was thrown into a state of intense excitement by Mr. Sheerin's death and several minutes elapsed before order could be restored. The convention immediately adjourned for the day. Mr. Sheerin, Jr., a son, was present when his father expired and took charge of the remains, which will be sent to Indianapolis tonight.

Mr. Sheerin, Sr., arrived in Chicago several days ago with his son and attended several of the telephone convention committee meetings, taking an active part in the proceedings. He apparently had been in good health since ariving in Chicago until today.

PEACE COMMITTEE FOR THE STRIKERS

Chicago, June 20.—Prospects of a speedy termination of the teamsters' strike became still brighter today with the bringing into action of a new strike committee, appointed by the teamsters' joint council, and empowered in conjunction with the international executive board, to settle the struggle without further consultation with the strikers.

A majority of the members of the International executive board are known to be opposed to a continuance of the strike and have used their influence during the last week toward bringing it to an end. It was on this account that the executive committee was asked to act with the council's peace committee in bringing the strike to a close.

That the new committee will agree to the peace terms offered by the employers seems practically certain. It is understood that should peace efforts be blocked this time through unforseen circumstances, a referendum vote on calling off the strike will be taken.

Edward Bickett, a non-union man employed by the National Express company was subjected to barbarious torture early today by four men alleged to be strike sympathizers. Bickett was attacked in front of the Teamsters' union headquarters. After being knocked down by the men, three fingers of his right hand were broken and the finger nails pulled out by nippers, it is said. The victim appealed to the men to have mercy, but his cries were in vain and when the assailants left he was unconscious in the street, where he was found later by a policeman.

The railroad express companies resumed their long delayed regular deliveries of produce to South Water street merchants today. Commission wagon drivers made no protest.

L. B. Beebe of the van teamsters, prominent in precipitating the move in the teamsters' council resulting in the appointment of a new committee to settle the strike, balked today and declined to serve on the committee.

President C. P. Shea of the teamsters is said to have refused point blank to accept membership on the peace committee.

PERSONS ATTEND BALL GAMES AT OWN RISK, SAYS JUSTICE

New York, June 20.—Persons who attend baseball games do so at their own risk according to a decision just handed down by Civil Justice McLaughlin in a damage suit brought by a young woman who claims to have been injured by a foul ball. The complainant was an enthusiastic admirer of the game. On Sept. 3, 1904, while a spectator at the contest on the polo grounds between the New York National club and the Bostons, a foul ball smote her on the nose. The doctors saved her from permanent disfigurement, but suit was brought for damages, in the sum of $500 against the New York club's management.

The complainant's counsel asserted that the management was responsible for everything that went wrong on the grounds and that the woman's injury was due to the lack of proper safeguards. The justice, however, ruled that those who entered the grounds did so at their own risk.

YOUNG MAN'S HEART IS SEWED UP

New York, June 20.—A stab wound sustained by a young Italian, which had punctured the wall of the heart and penetrated the right auricle has been sewed up by surgeons at the Harlem hospital. The operation is difficult and rare but the patient is still alive and hopes are entertained that he will recover. The operation required thirty-five minutes.

The subject of the operation was Camillo Delano. He was stabbed during a saloon row. Companions walked him twelve blocks to the hospital. Finding the fellow alive despite such treatment, the surgeons hurried him to the operating table. To get at his heart they sawed off an inch and a half of the third right rib. The next task was the ligation of two arteries. It was then found that the right auricle of the heart had been seriously punctured, the width of the wound being about one quarter of an inch. This was closed with a single stitch and the usual dressings applied.

MEN OF ARMY "JOSH" DELAWARE

St. Paul, June 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the opening session of the Interstate National Guard convention today a nominating committee of one member from each state under the chairmanship of Gen. Nelson Henry of New York, was named to select candidates for office. The discussion at this session was concerning a new small arm by Capt. Fuller, ordnance department U. S. A., and Col John G. Salzman of Wisconsin, read a paper of signalizing systems. Maj. W. C. Borden of the madical department, U. S. A., read a paper on conditions in the army. Delaware had nothing to say when the roll was called today for experiences at the military convention Monday.

"I would like," shouted Gen. James A. Drain, Washington, "to have Col. Ewing tell us what Delaware is doing in target practice."

Every one laughed, for it has long been a tradition in guard conventions that Delaware is not wide enough for the troops to lay out a rifle range.

INDEPENDENT TELEPHONE ASSOCIATION IN SESSION.

Chicago, June 20.—The ninth annual convention of the National Interstate Independent Telephone association opened here today, and will continue until Thursday. The delegates will endeavor to effect a strong central organization, which will result in complete harmony extending throughout the entire system. The possibility of establishing an independent company in New York is an important question which will come before them.

ANOTHER MOOSE

Animal Swims Across Lake and Runs Through Lakeside.

Duluth Becoming Famous As Summer Resort In Jungle Society.

The habit of taking a little run into Duluth appears to be growing on the moose in Northern Minnesota, and among the denizens of the northern woods the word has gone forth that in order to be strictly au fait, one must have visited the famous summer resort at the Head of the Lakes, "don't you know."

It has come to such a stage that "really one can't hold up one's head in good moose society, unless one has been to Duluth," and far and wide the dictum of the 400 in jungle society has gone forth, that the strictly proper thing to do when the flies are annoying it to run down to Duluth and take a jump in the lake.

Another pilgrim to the Mecca of moose society was discovered by Capt. Hector of the Booth line steamer America, swimming in the lake this morning. The animal was coming across from the south shore.

It headed for Lakeside, and, pursued by two men in a rowboat, it landed at Forty-fifth avenue east, and running up through Lakeside plunged into the woods and made its escape.

It was only about ten days ago that a large bull moose ran down Fifteenth avenue east and was cornered on London road, where it died of wounds received before it reached the city, and the exhaustion caused by the long run.

Again, a few months ago, a moose ran along Superior street early in the morning, so that the one seen today makes the third within the year.

But the animals are being driven out into the suburbs. The first traveled along Superior street, the second on Fifteenth avenue east, and the third on Forty-fifth avenue east. If this record is kept up the moose will soon be seen only in the thinly settled suburbs and will absolutely abandon the business center of the city, and the fashionable residence district.

POLLARD CHILDREN

All Under Thirteen—Have Their Schooling En Route.

Thirty bright little girls and ten boys, who are regarded in the eyes of the law as infants, being under the age of 13, compose the Pollard Lilliputian Opera company. They were all born in Australia, and when they reach the age of 13 they gradute out of the company because the management will keep nobody over that age. The home of the Pollards is in Australia, where additions are being made to the company all the time. Promising youngsters from the surrounding country are gathered into the dramatic school and trained by an instructor, Alf. Goulding, who has been with the organization for twenty years. They are drilled until they are good enough to sing with the other children, then they take the places of those who have grown too old to stay in the company any longer.

In their travels about the world they are accompanied by four women, who look after the girls and two men look after the boys, one of whom is a tutor.

Under the laws of Australia no grown person can live off the earnings of a minor, so all their earnings are sent to a bank in Melbourne, where they will be kept for them until of age. They are allowed expense money by the management, while the Australian government is said to pay the wages of the school teacher.

Wherever they go they are accompanied by the women, so that the girls are almost under the constant care of motherly eyes. Study time is every morning about 10 o'clock, and the immense advantage the Pollard children have of seeing things with their own eyes over the ordinary school boys and girls, cannot be fully understood by school children of our great cities, who pass most of their lives within the four walls of their home city. The youngest member of the company is 7, the oldest is 13. The children are familiar with the scores of a dozen operas. They have met with great success in South Africa, India, China, Japan, Manila, Honolulu and Australia and are now in the United States for the third time.

THE SLEEPING NAIAD

By Charles S. Reid.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The conception was perfect, but where throughout all Europe was to be found the model? In his thoughts, Margollus carefully went over the list of models that he knew. One or two came nearly to the standard he had set for his piece, but not quite. He traveled, visiting the principal cities of France, Italy and Germany; then returned to London. Still the model of his conception had not been found. Once more he sought throughout London, but without success. From those who might have been hired for money, Margollus turned to those in the higher walks of life. There was a subtle power he had always held in reserve for some situation in which every other expedient had failed. Should that power now be resorted to?

Margollus sat one night in a box at her majesty's theater and surveyed the audience with his eye, from pit to roof and back again. Several times his gaze had lingered on some especially beautiful woman to study minutely the nature of her charm, only to be withdrawn at last unsatisfied. The boxes had been left inviolated—for there are the nobility. But when the vast audience from the pit to the roof had been passed in review and found to yield not the thing sought for, the vision of the artist began boldly to sweep the boxes. One after another these glided under his gaze, until an occupant of one of them arrested the attention of Margollus with an electric-like suddenness. The Countess Alfretti who, with her husband was residing in London for the season, sat in a box opposite that which was occupied by the artist; and hers were the face and form that had made such a sudden appeal to his sense of perfection. The model he had sought was before him—but she was the Countess Alfretti. However, a smile of triumph stole over the features of Margollus and he determined that the countess should serve him.

It was no hard matter for Margollus to find the opportunity which he now coveted. Such was the power of his eyes, that he knew he had but to meet her gaze once, when further progress would be easy. The boldness of the undertaking did not now trouble the artist one moment—he had thought only for its accomplishment and for the success of the picture.

The fame of Margollus gave him entre to the best society of London, and it was not long before he met the Countess Alfretti and made the trial of his subtle power. She yielded quickly—none had ever withstood it. He found that he swayed her as the breeze might sway some tender flower. In his presence she moved as in a dream, but there was an ecstacy in it that was like the stimulus of old wine to her.

One day, as the countess was driving past the studio of Margollus, she chanced to glance upward at an open window. The artist was sitting there—and their eyes met. Instantly the lady yielded to the hypnotic influence that the man had gained over her. Margollus had invited her to visit his studio; but, though she had promised him to do so, when out of his presence she shuddered at the thought of fulfilling this promise. Out of his presence, she feared the artist; in his presence, a strange, unaccountable dreamy kind of happiness possessed her.

On this occasion, when their eyes met, she descended immediately from her carriage and entered the building. Margollus met her below and conducted her through each department of his rooms with all the affability of manner of which he was capable, and finally escorted her out again, with a profusion of thanks and appreciation expressed in his parting words. He followed her a moment with his eyes, then turned back into the house, with an expression of deep satisfaction expressed in his face.

Margollus waited patiently a few days. But at last, one afternoon, late, he passed the house which was occupied by Alfretti and his wife. The countess was standing over some pot flowers near the street. Margollus spoke her name and she turned quickly toward him. The strange power of his eyes at once compelled her, and she became the automaton of his will. But he had hardly stayed his footsteps and continued his way almost immediately.

Countess Alfretti was left dreaming; in an hour, when it became quite dark, some mysterious voice commanded her to steal from the house and go to the studio of Margollus. She crept away, and so stealthy had she been in all her movements, that none saw her.

When it was discovered that the Countess Alfretti had disappeared, a great cry was raised and all London was aroused. Alfretti, who had just gone to Florence on some business, was summoned home again, but he did not reach London until the afternoon following the countess' disappearance. Every department of the police regulations was notified, and a careful search throughout the city was instituted. But all to no avail. Friends came to offer condolence to Alfretti; among them, Margollus.

But after this, for long days and nights, Margollus was not seen among his friends. Servants of the house in which he resided gave it out that the artist was engaged upon a great picture and was not to be disturbed under any circumstances.

The search for the missing countess was continued assiduously, and was extended to other cities. Every plausible suggestion was acted upon, but all resulted fruitlessly—not a clew had been found by which to trace her the first step beyond the house. Alfretti sat at home, receiving news of the search which came to him from all parts of the city at every hour in the day. And to him, as the days passed by, the agony of suspense grew more terrible.

In the meantime Margollus was painting the Sleeping Naiad. With nerves strung to the highest pitch, and almost without eating or sleeping, he worked like some demon that was striving against time for the possession of the world. His eyes burned, a supernatural power moved his hand and there was unprecedented accuracy in the very madness of his stroke.

At last it was finished; and a long, deep-drawn sigh escaped the throat of the artist, as his practiced eye followed the detail in search of some slight imperfection and found none. How long had it been? How many hours? How many days? He had kept no record of time. Nothing had come up to him from the streets of London since the first news of the disappearance of the countess. In reality almost a week had passed. The countess had been given up as dead, and Alfretti was plunged into the depths of grief, while his friends and the friends of the countess were wrapped in gloom out of sympathy and sorrow.

But on the evening of the fifth day, just after nightfall, a figure crept into the house of Alfretti and threw itself into the count's arms. The countess had returned, and new life surged through Alfretti's veins. The beautiful woman had wrapped a large shawl round her head and shoulders, and she was still dazed for some moments after her return to her husband's arms.

"Oh, tell me what has happened?" she exclaimed. "I found myself in the street, alone, and in the darkness—the street lights were so dim. And you—you started for Florence this afternoon. But you did not go?"

Alfretti knew by these last words that her mind was a blank since the time of her disappearance. She had been the victim of some mental aberration and had been wandering—God knew where. Quickly he fabricated some story explaining everything, and set her mind at rest. Then he secretly instructed the servants and requested all her friends to refrain from mentioning the strange disappearance in her presence.

When the Sleeping Naiad of Margollus was hung, critical London paused in wonder-struck admiration. Great crowds gathered about the canvas and gazed, and the story of its greatness passed from tongue to tongue.

One day, at an early hour, before the salon had received its daily crush of visitors, Margollus paused before his own picture. Hearing a footstep behind him he turned and saw Alfretti approaching.

"It is my first view," said the latter, turning his eyes toward the painting.

The next instant an intense whiteness settled upon the count's face, his lips quivered and a labored breath surged up from his breast. His eyes sought those of Margollus, and the hypnotic fire that leaped to meet his gaze told the story of the countess' trance.

Menominee—Mrs. Belle Aken Duval of Menominee, is having a new experience in her matrimonial ventures. Her later husband, Ell A. Duval, is suing her for divorce, alleging desertion. They were married on Feb. 25, 1901, and Duval alleges that she left him on Dec. 12, 1903. She is now making her home at San Francisio, Cal., while her husband resides at Salt Lake City. Mrs. Duval is the niece of Samuel M. Stephenson. Several years ago she took part in an amateur theatrical performance at Menominee, which an actor named Joe Willard directed. Miss Aiken and the actor became enamored of each other and eloped to Chicago, where they were found occupying an apartment in the Palace hotel. Miss Alken had married the actor, but she was taken back home. It is said that later Willard received a considerable sum of money for giving up his wife and permitting her to get a divorce. When a few years later "Kidnaped" was booked in Menominee the performance was canceled, it is alleged, because Willard was a member of the company. Duval married the divorced wife soon after her first escapade.

Sault Ste. Marie—River conditions at the Soo the past week have been the means of arousing deep interest in the public mind regarding the unusual atmospheric phenomena experienced. The latest theory regarding the cause of the tidal wave that broke a section of the coffer dam on the rapids where McArthur Brothers are at work on the preliminary plans for the new powerhouse, is that the proximity of the earth to the planet Mars caused the unusual action of the water. It is known that the earth and Mars are nearer together than they have been for the past forty years. It is also claimed that when the same thing took place forty years ago, the water in the river suddenly fell in the same manner and for a brief time during the day it was possible to walk across the rapids on the stones that cover the bottom.

Mackinac—Register of Deeds John R. McLeod of Mackinac county, celebrated his eightieth birthday a few days ago. He was presented with a handsome gold-headed cane.

Quinnesec—J. H. McKenna of Quinnesec received $50 last week from the Wabash railroad company for injuries received in a wreck last October while en route from St. Louis, Mo.

Escanaba—Michael Shay has been arrested at Escanaba, charged with violation of the liquor law by selling liquor to minors. It is claimed that two fourteen-year-old boys became badly intoxicated on liquor furnished them by Shay.

Manistique—Frank Jachor, who for over eighteen years has patrolled Manistique streets, has been reappointed to serve another year.

HEAD CRUSHED BENEATH ROLLER

With his head crushed beneath a heavy two ton roller, Herman Utick was picked up in front of the Northland Country club, shortly after noon today.

Utick was employed by the club, as is drawn by a team of horses, with the used ti leveling off the greens for the approaching tournament. The roller is driven by a team of horses, with the driver sitting on a narrow seat on the front of the roller.

Utick was driving the roller across the tracks this afternoon having completed his work on one part of the of the grounds, when he was jolted from his seat and thrown to the ground, his head falling beneath the roller. Just how the accident happened is not known. It was witnessed by Dr. C. F. McComb, and the motorman of a Lakeside car, which had stopped about 200 feet away to wait until the roller had crossed the tracks.

Coroner McCuen questioned both of the witnesses, and they stated that they could not tell just how the man came to fall, but that he was just crossing the tracks when he appeared to be shaken from his seat. The roller jolted over the track just as the man fell, and descended upon his head, killing him instantly.

"The only possible explanation is that the jar of the roller striking the tracks shook him from his seat. The roller did not descend with its entire weight upon the man's head, but a sufficient portion of the wheel came in contact with it, to fracture the skull, break the jaw bone in several places, and disfigure the features.

The motorman was horrified at the sight, and hurried to the scene, followed by the conductor and several of the passengers. The roller was removed, but the man was already dead, and he was taken into the grounds of the country club, while Coroner McCuen was summoned.

The body was removed to Durkan & Crawford's morgue this afternoon, where it now lies awaiting the funeral arrangements.

Dr. McCuen stated this afternoon that no inquest would be held, as he had little doubt but that the affair was an accident.

"It was a very peculiar occurrence, however," he said. "It is difficult to see just how the man came to fall from his seat in the way he did."

ROYALTY ATTENDS ASCOT RACES

London, June 20.—The king and queen, the prince of Wales and most of the leaders of society, attended the Ascot races today. The royal procession with the house party at Windsor castle, consisted of eight carriages. The course was reached in a drizzling rain, but an immense crowd gathere to witness the events. Ambassador Reid and staff of the American embassy went from London to Ascot in automobiles.

The gold vase (valued at 200 sovereigns) given by King Edward with 400 sovereigns in specie to the winner, two miles, was again carried off by Bachelor's Button, last year's winner of this event, ridden by Maher, the American jockey. Mark Time was second and Hammerkop third. Ten horses ran.

DIRECT BY CABLE

President Roosevelt and Kaiser Carried on Correspondence.

Precedent Broken By President In Move For Peace.

Chicago, June 20.—Walter Wellman says in a New York special to the Record-Herald: An astonishing bit of gossip concerning the methods which President Roosevelt has employed in carrying on his negotiations for peace between Russia and Japon was brought over from Washington today by a member of the diplomatic corps.

Mr. Roosevelt has once more given evidence that he is a president who makes his own precedents. He has done something which probably no former occupant of the White House ever did. He has carried on a direct personal correspondence by cable with the head of another nation.

Emperor William is the sovereign with whom President Roosevelt has had the telegraphic correspondence. In fact when the world speaks of the seemingly successful efforts of President Roosevelt to bring the warring powers into direct negotiations, it should speak of the efforts of the president and the kaiser. For now it is indisputable that Emperor William has played a very important part in the peace preliminaries. Mr. Roosevelt has taken the lead, but the kaiser has been his right-hand man from the first. If peace be declared—of which there is yet no assurance—the German emperor should be given his fair share of credit.

For some time it has been known that the president and the kaiser were working together for peace. But until now it had been generally supposed their communications were passed through the regular diplomatic channels by the hand of Ambassador von Sternberg, the kaiser's envoy in Washington, or through the state department and the American ambassador in Berlin.

In point of fact the president and the German emperor have communicated direct. They have exchanged a large number of telegrams in regard to the peace negotiations. The president's messages to the kaiser have been signed by himself, "Theodore Roosevelt," and the replies of the emperor have borne his personal signature.

These cables were transmitted without the assistance or the knowledge of the state department or the German foreign office. In other words, the head of the American government and the ruler of the German empire wishing to communicate each with the other on matters of the utmost importance did so by ignoring all precedents and cutting all the red tape. They took no chances of leakings. They did just as two business men might do. The only precaution they exercised was to use a cipher, and for the translations from the code only one confidential man was needed at each end of the line.

Probably this is the first time an American president has ever carried on a personal telegraphic correspondence with the head of a foreign government. But what are precedents between friends like the president and the kaiser?

I am told that the first message in this extraordinary series of cable conversations was sent by President Roosevelt. A few days after the battle of the Sea of Japan Mr. Roosevelt decided to try his luck again at peacemaking. The first thing he did was to call on the kaiser. He sent a personal message, telling Emperor William what he proposed to do, and asking that sovereign's assistance. That night he had a reply from the kaiser promising every aid in his power. If there was a long-distance telephone between Washington and Berlin there is no doubt that the president would have used it and called up the kaiser and talked with him in German.

From that day forward the American president and the German emperor were in close telegraphic touch. When the president thought the time was at hand he gave his side partner in Berlin a tip and the kaiser brought influence to bear upon the czar. Between them they managed to make at least a superficial success of the business. They induced the czar to consent to a conference with Japan. Doubtless there will be no little srugrise in various European capitals when they learn how intimately associated the president and the kaiser have been during the the past few weeks.

Diplomats the world over know that for some months the kaiser has been playing strongly and persistently for the friendship of the United States. He is now without a strong ally, and he feels that he needs one. But the ruler of diplomat who concludes that this episode of the cablegrams marks the formation of a German-American alliance will be very much mistaken. President Roosevelt makes no alliance witsh anybody. But he is ever keen to carry his point. And the kaiser has helped materially in this difficult peace affair.

Inside information from Washington is pessimistic as to peace. Last week President Roosevelt was working like a beaver to secure an armistice. Up to Friday he had not succeeded, and the Jans were declaring that they did not have any confidence in Russia's good faith. They vowtd they were ready to make peace on fair terms, but that they were not going to pull off the dogs of war on the chance that Russia might be sincere. The Japanese told President Roosevelt that, while they would do everything they could to help him bring about a treaty of peace, meanwhile they intended to smash the army of Gen. Linevitch and isolate and invest Vladivostok. The Japanese tell President Roosevelt they have the Russian army and Vladivostok at their mercy.

President Roosevelt sent a special messenger to Secretary Hay with a letter telling Mr. Hay that he could do just as he liked about returning at once to Washington: that while, of course, he would be warmly welcomed, if Mr. Hay felt he needed more rest he should by all means take it. The president's letter was glowing with the warmth of affection which he feels toward Mr. Hay.

In his reply Mr. Hay, the foremost of living diplomats, paid President Roosevelt perhaps the finest compliment he ever received. Mr. Hay's telegram read as follows: "I do not see what need you have for a secretary of state."

EXPLAINS DELAY

Manager Warren Tells Why Mr. Lowry Has Been Silent.

Has Been Ill and He So Reported to City Attorney.

Since the action of the city council in deciding to throw down the gauntlet to the street railway company, there has been more or less curiosity expressed as to what steps the company is now likely to pursue in view of the fact that the city attorney is instructed to begin legal proceedings at once.

Herbert Warren, general manager of the street railway company, was asked this morning what steps the company would probably take, but he declined to give any intimation as to what it would do. He expressed, however, some surprise that the council should act as it did in view of the fact, so Mr. Warren claimed, that the city attorney had been notified Mr. Lowry would take up the matters in question the first of the week.

Mr. Warren said:

"Upon the day when the two weeks within which Mr. Lowry stated he would give his answer expired, I told the city attorney that Mr. Lowry had been unexpectedly and unavoidably detained in the East, which would result in a delay of about a week in his taking up the matters in question and giving his answer.

"Last Saturday morning I had a long distance telephone conversation with Mr. Lowry and he told me that he had been detained several days in New York by illness and had just reached Minneapolis that morning and was not feeling well, but that he expected to be able to come to Duluth the first of this week. On the same day and within a few hours after this conversation, or as soon as I could reach the city attorney, I reported fully to him.

"I have just been talking over the telephone with Mr. Goodrich and he tells me that Mr. Lowry is now confined to his house, but that if he is not able to come up to Duluth in the course of a few days he, Mr. Goodrich, will come up without him.

"While it is true that Mr. Lowry's answer was due a week ago last Wednesday, it has not been wilfully or carelessly delayed, the delay having been due first to unforeseen business connections and then to illness.

"If the city officials desire to break off friendly negotiations on account of this unfortunate delay and begin legal proceedings, it will have to be as they wish, though we are not seeking legal contests and would much prefer to have all matters adjusted my amicable negotiations."

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

Reassembles With Mr. Lowther, New Speaker Presiding.

London, June 20.—The house of commons reassembled today after the Whitsuntide holidays and the new speaker, Mr. Lowther, was installed after a brief ceremony in the house of lords, at which the royal approval of Mr. Lowther's appointment was announced. The opposition immediately thereafter bombarded the government with questions about the army stores scandal and Premier Balfour announced that the government had placed the papers connected with the case in the hands of the director of public prosecutions. The latter, however, considered that the papers did not reveal any ground for criminal prosecution. The censured officers had been relieved from their duties. Mr. Balfour added that he proposed to appoint a select committee of the house of commons to deal with the matter.

Premier Balfour replying to a question in the house of commons today said correspondence with the Russian government was proceeding in regard to the sinking of the British steamer St. Kilda. The government took a very serious view of the matter because it had received the most specific assurances that no such action would again be taken.

IN FAVOR OF LOOMIS

Will Be the Decision In the Bowen-Loomis Case.

Charges Held to Be Groundless — Bowen Will Be Fined.

Washington, June 20.—It can be stated on authority that the Loomis-Bowen case not only has been settled finally, so far as the administration is concerned, but settled in favor of Mr. Loomis. The charges against Mr. Loomis, for which Minister Bowen practically stood are declared to be without sufficient foundation, in fact, to be worthy of further consideration. Secretary Taft's report to the president, which probably will be made public later today, will show this. Some criticism of Mr. Loomis was made at the meeting of the cabinet today, but it was not of a nature to reflect in any way on his integrity.

The charges against Mr. Loomis are discussed fully in the report of Secretary Taft, but the report contains no recommendation as to Minister Bowen. The understanding between the president and Secretary Taft was that the secretary should inquire into the charges against Mr. Loomis, and that, in the end, the president himself would dispose of the case so far as relates to Mr. Bowen.

Mr. Bowen will be arraigned for insubordination, criticised for his action in the pending case, and, finally, dropped from the diplomatic service of the country. It is expected that President Roosevelt will issue a statement covering the case completely.

Minister Herbert Bowen was at the White House today in connection with the Loomis-Bowen case. He saw the president for a brief time, but his principal mission was to talk over the case with Secretary Taft, who has had charge of it since its inception. The secretary was late in arriving at the cabinet meeting, but after he reached the executive office he talked over the matter with them.

Secretary Taft has made his report on the case to the president and it is the expectation of the president, to issue a statement concerning it. As Mr. Bowen left the White House he admitted, in response to inquiries that he was aware of the purport of the report, but said he was not at liberty to disclose it. Asked if the report was favorable or unfavorable to him, Minister Bowen replied that the inquiry which had been conducted by Secretary Taft had little bearing on him personally as the investigation had to do with charges against Secretary Loomis.

"President Roosevelt requested Secretary Taft," he said, "to inquire into the charges brought against Mr. Loomis and to submit a report on the matter to him. That he has done, but he had made no recommendation affecting me. As Secretary Taft has told me, there is no further need of my presence here.

PRESIDENT GOES NORTH

Will Make Several Commencement Addresses In Massachusetts.

Washington, June 20.—President Roosevelt will leave Washington at 9 o'clock tonight for Massachusetts, to attend, tomorrow and Thursday, the commencement exercises of Clark university, at Worcester, and of Williams college at Williamstown. He will travel via the Pennsylvania & New York, New Haven & Hartford railroads. The president will be accompanied by Secretary Loeb, Dr. E. M. Rixey, surgeon of the navy; M. A. Latta, his personal stenographer, two secret service officers, and representatives of the press. The presidential party will arrive at Worcester at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. Soon afterwards the president will be escorted to Clark university when the commencement exercises will be held. He will deliver the principal address of the occasion. He also expects to visit Holy Cross college, at Worcester, and probably will deliver a brief address theer. Early in the afternoon the party will proceed to Williamstown, where the president will be the guest of President Hopkins of Williams college. At the commencement exercises on Thursday, President Roosevelt will receive the degree of doctor of laws, and deliver an address. Afterward he will make an address to the general public. Early in the afternoon of Thursday the president and his party will leave Williamstown for Washington, being scheduled to arrive here before breakfast time Friday morning.

ST. PAUL MAN FOOLED

Washington, June 20.—A vigorous protest has been filed against the Panama canal commission by several persons who accepted positions on request of the commission, went to Panama and found that they had been misled, misinformed and in fact buncoed.

A case in point is that of W. E. Hall, formerly a bank clerk in St. Paul at a good salary. Last March he received an offer from the Panama commission of the position of file clerk at Colon. Hall declined the offer at first, but on being informed that it was a civil service position and that he had been certified from an eligible list, he concluded to accept.

He had previously taken an examination for expert bookkeeper and accountant. On his arrival in Panama to assume his duties, he was informed that the superintendent there wanted only an expert stenographer and typewriter for file clerk and that he was not eligible. He demurred in vain, and being short of funds accepted a place with a much less salary than that of file clerk.

The old Panama canal commission having dissolved, Hall has appealed his case to the civil service commission. This distinguished body certified Hall's name to the Panama commission and admits that an error and wrong has been done, although no way is pointed out to rectify it.

West Duluth

The entertainment given last evening at Great Eastern hall by the W. C. T. U. committee in charge of the proposed branch Y. M. C. A. at West Duluth was not as well attended as was hoped for. It was desired to raise $100 to pay off the balance of the debt against the lot purchased by the ladies. About half this amount was raised.

The entertainment was really very good. General Secretary Bevis of the Y. M. C. A. gave an illustrated address, showing the growth and progress of the Y. M. C. A., and Frank A. Maxwell, physical director, gave an address on his branch of the work. He introduced two gymnasium classes to show what can be done by physical exercise.

The classes performed in first-class style and gave a very entertaining exhibition of gymnasium work. Musical and literary numbers were in the program also, among those taking part being Miss Effie Brotherton, Miss Alice Sjoslius, Miss Leila Sparks, P. Davis, Miss Ida Prytz, Roy Prytz and the Boys' Y. M. C. A. orchestra.

Held Up at West End.

Henry Hendrickson, who is employed at the plant of the National Iron company, was held up at Superior street and Twenty-eighth avenue west, about 1 o'clock this morning, and relieved of $7, all he had on him. Three men did the job. Hendrickson took the last car from Duluth running to the barn, and started to walk from Twenty-sixth avenue west to West Duluth. At Twenty-eighth avenue he was stopped and told to deliver the goods. He says he could not identify the men, he believes.

JENSEN-POUPORE.

The wedding of William H. Poupore of Kelliher, Minn., to Miss Clara Jensen of Duluth, took place this morning at 10:30 at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. P. A. Lund, 625 North Fifty-eighth avenue west. Rev. W. J. Lowrie officiated.

Mr. Poupore is a logging contractor of Kelliher and is well known throughout the northern part of the state. Miss Jensen was a teacher in the Duluth schools for a number of years. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Poupore will go to Kelliher to reside.

AFTER THE FRANCHISE.

In a current number of the Metropolis, a paper published in Jacksonville, Fla., it is announced that J. K. Lawrence of Philadelphia and W. A. Riddle of Duluth are seeking a franchise for an electric line from Jacksonville to St. Augustine, along the Diego beach. It is evidently considered down in that country that the two men are after the matter strongly and mean business. Mr. Riddle formerly kept a store at Proctorknott and is well known here.

MARKED "BACKWARD"

For Purpose of Giving Teachers Private Tutoring.

New York, June 20.—Remarkable charges that several teachers in the Wadleigh high school, West One Hundred and Fourteenth street, have used their positions to increase their incomes through unnecessary private tutoring, are being formulated, according to the World. Parents of some of the girl students assert that several hundred dollars a week have been exacted in fees at the rate of $2 an hour, it being intimated that the student's markings were purposely tampered with, and that they were purposely marked "Backward" when they are actually proficient.

The school is a public institution.

SCHEDULE IS NOW ARRANGED

Minnesota Football Team to Play All Games at Home.

Minneapolis, June 20.—Minnesota's football schedule for 1905 is practically complete. The arrangements for the Lawrence game were completed last week and the only work on the schedule remaining is the awarding of dates to the smaller colleges in the practice games. One feature of the season which will appeal to every football rooter in Minnesota is that each and every game is to be payed in Minnesota. Following is the schedule:

September 23—St. Paul Central and Minneapolis Central.
September 27—Open*
September 30—Open*
October 4—Open*
October 7—North Dakota.
October 14—Ames.
October 21—Iowa.
October 28—Lawrence.
November 4—Wisconsin.
November 11—Open*
November 18—Nebraska.
November 25—Northwestern.

This year Minnesota was to have played Wisconsin in Madison, but Dr. H. L. Williams, coach of the team, proposed to the badgers that the game should be played in Minneapolis where a big crowd would be a certainty. The return of Phil King to Wisconsin has put new life into the football circles at Camp Randall and a notable struggle is expected when the gophers meet Kink's men.

Another game around which great interest centers is that with Nebraska. The cornhuskers are getting ready for the gophers and will, this year, start a summer camp on the Platte about twenty miles from Lincoln. Coach Booth loses but one of his star players, Bender, and the men from the windblown district always fight like demons against Minnesota. Nebraska comes two weeks after Wisconsin and will be one of the biggest games of the year. Michigan has taken on Nebraska this year and as Michigan plays Wisconsin as well these two games will be used for comparative purposes between the two big teams of the West. Northwestern comes to Northrop field this year, playing the Thanksgiving game. Northwestern is due for a tremendous licking this season, but as the purple will be stronger this year than last, it will be a contract to give them their deserts.

The work in which the gophers will have to watch the corners begins Oct. 14, with the coming of Ames. Iowa has been pulling up in form in recent years, after a temporary lapse, and last season gave the gophers a lot of trouble, although Minnesotans were "shot all to pieces" as a result of accidents. Lawrence is held safe, although it will be a football game.

The schedule is well arranged, the only rub coming in the short time between Nebraska and Northwestern. The schedule is a heavy one as it calls for four hard games. Iowa, Nebraska, Northwestern and Wisconsin are all formidable opponents and if Minnesota followed the Eastern rule and arranged but two stiff games for the season there would be little to fear. As it is the stiff games come within five weeks. The schedule promises a splendid football season.

IT BEGINS WELL

Ninety-Four In Attendance at Summer School on Opening.

Number Is Expected to Be Soon Largely Increased.

The summer training school for the teachers of St. Louis county opened this morning at the Duluth state normal school and the number of students registered up to noon today gives promise of a larger attendance than in former years. This is the second year that the school has been held at the normal and under its auspices.

The plans for the accommodation of the teacher students have been carefully made, and it is thought that the school this year will be even more helpful than in former years. President E. W. Bohannan will be the conductor and Messrs. L. W. Kline, H. C. Strong, J. W. Hubbard, Herbert Blair, Max Weber and Mrs. Irene M. Sinclair and Miss Mason of the regular normal faculty will be among the teachers of the school, and Miss Ellen M. Pendergast will have charge of mathematics and grammar. During the last three weeks of the term S. L. Heeter, by special arrangement with the state superintendent, will lecture on organization and management of rural schools.

The program is so arranged that students may take work for normal credits or a review of the common branches. A great percentage of those registered by noon have entered to work for normal credits, and it is a matter of gratification to the conductor. It is expected that many of this year's graduates of the local high school will enter at the close of the school term, and others from the ranges are expected by tomorrow.

The regular study program will be commenced tomorrow and the session will continue for one month. Those registered are:

Myrtle Smythe, Alberta Mallmann, Lillie Johnson, Sadie Burton, Catherine B. McCurdy, Maude P. Miller, C. H. Graham, Elle M. Butters, Eliza Remfry, Anna C. Johnson, Jennie R. Lutture, Eda Janzig, Gina Jensen, Georgia Knox, Adeline V. Wohlin, Belle M. Munro, Mary Sullivan, Bessie Louise Turnbull, Fannis Mendelson, Gertrude M. Fogarty, Emma Brown, Margaret Grogan, Elizabeth Keir, Albert Porter, Curtis Pillsbury, Eva Worden, Genevieve E. Wallace, Agnes E. Lavallee, Catherine M. Porter, May E. Marshall, Evelyn MacIntyre, Nina Burbank, Leonora J. Ulsrud, Sadie Johnson, Gertrude Lawlor, Grayce Ward, Helena M. Fitzgerald, Angela Fitzgerald, Minnie E. Quigley, Elizabeth Widell, Beatrice Greene, Anna T. Hanson, Julia Haber, Susan M. Thompson, Louise Lyons, Margaret Lutes, Helen M. Haig, Charlotte Hughes, Katheryn Hoyer, Elsie Swendson, Hazel Hopkins, Mildred Wiltse, Edith Bell, Cora D. Schaffer, Mabel E. Wallace, Mary F. Kennedy, Maude G. Snyder, St. Louis Park; Persis Day, River Falls, Wis.; Sophy East, Hermantown; Anna B. Lyngstad, Burnett, Minn.

Ninety-five had been registered by noon and it is expected that the attendance will exceed the 150 of last year.

A Fine Property.

J. D. Zien of this city is in receipt of a letter from the Standard Lead and Zinc Smelting and Mining company, of which he is president, stating that one shaft alone, the "Sally Waters," is producing $400 worth of ore a day, at an expense of running the mill of only $60 for day and night. Other shafts are making a similar showing. The company is capitalized at $1,000,000, and has evidently a very fine property, offering a splendid opportunity to investors. The main offices are at Milwaukee and the mines at Dodgeville, Hazel Green and Benton, Wis.

Ready For the Sale!

The deed is done. The transfer is made. After being closed up for ten long days, the "Great Eastern" store will re-open tomorrow,

Wednesday Morning, at 10 o'clock, flying the "Columbia" pennant. This morning the legal transfer of the store and its belongings from Mr. M. S. Burrows to The Columbia Clothing Company was finally accomplished and the new proprietors are now in the saddle. The first task before us is to get rid of the "Burrows" labels without removing them from the garments and articles to which they are attached. Sailing into the position of "leading clothiers" of Duluth in such an easy way, we can afford to do a few things that might seem impossible in the regular course of merchandising. We propose that one year from now not one article with the old "Burrows" label shall be left on these premises, and we will publish a few prices today that will start the job of removing them by a thousand willing hands.

The reductions announced in this opening advertisement, which had to be prepared in a great hurry, represents only a portion of the sweeping price cuts from Burrows' prices made in every department.

AN OLD-TIME DISH.

In these days of education to the use of the whole of the wheat it is interesting to turn back the pages of time and see what our ancesters did. One of the most nourishing dishes and one of the most common, perhaps, a century or so ago, was known as "Frumenty." It is seldom, if ever, seen now, but Hutchison, the great English food authority, states that it was very nourishing and wholesome. It was prepared by soaking the kernel of wheat in water until it swelled up and burst and then boiled in milk with the additon of sugar and salt.

That the whole of the wheat is of high value in producing bone, blood, muscle and nerve force is proven both by chemical analysis and actual physiological experiment. Only a few years ago, fortified by exhaustive recearch and experiment by learned men of science, a progressive Chicago man published and circulated among the farmers of the country a book telling them of the great strength-producing qualities of wheat when fed to horses and its economy as "feed," a mere handful being sufficient to sustain a horse at hard work half a day.

In training quarters for college athletes whole wheat is recognized as of great value. Robert Utterbach, manager of the Drake University Athletic association, in speaking of this said: "I take pleasure in endorsing Malta-Vita, which we used with first-class results at our football training table. In nutrition and consistency we found Malta-Vita to be the best food for our use."

That is because Malta-Vita is the whole of the wheat and rich in proteids, which Hutchison says can alone build up and repair tissue. Malta-Vita is an extended and elaborated process of the old way of making "Frumenty." The whole wheat grain is cleaned of its husk, then boiled in water, cooked in steam to gelatinize the starch, then allowed to stand in coolers (where it is carefully watched by an expert) just long enough to allow the gelatinized starch cells to break down, then it is treated with barley malt instead of sugar, as the barley malt and the gelatinized starch make "maltose" or malt sugr—highly nutritious and most easily digested. Thus Malta-Vita is scientifically prepared to meet the requirements of the trained athlete and the convalescent. To each it gives strength, blood, bone and muscle and in either's stomach it is ready to be taken up by the blood without taxing the digestive ferments. Malta-Vita is now 10 cents per package, the same big package you used to buy for 15 cents.

LIVELY ON THE IRON RANGES

State Mine Inspector Says It Will Be Banner Year.

St. Paul, June 20.—An increase of about fifty per cent in the production of iron ore on the ranges in Northern Minnesota, making the total output this year from 20,000,000 to 21,000,000 tons, is estimated by F. A. Wilder, state mine inspector, who returned yesterday from an inspection of the mines.

It is predicted that this increase will appear at the state mines and at the mines owned by private parties. The state last year shipped about 212,000 tons and it is estimated that the shipments this year will exceed 300,000. The income received by the state from its mines last year was $66,000, and this year it will be about $100,000. The total output of the mines last year was between 13,000,000 and 14,000,000 tons.

The state has five mines in operation, the Grant, Yates, Oliver, Frantz and Poole. All of them are shipping increased quantities each month. The shipments a week before last amounted to 90,000 tons.

"This promises to be the banner year for the mining industry in Northeastern Minnesota," said Mr. Wilder. "There is activity in every line. The mines are crowded to their utmost capacity. New railroads are being built and business is booming generally. The Duluth, Missabe & Northern is double tracking its line along the range.

"It seems that all trace of the labor difficulties in the early spring have disappeared. The employes as far as can be seen are contented. They are getting good wages, and are not complaining of their condition."

JAMES J. HILL

After Control of British Columbia Copper Output.

St. Paul, June 20.—It is stated on good authority that James J. Hill is negotiating for the control of two-thirds of the copper output of British Columbia. A representative of a Western railroad in St. Paul says that the British Copper company has decided to double its capital stock, and that the Hill interests have an option on 40 per cent of the stock as increased.

The present capital is $200,000 in $5 shares, which are selling at $7.75. The capacity of the smelter at Greenwood, B. C., is 700 to 800 tons a day. The combined output of this company and the Granby Mining company is 21,000,000 tons, two-thirds of the total copper output last year.

LONG TERM EXPECTED.

MAY DO AWAY WITH SALOON LUNCHES

An Ordinance Introduced Which Seals Fate of the Handout.

City Attorney Directed to Proceed Against Traction Company.

The council last evening:

Gave first hearing to ordinance abolishing free lunches in saloons.

Directed city attorney to proceed against street railway.

Made arrangements for issuance of $295,000 refunding bonds.

Received notice of $1,500 damage suit against city.

Again turned down Joe Sheehy's application for employment license.

'Tis true, 'tis pity. Pity is, 'tis true.

The days of the free lunch grabber are numbered. No more shall he be able to purchase a nickel's worth of beer and consume 10 cents' worth of eatables. His accustomed haunts shall know him no more, and no longer will the trusty barkeep be forced to cultivate the stony stare, and the icy mitt with which to greet the searchers after handouts.

No more delicious hot weinerwursts, or plates of beans, or slices of juicy roast beef will be dished out with a glass of beer, but the thirsty devotee of Bacchus will have to content himself with a plain cracker, or with a curly, salted pretzel. Some of the higher toned booze bazaars may even hand out a pickle or an olive to a discriminating patron, but the brew will in future trickle down the thirsty throats of Duluth booze wrestlers unaccompanied by any of the nourishing viands which have hitherto sped it on its way.

Such will be the decree which will go forth into the land, if the amended ordinance introduced by Alderman McEwen at the council meeting last evening carries. The ordinance provides a penalty for the serving of free lunch, other than cheese or crackers, with any intoxicating liquors, and no dishes containing food are allowed in the saloon, with the exception of a cracker bowl not to exceed twelve inches by twelve.

Mingled with the mirth aroused in same of the aldermen, there was just a tinge of sadness, such as is caused when a dear friend departs from the haunts that have known him. Mayhap this sadness was a reflection from the faces of some of the spectators who occupied the rear seats, and mayhap it was caused by the cold, legal wording of Alderman "Billy's" ordinance, that sounded the deathknell of the hand-out.

Alderman Moore bore up bravely under the strain, and showed a cheerful countenance to the world, content in the knowledge that fewer free lunches meant less booze consumed.

The ordinance was laid over a week for discussion.

• • •

Without discussion or comment, the council passed a resolution directing the city attorney to immediately begin a suit to enforce all demands made by the city during the last year, that he believes can be enforced through the courts, and to compel the street car company to live up to its franchise in every way.

In spite of Mr. Lowry's promise made at the mass meeting held in May, that he would give his answer to the demands within two weeks, no word has yet been received, although nearly four weeks have elapsed since the promise was given.

If the terms of the franchise are enforced, it will mean that the company will be compelled to place large cars on all of its lines, pay a tax on each car operated under the old West Duluth franchise, and sprinkle the streets between its tracks.

Whether or not it can be compelled to make extensions is doubtful.

The action of the council was taken at the recommendation of Mayor Cullum, made a week ago, in which he urged that the city abandon the compromise policy and adopt one of aggression.

In accordance with the recommendation of the mayor, the ordinance committee took up the question of the refunding bonds for the issue of $295,000 which will fall due in 1906.

The council, at the suggestion of the committee, appointed N. J. Upham & Co. agents for the city, to undertake the work of exchanging the new 4 per cent refunding bonds for the old 6 per cent water and light bonds. The only commission to be paid the agents is the difference in interest which may accrue to them by the transfer of the bonds previous to Feb. 1, at which time their appointment as agents expires.

• • •

The question of providing receptacles on the streets for rubbish, was again brought up under an ordinance which was introduced by Alderman McEwen. The ordinance grants to J. J. Desmond authority to place small steel receptacles not to exceed 20 to 24 inches in size, on the principal business corners in return for the privilege of using them for advertising purposes. The owner of the receptacles is to keep them at all times in a sanitary condition.

The ordinance was referred.

Notice was given by J. J. C. Davis of a damage suit against the city for $1,000 damages, and $50 expended in hospital bills and for medical services, as a result of the accident met with by his son Kenelm W. Davis, on May 16, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth avenues east.

The boy was riding along Superior street on an express wagon, when he ran off the sidewalk and down the steep grade into Chester creek, sustaining painful and serious injuries.

Joe Sheehy bobbed up again, making a new application for a license, which very nearly carried. He received eight votes in his favor and only five opposed him. He stated that he would apply next Monday night and get what he wanted, and it looks very much as if he would do as he says. Two of the aldermen who were absent last evening will doubtless vote for him, and if he can hold his eight votes received last evening, his license will be granted.

• • •

On a motion by Alderman Moore, the board of public works was directed to take measures to keep the gutters free of any obstructions which may be placed there by contractors, and to compel the contractors exercise more care in allowing the surface drainage water a free course.

• • •

The council invoked the a id of United States Senators Nelson and Clapp and Congressman Bede, to secure an appropriation to pay the cost of paving First street in front of the federal building, which would otherwise be charged up against the general fund of the city.

• • •

The council confirmed the contracts awarded by the board of public works to P. McDonnell for the resurfacing of London road, and to the Studebaker Wagon company for two new sprinklers.

• • •

An extension of time was granted the Northwestern Steam Boiler Works on its contract for the Lester river bridge, work on which has been delayed by the weather and inability to secure material.

• • •

The estimated cost of improving St. Croix avenue from Morse street to the government property at the canal, would be $1,912.50, according to the city engineer's figures.

• • •

The city engineer also made application for permission to purchase a horse, stating that a great saving of time would be effected by it. He stated that the expenditure could be made from the fund of his department under the last tax estimate.

• • •

The board of public works was directed to paint the Sixth avenue viaduct and the Tenth avenue bridge, in order to preserve them from action of rust.

LITTLE BUSINESS TALKS.

The quaint philosopher who advertised: "Lost—one rubber boot, will buy or sell," exemplified the American spirit of barter which finds its outlet in the "For Sale and Exchange" columns.

Don't creep when you may walk. Don't keep your business shackled by lack of capital while men with money to invest are reading the "Business Opportunity" ads. every day.

Gray hairs won't come ten years ahead of regular schedule if you solve your little worries in "the want ad. way."

If you have anything "worth while" to sell you can make your want advertising yield you a profit of a dollar a line for each insertion.

Read the wants tonight.

DROWNED IN RAINY RIVER

Fifteen-Year-Old Francis Sullivan Loses His Life.

Word was received in Duluth yesterday afternoon of the accidental drowning in Rainy river, near International Falls, of Francis W. Sullivan, the 15-year-old son of T. F. Sullivan, formerly a resident of this city.

The Sullivan boy with some companions was canoeing in deep water when his bark canoe capsized and attempts of his companions to save him were futile. The body was not recovered until twenty-four hours later.

The funeral was held from the schoolhouse at International Falls and was largely attended, the services being conducted by Rev. Father Brassard. The pall bearers were former friends of the young Sullivan. Interment was made at the Thompson farm.

McINTOSH STAYS DRY.

Crookston, Minn., June 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge William Watts of the Fourteenth judicial district, who some time ago held in the case of the McIntosh saloonkeepers versus the Village of McIntosh, that the reports of the election judges in towns and villages are supreme and non-appealable, has been sustained by the supreme court of the state. As a result license in McIntosh, whether the election was right or wrong and the count correct or not, must go, as the election judges prepared their report of the election in such a manner as to show that the returns upon their face had been against the license system.

The McIntosh election was a very close one, the dry element winning by but one or two votes and the action brought by the saloonkeepers, which sought to have the license system reinstalled, was based upon the alleged fact that mistakes had been made in the counting of the returns and that irregularities existed.

Construction Work Progresses

The construction work on the new county poorhouse, according to A. P. Cook, secretary of the poor board, is progressing very rapidly. There have been no delays on account of weather and the concrete construction has now reached to the top of the second floor. The new building is to have three floors. Although at the present rate of building it would seem that the new poorhouse would be completed by Aug. 1, it is not expected by the county poor board nor the contractors that it will be entirely completed for occupancy before the first part of next November. The portion of the building already up is said to present a pleasing appearance in addition to looking substantial.

DEMAND IS STEADY

Retail Lumber Concerns Have Had an Excellent Business.

Wholesalers Concerned More About Getting Supply Than Purchasers.

The local demand for lumber for building purposes is claimed by retail firms to have been much better during the three months that will close June 30 than for the same period in the past several years. The demand is characterized as general and in support of their statements the retailers point to the building statistics for May in the larger cities of the country, in which is shown a gain of twelve per cent over the record of May, 1904. That gain, they say, is not so great as shown in previous months of the year, but the figures are higher than for any previous month, with the exception of March. The gain for the first five months of the year over corresponding months of 1904 was about forty-one per cent.

So active a building movement means a considerable volume of lumber moving, a condition which is especially true in the inland lumber manufacturing points. It is not so true of the local wholesale market in the way of new sales, as with points like Cloquet and Minneapolis where the 1905 stock has not been sold so close up to the saws. The city building movement is good everywhere and from all quarters comes the demand for lumber.

The principal concern at this time, according to the view point of the manufacturers, is over the supply of lumber rather than over the ability of the holders to sell it. The sawing season has suffered so many interruptions, and wet weather has delayed seasoning, particularly at the harbor mills. Fortunately the wet weather has not been followd by very hot periods of weather and the lumber though delayed in seasoning has not been subjected to staining conditions.

Car deliveries of lumber continue very active. The fear of labor troubles at some of the largest market points, which for a time threatened to curtail the buying of lumber has practically subsided and the volume of lumber going forward by car trade to those markets is as large as ever. City retail yards are steady purchasers and the outlook with them is said to be very favorable.

Locally the stocks are badly broken on account of the early demand, and the market here is short of material. Low-grade boards are getting practically out of the market, and the supply of the upper-grade boards is pretty well bought up.

There is claimed to be only a fair supply of lath to meet a strong demand. A considerable stock of white pine lumber is being taken over by the sash and door factories, whose business at this time of the year is especially good.

There is no new feature relative to the lumber movement by lake. According to the local shippers the movement is just about normal and the boats are being sent here no faster than to easily take care of all that is ready to be moved. Timber from Red Cliff, Wis., is being brought to the head of the lakes to be used in the construction of the protection dike at Superior entry while the concrete pier is building.

Summer logging is now well under way at several Minnesota and Wisconsin points. Probably the largest operations are being carried on in Northern Wisconsin by the Edward Hines company. Where the land is high and dry the logging operations in the summer season can be carried on almost uninterruptedly. Plenty of rain in the last two weeks has thoroughly quenched the forest fires all over the Northern district.

The Stage

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—All next week, Pollard Lilliputian Opera company.

THE POLLARDS COMING.

Pollard's Lilliputian Opera company, one of the big attractions booked for the Lyceum, begins its engagement of six nights, commencing next Monday, when the popular success "The Belle of New York" will be presented by this clever aggregation in their inimitable manner. The Pollards are the most remarkable musical organization in the world. They have toured Australia, South Africa, India, New Zealand, China, Japan, England, the Philippines, the Hawaiian islands, the United States and other countries, a record which no other opera company has ever attained. The organization is composed of clever and talented juveniles who are professional in everything except size. Their performances are among the cleverest operatic offerings presented on the stage. These remarkable youngsters were schooled in Australia in an academy especially equipped to educate them for their operatic careers. From the many candidates for positions in the company, the management carefully selects those displaying the most aptitude and they are so thoroughly trained that their performances are phenomenal. In no respect can the youngsters be improved on in their interpretation of lines and their vocal work.

The repertoire to be given here is as follows: Monday and Tuesday nights, "The Belle of New York"; Wednesday matinee, "Pinafore"; Wednesday and Thursday nights, "A Runaway Girl"; Friday night, "The Geisha"; Saturday matinee and night, "The Gaiety Girl." Summer prices will be the rule.

AT THE METROPOLITAN.

The opening vaudeville performance for the week, at the Metropolitan Opera house, last evening, drew a large crowd. The numbers were all pleasing and entertaining and were received with every mark of satisfaction. The vaudeville stars this week are headed by Warnecke, magician and illusionist, whose work is certainly clever, puzzling, and of the highest order in every respect.

Arthur Jackson won favor in his illustrated songs, La Drew and La Zone made a hit as comedy sketch artists. Miss Jessie Green, who is called the superhuman wonder, gave a clever exhibition of her occult powers, and Woodford and Marlboro did a good stunt as society sketch artists. The entertainment concluded with some beautiful moving pictures of Faust and Marguerite. This program, subject to change, will continue for the rest of the week. Matinee daily at 3 o'clock. Evening performances at 8 and 9:30 o'clock.

AT THE BIJOU.

The Bijou presented a new bill yesterday and it was well received. The program includes the musical Bartletts, in a costume change and instrumental act, Eva Thatcher in character singing and monologue, Jennings and Jewell, German comedians and mimics, Prof. Willard McGrath hand balancer and athlete, L. O. Whittier in illustrated songs and the moving picture, "A Good Old Five-Cent Trolley Ride."

COPPER IS FIRMER

Copper not only continues to hold its price, but gets a little stronger. Foreigners are good buyers and domestic consumers are reported as buying also in good quantities. Walker says in his weekly letter:

"Copper is stronger. Lake is 15⅛ to 15¼ cents, and no electrolytic is now obtainable below 15.05 cents per pound. European customers are buying quite heavily for August and September delivery, and domestic consumers are supplying their needs for July and August. Producers are very confident that prices will be maintained and are making no effort to effect more distant future sales than consumers call for. It is again declared in trade circles that the domestic consumption of copper is actually incerasing from month to month.

"The heavy export movement continues. Shipments so far this month aggregate about 10,000 tons, and the prediction is made that the total will reach 20,000 tons. The quotation for 'best selected' copper has been working higher for some time past and is now up fl from the lowest reached, the present price being equivalent to 15.30 cents per pound. This provides a good margin of profit on copper purchased in this country for export.

"There is nothing in sight to warrant the belief that there will be any decrease in the demand for copper, either domestic or foreign, during the remainder of the year. At the present time copper is being consumed fully as fast as it is coming from the mines, notwithstanding that production is much heavier than ever before.

"The present extreme inactivity of the coppers is the natural outcome of the preceding period of narrowness. Coppers did not move far enough or fast enough to make trading in them attractive, and traders turned their attention to the New York market. They are being bought by investors and traders who realize that the coppers never sold before as low, with relation to their earnings, as they are at the present time. The buyers are satisfied that natural conditions will win out in the stock market this time as always in the past, that the present period of great prosperity, which the copper-producing companies are enjoying, will not be allowed to pass out without market recognition.

"The market is oversold. There is a good buying demand for every share of stock that is offered. It is a difficult matter to get coppers at the lowest quotations that are made from day to day. Apparently, someone is buying, either to cover shorts or in preparation for a big speculative movement on the long side. There is basis for the belief that the big bear speculator, who is doing all he can to scare small holders into selling their stock at current low prices, is quietly accumulating a long time and that after he gets all he wants he will first advance prices and then invite the public to buy. It is usually safe to follow bullish advices from big traders after the market has had a long decline, and bearish advices after a big advance, but at no other times.

"Watch the Utah Consolidated dividend, the current developments at the Allouez, Michigan, Mass, Franklin and St. Mary's properties, the monthly output of the Mohawk, Copper Range, Old Dominion and Shannon, and make careful note of the way the coppers move when they begin to emerge from their present rut of dullness. There are a lot of things that may happen any day now to start a strong advance."

VALUE OF TRIFLES.

Recently The Herald, based on an editorial advising people to have a bank account and suggesting that the only way to get one was to start, entertained quite a series of discussions from the people on how to get along on a small salary and save money. This question, always a hard one, was discussed from various standpoints, and it is to be hoped that some benefit grew out of it.

One point that was touched but lightly is a vital element in this discussion, and that is the danger of despising small things. Sayings like "take care of the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves" go in one ear and out the other. Everybody is seeking to "get rich quick," without the formality of accumulation by a slow but sure process; everybody is looking for a royal road to riches, and so intense is the hunt for that road that it is no wonder people sometimes forget to care whether or not the road they try leads through thickets of petty crime.

There is but one safe and sure road, and that is the old fashioned one of living always within the income, whatever it is. Difficult sometimes, it is true, but not impossible. Pennies make dollars, and a penny saved is a start toward a dollar. No fortune can be made without a start, and a start is a start, no matter how small it is. A cent is a much better start than a debt.

This involves close figuring. But it is close figuring that does the business even in the gigantic operations of today. If a contractor who hopes to make a fortune on a single contract will figure down to a cent or a fraction of a cent in making his bid, no housekeeper on a small income should be ashamed of figuring on a cent or two in making a deal to supply the table.

Despise not the day of small things, for "A penny saved is two-pence dear; a pin a day's a groat a year." The one who can appreciate the value of small things, and realize that it is of such as they that large things are made, while still refraining from being "penny wise and pound foolish," is the one that is going to get ahead and have something.

THE PRODUCERS.

A German industrial periodical has been busy getting up a table of figures that will be interesting to sociological speculators, because it gives the percentage of the population in fifteen of the world's principal countries engaged in "gainful activity." That means engaged in actual production of something or in operations attendant upon production. It does not include the doctor, the lawyer, the preacher, the editor, the duke, the criminal or the tramp, because they are producing nothing, sociologically speaking, but live upon the productions of others, though their functions may be infinitely more valuable or infinitely less valuable than those who are actual producers, depending upon what those functions are and how they perform them.

Here is the table:

Country.	Agriculture and forestry.	Manufactures and mining.	Commerce and transportation.	Total.
Germany	37.5	37.4	10.6	85.5
Austria	58.2	22.3	7.3	87.8
Hungary	58.6	12.6	3.3	74.5
Italy	59.4	24.5	7.4	91.3
Switzerland	37.4	40.7	10.7	88.8
France	44.3	32.6	9.4	86.3
Belgium	21.1	41.6	11.7	74.4
Netherlands	30.7	33.7	17.2	81.6
Denmark	48.0	24.9	11.8	84.7
Sweden	49.8	20.9	7.5	78.2
Norway	49.6	22.9	11.7	84.2
England and Wales	8.0	58.3	13.0	79.3
Scotland	12.0	60.4	12.4	84.8
Ireland	44.6	32.6	5.0	82.2
United States	35.9	24.1	16.3	76.3

These figures show the percentage of the total in each country. In the United States 35.9 per cent are engaged in agriculture and forestry, 24.1 per cent in manufactures and mining, 16.3 per cent in commerce and transportation, making 76.3 per cent of the total engaged in production, and leaving 23.7 per cent in the class of the doctor, the tramp and the capitalist, living off the fruits of the industry of others. In agriculture and forestry, Italy leads, and this country is eleventh in the total of fifteen. In manufactures and mining Scotland is first, and the United States is again eleventh. In commerce and transportation, however, this country leads. In the total percentage of persons engaged in gainful activity Italy is first, and this country is thirteenth, only two other countries, Belgium and Hungary, having a smaller percentage of producers in their population.

What this means depends altogether upon the temperament and training of the interpreter. There are folks that will tell you that it means that the United States is hampered by a large percentage of blood suckers that produce nothing, but fatten on the production of others, wresting from them through capitalistic schemes their due share of the profits of their labors. There are people that will tell an entirely different story about it. Anyway, there are the figures, to be interpreted to each man's taste.

THE DEGREE OF GUILT.

When a well-connected scoundrel is brought to the bar of justice, and the court is about to impose sentence upon him for his crime, it is a very common thing to hear arguments made for clemency on account of the criminal's high position, his good social connections, and his excellent bringing up.

It is doubtful if people who make such arguments as this realize fully what a monstrous joke they are perpetrating. Boiled down to its final elements, their plea amounts to this: That because of his high standing, his position was such that he was not impelled to his crime by those primal impulses, want, poverty, suffering; that by reason of good family influences and whatsome associations during life, he knew better than to commit the crime for which he is face to face with punishment.

Yet in many cases these ridiculous arguments have been availing, and from the same courtroom a well-connected man has gone to a trifling punishment for a large peculation; while a man who has breathed only in an atmosphere of crime and poverty, for an infinitely smaller offense, has gone to suffer a heavy punishment.

Of course it is not justice. It is worse than injustice, because it breeds in the minds of those who witness it a contempt for courts and law. Punishment for crime should not, of course, be made in proportion to the amount stolen, but in proportion to the culpability of the criminal. In the question of culpability the arguments of the well-connected thief's friends ought to work just opposite to the way in which they are intended to work. The man who did not need to and who should have known better is more worthy of punishment than the man impelled by hunger and the man who knows nothing else. Both should be punished, for the good of society, but justice should attend the division of punishment between them.

A FINANCIAL LEAK.

A Washington telegram states that the long-announced investigation of the government printing office, which was to have been begun last week, will not be started now until fall. A committee appointed for that purpose by congress has been unable to get together, hence the delay in the investigation.

This is unfortunate, because this committee should have had ready for the opening of congress a series of bills that would have resulted in a vast decrease in the government's printing expenses. Everybody that knows anything at all about the matter knows that the government is annually throwing away large sums of money through the government printing office. Yet simply because nobody takes in hand the movement to cut off useless expenses, they continue. Simply because this committee has failed to obey orders and start its investigations, these wastes will go on for another indefinite period.

The printing of public documents as laid down by law now involves the printing and binding and stowing away somewhere of thousands of documents nobody wants or ever will want. There is neither rhyme nor reason in the manner in which the government's publication are issued. There are not enough of some that are valuable and entirely too many of others that are valueless.

If a great leak like this could be stopped it might do away with the necessity of raising the tariff on something that people have to eat or wear, which is the favorite remedy of statesmen.

The Weather.

Now will you be good? Isn't this just what you have been looking for? This is the sort of weather that makes most people forgive all the bad weather that has passed, and even forget that there may ever be bad weather again, which is the proper and truly philosophical way to look at it. This morning a southerly wind brought summer back again in all its glory and with none of its drawbacks. Though plenty warm enough for comfort, people could still look with pitying horror upon those stricken communities elsewhere, where heat prostrations are followed by calamitous storms and floods.

Duluth's maximum temperature yesterday was 74 degrees, which is a very decent temperature indeed compared with the figures in other places, where something over 90 seemed to be more in fashion. This morning things were calmer everywhere. There were no decided disturbances in the weather map. A very moderate depression overlies the extreme Southwest, and throughout northern districts barometric pressures are relatively high. Warm weather continues from the Ohio valley southward. Light showers fell over the Northwest and in the Missouri, Mississippi and Ohio valleys.

The local outlook for tonight and tomorrow is good. The winds will be light to fresh, and will be variable but mostly easterly. It will be partly cloudy tonight and tomorrow, and cooler weather will prevail tonight.

Following were the highest temperatures recorded yesterday by the weather bureau:

POOR.

O'er all these grand and spacious halls,
From dome above to marble sill,
The somberness of silence falls,
And all is still.

No baby fingers beat tattoo
Upon the polished window panes
To greet the wayfarer below—
Here silence reigns.

No madcap group comes rushing through
The doorway with a shout of joy,
No loving maiden fond and true,
No rougish boy.

Alone they sit at close of day,
A pair—ah! gold is theirs galore,
They know no touch of poverty—
But they are poor.

A Horrible Accident.

Chicago Tribune: Addemup, who had taken a day off to attend the bookkeepers' picnic, was displaying his agility of climbing a tree.

He fell in such a way that his foot caught in a fork of the tree, and there he hung, head downward, ten feet from the ground.

"Help me down!" he exclaimed, in a voice of agony. "For heaven's sake! My fountain pen is leaking!"

Standing Room Only.

Buffalo Enquirer: Mark Twain in his lecturing days, reached a small Eastern town one afternoon and went before dinner to a barber's to be shaved.

"You are a stranger in the town, sir?" the barber asked.

"Yes, I'm a stranger here," was the reply.

"We're having a good lecture here tonight, sir," said the barber. "A Mark Twain lecture. Are you going to it?"

"Yes. I think I will," said Mr. Clemens.

"Have you got your ticket yet?" the barber asked.

"No; not yet," said the other.

"Then, sir, you'll have to stand."

"Dear me!" Mr. Clemens exclaimed. "It seems as if you always do have to stand when I hear that man Twain lecture."

To Insure Popularity.

Houston Post: They say that Thomas F. Ryan has become a more powerful man than John D. Rockefeller. If this be true, let him swat Rockefeller and become the most popular as well as most powerful financier in America.

Naughty Old New York.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: New York is getting ambitious to be the rival of London as the largest city in the world. Size is the only bad habit of London in which New York has not already beaten her to a frazzle.

Does It Matter Much.

Nashville American: There continues to be some insistence that Mr. Roosevelt will be a nominee for the presidency in 1908, despite his declaration to the contrary, but it is not determined whether he will be the Republican or Democratic candidate.

This Settles It.

Kansas City Star: Another argument in favor of abolishing the bureaucracy is that nobody can pronounce it.

Why Bring It Up.

Washington Post: Do you remember the good old days when a man of modest means could have beefsteak at least once a day?

LAUGHING LINES.

Philadelphia Press: "Sho bosses him, I hear."

"I should say she did boss him, and she's a little bit of a mite, too."

Cleveland Leader: Jawback — My mother's cooking——

Mrs. Jawback—Well, she deserves it. But I didn't think you'd acknowledge it so shortly after her death.

Detroit Free Press: Bosh—Did you get anything out of that oil deal you were telling me about?

Josh—Yes, indeed! I got a great deal of light on the subject of speculating that I didn't have before.

Boston Transcript: Mrs. Cummins—So you love your grandmamma, do you Gracie? And why do you love her?

Gracie—Because she used to punish mamma when mamma was a little girl. I hope she used to spank mamma as hard as mamma spanks me.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

Kittens get their eyes opened a few days after they are born; people when they are married.

Riding in an automobile makes a woman think of the way she would look if her husband was president of the United States.

"When W. D. Howells," said a publisher, "was the editor of Harper's, a young man of humble and rough exterior one day submitted personally to him a poem.

"Mr. Howells looked over the poem. Then he said to the young man:

"'Did you write this poem yourself?'

"'Yes, sir. Do you like it?'

"'I think it is magnificent,' said Mr. Howells. 'Did you compose it unaided?'

"'I certainly did,' said the young man firmly. 'I wrote every line of it out of my own head.'

"'Then, Lord Byron, I am very glad to meet you. But I was under the impression that you had died at Missolonghi a good many years ago.'"

Claude and Ellard.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: And so the political wire-pullers of the lower part of the state are advancing a scheme—a liver-colored plot conveys a more comprehensive meaning—to bury our own Hon. Patrick Ellerd Dowling, the red tongued orator of the Mesaba, the political Apollo of the county of Saint Laule, in the political grave of lieutenant governor. The ungrateful demagogues. We'll have none of it, and the Twin City manipulators are given fair warning that this dastardly attempt to place a gunny-sack over the flaming torch of the northern county must cease right where it began, or we, the People, shall bust up the whole works and try to save the pieces. Mr. Dowling, our own Paddy, the purple of the political family of the Bread and Butter state, for the mean, little old nine-spot office of lieutenant governor? Well, hardly—nit. * * * Dowling for governor; none others need apply.

A Russian Blessing.

Baltimore American: Out of the wreck and ruin Russia will come less arrogant, much meeker and all the better for being thrashed. It will probably no longer seek to play the role of shaper of world destinies, but the world will be none the worse for that. The chief mission of Russia will be to reshape its own institutions, and if this is done wisely the war will be viewed as a Russian blessing before the end of the present century.

Kentucky Enthusiasm.

Louisville Herald: Oyama, Togo, but, greatest of all, Theodore Roosevelt!

How We Do It.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: The United States, in her war settlements, takes a widely different course from the other nations. Instead of asking money from her beaten antagonists, she gives money to them. We paid $18,250,000 to Mexico at the end of the war of 1846-48 for a cession of territory which we had already won by conquest. We gave Spain $20,000,000 in 1898, ostensibly for improvements which she had made in the Philippines, but which we have never been able to discover. In the coming session congress will be asked to give back to China the remainder of our part of her indemnity to us for damages in the Boxer rebellion. And congress will comply. The American way of dealing with antagonists is something of a novelty in the procedure of the nations, but on the score of humanity and good will it can say something for itself.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS

Crookston Journal: If your business is the smallest in its line in the city—or next to the smallest—your need of publicity is as great as your hopes of growth.

Albert Lea Tribune: The business man who thinks that the advertisements of yesterday are ample for the business of tomorrow, is like the farmer who thinks that the sowing of the past year is ample for the harvest of the coming season.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: A country editor's popularity is measured by what he keeps out of his paper. That's why the editor of this very respectable family journal is so d——d (meaning deuced) popular, just as like as not.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: Coal oil will, it is claimed, kill mosquitos. May work all right on the Jersey kind, but in Northern Minnesota the mosquito would accept it as a new brand of breakfast food and get fat on it.

Tower News: Never judge yourself as you judge others. You might become discouraged.

Red Wing News: The federal grand jury in Chicago is still ruminating on the beef trust cases. If these had been labor leaders accused of heaving a brick they should have been drawn and quartered and planted at the cross roads ere this.

Grand Rapids Independent: "If our sort of Norwegians were over in Norway it would be a republic in very short order," says The Duluth Herald, and if our sort of Swedes were over in Sweden there would be one there also.

Ely Miner: The Republican (?) crowd in Minneapolis, who killed Bob Dunn last fall, have now their hatchets out for Governor Johnson because he did not fill all the state appointive offices from among their number. They figure they had a mortgage on Governor Johnson, claiming to have elected him but the governor is made of other material and plainly indicated he was capable of minding his own business and hinted it would be wise for the Minneapolis gang to mind theirs.

Walker Pilot: The sudden shifting of population from Southern Minnesota to the north part of the state, makes us fear at times that Gopherland will become unbalanced and tip up endways one of these fine days. Evidently "the call of the wilds" is being answered.

Aitkin Republican: The average Republican politician at Duluth is an "amoosin' cuss" much given to levity. When an outsider is mentioned for a federal appointment he waxes facetious and indulges in side-splitting merriment at the bare idea. He has had his feet in the trough so long that he thinks he has acquired ownership, and outsiders are not expected to apply for any feed; but there is a notion beginning to be nurtured in the country to the effect that the great unsalted city has had more than her share and ought to let go.

Newspaper English.

President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton: It is the fashion among a certain class to rather sneer at what they are pleased to call "newspaper English." These gentlemen should look at home before committing themselves, and remedy their own shortcomings and their laboriously correct style of writing. I think the English used in newspaper articles is remarkably good. It is generally tearse and clear and right to the point, and tells in a simple way exactly what the writer wants to say. It is most surprising to me to understand how the reporters, writing as they do so hurriedly and under such a great pressure, are able to write so well. I can hardly comprehend it. None need be afraid of spoiling their taste for good English by reading newspapers. The free from stiltedness and trite conventionality, which is more than can be said of the average collegian's effusions.

How About Knute Nelson?

Atlanta Constitution: If the Norwegians want an Al president they will find plenty of good Americanized native material in Minnesota.

GAMES TODAY.

Fargo at Duluth.
St. Cloud-Brainerd at Crookston.
Grand Forks at Winnipeg.

In spite of a bum ankle, which interfered with his control of the ball, Potts went into the box yesterday and held the water wagon bunch down to two stingy singles, one of which came in the first inning and one in the ninth. The result was a fine, large coat of whitewash for the Blind Piggers, while the Champs piled up seven runs at their leisure.

One of the hits was made off the first ball pitched, which Capt. French banged to the right field for a clean single. He tried to stretch it into a two-bagger, and was nabbed by Erickson. The second hit came after two men were out in the ninth.

Messrs. Weiler, Bennett and McShane were all to the good yesterday. They were picking them out of the clouds, digging them out of the dust, and generally performing in a pretty smooth fashion for infielders in the arctic league.

Your Uncle Silas handled thirteen chances without a misplay, and took one hit out of three times up. Togo Weiler accepted seven chances gracefully, but failed to get his usual safe hit. Mr. McShane gobbled up three chances, made the only error chalked up against the team, and got a safe hit. His error came after he had stabbed a hot liner with one mit, while running at full speed. It was a beautiful pickup, but he threw wildly to first, so that Capt. Arthur had to jump to nab the ball, and before he got back the man was safe. Had McShane not tried for the ball, it would have easily counted as a safe hit.

Just for good measure Bennett, Weiler and O'Dea worked in a fast little double play which robbed the farmers of a most promising chance to score.

The Fargo infield was also going some, and pulled off two fast double plays, although five errors were chalked up against the team.

The Champs didn't lose any time in getting after the game. Bennett walked in the first and went to second on Weiler's sacrifice. Menelee shoved a high one out into the center garden, and the substitute catcher who covers that territory headed for the ball through the little lake that is lying around loose out there. The Fargo fielders are evidently not used to water, and Mr. Alberts never had a chance to get the ball after he struck the edge of the pond. Si came home on the muff and Menelee went to second on O'Dea's out. Neighbors slammed one into deep left field and Si scored from second, which he had purloined. A double play retired the side.

Then Erick Edward performed his little merry-go-round stunt, punching out a long drive which landed on the other side of the fence, and trotted about the bases without any fear of being tagged.

Three more runs were collected in the sixth inning, when after Neighbors was down, Erickson again leaned on the ball for a single. McAleese nearly tore a board off the left field fence, trying for a homer, and Erickson scored on the drive which was good for only two bags. McShane singled, scoring McAleese, and stole second a moment later, scoring on a drive by Potts.

ORPHANS WIN.

Crookston Team Continues on Its Downward Course.

Crookston, June 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Orphans trimmed the Crookston team here yesterday afternoon by the score of 5 to 3 in an exciting game of ball which looked at first like a walkaway for the Brainerd aggregation. Phenomenal work of Zeider, Crookston's new pitcher in swatting four of Gilchrist's twists, two for home runs and two for two-baggers out of four times to bat, was the feature of the game. New men join the Crooks tomorrow.

GAME WAS FORFEITED

To Deer River By the Big Duluths.

Deer River, Minn., June 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—The baseball game which was to have been played here Sunday between the locals and the Big Duluth teams was forfeited to Deer River by Duluth's favorite commercial team not appearing. Manager Phifer declares he is surprised at the team not coming as transportation was forwarded and he says he has received no word from them since the agreement to come. There were four hundred tickets sold and the whole team is disappointed.

This makes the sivth straight game the Deer River team has won this season and lost none; and the runs made on them by all the teams they have played totals only six. Manager Phifer is trying to get a date with the Duluth Universal Millers, and with all of Duluth's teams, and if victory still is theirs the White Sox will be invited. Arrangements are also forming for a game at Hibbing with a big excursion. If reasonable rates can be secured a train will be chartered.

RACES FEATURELESS.

Monday's Events Were Not of High Order.

St. Louis, June 20.—The track at Delmar yesterday was practically featureless. Two favorites, two second and two third choices were the winners.

Memphis, Tenn., June 20.—Barney Screiber's stable captured three of the six races at Montgomery park yesterday. Ethics, the favorite for the fourth race, at one mile, was badly beaten, Screiber's Ed Sheridan winning handily at good odds. Two well backed favorites won.

Detroit, June 20.—D. Boland piloted E. S. Gardner's 2-year-old son of Himyara, Charlie Eastman, to an easy victory in the second race, which was in a way the feature event of the second day's racing at Highland Park.

POPE URGES

Catholics to Participate In Public Affairs.

Rome, June 20.—The pope has issued an encyclical encouraging Catholics to participate in public affairs.

While seeking the advice of the ecclesiastical authorities, the encyclical says, Catholics should retain complete liberty of action regarding their temporal interests. Members of the clergy are recommended to refrain from participating in party strife.

The encyclical has created a sensation. Its object is to induce Catholics to enter public life, so that they may be a force against the threat of Socialism.

In the last election for members of the Italian chamber of deputies the participation of the clericals was pronounced, even priests and monks in ecclesiastical robes going to the polls, while in Rome numerous persons attached to the Vatican voted against the Socialist leader, Ferri.

This was at the time, as stated in the Associated Press dispatches, considered a tactic but definite abandonment of the famous rule of Pope Pius IX, under which Catholics were forbidden to vote at Italian elections.

Rome, June 20.—This morning's newspapers comment on the importance of the pope's encyclical, the effect of which, they say, will be to do away with the reluctance of Catholics to recognize the Italian legislative institutions. It is the first time, the papers point out, that the Vatican has invited Catholics to vote.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS

The Fredonia National bank, Fredonia, N. Y., was closed by order, Monday, of the comptroller of the currency on information received from the examiner that it is insolvent. J. W. Schofield has been appointed receiver.

A new and important investigation of the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance society is to be begun at once. Paul Morton, the newly elected chairman of the board of directors, wants to know exactly how things are with the society, and has commissioned chartered accountants to examine every detail of the work, investments and relations of the society.

It is announced with a certain degree of positiveness that Governor Higgins has tendered the position of state racing commissioner to James W. Wadsworth of Geneseo, and that Mr. Wadworth had accepted. In this case Mr. Wadworth will undoubtedly be made chairman of the commission, to succeed August Belmont.

George Gardner knocked out Billy Stift in the fifth round of a rather uninteresting fight at Ogden, Vt., Monday night. In the fifth round he was knocked down. He attempted to rise before the final count, but the referee declared him out.

Orme Clarke of London, and Miss Elfrida Roosevelt, cousin of President Roosevelt, were married at Emmanuel church, Boston, Monday afternoon by Bishop Lawrence.

Word was received by the Charleston navy yard that the United States cruiser Detroit has been ordered to that yard to be placed out of commission and repaired. The Detroit is now coming north from Monte Christi, San Domingo, where she has been guarding American interests.

COUNTERFEIT MONEY

On Farm of Man Acquitted Years Ago.

Danville, Ill., June 20.—Deputy United States Marshal D. G. Williams of this city, has unearthed $1,308 in counterfeit money on a farm near Ridgefarm, this county. The bogus coin was buried in an old teakettle at the foot of a birch tree in a thick woods near the home of Douglas Hayes. Eight years ago Hayes was tried in Indianapolis on a charge of passing counterfeit money, but was acquitted.

The money found by Deputy Williams has been turned over to the Secret Service authorities and sent to Washington, D. C. There was $1,108 in silver counterfeit dollars and $200 in counterfeit $20-gold pieces.

At the time of Hayes' trial in Indianapolis he had witnesses to swear that the money found in his possession had been passed upon him when he disposed of a load of grain. Hayes' home was searched by secret service men, but no evidence that he had anything to do with the counterfeit money was found.

FALL OF SIXTY FEET

By Smoke Stack Painter at Sellars Mine.

Hibbing, Minn., June 20.—Howard Le Pard of St. Cloud, Minn., fell from the top of a sixty-foot smoke stack at the Sellers mine yesterday morning and sustained injuries that will probably result fatally.

Le Pard is a traveling smoke stack painter. He came to Hibbing June 16, in the employ of Eastman Brothers of Duluth, contracting painters. He had just ascended to the top of the stack and was adjusting his seat when the rope broke and he plunged to the ground.

An examination at the Rood hospital disclosed a fracture of the right shoulder and also of the right forearm, besides internal injuries. Previous to ascending the rope stood the test weight of three men.

GUS WERMEN'S BODY

Found In River a Mile From Tower.

Tower, Minn., June 20.—The body of Gus Wermen, the 6-year-old boy who mysteriously disappeared from the streets of Tower the evening of Saturday, June 3, was found floating in the river yesterday afternoon by Chief of Police James Beatty, who had maintained a persistent search the last three weeks.

Chief Beatty was traveling the county road and had reached a point about a mile from Tower. Here the river is only a few feet from the roadway, and, peering through the bushes, the officer saw a body floating. After bringing it ashore the chief returned to Tower and notified the coroner.

The body is badly decomposed and appeared to have been in the river several weeks. The boy's cap was still on his head, but a shoe was missing from his right foot. The spot where the body was found is about three-quarters of a mile from the place where the boy was last seen alive.

MANAGER SKIPPED OUT

And Members of Operatic Company Are Mourning.

St. Paul, June 20.—Grace Van Studdiford, the popular primadonna of the "Red Feather" company, which recently closed engagements in the Twin Cities and Duluth, and several of her companion players are stranded in St. Paul. They claim that their manager, S. E. Kingston, has left them in the lurch, owing them from $100 to $300 each. Mr. Van Studdiford, husband of the prima donna, arrived yesterday from St. Louis and telegraphed to the Chicago police to arrest Kingston, who is said to be on his way to Europe.

Mrs. Van Studdiford charges that Kingston induced the officials of the Milwaukee road to start the train which was to bear the company five minutes before the scheduled time. When the prima donna and the chorus girls reached the union depot they saw nothing but the tracks.

SOCIAL OSTRACISM

Of Divorcees Decided Upon By Catholic Women.

New York, June 20.—Roman Catholic women of high degree in New York have publicly announced a crusade against divorce. Their weapon will be social ostracism. They have banded together to snub offending women, to shut their doors in the faces of divorcees who remarry. Their organization is known as "The Daughters of the Faith." When the society was formed the proposition to use social ostracism as a weapon against the divorce evil aroused opposition. It threatened to disrupt the organization, and it did delay the adoption of its program.

Now the die is cast and the "Daughters" are committed to the plan of campaign. Their manual is in print and will be published this week. It declares unequivocally: "The Catholic divorcee who remarries must be socially ostracised."

This drastic rule may work havoc in Catholic social circles. Not a few society women have already declared that to fulfill the letter of the rules they would be forced to ignore socially not only closest friends, but in many instances relatives, so largely has divorce through mixed marriages made inroads into Catholic homes.

Although the crusade threatens to split society and cause much bitterness among old friends, it has the special endorsements of the pope.

When opposition threatened her work, the founder of the society, Miss Eliza O'Brien Lummis, went to Rome and had an audience with the pope which resulted in a papal brief approving the scheme and suggesting that the women of the world co-operate with their New York sisters.

A preface to the book contains the brief of approbation recently received from Pope Pius X. and personal letters of indorsement from Mgr. Falconio, the apostolic delegate; Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop Farley, Archbishop Riordan of San Francisco and Bishop Colton of Buffalo.

WEST END.

PAY MONEY AT ONCE

And Get Use of New Paving, Urges J. J. Moe.

Up to Property Owners—Asked Not to Wait Forty Days.

Yesterday afternoon the board of public works approved the West Superior street paving assessment, the amount of which is $89,327.52. It is the largest assessment levied in the last six years. Out of this sum, it is hoped to pave West Superior street from Eighth avenue to Twenty-fourth avenue with tar macadam, making a continuous good pavement from the East end through to Twenty-fourth avenue west.

Of the total amount, the city will put up $16,942.31 and the property owners along the line of pavement proposed must put up the rest, amounting to $72,285.21.

In this connection John J. Moe, the West end merchant, who is largely responsible for the success of the paving project, wishes to urge property holders to pay their assessments at once. Said he yesterday:

"Of course the property owners along West Superior street which will be affected by the paving proposition have forty days in which to pay their assessment but it seems to me that it would be only foolishness to wait the limit allowed. The money will have to be paid at the end of the forty days anyway, and why not get it into the paving fund at once. As soon as the assessments have all been paid in the city can go ahead with the contract and the paving will be finished before fall. If the property owners wait the forty days, it will take that time and a little more to get started and we will have practically no use of the new paving this year before the snow flies. Business men should urge those who will have to pay assessments to get the assessments paid in at once and I will do all that I can toward that end. I hope the property owner will not delay the matter. Now that we have gone this far, we should have some use of the paving soon."

EPWORTH LEAGUE

Convention at Grace Church This Week.

The Duluth district convention of the Epworth league will be held in Grace M. E. church at the West end next Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Rev. E. C. Clemans, the presiding elder of the Duluth district of the Methodist church, will preside at the convention. It is expected that this convention will be extraordinary in many ways. In the point of speakers, it will listen to some of the best speakers who have been heard at any religious convention here in a long time. Among them are Rev. George H. Bridgeman, D. D., L. L. MIDSUMMER DAY.

Swedish Baptist Young People to Observe It.

The Young People's society of the First Swedish Baptist church has prepared plans to observe Midsummer day with a gathering at the church, Nineteenth avenue west and Fourth street, at which time appropriate music and addresses will be given. Plans were under consideration for an outing or excursion, but with the uncertainty in the weather it was found extremely difficult to arrange anything in that line.

Midsummer day was always observed in Scandinavia, and in the northern part, where the sun never sets during a short period of the year, it is magnificent to behold. Even in the middle and southern parts of the Scandinavian peninsula the summer nights about midsummer are beautiful, and everywhere the people gather on Midsummer day for joyous festivities. The fine climate existing there adds materially to the beauty of the time at midsummer.

Midsummer day is tomorrow.

MRS. WILLIAMS' DEATH.

Young Woman Dies of Rather Unusual Disease.

The funeral of Mrs. Joseph Williams of 325 Twentieth avenue west, who died Saturday, took place this afternoon from her late residence. Services were held in the Swedish Mission church, of which she was an active member. Interment took place at London road cemetery. Tubercular meningitis was the cause of death, although at first typhoid was thought to be her ailment. Her case became a puzzle, and several members of the medical profession were called for consultation. Mrs. Williams and her husband were married less than one year, and the bereaved young husband has the sympathy of the entire community.

Another funeral took place at the West end this afternoon. It was that of 10-months-old Carl Gabrielson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gabrielson of 537½ Garfield avenue. The child died Sunday. The body was interred this afternoon in Park Hill cemetery.

To Be Heard Here.

A week from next Friday evening a concert will be given at the Swedish Mission church by the Young People's and Parthenol societies of the church. The proceeds will be devoted to paying for the new lighting plant which the church recently put in.

Assiting will be Mrs. Emily Sundeen, now of Southern Minnesota. Mrs. Sundeen was formerly Miss Emily Johnson of Duluth and a member of this church. She was educated, musically at the Northwestern Conservatory of Music and soon after her graduation married Rev. Mr. Sundeen, then pastor of the Swedish Mission church. He has since died and Mrs. Sundeen has devoted herself to music. She has made a great success as a soprano and her old friends are delighted that she is to be again heard here.

West End Shortrails.

George M. Jonsen and wife, and Mr. Nelson and wife spent a few days fishing at Cloquet river. They returned last night.

M. H. Morrow of the West End Advertiser was last week entertaining his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Morrow of Wahpeton, N. D., for a few days. Mrs. M. H. Morrow and son and Miss Mamie Hartough of West Duluth, accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Morrow back to Wahpeton and will visit there for a time.

B. A. Martin is in Eveleth on a business trip.

Knute Rouck of Shevlin, Minn., who has been visiting friends here has returned home. He has been the guest of Andrew Askel.

Th 11-year-old son of C. E. Dice of West Fourth street, who has been sick with typhoid fever, is recovering.

It is reported that Charles McMillen of Garfield avenue, the youth who a few days ago attempted suicide by the carbolic acid route, is exceedingly sick and his object of self-destruction may yet succeed.

Louis Poison of West Eighth street is very sick. It is feared he has tuberculosis.

THREE BIG DREDGES

The Duluth-Superior Dredging company, which filed articles of incorporation with the register of deeds last week, will have the finest set of dredges and other necessary equipment of any company on the Great Lakes by the time navigation opens next spring, according to present plans.

Contracts are about to be let for the construction of two ten-yard dipper dredges and one twenty-inch hydraulic dredge. It is said that no other concern in the United States, either along the ocean coast or on the lakes, has such modern equipment. There are very few ten-yard dipper dredges in existence, and no two are owned by any single concern at the present time. They are to cost $140,000 each, while the hydraulic dredge will cost from $70,000 to $75,000. The ordinary dredge now in common use has a capacity of from 2,500 to 3,000 cubic yards of earth in a day of sixteen hours, while the ten-yard dipper variety will easily handle from 8,000 to 9,000 yards in a similar period. The hydraulic has a capacity of about 6,000 yards in twenty-four hours. The hydraulics are generally run night and day.

While the contracts for building these mammoth dredges have not yet been let, it is understood that the hulls and much of the machinery will be made in Duluth. Negotiations are on for the purchase of a site on the bay front where the company may have repair shops and yards, but the necessary land has not been purchased. The deal will be closed in the near future, however, it is expected. While headquarters of the concern will be in Duluth, the dredges will do work all along the lakes, for the government or for private interests. They will even go as far as Buffalo if contracts can be obtained there. Officials of the new concern have no doubt that there will be more than enough work to keep the dredges busy the working seasons.

The company is capitalized at $200,000. William Clifford is president, Napoleon Grignon is vice president and R. B. Knox is secretary and treasurer. These same men were back of the Duluth Dredge and Dock company, which was such a remarkable success, and Mr. Clifford and Mr. Grignon held the same official positions with the old concern as with the new. The Duluth Dredge and Dock company was organized in 1898 with a capital of $11,000, and this spring, only a few weeks ago, the business and equipment were sold for $260,000.

LAW OF NO VALUE

Regarding White Lead and Mixed Paints.

St. Paul, June 20.—E. K. Slater, the dairy and food commissioner, has issued a bulletin, in which he says:

Compartively few people are aware of the fact that the dairy and food department has jurisdiction over the paints and linseed oil sold in this state. Among the laws which the department is expected to enforce is one relating to white lead and mixed paints, and it would be about as well for the buyer of these goods if we had no law at all. It is of no practical value and its uselessness has been known to the department for several years. Every attempt to secure the passage of a law which would really protect the buyer and let him know what he is purchasing, has been defeated and the man who buys paints is still at the mercy of the unscrupulous manufacturers.

By simply publishing the formula of the paint, in terms of course, with which the average person is wholly unfamiliar, the manufacturer can mix up anything and term it "pure" or "strictly pure."

A sample of so-called white lead paint analyzed by our chemist last week was found to contain absolutely no white lead at all, and yet pure white lead paint is supposed to consist of nothing but carbonate of lead and pure linseed oil. I should take great pleasure in naming the brand and the manufacturer of the article if we could only class it as "illegal." The present law sanctions just such work on the part of the manufacturer and this department has no authority to go further. Complaints regarding the quality of paints are continually forthcoming, but we are powerless under the present law to change conditions.

If the buyer wishes to purchase a strictly pure white lead paint the law will aid him only by his demanding an article labelled "pure" or "strictly pure" and which is not labelled giving a list of ingredients other than carbonate of lead and pure linseed oil.

The only way to alter conditions is for the paint buyers and users of the state to demand of their legislators that something be done at the next session of the legislature besides framing the paint law to suit the manufacturers.

RUNNING HABIT

Of the Russians Was Shown During the Boxer Troubles.

Left Small Force of Americans to Fight 2,000 Boxers.

New York, June 20.—The easy destruction of the Russian fleet in the Sea of Japan by the fleet in command of Admiral Togo and the rout of the Russians on land by the Japanese since the war began, recalls to unpleasant memory the experiences of the officers and men of the United States army and marine corps who served with the allied troops in China to put down the Boxer uprising in 1900. The experiences are matters of official record.

Officers and men of the famous Ninth and Fourteenth infantry, U. S. A., and the detachment of United States marines, under Major, L. W. T. Waller, all of whom were in that campaign with the Russians, condemn them roundly.

The only time the Russians fought side by side with an American force they retreated, leaving the little band of 123 Americans to fight some 2,000 Boxers, and the Russians on this occasion numbered 400 officers and men. This fact is attested by Brig. Gen. A. S. Daggett, U. S. A., who then commanded the Fourteenth infantry.

It was during the advance to Tientsin. A force of 400 Russians in command of a colonel, had decided to move forward, and requested Maj. L. W. T. Waller, a United States marine corps officer, who had with him a force of eight officers and 123 men, to join him.

"The force of eight officers and 123 men comprising the American force and the 400 Russians, moved out early in the morning. Lieut. Powell with the Colt gun in advance, the Russians following. They advanced without opposition until they reached a point near the Capriai arsenal, where they received a light flank fire, which was speedily silenced by American sharpshooters.

"Continuing the advance, they soon met a heavy front fire about 300 yards distant, and a flank fire from a point about 900 yards away. The strength of the enemy was from 1,000 to 2,000 Boxers and Imperial troops.

"The Colt gun, with some assistance, kept the frontal fire down, while the Americans, with some Russians, changed front from right to rear to meet the annoying flank fire.

"Soon after this the Russians withdrew from the front, and formed about half a mile to the right of the Americans, thus exposing the left of the latter to a severe fire. The Colt gun, having jammed several times, and only Lieut. Powell and one man left to man it, was disabled and smashed.

"The Russians sent word to Maj. Waller that they would retreat to a point about four miles away, and they immediately proceeded to carry this decision into effect. This left the small force of the Americans in a perilous situation.

"The enemy made advances on this small force, but was stubbornly resisted by its rear guard, where the skill of the American riflemen proved effective. A few hours running fight was kept up until our troops reached their camp. So well was the retreat conducted that all the wounded were brought back by hand, the dead being left behind.

"The American force had marched thirty miles and fought five hours, and had covered the retreat of the Russians, receiving no assistance from them whatever.

"The Russians had charge of the railroad from Yangtsun to Taku, and arrangements had been made with a Russian officer for the transportation of the Fourteenth United States infantry, and it was promised that the latter should have twenty cars to move it from Yangtsun. On the day assigned the regiment to entrain only nineteen cars were supplied.

Gen. Daggett then explains the experience of the Americans as follows:

"When the commander of the Fourteenth United States infantry went to board the train he found the passenger car occupied by French officers and the door locked and the thirty-five American officers not provided for. The Russian sergeant in charge admitted the train belonged to the Fourteenth infantry, but when appealed to, said he could do nothing about it.

"The commander of the Fourteenth infantry finally managed to enter the car and explained to the French officers that the train was for his regiment and that they must vacate the car. They made no reply. He then told them in French that they must move from the car or he would use force. No sign of moving appeared, but when an American officer with a guard came to eject the Frenchmen they vacated the car.

"Two Japanese officers who were in the car politely offered to withdraw, but were told they could remain."

Capt. Charles H. Martin of the Fourteenth United States infantry makes the following sensational report of how an arrogant Russian officer, who deliberately drove into the ranks of the Fourteenth, came to grief. He says:

"On the return march from Pekin, and while approaching Hohaiwoo the column of the Fourteenth one evening was overtaken by a Russian officer of high rank in his three-horse buckboard, driven by his orderly. At that time the rear battalion of the regiment, temporarily commanded by myself, was entering a defile bordered on each side by low, swampy ground, the road being just wide enough to accommodate the column.

"I suddenly heard a loud shout, 'Look out, captain; look out!' but before I could turn my head I found my horse on his knees with the Russian horses on top of us. After extricating ourselves I found that the Russian, not proposing to be delayed by our column, had deliberately plunged into us, regardless of consequences.

"The temporary check he had received seemed to infuriate the officer, and with violent gesticulations he ordered his orderly to drive on. Equally determined that he should not break up our column, I ordered two enlisted men to take his horses' heads. Taking the lines from his now helpless and bewildered driver, the Russian officer forced his horses forward, but before he had completely got them away from the men holding them I had ordered four more men to assist in holding the horses. In spite of such a show of force, he persisted in violently urging his horses forward until he was knocked to the ground by the butt of a gun and his horses unhitched from his conveyance.

"As he rose from the ground he started to draw his revolver, when instantly several rifles covered him. Putting up his revolver, he ran forward with tears in his eyes and called out, 'I'm a Russian officer, an officer! Look at my frightful condition and the humiliation which has been heaped upon me! Can you not give me justice?' I said to him, 'There is only room on this road for one of us, and we got here first.' From a turn in the road we looked back and saw him, in abject despair, with his orderly, trying to get his wreck together."

TOWN IS RENT BY A MYSTERY

Amateur Job of Safe Blowing Causes Social Revolution.

Paris, Ill., June 20.—The indictment of W. W. Juntgen, the bookkeeper, on five charges of malicious destruction of property, has not lessened the mystery surrounding the amateur job of safe blowing which wrecked the vault of the Edgar County National bank and caused a social revolution after threatening to precipitate a financial panic here.

The residents of the city have been divided by the lodgment of formal accusations against Juntgen. Half of them scout the story of the brick that was hurled 200 feet across the public square through the window of his flat and broke his arm. The scoffers have turned their backs socially on the bookkeeper and his beautiful young wife, whose entertainments were formerly the most popular in Paris.

Fully as many, however, are still loyal to the young couple and declare it was possible for the brick to have been hurled across the square, make an X-like tear in the screen and not only break the bookkeeper's arm but severely bruise his leg and make him unconscious.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Juntgen continue to avow that this is what did occur, that not only they but their 7-year-old son can swear to it, and that they know nothing whatever about the explosion in the vault except that it resulted in an astonishing chain of coincidences which has cast a cloud of suspicion over a man who is totally innocent.

The charge that Mr. Juntgen sent thousands of dollars to brokers in St. Louis in the last year, in spite of receiving a salary of but $75 a month, is answered by calling attention to the admission of the bank officials that although experts have been at work on the books for a week, no shortage has been discovered.

Mr. Juntgen has had a plausible story to explain every suggestion that he had made a study of the use of dynamite, and all attempts to prove that he was seen in the public square the night of the explosion, when he says he was attending his sick son, have failed.

The bookkeeper's bail was fixed at $30,000. This was furnished by his father, Mayor Juntgen of Kansas, Ill., who is worth $750,000. The young man went to the courtroom accompanied by his father, his brother-in-law, Dr. J. E. Adams of Paris, and his attorneys.

"In view of the enormity of the offense with which your son is charged, I can not consent to a reduction of this bond," said Judge Thompson to Juntgen's father. A trial is not expected to take place until the November term of court. Juntgen retained perfect self-control throughout the court formalities.

LUST FOR GOLD

Annual Rush For Land of Promise—Nome the Goal.

Seattle, Wash., June 20.—Lured on by that strange lust for gold which inspires strong men to pursue the fleeing phantom of fate to the foot of the fading rainbow of promise, more than 3,000 men will embark for Seattle during the next ten days for the placer fields on the bleak shores of Northwestern Alaska.

The annual June movement to Northwestern Alaska is popularly known as the "None rush," after the name of the commercial metropolis of the district, the place where gold was first discovered in large quantities. It begins some seasons as early as May 15, and continues until about June 15. The return movement sets in in September and continues until late in October.

The strangest of all strange features of these annual stampedes is the fascination which they have for a large class of miners and prospectors, many of whom go North from season to season with the regularity of birds of passage, who have not sufficient capital with which to purchase an outfit for prospecting and have no other prospect in view than to work for wages for some one of the large mining companies.

To the poor man going to Nome the whole season's experience is more than likely to prove one of danger and hardship. Even the trip North is fraught with no small amount of danger, while the steerage quarters on many of the steamships are far from attractive.

There was a time when Nome was the most promising "poor man's" camp in the world. Shortly after the discovery of gold on the adjacent creeks in 1899 it was found that the beach sands for miles were underlaid with a gold bearing strata which run from 80 cents to $5 to the pan. But the beach sands soon became exhausted and when, the following spring, 20,000 men stampeded to the district to take part in working them it was found that they had been completely stripped of their treasure. Mining is now confined to the creeks and benches where the claims have fallen into the hands of large operators who have expended hundreds of thousands of dollars in constructing ditches and flumes and preparing to work their properties at the lowest possible cost for labor.

Each year, with the ever-increasing facilities for hydraulic operations, the demand for laborers in the conduct of these operations decreases and this season it will doubtless be smaller than ever before. A recent dispatch from Nome announces that the miners already in the district to the number of 1,000 have organized themselves into a union and sent out word that no more common laborers are needed in the district, that the number present is sufficient to meet all requirements of the work contemplated for the present season. Naturally this is decided, both by the big operators to whose advantage it would be to have the district flooded with laboring men, and by the agents of the steamship companies who are holding out the rosy promise of plenty of work at high wages to induce men to take passage on their vessels for the North.

Gold was first discovered at Nome in the fall of 1898 by three adventurous prospectors who, on their first day in the district, staked claims which have since made them all millionaires. The output of the district in gold now aggregates about $20,000,000, of which some $5,000,000 was produced last season. Reliable estimates place the probable output of the coming season at about the same amount, and this will come out chiefly in the hands of about twenty men who own and control the few rich mines of the district.

AIM BIG BLOW AT OIL TRUST

Ottawa, Kan., June 20.—This city is to be the scene of a noteworthy popular demonstration in the interest of that spirit of reform which manifested itself when the Kansas legislature last winter passed a bill to establish a state oil refinery to break the monopoly in Kansas of the Standard Oil company. Arrangements have been made for Governor La Follette of Wisconsin, Wm. Travers Jerome of New York, Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, Clarence S. Darrow of Chicago and Joseph W. Folk of Missouri to be present and address the people of the West.

To know the full significance of this coming of Folk and other oil trust fighters to Kansas would be to feel the growth of that remarkable sentiment which surged upon the Kansas legislature last winter. In the face of constitutional questions, influence of powerful lobbyists and an open threat of misfortunes coming from the country's greatest monopoly, this sentiment brought into existence a mighty series of anti-Standard Oil and railway rate measures.

It is the spirit, with the Ottawa Chautauqua assembly as its agent and corresponding secretary, which asked Lawson to come and tell his story of "the crimes of the system;" La Follette to come from Wisconsin to complete the story already partly known in Kansas of certain railroads and their ways, and Darrow from Chicago to speak of labor in connection with the topic of American independence.

Mr. Darrow will speak on the afternoon of July 4; Governor La Follette will speak on July 6, and the governors of Nebraska, Missouri and Oklahoma will be present to receive him. Mr. Jerome will speak on July 7, and Mr. Lawson on July 8. The assembly program covers the dates between July 3 to 14. Throughout the West arrangements are being made for a vast assemblage of the people.

The man who conceived the unusual features of the program this year is Rev. C. S. Nusbaum, presiding elder of a Methodist conference district which embraces the larger portion of the Kansas oil territory, and secretary of the Ottawa Chautauqua assembly. Mr. Nusbaum made a personal visit to Boston to meet Mr. Lawson, bearing the invitation of the Kansas governor. Clubs and societies throughout the oil territory are at work upon the details.

Mr. Lawson said to Governor Hoch, "I have never delivered a public address in my life, and nothing could induce me to place myself in the position I here agree to take but my sense of duty to my country and to a section of its people, who have the honesty and the desperate courage to throw their fortunes and their lives in the pathway of the most brutally ruthless band of brigands that ever plundered or desolated the homes of a free people. In my humble way I will try to point out a way to strike off the fetters which are all but permanently riveted to their and all American necks, and in doing so I pray to God to give me strength and voice."

Ottawa is a city of 8,000, fifty miles from Kansas City, on the northern limits of the Western oil fields. It claims no indoor facilities for accommodating the large attendance expected. The "scene of the engagement" will be in the open, in the great park, whose entrance is dedicated to the soldiers who fought with Funston in the Twentieth Kansas. The crowds will camp under the trees.

PROFESSOR HAECKEL

Denies the Divine Origin of Man.

Berlin, June 20.—The greatest contemporary German scientist, Prof. Ernest Haeckel of the University of Jena, has been delivering a series of lectures in Berlin on science and religion.

Prof. Haeckel is the greatest German exponent of the Darwinian theory of evolution, and his lectures were strongly materialistic and atheistic in character.

It is significant of the skepticism prevalent in the German capital that he was accorded enthusiastic ovations by the great crowds assembled every time he appeared on the platform of the largest hall in the city. The nature of Prof. Haeckel's views on science and religion is best shown by the following extracts from his lecture on the descent of man:

"It is certain that man is descended from apes. It is only regarding the details of genealogy of the human race that the opinions of scientists differ.

"It is easy to understand that the knowledge of our descent from apes is unpleasant to many people. Man is like the parvenu who conceals all references to his obscure ancestors. Much more is known about the descent of man than regarding the evolution of the lower animals. The opponents of the evolutionary theory of human descent have been unable to prove that it is fallacious."

Prof. Haeckel then proceeded to explain why he denies that man has a soul. He said:

"The soul is supposed to have divine origin. Those who believe this do not explain why the Almighty decided to create souls just at the time when man appeared in the animal life of the world. When those who believe in God say, 'Man is the image of God,' we must remind them on the contrary that men have always conceived God according to their own conceptions of the ideal.

"Observation of the developments of a child's 'soul' shows that it has no connection with the divine.

"The belief in the divine origin of the soul is closely connected with the belief in the immortality of the soul. The theory of the immortality of the soul is indefensible. The idea of immortality is by no means universal, as is often stated. The Ionic philosophers knew nothing of the immortality of the soul.

"The idea of immortality was not part of the Mosaic religion, but appeared after the period of the Israelites' exile. Plato and Aristotle introduced the theory of immortality.

"What is known as man's 'soul' is contained in his cerebral matter. If the lowest types of the human race are compared with apes, the conclusion is inevitable that the difference between the human 'soul' and the 'soul' of apes is a matter of quantity. The human soul and the soul of apes are absolutely identical in character."

CAPT. GRAHAM'S GRATITUDE

ANOTHER CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

Captain W. S. Graham, 1321 Eoff St., Wheeling, W. Va., writing June 14, '04, says: "I am so grateful I want to thank God that a friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to me. I suffered for a long time with sores on my face and back. Some doctors said I had blood poison, and others that I had barbers' itch. None of them did me any good, but they all took my money. My friends tell me my skin now looks as clear as a baby's, and I tell them all that Cuticura Soap and Ointment did it."

STILL ANOTHER CURE

Neck Covered With Sores, Hair Fell Out, Wild With Itching

Mr. H. J. Spalding of 104 W. 104th St., New York City, says: "For two years my neck was covered with sores, the disease spreading to my hair, which fell out, leaving an unsightly bald spot, and the soreness, inflammation, and merciless itching made me wild. After a few applications of Cuticura the torment subsided, the sores disappeared, and my hair grew thick and healthy as ever."

AND STILL ANOTHER

"For over thirty years I suffered from painful ulcers and an eruption from my knees to my feet, and could find neither doctors nor medicines to help me, until I took Cuticura which cured me in six months. (signed) M. C. Moss, Gainesville, Tex."

TORNADO IN WISCONSIN

Blue Mounds, Wis., June 20.—A young German farm hand, name unknown was killed on the farm of Charles Collins while milking, over $150,000 damage was done to crops and farm buildings, and scores of head of stock were destroyed by a tornado that passed through Dane and Iowa counties and over the townships of Barneveld and Blue Mounds Sunday evening. Telephone and telegraph wires are down, and the full extent of the damage can only be estimated. The storm broke with wild fury following an extremely sultry day, and through a tract eight miles long and one to two miles wide, the destruction of property was complete. Losses as far as reported here are as follows:

John Malone, barns destroyed, two cows killed, crops destroyed; loss, $1,500.

John F. Himstein, buildings all gone except house; loss, $2,200.

William Himstein's barn torn to pieces and three cattle killed; loss, $2,000.

Melville Frye and John Pricer, barns destroyed, cattle, wagons(carriages and machinery scattered over the prairie for half a mile; loss, $1,500.

Rescuing parties were sent out from Blue Mounds, headed by William Dagenhart, Dr. Bancroft, Fred Allen and Mr. Bussey to the different points and helped rescue cattle and people pinioned in the wreckage, working late into the night. Some of the hail stones were two or three inches in diameter. All windmills, small buildings and small sheds are levelled to the ground, while corn and grain fields look like plowed ground.

Highland, Wis., reports a severe hail and wind storm which wrecked over a dozen barns and windmills and ruined crops. The path of the storm was two miles wide and hail piled up a foot in depth. Similar reports come from Dodgeville and Mt. Horeb.

Prairie Du Chien, Wis., June 20.—The damage done in Sunday night's storm cannot yet be estimated. Wires are down and details from the country are meager. The storm lasted ten minutes, but the official observer reports one inch and eight-tenths of water to have fallen. The wind and hail was also terrific, snapping off big trees, moving small buildings, crippling telephone, telegraph and light service. Traffic on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road was resumed late last night after a series of washouts between this city and Weuseeka. Ten miles east of the city the hail totally destroyed the crops in a strip half a mile wide and twelve miles in length. At Wauseeka the hail broke every window light in the village facing to the west or north. At Lynxville a large stock barn was struck by lightning and destroyed. Considerable stock was drowned, but no fatalities to human life have as yet been reported. The storm was the fiercest ever experienced in this city. The Wisconsin and Mississippi rivers which have been falling slightly since Friday, are all rising and are close to the danger line.

PRIZE DRILLS BY WOODMEN

PETTICOAT IS SOLD BY WOMAN

Pittsburg, Pa., June 20.—A petticoat was sold by a pretty young woman in the Union Station in order that she might secure money to buy a ticket to her home in Columbus, Ohio. She wore the underskirt just before the sale was made, and when it was over the woman purchaser walked out of the depot with the garment on her arm. The petticoat was of silk and seemed to be of considerable value.

This unique transaction, which aroused the interest of even the station attaches, who are used to seeing queer things, occupied only a few minutes. The young woman, who was a blonde, was walking up and down the station holding up her black overskirt a trifle, so that the elaborate petticoat showed a few inches beneath. She was accosted by one of the guards, Harry Sellers, and to him she told the story of her distress. She was en route from New York to her home in Columbus, she said, and had lost her pocketbook on the train. She did not have money to get to Columbus.

The distressed girl was then engaged in conversation by a young and prosperous looking woman who kept her eyes glued on the ruffles of the beautiful underskirt, which peeped out as the distressed owner rocked in a chair into which had dropped. Then the blonde went into the woman's waiting room. In a few minutes she reappeared with this garment on her arm. A minute's examination on the part of the prospective purchaser sufficed before the woman took the underskirt, and after failing to get wrapping paper at the cab stand, walked serenely out of the depot.

The blonde girl was seen to thank her profusely after the sale. She remarked that it was a hot day anyway. Then she went to the ticket window and purchased her ticket to Columbus.

She declined absolutely to tell her name or give any information about herself. She said it was nobody's business what she did with her underskirt.

America Will Soon Be Third Among the Naval Powers.

Russia Now Occupies Seventh Place, With Japan Sixth.

Washington, June 20.—As a result of the disaster to Russian fleets in the Far Eastern war, the czar's navy now occupies seventh place among the navies of the world. Japan ranks sixth instead of seventh, as formerly, while Austria continues to bring up the rear. The United States moves from fifth to fourth place among naval powers, while Germany follows the two leaders, Great Britain and France.

The real strength of a navy cannot be put in black and white. It is the man behind the gun that counts. That fact was strikingly emphasized at Manila bay, at Santiago, and more recently in the sea of Japan. However, the maritime strength of the nations, as shown in the number and tonnage of vessels, is of particular interest at this time. The relative order of warship tonnage among the powers at present is as follows:

Country—	Tonnage.
Great Britain	1,587,080
France	603,721
Germany	441,529
United States	379,753
Italy	254,516
Japan	253,401
Russia	226,780

Up to the time difficulties between Russia and Japan broke out, the navy of Russia ranked third, being preceded by Great Britain and France, and followed in the order named by Germany, the United States, Italy, Japan and Austria.

With the exception of Great Britain, the United States has a more comprehensive naval program than any of the other powers. It has on the stocks vessels representing more than 300,000 tons, just 79,000 tons less than its present complete naval strength. No other country except Great Britain even approaches these figures. With the present programs of all the nations carried out, the United States would rank third among naval powers, the list standing as follows:

France	778,149
United States	681,778
Germany	567,291
Russia	537,628
Italy	327,339

It will be noted that in tonnage at least Russia will have a larger navy in a few years than Japan, as the former country is building 110,840 tons and Japan only 51,400. Japan will be materially strengthened by accessions ingident to war. Russia's losses during the war were numerous vessels representinf a tonnage of 220,535.

The United States is now building forty vessels of all classes, while Great Britain has fifty on the stocks. All other countries are trailers. This government has under contract thirteen battleships of the first-class with two in prospect which were authorized by congress at the last session. Great Britain is building eight battleships of the first-class, France six, Russia five, Germany six, Italy five, Japan two and Austria three. France has a fondness for torpedo boats. It already has 238 of these little crafts, and is building 73 mort of them. Great Britain has 91 torpedo boats, Germany 105, the United States 32, Italy 101, Japan 81 and Austria 37.

Great Britain has afloat 63 battleships of the first-class, France 19, Germany 16, the United States 12 and Italy 13.

Great Britain has 420 naval vessels of all classes, France 300, the United States about 120 and Germany 315.

Following is a list of the battleships under construction by the United States, the speed required of them by the government and the percentage of completion on the first of this month:

Name—	Speed, Knots.	P. C. of Completion.
Virginia	19	87
Nebraska	19	72
Georgia	19	80
New Jersey	19	84
Rhode Island	19	87
Connecticut	18	77
Louisiana	18	77
Vermont	18	51
Kansas	18	54
Minnesota	18	66
Mississippi	17	29
Idaho	17	27
New Hampshire	18	7
South Carolina (authorized.)
Michigan (authorized.)

In addition the United States is building eight armored cruisers, three protected cruisers and numerous gunboats, training ships, scout cruisers, torpedo boats, colliers and submarine torpedo boats.

It will thus be seen that in a few years the United States will have made rapid strides in the direction of the greater navy which has been President Roosevelt's aim for the past few years. With the vessels now building completed this country will on paper rank third among naval powers, but in reality it will be stronger as regard efficiency and condition of its war boats.

"It is difficult to figure out the strength of a fleet until it has been put to the crucial test," said an American expert. "Spain had an imposing navy when hostilities broke out between that country and the United States in 1898. But the Spaniards were no match for the men behind the American guns. In January of this year Russia stood third among the naval powers and Japan seventh. The tonnage of the former's navy was 447,315 and of the latter 220,755. But when the hostile fleets clashed the Russians were hopelessly outmatched by the Yankees of the East. There is only one lesson of the present Far Eastern war that we know for a certainty at this time, and that is that 'it is the man behind the gun that is the biggest unit in a conflict of fleets.' It is yet too early to say whether the battleship or vessel of the smaller type was primarily responsible for the success of the Japs."

TRIP TO ARCTIC IS POSTPONED

Washington, June 20.—Because of the opposition of the Danish government, Dr. Frederick Schon has decided temporarily to abandon the trip on the Havana, the tuberculosis ship, to the Arctic circle. Soon after it became known that Dr. Sohon proposed to make the trip, the Danish government telegraphed its consul at Halifax:

"Newspapers report the steamer Havana leaves Halifax in June with a party of consumptives for a cruise in Greenland waters. Inform them that previous permission is necessary to call at Danish possessions in Greenland, which probably will not be granted."

Dr. Sohon communicated with the Danish consul at Halifax, from which point it was proposed that the Havana should sail, and was informed that there was opposition on the part of his government and that it would be almost impossible to induce the government to change its decision. In order to make the voyage a success and to care for the health of the patients, it was absolutely necessary that the Havana should have permission to enter some of the harbors of Greenland in the event of rough water.

Owing to the opposition of Denmark which controls Greenland, and the delay involved in securing a reversal of its decision, it was determined to abandon the voyage this year.

Dr. Sohon is now engaged in making arrangements for a trip next summer. He will change the route of the voyage and will take a course which will not be open to opposition on the part of any government.

DANCING MAD

Is Charged Against Wife Sued For Divorce.

Goshen, Ind., June 20.—Alleging that his wife, Mabel Elnora MacColloch, is dancing mad and cannot resist the temptation of tripping the light fantastic regardless of domestic conditions, James B. MacColloch, a Lake Shore railway attache, residing at Elkhart, has filed suit for divorce. He says she cannot control her inclination for dancing. In his complaint he alleges that she is such an inveterate dancer that when he was injured in a railway collision and confined to his bed with four fractured ribs, she refused to nurse him, but instead went to dances. He also says she danced so much she neglected her household duties, leaving him without proper attention and meals, and although MacColloch was in bed ten weeks from injuries he claims his wife danced regularly, paying no attention to his sufferings.

THE SHIP CANAL

Will Take Bulk of Export Trade From Railroads.

Montreal, June 20.—To open the great lakes to the commerce of the seas, by means of a deep sea ship canal, is an old dream soon to be realized, and in its realization will be witnessed one of the greatest economic struggles ever waged.

The Canadian government has designs on the greatest volume of commerce which moves on the American continent, and for the purpose of diverting that commercial stream from its present channels has authorized and is just completing a survey and estimate of an all-water Canadian route from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic.

The project is for a connecting link between Georgian bay—which is a deep indentation in the northern shore of Lake Huron—and the waters of the Ottawa and St. Lawrence rivers, flowing northeast into the Atlantic.

The distance to be bridged by canal is not great, and the cost has been officially estimated at $65,000,000 to $70,000,000.

There are very strong reasons to believe that this project will be authorized by the present Laurier administration of the Dominion government.

The importance of the project may be realized when it is stated that such a waterway, if built, would almost immediately take from the railroads of the United States the bulk of the vast export trade in grain and meats, the former aggregating over 2,223,000,000 bushels a year and the latter 1,000,000,000 pounds. Three-quarters of this traffic now moves by rail to New York, and less than a quarter of the grain from Chicago moves by boat, even to Buffalo.

The recent emigration movement which is taking thousands of farmers from the United States into Canada, and the general northern movement of the wheat-growing area, is one of the causes which will hasten the construction of this canal. It is the desire of the Dominion government to provide an outlet for this grain without its entering the states, preferably a cheap all-water route.

A glance at any map will show that the shortest route, after the grain strikes the Great Lakes, is by the St. Lawrence. The dip to Detroit, around the province of Ontario, through Lakes Huron, Erie and Ontario, is extremely roundabout. And, if the grain is bound for Liverpool, whose latitude is practically identical with that of Montreal, every mile which it travels south is a mile out of the way.

The proposed canal will be regarded favorably or otherwise, according to the point of view of the observer, and this is bound to change according to the latter's geographical location. In its broadest aspect the construction of the canal is an effort by one nation to get the business of another neighbor nation. Sentiments of patriotism would move Americans to resent such a move, and to meet it, as the authorities of New York state are preparing to do with the old Erie canal, by the construction of an all-water route on American soil which will keep the trade which we now possess.

The old Erie canal, from Buffalo to Albany, where it connects with the Hudson river for New York, is to be rebuilt at a cost of $101,000,000. It was the old Erie canal which first brought the great grain traffic of the West through New York state and city. It was permitted to become antiquated.

The cities of New York and Buffalo have most to lose by the construction of the proposed Georgian bay ship canal. Buffalo handles 148,000,000 bushels of grain annually, most of it bound for foreign ports, and it is to eliminate the heavy terminal and elevator charges and the cost of breaking cargo that this new water route is chiefly desired. The cost of carrying from Buffalo to New York is greater than the freight from New York to Liverpool.

It is impossible to say just how much export traffic New York city has at stake, but it is known that the region tributary to the Great Lakes develops 40,000,000 tons of freight a year, a large portion of which is destined for export and ultimately finds its way out through the harbor of New York.

The Canadian promoters do not hesitate to claim that they would get 7,000,000 tons for their new canal, at a conservative estimate, during the first year of its operation.

While New York, Buffalo, and Boston would have most to lose, the new waterway would have its effect also on Philadelphia, Baltimore, Newport News, New Orleans, Galveston, and other Southern ports from which flow the foodstuffs sent to Europe by the farmers of our great Middle West. Commerce flows in the channels which are shortest and in directions which offer least resistance. A water route which would enable produce to reach foreign markets from lake ports without breaking bulk is a route which every railroad man is willing to admit will take the largest share of all "dead freight."

But New York's loss would be Duluth's and Chicago's gain. Changing the point of view the canal looks like an almost unmitigated blessing. Every city or citizen (not engaged in the railroad business) west of Buffalo to the Rocky mountains, and north of Memphis, Tenn., would be pleased to find in the canal a shorter and cheaper road to the foreign market where he sells his produce.

The middleman, the elevator man and the railroad would be largely eliminated and the manufacturer or farmer would be much closer to the actual buyer and consumer.

Every Western lake port would become also a sea port, open to all but the largest ocean-going vessels, and from these ports freight would move, not only abroad, but up and down the Atlantic seaboard, and, when the Panama canal is completed, even to San Francisco and the Pacific ports.

Lake vessel owners would welcome a canal which would permit them to escape during the winter months when navigation is closed. Three or four months of every year this great fleet, representing millions of capital invested, is forced to remain idle. If they could get to the ocean they would always find profitable employment in the coastwise trade.

A person not familiar with this geography would undoubtedly be surprised to learn that the distance from Duluth or Chicago to Buffalo via the Great Lakes is practically the same as the distance from Duluth or Chicago to Montreal via the Georgian bay route. It is estimated that twenty-four hours will be sufficient for a vessel to pass the thirty-eight locks of the canal and river, so the voyage would be made to the seaboard in nearly as short a time as is now required to reach Buffalo.

All the reports received by the state department from consular agents and others confirm the prediction that the canal is likely to be soon authorized. The cost, which seems trifling when compared with projects like the Panama canal, is even less than it was first supposed, and it has been estimated that the $65,000,000 so invested would earn by tolls at least 7 per cent, if no more than 7,000,000 tons of freight per annum were ever carried.

St. Paul, June 20.—James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railroad, in discussing this project of Canada, said:

"Take the grain business going to the seaboard from north of St. Louis and as far west as grain grows in the Platte valley, and it would not be difficult to see it leave and seek the sea by way of the St. Lawrence.

"If the Georgian bay canal is built—as I believe it will be—from Georgian bay to the eastern portion of Lake Huron, up French river, up the divide to the Ottawa system of lakes, it would involve the construction of thirty-two miles of canal with twenty feet of water in the reaches. Only thirty-two miles of actual canal to build, and for the remainder of the distance existing waters could be used, with some dredging in the Ottawa river. The distance from Chicago or Duluth to Montreal is, I think, fifteen miles shorter than it is to Buffalo, going around the state of Michigan.

"If they build that canal grain could go from Chicago or from Duluth to deep water at Montreal for 2½ cents a bushel. Refrigerator ships could load direct from the packing houses in Chicago and sail from there, drawing twenty feet or nineteen feet of water, to any port in the world during the season of open water. The St. Lawrence is open when the lakes are open.

"The present Canadian government has just been returned and I think the canal is probably the most popular thing they will ever have to do. For that reason I think there is no doubt of its being built. I know that the people up there are very much taken up with the possibilities. They think it is of vastly more importance than some other things they have in hand, although they are spending from $80,000,000 to $85,000,000 for building a railroad from Moncton, N. B., to Manitoba."

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

FUN PROVES EXPENSIVE

William Brotherton Fined $40 For Using Dr. Keyes' Rig.

William Brotherton, a young man residing in West Duluth, aged 21 years, was this morning sentenced by Judge Ensign to pay a fine of $40, with the alternative of spending forty days at hard labor in the county jail.

Brotherton was charged with having unlawfully and without the permission of the owner taken possession of a horse and buggy belonging to Dr. C. R. Keyes of West Duluth, June 17 last. He was examined in municipal court yesterday and was bound over to the next grand jury. Taking advantage of the new law which permits persons accused of certain offenses to make application to the district court for the privilege of pleading guilty and receiving immediate sentence, young Brotherton was arraigned on an information filed this morning by the county attorney and entered his plea of guilty.

The information in his case, and which were borne out by his admissions to the court were that while in a state of intoxication he unhitched Dr. Keyes' horse, while the physician was calling on a patient, and drove away with it, resisting the attempts of an officer to put him under arrest, the whole affair appearing more in the nature of a drunken spirit of bravado rather than criminal intent.

When asked by Judge Ensign if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed, Brotherton said: "Once in a while I take a drink, a glass of beer, but sometimes I get out with a bunch of fellows and get a little too much."

The court then gave the young man an earnest talk in which it was pointed out to him that he was taking the wrong course, that if he persisted he would not only bring the present disgrace on himself, but would disgrace his family. The court stated that he had known the family name for a long time, and that he was surprised to see any person bearing the name in court pleading to an offense as charged. He advised Brotherton to hereafter abstain entirely from intoxicating drinks, bearing in mind his punishment in this instance and to prevent a repetition of trouble in the future. The court gave the young man several other suggestions to think over if he should be elected to serve out his time in jail.

Even though young Brotherton served his alloted time of forty days, in lieu of his fine, he will be discharged from custody at least twenty days before the grand jury meets. Were it not for the new law permitting him to plead guilty to an information on his own application to the court, he would have to remain in jail over sixty days awaiting the meeting of the grand jury; then, if indicted, he would have to stand chance of trial, or the chance of getting a long term in jail on a plea of guilty, after he had already been held so long awaiting the grand jury's action.

As the case stands, he was arrested and taken before municipal court yesterday, arraigned and sentenced this morning and is now entering on his sentence.

The several cases that have thus far been disposed of under the new law are convincing to the court and the county authorities that it is not only a great time-saver for the person accused, but it is economical for the county in that it saves the grand jury a great deal of work and saves the county several months' board of prisoners.

GRAND OPENING

Will be held at John A. Erickson's new confectionery store, Tuesday afternoon and evening of June 20th, 1905, corner of Twenty-first avenue west and First street. Carnations given away after 8 o'clock p. m. All are welcome.

NAVAL MILITIA NOW HAS BAND

The Duluth Naval Reserve has a full fledged band. Hereafter when the members of the state militia march the streets behind Flaaten's Third Regiment band, the Minnesota Naval Reserve will with their oars keep time to the music of La Brosse's Minnesota Naval Militia band, the name by which this musical aggregation will hereafter be known.

For some time past the officers of the Naval Reserve have been making arrangements to have a band strictly identified with the Naval Reserve, and Mr. La Brosse, the well-known and popular conductor and proprietor of La Brosse Military band, has, with twenty others of his musicians, regularly enlisted in the Minnesota Naval Reserve, and will constitute its band. The band will be fitted out with appropriate uniforms, and will be one of the important additions to any future "doings" of the sailor militia. It is quite likely that La Brosse's Naval Militia band will accompany the reserves when they go to Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to join the Fern in a week's cruise on Lake Superior.

The La Brosse band is comprised of young men, all eligible for enlistment in the reserve, and, as a musical organization, it is considered as one of the best at the Head of the Lakes.

WISCONSIN WINS AGAINST RAILROAD.

Madison, Wis., June 20.—The state won a point today in the test suit brought against the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad company to recover $10,000 damages for alleged failure of the railroad to report full gross earnings. Judge Stevens ruled that although the railroad commissioner marked reports sent him "Approved," this was not final and the state has the right to go back of such reports. This point had been under consideration early a week.

ITS TENTH MEETING

Annual Convocation of Episcopal Church of Duluth District.

Chaplains Conduct Examination of Applicants For Promotion.

The tenth convocation of the Episcopal church for the Duluth district, will begin tomorrow morning with a celebration of the holy communion in Trinity chapel, Twentieth avenue east and Superior street, beginning at 9 o'clock. At this service the commemorative portion of the bishop's address will be delivered.

Some of the clergymen and deacons have already arrived in the city and today a number of applicants for promotion were before the examining board of chaplains. The program, following the holy communion services, is as follows:

9:30 a. m.—The clergy and catechists will meet in the Sunday school rooms of St. Paul's church, and are requested to bring their vestments.

8 p. m.—Reception to the clergy, delegates and the churchmen of Duluth at the Episcopal residence.

GRADUATES FIVE NURSES

The graduating exercises of the nurses' class of the St. Luke's hospital training school, will be held from the St. Paul's Episcopal church this evening, beginning at 7:45 o'clock.

The address of the evening will be delivered by Rev. Theodore Sedgwick, rector of the St. Paul the Evangelist church, at St. Paul.

The exercises will be followed by a reception at the rectory for the friends of the graduates and friends of the hospital.

There will be five members of the graduating class this year. These are Mabel Miller, Danville, Cal.; Lillian C. Anderson, Duluth; Adda Knox, Marquette, Mich.; Clara I. Reed, Paisley, Ont.; Una I. Morrison, Carr Bridge, Scotland.

SMALL DAMAGE.

The flame started in one of the bedrooms in the second story and the cause is unknown. The principal damage was done by smoke and water, and the flames were quickly gotten under control by the firemen.

TERBURG WINS RACE.

Overcame All Obstacles.

Court Commissioner C. E. Adams, this morning, united in marriage two young people who have gone to a great deal of trouble to have a wedding in Duluth. The contracting parties were Miss Christina Norell of Pine county and Elick Torell of St. Louis county.

FEED YOUNG GIRLS
Must Have Right Food While Growing.

Great care should be taken at the critical period when the young girl is just merging into womanhood that the diet shall contain all that is upbuilding, and nothing harmful.

At that age the structure is being formed and if formed of a healthy, sturdy character, health and happiness will follow; on the other hand unhealthy cells may be built in and a sick condition slowly supervene which, if not checked, may ripen into a chronic disease and cause life-long suffering.

A young lady says:

"Coffee began to have such an effect on my stomach a few years ago, that I was compelled to quit using it. It brought on headaches, pains in my muscles and nervousness.

"I tried to use tea in its stead, but found its effects even worse than those I suffered from coffee. Then for a long time I drank milk alone at my meals, but it never helped me physically, and at last it palled on me. A friend came to the rescue with the suggestion that I try Postum Coffee.

"I did so, only to find at first, that I didn't fancy it. But I had heard of so many persons who had been benefited by its use that I persevered, and when I had it brewed right found it grateful in flavor and soothing and strengthening to my stomach. I can find no words to express my feeling of what I owe to Postum Food Coffee!

"In every respect it has worked a wonderful improvement—the headaches, nervousness, the pains in my side and back, all the distressing symptoms yielded to the magic power of Postum. My brain seems also to share in the betterment of my physical condition; it seems keener, more alert and brighter. I am, in short, in better health now than I ever was before, and I am sure I owe it to the use of your Postum Food Coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

The groom yesterday attempted to get the marriage license in St. Louis county, but could not do so under the existing state laws. He went down to Pine county, secured a license from the clerk of the county where his bride has resided and then came back to Duluth to be married.

NOTED DIVINE TO PREACH

Dr. Hingeley of Minneapolis to Speak In First M. E. Church.

Rev. M. S. Rice of the First Methodist church, accompanied by his wife and two children, left yesterday for Mr. Rice's old home near Emporia, Kan., to attend a reunion of the Rice family. He will be absent from his pulpit next Sunday and it will be filled by two noted divines in Methodism. The morning service will be conducted by Rev. E. C. Clemans, D. D., presiding elder of the Duluth district, and the evening service will be conducted by Rev. J. B. Hingeley, D. D., of Minneapolis.

The latter is presiding elder of the Litchfield district of the church, and is also secretary of the general conference of the Methodist church. Dr. Clemans, of course, is known as one of the leading Methodist divines of the state and Dr. Hingeley is equally as well known and is considered one of the leading lights of the Methodist church in America.

Mr. Rice will be back from Emporia for the services of a week from Sunday, but will be absent the Sunday after that. This will be occasioned by his going to Denver to attend the international convention of the Epworth league, the Methodist young people's auxiliary society.

This international convention will meet on July 5 and Rev. Mr. Rice will have charge of the devotional exercises each day, taking personal leadership of devotional meetings once each day during the convention and having supervision over the other devotional services.

The international convention of the Epworth league is held only once every two years and it comprises all the branches of the league among North and South Methodists of the United States and the Methodists of Canada.

NORSE SINGERS SEE PRESIDENT

Who Listens to Their Singing With Much Pleasure.

Washington, June 20.—The Norwegian singers wound up their visit to the United States yesterday at the White House, where President Roosevelt listened to their singing of the Norwegian national anthem, "Yes, We Love This Country," followed, at his request, by "The Star Spangled Banner" in English.

President Roosevelt made a short address, in which he said he was pleased to see them and that he had a great admiration for the nation and hoped more Norwegians would come to this country and become citizens. He also told them of his interest in the Norwegian sages, of his essays in other directions, particularly the use of skis, at which he was not very successful. This lasta statement was greeted with laughter by members of the society.

Dr. Thomsen, responding to the president's address, said the members of the society had had a good time in this country, and that their pleasure was crowned by their reception by the head of the nation.

There was no mention of Norwegian independence, or of any recent happenings in Scandinavia, that being one of the conditions made when the president was asked to receive the singers, and accepted by Mr. Roosevelt.

Court Denies New Trial.

In the suit brought by J. J. LeTourneau against Bright's Mercantile agency, in which Mr. LeTourneau sought and recovered damages for services rendered in the way of printing and publications, Judge Dibell has denied the motion of the mercantile agency for a vacation of the verdict, judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or for a new trial. The court holds that the matter was fairly presented to the jury.

PROTRACTED CONFERENCE

Of Mayor Weaver With Counsel Arouses Expectation.

Philadelphia, June 20.—There is an air of expectancy about the city hall today, due to a protracted conference in the mayor's office, the participants being Mayor Weaver, Former Judge Gordon and Attorney Joseph Sauerbach of New York, the mayor's private counsel; Thomas L. Hicks, assistant director of public works, and Acting Chief Webster of the filtration bureau.

Blue prints and papers were brought to the conference by Chief Webster, and it is generally understood that contracts were the subject of discussion.

The disclosures in connection with the investigation into the construction of the Torresdale boulevard may result in the annulment of the contract now held by the McNicol firm, or the contractors may be merely required to do the work over again and rectify all faults in construction discovered by the preliminary investigation. Mayor Weaver has not yet announced what steps he will take in the matter, but in view of the report submitted to him, showing the use of rotten rock in the foundation bed of the boulevard, and the violation of the specifications of the contract, it would occasion no surprise should he have the contract annulled. Should he order the work done over again, it would entail a heavy loss on the contractors.

CERTIFICATES ARE RAISED

Philadelphia, June 20.—The Philadelphia Stock exchange sent a notice to its members today warning them against negotiating stock certificates bearing the name of Benj. H. Gaskill or Benj. H. Gaskill & Co. Back of this is said to be a sensational story of forgery and raising of certificates involving hundreds of thousands of dollars. The discovery of the irregularity was made by E. C. Miller & Co., bankers and brokers.

Benj. H. Gaskill, senior member of the first named firm died three weeks ago. One of his customers transferred his account to Miller & Co. and in the account was a certificate of 100 shares of Philadelphia Traction company worth about $10,000. It subsequently developed that the certificate had been raised from one share. The discovery created a sensation in financial circles as it is reported that many spurious transactions of the same sort have been made. One bank is said to have loaned $225,000 on raised certificates. The administrators of the Gaskill estate are making an investigation and a statement is promised.

WILL MEET AUGUST 1

Russia Agrees to Japs' Date For Meeting of Representatives.

St. Petersburg, June 20.—Russia, the Associated Press is officially informed, finds no objection to August 1, as suggested by Japan for the date of the meeting of the plenipotentiaries, and instructions will be sent to Ambassador Cassini to accept it.

In spite of the dispatches from Washington, indicating the possibility that Count Takahira and Count Cassini may sign a temporary armistice before the end of the week, the foreign office declared positively that there have been no official exchanges on the subject. Indeed, according to the view expressed by the foreign offices' recognized mouthpiece, there is not much expectation that a suspension of hostilities can be arranged. At the same time it is readily agreed that the prospects of peace might be advanced if a battle could be avoided pending the meeting.

According to the reports current in this city some preliminaries, looking to an armistice have already taken place between Gen. Linevitch and Field Marshal Oyama, but the war office offers no confirmation of this. On the contrary, the news from the front, although meagre, all seems to indicate that the Japanese advance has already begun.

CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION

Excelsior, Minn., June 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Minnesota Bankers' association began a two-days' session here today with an attendance of 200 members.

The feature of the meeting was an address by P. D. Gifford of Sleepy Eve, president of the association, in which he urged the bankers to organize a co-operative association for fidelity, casualty and burglary insurance.

During the past thirty-three years, as Mr. Gifford figured, the Minnesota banks had paid to surety companies for such insurance premiums aggregating $1,087,413.86.

During the same period the losses sustained by such companies in Minnesota had been $417,700.

J. F. Kerr, assistant comptroller of the American Surety company of New York, spoke in favor of the adoption by the banks of a money order system, similar to that of the postoffice and express companies, by which orders could be obtained or cashed at any time of day. President O. H. Havill of the Merchants' National Bank of St. Cloud gave the opening address.

PRESIDENT LYNCH VOTED OUT OF OFFICE.

Meriden, Conn., June 20.—The Evening Times says that Edward J. Lynch of Brooklyn, president of the International Union of Polishers, Buffers and Metal Workers of North Amcrica, has been voted out of office. Edward P. Coyle of this city, one of the official counters at the recent election, announced the result today. E. P. Grout of Kenosha, Wis., is Mr. Lynch's successor. The fight was one of the hottest that has ever taken place in the order, the majority of the successful candidate being but 116. There are 20,000 members of the union throughout the country. J. J. Cullen was elected secretary and treasurer.

REVENUE COLLECTOR AT PHILA. REMOVED.

Washington, June 20. — Clarence Messer was removed today by President Roosevelt as collector of internal revenue at Philadelphia. Mr. Messer was formerly a clerk in the copyright department in the congressional library here, and was involved in the Salter election frauds. The investigation was made by the civil service commission, and his removal is the result of that investigation.

ADVANCE IN WHEAT

Wet Weather and Crop Damage Reports Make Higher Prices.

Southwest Tells of Disappointing Yields—Market Dull.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 20.—Crop damage stories and weather scares caused a sharp advance in the price of wheat today. Rust reports were again coming from the spring wheat fields, and heavy rains were reported in North Dakota, with forecasts for more. From the Southwest the bad news was mostly in the shape of disappointing threshing returns. The July option in Northwestern markets has ceased for the time being at least of having much interest, and the same is about true of Chicago. In St. Louis, however, it advanced ⅞-1c, in Kansas City 1⅝c, and in New York 1c. The September option advanced 1¼c in Duluth, 1-1⅛c in Chicago and St. Louis, 1⅜-½c in Minneapolis, ⅝c in New York, and 1⅛-1¼c in Kansas City.

The Liverpool market was unchanged to ⅛d lower. London and Antwerp unchanged. Berlin ¼c lower, and Budapesth 1¼c lower. Broomhall reports the French crop as officially estimated at 288,000,000 bushels, against 297,600,000 bushels last year.

Stocks of wheat at Minneapolis have decreased 250,000 bushels in the first half of the week.

Primary receipts of wheat were 242,291 bus, last year 279,563 bus. Shipments 285,755 bus, last year 144,145 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 5,377 bus.

The world's visible supply of wheat, according to Bradstreet, decreased 2,737,000 bus last week, with a decrease east of the Rockies of 1,837,000 bus, and in Europe and afloat of 900,000 bus.

In the Liverpool market corn closed unchanged to ¼d lower. In the Chicago market September corn closed ⅛-⅝c higher. September oats closed ⅝c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 948,000 bus, last year 644,869 bus. Shipments 393,382 bus, last year 482,545 bus. Clearances were 17,105 bus. Bradstreet reported a decrease of 484,000 bus in the world's visible supply of corn.

Trading in wheat was dull on the Duluth board and what interest there was largely in the old September option. It opened ⅛c higher at 88⅜c, advanced to 89¼-⅜c and then fell back to 89c, but again rallied to 89⅜-½c. The close was at 89⅜c, an advance for the day of 1¼c. The new September had the same advance, closing at 84½c, and the same relative difference was maintained between them all morning, though the new option was dull. There was nothing doing in July which closed ⅛o higher at $1.11½.

Cash offerings were very light. Durum wheat declined 2c.

Flax was very dull. September closed ½c lower at $1.28½, and October and July unchanged.

Oats advanced ½c and there was a decline in September rye of ½c.

Wheat to arrive, No. 1 northern, 1.11½; on track, No. 1 northern, $1.11½; No. 2 northern, $1.03½. Durum, No. 1, 81c; No. 2, 83c; July, $1.11½; September, new, 84¼c; September, old, 89¼c. Flax to arrive, $1.48; on track, $1.48; July, $1.45; September, $1.28½; October, $1.26½. Oats to arrive, 31½c; on track, 31½c. Rye on track, 72c; September, 60½c. Barley: Feed, 39½@41.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 26; last year, 64; oats, 12; barley, 10; flax, 9; last year, 27.

Shipments: Wheat, 112,408; oats, 2,500; rye, 2,175.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Demand From Commission Houses Strengthens Wheat.

Chicago, June 20.—An active demand from commission houses caused strength in the wheat market here today, notwithstanding generally favorable weather conditions for the new crop. The demand met with only small offerings resulting in an advance of 1c in the price of the July delivery. That option opened a shade to ⅛@¼c lower at 87¾c to 87⅞c, but soon sold up to 88⅞c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 180 cars against 202 cars last wetk and 217 cars a year ago.

Later the market gained additional strength on reports of rains in the Northwest. Precipitation was reported especially heavy throughout the Red River valley. Shorts were active bidders during the last half of the session. With comparatively light offerings July advanced to 89¼c. The market closed strong with July up 1⅝@¼c at 89¼c.

As a result of liberal purchases by several prominent commission houses, sentiment in corn was decidedly bullish. The strength was more remarkable in view of the greatly increased receipts. July opened unchanged to a shade higher at 53¾c to 53¾@¼c and advanced to 54¼c. Local receipts were 745 cars, with 213 of contract grade.

Bullish sentiment was well maintained the entire session, reduced stocks, light acceptances, and an active shipping demand bringing out continued demand from shorts and commission house. At the close July was up 1⅜c at 54½c.

Strength of wheat and corn was the main factor in the oats market. The volume of trading was fairly large. July opened ⅛c lower at 30⅞c and advanced to 31¼c. Local receipts were 163 cars.

Provisions were easier in sympathy with a 5c decline in the price of hogs. September pork was off 7½c at $12.96. Lard was down 5c at $7.40. Ribs were 2½@5c lower at $7.80.

Close: Wheat—July, 89¼c; September, 84¾c; December, 84¾c. Corn—July, 54½c; old, 54¾@⅞c; September, 52⅝c; old, 53c; December, 48⅞@49c; old, 50¼c; May, 49c. Oats—June, 31½c; July, 31½c; September, 29¾c; December, 30¾c; May, 32½c. Pork—July, $12.52½; September, $12.82½@12.85; October, $12.87½@12.90. Lard—July, $7.22½; September, $7.40@7.42½; October, $7.45. Ribs—July, $7.55; September, $7.55@7.77½; October, $7.82½. Rye — July, 66c; September, 62⅝c. Flax — Cash Northwestern, $1.43; Southwestern, $1.25. Timothy—June, $3.00; September, $3.30. Clover—June, $11.75@12.00. Barley—Cash, 42@56c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The unfavorable weather may gave the market a firm start, and early in the session trade was again excited by bad reports from spring and winter wheat countries. Much alarm is felt by the Southwest trade over the Kansas position, as that state is getting too much moisture. Rains have been continuous throughout the Southwest, and if continued, will not only delay harvesting, but result in serious damage. Outside markets were as strong, if not stronger than Chicago. The close tonight is strong at practically the high point of the day. The action of the market continues to hold out quite a little promise. It responds easily to very moderate buying. If the present unfavorable conditions continue it can but result in higher prices. We still feel would buy wheat on the set-backs.

Corn—This market was strong right from the start, and notwithstanding the larger receipts and a slowing down in the cash demand, profit taking sales were readily absorbed. The feeling seems to be general that new crop is receiving altogether too much moisture. The statistical position is undoubtedly strong, but we do not like to get enthusiastic on the bulges.

Oats—Market ruled altogether in sympathy with corn. Principal trade came from short covering, commission houses buying on both sides in a moderate way. The market may sell some higher if corn continues to advance, but we do not like the bull side considering present crop promise.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Cables were lower this morning, but prices for wheat were advanced a cent and a half in an hour from the opening on reports of general rains in the Southwest and the Ohio valley. Harvesting is now well under way in the Southwest and threshing returns so far, have been very favorable. As we have stated before, weather conditions are the main controlling factors in the market on values and must continue to be for some time to come. On any indications of clearing weather in that section, we believe that wheat could be safely sold on the next spots for good returns.

• • •

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Ben Bryan says: "If we are going to have the big receipts of fine new winter wheat so early from the Southwest as many predict, it looks to me wise for holders of July to dispose of same, and if they must be long wheat to replace it with September.

• • •

Chicago Inter-Ocean: Bolly, the agricultural crop expert of North Dakota, who was quoted last week as predicting damage by rust, says: "I am not predicting black rust. The spores are in evidence, as they are every year, but are not doing the least harm. I consider the crop outlook to date as never better."

• • •

Broomhall, Liverpool: Following is the weekly crop summary:

United Kingdom—The past week has been the most favorable of the season.

Germany—Generally favorable conditions of the crop.

Roumania-Bulgaria—Damage by storms is unimportant, and prospects are now excellent.

Italy—Moderate complaints of damage to the crop.

Denmark—Reports are unfavorable.

• • •

Chicago: "Flour business has been good here the last week," a wire from Toledo said. "Double that of a year ago this time and half larger than a month ago. Buyers insist and beg for quick shipment, which means flour stocks are low and looks as if they would take freely of flour as soon as new crop wheat is available. One milling concern is sold ahead thirty days on the basis they have been running for a year, 6,000 bbls. weekly, and with increase production on Monday and next week to make quick shipments. Elevator stocks here are not over 50,000 and not 15,000 bus. of that is milling wheat."

POPULATION INCREASES

Returns From St. Louis County Show Large Gains.

St. Paul, June 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Returns from St. Louis county, received by the state census bureau, indicate a heavy increase in the population of that district.

Three small towns, the population of which was 254 according to the last census, now figure 739. There are villages in the county which show even a greater increase.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

New York, June 20.—Opening prices showed small gains on an unimportant volume of dealings. A rise of a point in New York Central was the widest change in the active list. Great Northern and Ann Arbor preferred advanced 1½.

Buying orders were increased for Copper and Sugar. Trading in the representative railroad stocks, while larger than of late was still small. Leading Western railroad stocks such as St. Paul, Union Pacific and Atchison rose good fractions and the general level averaged ⅛ or more above yesterday's close. Lake Erie & Western gained 1¾, Sugar 1⅝, D. & H. 1¼, and Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis, Amalgamated Copper and Lead 1.

New buying orders came into the market and trade had more appearance of life than for some time. The Metropolitan stocks and the Steel Industrials were in special demand, Northwestern rose 2⅜, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred 1⅜, Tennessee Coal 1½, Metropolitan Street Railway 1¼ and Union Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, Wheeling & Lake Erie first preferred, Colorado Fuel and Metropolitan Securities 1. New York Air Brake fell 2⅜, Tobacco preferred 1¾ and Malting preferred and Federal Mining preferred 1. Realizing in Reading carried it ⅝ below yesterday and checked the rise elsewhere. Bonds were steady at noon.

Supporting orders were distributed in Reading after 12 o'clock, and it recovered its loss easily. Prices elsewhere were not altered essentially, and the market showed signs of falling into its recent rut. United States Steel preferred improved a point. Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha 1½, and Corn Products preferred 2. Ann Arbor and Kansas City Southern preferred lost 1.

To the encouraging corn and cotton crop bulletin of the weather bureau was assigned the reason for the upward movement in some of the Southern and Southwestern stocks. Very little interest was manifested in either grangers, coalers or steel industrials. Kansas & Texas preferred hardened 1, Louisville & Nashville, Tennessee Coal 2, and Illinois Central 1, Atlantic Coast Line 2½. New York Air Brake rallied from 146 to 150.

The advance was followed to the extent of a point by St. Paul, St. Louis Southwestern preferred, the Smelting stocks, Pressed Steel Car and United Railway & Investment preferred, North American and General Electric rose 1½ and United Railway investment 1⅝. The Southern railroad stocks were sold lightly to realize. The Pittsburg Coal stocks lost 1. The closing was quiet and about steady.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed strong and much higher, with a decidedly improved tone. One incentive to cause traders to work for higher prices is the large gain reported so far this week by the banks from the subtreasury. Another bull theory is that July disbursements of interest and dividends will go back into the stock market for reinvestment. The action of the market continues quite gratifying, and the strength displayed by Steel stocks and other issues so industriously sold by the bears is causing much uneasiness amongst the shorts. Market seems to bear out our former theory that the list is badly oversold and in a position to advance sharply on aggressive buying or favorable news.

• • •

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been quite strong in tone today and has shown a considerable increase in activity. There was more activity and the trading was largely professional. Most stocks scored net advances and at the close prices were about the best of the day. The list finished strong, noteworthy strength was shown by bonds of the better class and there was new firmness in such high grade stocks as Illinois Central, Louisville, C. N. W., etc.

• • •

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was steady and quite strong. There was some good buying in the Steels on the report of good earnings and the whole market joined in. Some of the specialties were taken forward and advanced. The volume of business was some larger, but there was nothing aggressive about the buying. Traders were bullish for a turn and forced some short covering. The close was steady and rather bullish.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, June 20.—Prime mercantile paper, 3½@4½ per cent. Sterling exchange easy, closing steady with actual business in bankers bills at $4.87.15@20 for demand and at $4.85.20@25 for 60 days' bills; posted rates, $4.86 and $4.88; commercial bills, $4.85. Bar silver, 55⅝c; Mexican dollars, 45¼c. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds irregular. Money on call easy, 2@2¼ per cent; closing bid, 2; offered at 2¼; time money firmer, 60 days, 3 per cent; 90 days, 3¼; 6 months, 3¾@4.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 20.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 1 point to a decline of 3 points, but generally unchanged in line with cables about as expected and the absence of any change in weather conditions. Trading was quiet pending the weekly crop report at midday and fluctuations during the early session were narrow and irregular, but with Liverpool showing firmness and reports from spot markets bullish, prices gradually worked up to a net advance of 6@7 points.

Cotton, spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 9.15; do. gulf, 9.40. Sales none.

Futures closed barely steady; June, 8.42; July, 8.50; August, 8.55; September, 8.62; October, 8.69; November, 8.73; December, 8.79; January, 8.81; February, 8.83; March, 8.86; April, 8.88; May, 8.92.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: At times today there was quite a little doing in the market and gains were made all along the line. The Steel stocks were very strong and Amalgamated sold up at the close. The Boston market showed a little activity in spots. Michigan selling at 13¾, Utah at 45. The coppers should develop more activity and higher prices before long if New York continues to hold the way it does at present.

ACCIDENTAL DROWNING

No Marks of Violence on Body of Missing Boy.

According to word received by Humane Agent Withrow this morning, the coroner returned a verdict of accidental drowning in the inquest held over the body of Frank Wierimen, which was found yesterday in West Two rivers, near Superior.

Chief of Police James Beatty, who found the body, was Mr. Withrow's informant. He stated that the body was found 1,364 yards from the place where the boy was last seen alive. There were no marks of violence on it, but it was badly decomposed.

The boy disappeared from the streets of Tower on June 3 and had not been or heard of again until yesterday, in spite of a persistent search.

A reward of $30 was offered by the vilage council and an additional $10 by the Humane society.

BUSINESS AT A STANDSTILL

Fight of Factions For Political Control In Beltrami.

Bemidji, Minn., June 20.—Excitement over the election of a successor to County Attorney Loud, resigned, grows daily.

The election of county commissioners to succeed Sibley and Wright, removed by Governor Johnson, resulted in the selection of I. B. Olson of Bemidji and Charles E. Saxerud of the town of Maple Ridge.

A meeting of the board of county commissioners was immediately called to elect a county attorney when it was discovered that Wesley Wright, removed by Governor Johnson, claimed that he was still a commissioner and entitled to participate in the proceedings of the board, and a restraining order issued by Judge Spooner was served upon the newly elected commissioner, I. B. Olson, forbidding him to take part in the proceedings of the board.

Arguments upon this order were heard before Judge McClennahan at Grand Rapids, Chester McKusick appearing for Wesley Wright and Henry Funkley for I. B. Olson.

The prolonged fight for the political control of Beltrami county has held all public business at a standstill since February last. At the February meeting of the board of county commissioners, Chairman Andy Danaher, finding himself in the minority, refused to put motions and the board finally adjourned without transacting any business. Danaher then instituted the investigation which resulted in the removal of Commissioners Sibley and Wright and the resignation of County Attorney Loud.

Governor Johnson refused to allow the commissioners who are under fire to participate in the election of a successor to Loud, so that the county has been for months practically without a prosecuting officer, and there now appears to be no immediate prospect of a selection, inasmuch as both political factions seem determined to fight the matter through the supreme court. No public business has been transacted for five months and there is no prospect of the county's being able to do business for some time to come. Meanwhile both factions freely announce that the principal public business that will be done, when any is done, will be the punishment of the opposition.

Judge McClennahan is expected to make his decision before June 27, the date set for the next meeting of the board of county commissioners.

Marine.

BEESON'S DIRECTORY.

Marine Authority For 1905 Just Issued.

The seventeenth addition of Beeson's Marine Directory is just out and available for use for the season of 1905. Of Harvey C. Beeson, the publisher of Chicago, but little need be said for he is well known here. This derectory has always been the marine oracle of the inland seas of North America and this year surpasses anything that Mr. Beeson has yet attempted. In the way of current information regarding ships on the great lakes, their size, tonnage, place of building, etc., it is the most complete record and is down-to-the-second, even the boats still on the stocks about to be launched this year, being recorded just the same.

Pages 188 to 208 inclusive, deal with the semi-centennial of the opening of the Sault canal, and gives complete and valuable data concerning that great gateway to and from Lake Superior. Some superb cuts of the Sault, showing the first locks, and the development of the passageway and the industries in and around the Sault, are given in the book, which is worth securing by even those not interested in marine matters. The usual information concerning the boilers, rigging, etc., of ships, the names of the various vessels on the lakes, whether American or Canadian, a map of the lakes, table of distances, storm signals, and the like are all there.

The book is positively invaluable to anybody interested in marine, and both vessel owners and captains would feel that something essential were lacking in the world were the book not published year after year. Mr. Beeson has been publishing his directory since 1889 and it was, of course, a success from the start.

BIG BOAT COMING

Great Northern Ready For the Steamer North West.

Will Arrive on First Trip of Season Next Monday.

The North West, the Northern Steamship company's fine passenger steamer, will arrive in Duluth for the first time this season one week from today. It is due at 8 o'clock Monday evening, June 27, and will start on the return trip down the lake at 11:30 o'clock the same night, remaining at the Head of the Lakes only three hours and one-half.

From next Monday on the North West will make regular weekly trips through the remainder of the summer season, steaming into the local harbor every Tuesday evening and leaving before midnight, if on time. The last trip, according to her present plans, will be Sept. 5. It is believed that the boat will be even better patronized than usual this year, owing to the fact that a great many people on their way to the Lewis & Clark exposition at Portland will be desirous of making part of the trip, either going or coming, by water.

At Mackinac Island the North West will make close conenctions with the North Land, in commission between Buffalo, Chicago and Milwaukee. The Duluth boat will arrive at Mackinac at 8:30 a. m. Saturdays. The North West leaves on the return trip at 9 p. m. Saturday, Eastern time. The vessel also touches at Houghton, Harcock, Cleveland and Detroit. The North Land will make her first sailing from Chicago next Saturday, and the North West will leave Buffalo the same day.

For the first time this year passengers will have the choice of traveling by either the European or American plans on the Northern Steamship company's boats. Heretofore only the European plan has been employed.

Soo Extension Work.

Rapid progress has been made during the past few weeks in the construction of the Soo railroad from Thief River Falls to Kenmars. In the last section, from Munich, N. D., to Kenmare, N. D., about 40 per cent of the grade has been completed. Bridges over the East and West Mouse rivers in the Deep river country have been finished, and grading along the prarie stretches is now nearly all done. It is not believed that steel will be laid before September 1.

Crookston Has Grievance.

Crookston failed in her efforts to prevail upon the Northern Pacific and Great Northern roads to run excursion trains to that city from Winnipeg on July Fourth, and now her citizens are wrathy, and are making threats of vengeance, claiming that Grand Forks has been favored. It has been announced that specials will be run from the Canadian metropolis to Grand Forks. Crookston has planned a big celebration for the Fourth, and had figured on getting a large number of people from Canada. It seems Grand Forks got in her application first, and the roads explain that it will be impossible for them to grant both requests.

FARMER KILLED.

Thomas Glinn Struck By the Winnipeg Flyer.

Buffalo, Minn., June 20.—Thomas Glinn, a well-to-do farmer living near Buffalo, was struck by the Winnipeg Flyer at about 7 o'clock Sunday evening. He lived for half an hour, but did not regain consciousness. He was 38. A sister and two brothers survive him. He was returning to his farm after a two-days' spree, and when the train signaled its approach he failed to get far enough from the track to clear the locomotive.

GREETING TO STORTHING.

Hauge Synod Declines to Address the President.

Red Wing, June 20.—The Hague synod committee, to draft addresses to the Norweglan storthing and President Roosevelt reported that out of respect to Swedish brethern of this country no address should be sent to the president. They submitted the following address to the storthing, which was slightly amended and adopted as follows:

"To Norway's storthing: Hague synod in convention assembled sends greetings. In view of the many benefits and strong bonds that bind us to you as a people and church, we wish and pray that God in His wisdom may lead the present crisis to a happy termination for our fatherland. E. J. Eastvold, president; N. J. Lohre, secretary."

BURNED AT STAKE

Nome, Alaska, June 20.—News of horrifying deeds that marked a reign of terror in the native settlemtns of the Diomedi islands, Siberia, has reached here. Terrible scenes were enacted by natives, who were maddened by villainous whisky, supplied them by the crews of American whalers, according to the Siberian authorites, whose resentment of the Americans' conduct is bitter.

The burning of a young native woman at the stake, the hanging of a man and the shooting of three others, marked the orgies, which are attributed to the greed of the American trades, who gave the savages unlimited fire water in return for furs and ivory, using intoxicants unscrupulously to get the leading natives into such a condition that they were incapable of driving an intelligent bargain and were in consequence shamefully swindled.

The islands are seldom visited by ships and the Russian officials refuse to allow whisky to be sent the natives from the mainland, as serious consequence invariably follow when they are maddened by liquor.

When the American whalers stopped at the islands, therefore, they were eagerly welcomed by the chief men. Skillful questioning revealed that the stores of ivory and furs taken in the last winter were unusually large, and the whalers proceeded shrewdly to get them at low prices.

Liberal potations of raw spirits during the negotiations soon got the leading natives into such a condition that they forgot their own shrewdness and were willing to pay exorbitant prices in furs and ivory for the fiery liquor. The Americans encouraged their guests to drink, and gambling soon replaced bartering. When the whalers had obtained title to practically all the products of the hunting season, they insisted on the ivory and furs being taken on board the ships before the liquor given in payment was sent ashore.

The transfer having been made the Americans all went aboard the ships and left the natives to indulge themselves to the limit in a spree, for which there was plenty of inspiration, several barrels of whisky having changed hands.

The chief men being already drunk, all semblance of order vanished from the village when the whisky was opened. Both men and women took part in the orgy, which continued for days. Fighting soon began and continued almost incessantly, a score of men being wounded besides the three who were shot dead.

The burning of a young woman at the stake was the revival of an ancient savage rite, which appealed to the cruelty of the liquor-maddened village, all the natives dancing around the living torch. A man was hanged because of the enmity borne him by a chief of the village. The orgies continued until all the liquor had been spilled or drunk. The Americans sailed away before the end. The anger of the Siberian government has been aroused against the sailors, and they will be prohibited from trading on the islands again.

Insane Man Kills Himself In an Extraordinary Manner.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—Bertal Aase, aged 30, killed himself in the county jail in a novel manner. He twisted the chain of a toilet room around his neck, leaned forward and strangled to death. When found by Sheriff Turner he was standing almost upright, and the chain gave way at the first touch. Aase showed signs of insanity a year ago and was sent to his former home in Norway. Recovering, he came back and had been in the hosoital for a week. He became violent and was taken to the county jail and placed in a cellroom in the sheriff's residence.

Peter Hove, a well-to-do farmer, who moved from this county to Tunbridge, Pierce county, several years ago, hanged himself in a barn at Tunbridge. Hove owned several farms near the village, which he worked, and he and his wife also conducted a restaurant in the village. So far as known, he and his family got along pleasantly, and it is certain that his suicide was not the result of financial difficulties. Hove left the restaurant to look after some horses in a barn nearby. He remained away longer than usual, and a relative was sent to find him, his wife fearing that probably he had been injured by one of the horses. The man found Hove hanging to a beam in the barn, his toes almost touching the floor. It appears that Hove had secured a rope, stood on a box while he tied it around a beam and his neck, and then kicked the box away, strangling to death.

Mr. and Mrs. Engles, who own a farm, had charge of the postoffice. Both are over 60 years old. Engels was in Hankinson March 7, and secured a sum of money. That night four men broke into the Engels home, bound and gagged the aged couple, and threatened the lives of both to force them to tell where the money was hidden. Failing in this, they tortured Mrs. Engels by burning the soles of her feet. Engels made a dash for liberty and escaped in the darkness. The robbers fled. Mr. and Mrs. Engels went to the home of Charles McLaughlin.

Some time afterward Charles McKinstry was arrested in connection with a burglary at Fairmount. Recently he was brought from the pen to testify before the United States grand jury, and is said to have given testimony which led to the indictment of McLaughlin and Schulthies, as well as two others not yet arrested.

Minot—Judge E. B. Goss imposed the heaviest sentence ever pronounced upon a blindpigger in this state. Henry Steece of Sherwood, charged with violating an injunction restraining him from selling liquor in Ward county, was found guilty of contempt of court and sentenced to one year's imprisonment in the Ward county jail and fined $500 and costs, amounting in all to $650. In default of payment of the fine the Sherwood pigger is given 250 days' additional sentence.

In order that the county might be sure of securing the fine imposed upon Steece, the district court issued an order against the property owned by the defendant at Sherwood, and State's Attorney McGee was ordered to sell the property for the amount of the fine and costs. Injunctional orders have been served upon every "pigger" in Ward county, with the result that the business will be practically eradicated.

"Dad" Shaw's restaurant was the scene of a daring hoidup at 2 o'clock Monday morning, and four men are minus about $50. Chris Olson, Billy Kelley, George Ehr and "Dad" Shaw were enjoying a little lunch in a private diningroom of the place when two masked men entered and ordered the members of the party to throw up their hands, went through their pockets and took everything of value that could be found. Olson lost a diamond ring valued at $150 and $200 in cash. Ehr gave up his gold watch, valued at $65, and "Dad" Shaw, the proprietor, handed the robbers $175 in bills. According to the theory of the police the two men were evidently professionals who came into Minot to take in the races.

Wahpeton—The second trial of the famous Lauder vs. Jones libel case will be held this week if Judge Burke can arrange to come here to try it. The case has attracted much attention for three years. Lauder sued Jones for $10,000, claiming that Jones circulated libelous letters against him in the summer of 1902, when Lauder was a candidate for judge of the supreme court. In the first trial Lauder was given a verdict of $7,000, but the case was appealed and reversed after several hearings.

The Great Northern road will put in stock yards here this summer adjoining its tracks in the western part of the town. Accomodations for several cars of cattle will be provided.

Walcott—The Synod Lutheran church was struck by lightning and badly damaged.

Starkweather—Bruce Warren, the winner o fthe first prize in the Fort Totten land drawing, died suddenly on the farm he had selected near Sheyenne. He had recently married Miss Emma Fell of Acton.

The meeting of the Dunkards of the Dunkards of the district including North Dakota, Minnesota and Manitoba, will be held at Snyder lake, begining on the 20th.

Bantry—The State Bank of Bantry has incorporated with a capital of $10,000. Incorporators, D. N. Tallman, S. B. Owie, Willmar, Minn.; G. S. Ogren, Souris, N. D.; L. Helgerman, Bottineau; R. A. Fox, J. Christianson, Towner.

Grafton—News was received in the city today of the death of Mrs. John Hogg of Drayton, after a week's illness of nervous prostration. She left a husband and one little child.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Madison—A week ago the chief of police here received a telegram from a Mr. Cook of Miller, this state, warning him to prevent his daughter, Caroline Cook, a member of the normal graduating class, from leaving Madison until he could arrive here, as he had good reason to believe she was intending to marry a young man not indorsed by the family.

The trains were watched and the young woman made no attempt to leave town. A day or two later her father arrived, and after a long talk with his daughter he anounced to the authorities that she had given up all idea of elopement. On commencement day the young woman was graduated with honors, and at the close of the program entered a speedy automobile and was conveyed to Sioux Falls, where she married the young man of her choice.

While the father feels that he has been badly deceived, still, as the young woman was of legal age it is doubtful if his interference could have in any way altered the result. Miss Cook is highly spoken of by her instructors and classmates, was a good student and was expected to make a splendid teacher until matrimony interfered.

Deadwood—A large tract of denuded pine land near Custer park has just been replanted with pine trees under the supervision of L. C. Miller and O. T. Swan, who came from the government nursery in Nebraska. They have planted 40,000 yellow pine trees, 1-year-old, and 10,000 red fir.

Andover—Lightning struck the home of S. K. Esterby while all the members of the family were asleep. The bolt passed through the building in eight different places, one being but eight inches from the head of Charles Esterby as he lay in bed. He was uninjured.

Faulkton—The Faulk County Old Settlers association held its annual picnic in Miller's grove, near Devoe. The principal address was made by Congressman Eben W. Martin. Frank Turner also spoke, his subject being "Faulk County's First Settlers."

Elk Point—G. A. Powell, a contractor and builder of this city, fell from the roof of the new Morningside Catholic church at Sioux City, on which he was working, and sustained serious injuries.

Opens Office In Duluth.

The General Electric company of Schenectady, N. Y., has established an office in this city, and R. A. Swain has come here from Chicago to be the local agent. He has taken offices in the Providence building. Mr. Swain will be in charge of the Lake Superior district with his territory taking in Northern Michigan. This is an important move. The General Electric company is to furnish the generators for the Great Northern Power company and the water power development will open to electric companies a large business in this vicinity. This may have had something to do with the decision of the company to establish an office here, although the range of the Duluthh office is far wider than merely local.

NO LAW

Prohibiting Wearing Army or Navy Uniforms.

Washington, June 20.—The law officers of the war department here recently discovered to their great surprise and disgust that there is no law under which they can prohibit any person from wearing the regulation uniform of the army or navy. The war department has been wrestling with the case of an army officer who was permitted to resign "for the good of the service," but who still persists in wearing the uniform of his rank. It was first believed that he could be compelled to discard the honorable shoulderstraps, but after the law was carefully studied it was found there was no provision under which such action could be taken.

Any civilian with the bad taste so to do, and the money with which to pay for it, can wear the uniform of the lieutenant general of the army, although there is but one man in the country entitled to wear that particular kind of apparel.

At last there has been found a safe and reliable way to without the usual sickness and suffering. It is called

"B.B."

MANIAC FIRES HUNDRED DOLLAR BILLS FROM GUN

Then Shoots Nine People and Finally Kills Himself.

Thousand People Held at Bay For Over Two Hours In 'Frisco.

Fires on Street Cars and Suspends Traffic In Street.

San Francisco, June 21.—After holding 1,000 persons at bay for two hours in Eddy street early today, shooting nine people and defying the police, Thomas Lobb, a maniac, killed himself.

The dead:

THOMAS LOBB.

The wounded: W. S. Koffman, shot three times, wounds in cheek, nose and forehead; C. T. Chevalis, shot in the eye; W. Jones, wounds in the cheek; Emil Roberts, a boy, shot in the leg; Quon Du (Chinese) rifle bullet in hand; George A. Delaughlin, nine wounds, six in arm, two in hand and one in cheek; Vincent Romanto, shot in cheek and ear; Joseph Laribee, two shots in chin, one in lip, others in shoulders, face and arm; Policeman Patrick K. Shane, shot in cheek while firing from adjoining room. Seven shots passed through his helmet. All the victims were hit with No. 4 shot, except the Chinaman, who received a rifle ball.

The insane man was barricaded in his room on the fourth floor of the United States hotel, 123 Eddy street. Lobb went to the hotel last night at about 12 o'clock and this morning just before 7 o'clock began throwing furniture from the windows to the street. Several persons narrowly escaped being struck. Then he began firing, using a shotgun. He placed $50 and $100 bills in the muzzle of the weapon and fragments of the paper were scattered over the street. The first person he hit was shot at 7:15 o'clock. A big crowd quickly gathered and hundreds of men were prevented from passing the place by fear of being killed. Street car traffic was entirely suspended, after one car had been fired on and its windows broken.

At 8 o'clock Lieut. John Green of the police force rushed a strong squad to the scene, among the officers being several members of the crack rifle team of the department. They were unable to accomplish anything, however, as the maniac was strongly entrenched in his room and appeared to have an unlimited amount of ammunition.

None of the wounded will die. It was determined that he must be captured, dead or alive, and all the rooms adjoining the one he occupied were filled with armed officers. A lively fusilade wase begun through the door, transoms and walls of the madman's stronghold, to which he responded with remarkable rapidity. The plaster was scattered from the ceiling and walls, and the police were soon covered with the white flakes and nearly blinded by the lime. Officer Kassane attempted to peer through the transom, when he received a charge of shot which disfigured his face and completely riddled his helmet. Then Officer Hutchins descended from the roof to the room window, while the other policemen made an attack in force on the door.

When Hutchins saw the maniac's attention was diverted, he gave a prearanged signal by firing his revolver. Hearing the report from an unexpected quarter, the murederous lunatic rushed to the window which was open and literally blew off the top of his own head. The brains and fragments of the skull flew through the air into the street to the horror of the spectators who had assembled in the neighborhood, which is near the heart of the city.

Lobb was about 26 years old. He apparently was an Englishman and a stranger here. In his pocket was a card bearing the address of the British consul general and a receipt for baggage, showing that he was a recent arrival in San Francisco.

BOWEN DENOUNCED AND THEN REMOVED

Washington, June 21.—The dismissal of Herbert W. Bowen, for some years United States minister to Venezuela, and the exonerating of Assistant Secretary of State Francis A. Loomis from the allegations brought against him, are the outcome of the Bowen-Loomis controversy, which has attracted widespread attention for many months past. This disposition of the case is made by President Roosevelt, in a letter addressed to Secretary Taft, made public last night, approving Mr. Taft's findings and conclusions in the case.

The president scathingly arraigns Mr. Bowen, declaring that his conduct is especially reprehensible; that Mr. Bowen has for many months, indeed for the last two years, devoted himself to hunting up scandal and gossip until it became a monomania and caused him to show distinct disloyalty to the country he represented."

The president says he had hoped to promote Mr. Bowen, as during much of his service he had done good work, but that his usefulness in the diplomatic service is now at an end. The president adds that he would direct that Mr. Bowen's resignation be requested, but for his statement that he would consider a resignation as an admission of misconduct, and the dismissal is therefore ordered. The letter quotes correspondence and testimony. The president says it appears that Mr. Bowen, while minister, secured publication of attacks upon Mr. Loomis, and furnished to the press documents pending before the state department for approval; that his ex-

PISTOL FIGHT WITH CRACKSMEN

Chicago, June 21.—In a pistol fight early today between alleged safe blowers and policemen, Patrolman William McGeohegan was probably fatally injured and John Maloney, alleged to have been one of the cracksmen, was wounded in the stomach and leg.

Six policemen answered the alarm of an explosion in the butcher shop of David Schontz in the stockyards district. Two men were trying to make their escape when the policemen arrived. McGeohegan rushed on Maloney from a rear entrance, both firing their revolvers rapidly. Maloney was hit twice and the officer received wounds in the right arm and mouth. McGeohegan was found unconscious when the smoke cleared away. Maloney's companion, who gave his name as John O'Hern, was captured by the other officers and beaten into submission.

There were $300 in Schontz's safe. The robbers used an overcharge of nitro-glycerine which blew out one side of the building and shattered several windows in the vicinity. The injured were taken to hospitals.

MODERN WOODMEN RE-ELECT NEARLY ALL OF OLD OFFICERS

Milwaukee, June 21.—Election of head officers was the most important business of today's sessions of the head camp of the Modern Woodmen of America. With a single exception the more conspicuous positions were filled by the re-election of the incumbents, the exception being that of head banker. The elected officers are: Head consul, A. R. Talbot, Lincoln, Neb.; head adviser, Dan B. Hern, Davenport, Iowa; head clerk, Maj. Charles W. Hawes, Rock Island, Ill.; head banker, C. H. McNider, Mason City, Iowa; board of directors, George W. Reilly, chairman, R. R. Smith, C. J. Byrne, E. E. Murphy, A. N. Bert.

All the former members of the board were re-elected with the exception of C. G. Saunders of Council Bluffs, who declined further official honors. Director Bert was formerly head banker of the society.

A letter was read from William Loeb, secretary to President Roosevelt, acknowledging the receipt of the letter signed by Head Consul Talbot and others, inviting the president to attend the convention. Mr. Loeb said the president appreciated the courtesy, but regretting his inability to attend on the date mentioned owing to an engagement previously made to be present at a function at Williamstown, Mass.

The balance of the forenoon session was devoted to consideration of the law committee's report.

The proposal to increase the terms of head officers from two to three years was the only question of importance considered. No conclusion was reached up to the time of the noon recess.

PRESIDENT BELIEVED TO BE STRIVING HARD TO PREVENT BIG BATTLE

Believed Negotiations For an Armistice Are Proceeding.

St. Petersburg, June 21, 1:30 p. m.—President Roosevelt evidently has taken a new and important step in the negotiations between the belligerents. While there are collateral reasons for believing that it relates to an armistice which will prevent the impending battle in Manchuria this cannot be positively affirmed. All that can be stated definitely is that Ambassador Meyer went suddenly to the foreign office late last night and had an interview with Foreign Minister Lamsdorff at which it is believed, the ambassador communicated an important message from the president, but at neither the foreign office nor the American embassy, is the slightest light thrown on what transpired. From the extreme secrecy observed the matter beyond doubt is one of the greatest delicacy, but as the statement is vouchsafed at the foreign office that the negotiation are proceeding without a hitch, the inference follows that it relates to a new phase in which the president has again taken the initiative. This is the more certain since the communications between the belligerents relative strictly to the questions of the selection of place, time and the number of the plenipotentiaries were conducted naturally through Ambassador Cassini and Minister Takahira through the intermediary of the Washington government, whereas, according to diplomatic procedure only communications from the Washington government reach Foreign Minister Lamsdorff through Ambassador Meyer.

Washington, June 21.—It is intimated in official circles here that negotiations are proceeding looking to an armistice between Japan and Russia.

The stumbling block in the way of any armistice appears to be that neither belligerent is willing to take the initiative. The present negotiations, it is understood, consist of an effort to sound one or both governments as to their willingness to agree to an armistice.

There will be no official announcement here regarding the probability of an armistice before the president returns, nor is it certain that there will be anything to make public. The feeling in official circles here is strongly in favor of a cessation of hostilities, as it is believed that a clash before the convening of the peace conference would hamper the work of the plenipotentiaries and might prove a serious menace to their efforts for peace.

JAPANESE VICTORIES

Expected Shortly on the Manchurian Field.

London, June 21.—The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, at Tokio, sends the following: "The Japanese are continuing their victorious advance in Manchuria. The Russians have been completely outflanked on both wings, and news of Japanese victories may be expected shortly.

"The Japanese have considerably over half a million men in the field. Their preliminary operations began as far back as May 20. Two significant announcements have been made—the first, that the Japanese consul general has informed the viceroy of Liang Kiang that Admiral Uriu's squadron intends to cruise in the Yangtse river; and the second, that the British squadron, at Hongkong, will proceed to Wei Hai Wei and begin gun practice off Shantung province, on June 22.

"Your correspondent with the Japanese headquarters reports that Cossacks were repulsed with heavy losses, near Lian Huabo, June 16, but were considerably reinforced at Leikaton, and that another raid is expected. In the direction of Hallincheng, the Russinas have been reinforced by three divisions. Gen. Madolaroff commands the advance lines, and is trying to check the Japsnese northward advance. The Japanese expect good news shortly."

LONG SUPPRESSED NEWS

Concerning Sinking of Three Jap Battleships.

Victoria, B. C., June 21.—Long suppressed details were received in the mails yesterday from Japan of the loss of the ship Yashima, before Port Arthur, on May 15, 1904, disaster took place within five minutes of the loss of the battleship Hatsuse, from the same cause—a mine. When the Yashima struck the mine the Hatsuse and the cruiser Yoshimo were sinking. Capt. Shimto of the Yashima steamed at full speed for a Japanese base, sixty miles away, but when nearing the base, the Yashima was filling so fast that the idea of saving her was abondoned.

The crew were ordered to the Kasaiga and to the Totsuta, which were convoying the crippled battleship and the Yashima went down in twenty-five fathoms. The tops of her masts can still be seen above water. The squadron, which accompanied the Yashima when she was destroyed consisted of the Hatusue, Yoshimo, Shikishima, Kasagi and Totusta, three battleships and three cruisers. The Shikishima was also in danger of sinking when going to the assistance of the Yashima, but withdrew to safety because of warning signals by the Yashima by wireless telegraph. The mines which sunk the three Japanese vessels were laid by Capt. Wirnen of the Bayan, now a prisoner in Japan on the night of May 14.

EXCITING TIMES

Taking the Battleship Orel to Japanese Port.

Victoria, B. C., June 21.—The steamer Empress of China yesterday, brought an account of the exciting experience of the Japanese prize crew on board the captured Russian battleship Orel in bringing the prize from the scene of battle to the Maezunu naval station. The officers and men of the Ashima and Kasuga, although they had fought for two days and two nights without sleep were placed on the sinking and shot riddled battleship with a mutinous crew endeavoring continually to obstruct navigation of the prize and if possible to destroy her. One half of the Russians were transferred to the Ashia and Kasuga, but the remainder outnumbered the Japanese placed on board. Lieut. Nakagawa, in charge, at once ordered the Japanese marines with loaded rifles to stand over the Russian sailors herded forward and blue jackets were placed at other points to guard the ship.

When night came a Russian seamen dropped an iron pin into the electric dynamo, wrecking it and causing all the lights to be extinguished.

Great excitement followed, during which some of the Russians again opened the sea valves and the water flooded in, causing the ship to list to port. Some tried to jump into the sea, thinking the Orel about to capsize.

Under cover of darkness a party of Russians tried to rush the guards, who fired several times into the thick onrushing crowd and then used bayonets and clubbed rifles. The mutiny was finally beaten down, and at daylight the Asahi and Asama came to act as escorts, which cowed the mutineers, already frightened by threats of summary execution if another threatening move was made.

TO VISIT PRESIDENT.

Representative of Pope En Route to Washington.

San Francisco, June 21.—The Rev. M. J. O'Connor, who arrived from the Philippines on the steamer China, has left for Washington, where he will be received by President Roosevelt as a representative of the pope. The reverend father went from Rome to the Philippine islands as secretary to Mgr. Guidi, special ambassador from the pope, to arrange and settle what is known as the friar land cases. While on the mission, Mgr. Guidi died, and Father O'Connor was deputized to conclude the negotiations. He did so successfully, and is now on his way to Washington to finish up the matter there, after which he will proceed to Rome. Collector Stratton was officially informed by the state department at Washington that Father O'Connor was recognized as a papal ambassador.

WAR IS FORGOTTEN IN PLEDGE OF CZAR

Russians Are Delighted With Renewed Pledge of Emperor.

St. Petersburg, June 21, 12:40 p. m.—The impression produced by Emperor Nicholas' speech Monday at Peterhof to the delegation representing the all-Russian congress of zemstvosts and mayors which assembled at Moscow is reflected in the joyful acclaim with which it has been received by the Russian press. The question of peace and the reports that another great battle has begun in Manchuria have become of secondary importance in the public mind before the great fact that the emperor has again pledged himself to popular representation. The Russ declares that the history of representative government in Russia dates from Whit Monday.

"A hundred commissions elaborating schemes for reform," the paper continues, "could not inspire the people with as much hope in the future of Russia as the emperor's words to the delegation whose members were characterized by the reactionaries as traitors, conspirators and revolutionists. The fight is not yet won. The bureaucracy will not capitulate without a further struggle, but the most important step for political regeneration has been taken."

The Novoe Vreyma thinks that this renewed assurance direct from the throne "imposes the obligation on all classes of society which have the welfare of Russia at heart to unite for the suppression of the agitation which is shaking the foundations of the country."

The text of Prince Troubetskoy's address to the emperor when his majesty received the delegation which the latter headed is now publishd. It reveals the plain spoken yet withal perfectly loyal fashion in which he spoke to the emperor, telling him of the universal distrust which pervaded all classes attributable to the conviction that his majesty was being deceived by those about him who were interested not in the realization but in the destruction of the proposed reforms. Prince Troubetskoy rose above details. He said those whom he represented had not presumed to indicate the exact form of national representation, demanded but one principle they regarded as vital, namely, that the representation should be based on universal citizenship in which no class should be excluded.

"It must not be based on estates," the prince continued, "You are the emperor not of the land owners, merchants or peasants, but of all Russia. The bureaucracy which has a place in every government must have a place in yours, but the national reputation must be independent of the bureaucracy which must not be allowed to build a wall between you and the people. Your majesty will realize that when you stand face to face with the people's delegates."

In conclusion, the prince declared it was absolutely necessary that facilities should be afforded both in the press and at public meetings for the discussion of a reform which so closely touched the people not only after the representatives met, but now. The renovation of the government, he pointed out, must be built on confidence.

SUICIDE OF FORMER DULUTH MAN AT RACINE BY DROWNING

Racine, Wis., June 21.—After confessing to the officers that he had lived with a woman for twenty years who was not his wife and that seven children were born, though he had another wife at St. Cloud, Minn., Frank Stepke of South Milwaukee fled hatless from the municipal court room, and it is believed that being frightened for fear he would be sent to prison, he jumped into the river.

Twenty years ago he was a resident of Albert Lea, Minn., where he had a pretty wife. They went to St. Cloud. Here he met another woman and ran away with her to Duluth, where they lived for five years. They then removed to Milwaukee and South Milwaukee. At Cudahy Stepke purchased a lot worth $1,000, and at South Milwaukee other land valued at $1,500. In January last Stepke went home, only to discover that the woman he had been living with was gone, and so was his boarder Samuel Kruske.

The husband traced the couple to Racine and found them living in the south part of town. The affair was fixed up, and the woman, boarder and Stepke lived in the same house. Two weeks ago Stepke got jealous of the boarder. There was a free-for-all fight an dthe woman proposed to again flee with the boarder, but Stepke secured a warrant. When the case came up Stepke claimed the woman was his wife, but finally admitted he had never married the woman, although they had lived together twenty years and there were seven children. Then he fled from the court room, leaving his hat behind. The woman was not prosecuted.

KING OSCAR AGREES TO DISSOLUTION OF UNION

With Emotion He Expresses His Convictions to the Riksdag.

Sweden Will Negotiate With Norway For an Agreement.

Not to Sweden's Interest to Resort to Coercive Measures.

Stockholm, June 21.—The extraordinary session of the riksdag, summoned by King Oscar to deal with the momentous question raised by Norway's declaration dissolving the union, met for business today. As forecasted by the Associated Press yesterday, the government at once introduced a bill, asking for authorization to enter into negotiations with the Norwegian storthing and draw up a conditional settlement of the questions involved in the separation of the heretofore dual kingdom. The session was opened by King Oscar in person, with the usual ceremonies. The king made a speech from the throne, in which he protested against the charge that by violation of the constitution he had provoked the steps taken by Norway.

In the council of state, which sanctioned the introduction of the bill in the riksdag, dealing with the dissolution crisis, both the king and the premier were on the side of a pacific solution.

Premier Ramstedt spoke first, pointing out that it was not to Sweden's interest to resort to coercive measures. He recommended, therefore, entering into negotiations for a convention by which guarantees should be obtained, conducive to the mutual welfare of the two countries. In any case, he declared, negotiations were indispensable to definitely clear up the situation.

The premier suggested that delegates be appointed to this end, as it was only after such a conditional settlement, and after the riksdag had fully considered the matter that Sweden would be in a position to decide as to her definite approval of the dissolution and agree to annulling the act of union.

"It is a painful step which the council of state calls on me to take. My conscience tells me that I have during my long reign always striven toward the object I had in my mind at the time of my accession, namely the welfare of the brother peoples. It is truly painful to me to contribute to the dissolution of a union in which I thought I saw the independence, security and happiness of the united kingdoms. If, however, I am ready to act thus it is in order to avoid a still worse evil and in the conviction that the union without mutual accord would bring no real advantage to Sweden.

"I have acted," the king said, "in accordance with my conscience and always in conformity with the constitution and with the desire to work conscientiously for the true welfare of the two peoples. The bill presented to the riksdag does not aim at replying to injustice by acts of coercion. The union is not worth the sacrifices which acts of coercion would entail. A union into which Norway would be forced in such a manner would be of little value to Sweden."

The king concluded with expressing the hope that the Swedish people would be guided by calmness and prudence and that God would give them strength and unity to regain within their own frontiers what they had lost by the dissolution of the union.

PRESIDENT IS THE GUEST OF WORCESTER

Receives an Enthusiastic Welcome at Massachusetts City.

Worcester, Mass., June 21.—An enthusiastic welcome was given President Roosevelt, who arrived here today, by the citizens of this city. Buildings and dwellings were extensively decorated. Long before the hour set for the arrival of the president the streets were filled with people, who hoped not only to see, but to hear President Roosevelt in connection with his visit to Clark university and Holy Cross college.

The president's trip was without unusual incident, although after daylight today every station through which the train passed was thronged with cheering people.

The president had just been awakened as the train passed Gales Ferry. Soon afterwards the president sent telegrams to the captains of the Harvard and Yale crews. The message to the Harvard crew was as follows:

"Captain Harvard crew, Redtop, Conn.—I expected to pass through New London much earlier or I should have been up to greet you. I wish I could see the race. Good luck to you.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

To the Yale crew the following dispatch was sent:

"Captain Yale crew, Gales Ferry, Conn.—I expected to pass through New London much earlier or I should have been up to greet you. Hope you will not think I am an offensive partisan, if, under these particular circumstances, I do not wish you good luck. I would at any other time, but Taft, I. am sure, is praying for you.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

The train made no early morning stop until Putnam, Conn., was reached. As the train drew up several hundred persons shouted their welcome to the president. He appeared on the rear platform of his car and said:

"It is a great pleasure to have the chance of saying a word of greeting to you today. I saw the mayor running along, but I did not know he was the mayor at that time. I saw he was an old soldier and knew therefore that he had a claim on me, as on everyone else. I cannot say more than a word of greeting and draw just one lesson from the mayor's life. The mayor fought in the big war and if after he had quit fighting he had quit doing anything else except talk, he would not be mayor. When he got through that job, he turned his attention to the next job that came along. Now let's take a lesson from that." There were no further stops until the train reached Worcester.

The president's train reached this city three minutes ahead of the schedule. At the station the reception committee, headed by Lieutenant Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., representing the state, Mayor Blodgett of the city and Former Congressman Joseph Walker, Stephen Salisbury and Congressman Rockwood Hoar, representing Clark college and university, boarded the president's car. Lieutenant Governor Guild formally presented the welcome of the commonwealth and Mayor Blodgett that of the city of Worcester.

The station was thronged and so were the streets in the vicinity. The mist of the earlier hours had become a drizzle and the weather was raw and uncomfortable.

With the appearance of the president upon the car platform, the throng burst into a roar of cheers. Passage to the street was quickly made, the president bowing constantly to the acclaim of the crowds. Waiting outside the station to act as escort were Company G of the Massachusetts Guards, a battalion of light artillery and the local post G. A. R., and Spanish War Veterans' camp. The line was formed at once, Company G, Capt. Barrett commanding, taking the head of the line, followed by details of members from the G. A. R. and the Spanish war veterans.

In spite of the rain the president rode in an open carriage. The cheering crowds gave him no opportunity to sit. From the moment of his entering the carriage the tumult was incessant, and as the parade moved, President Roosevelt remained with head bare, bowing to the people.

All the way to Clark college a distance of about two miles, the demonstration continued.

WANTS SUPERVISORS PUNISHED FOR CONTEMPT.

Milwaukee, June 21.—On petition of District Attorney McGovern, Judge Brazee, today, signed an order citing a number of county supervisors to appear and show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court. The contempt charged by District Attorney McGovern is the action by the county board in appointing a committee to make an investigation of alleged official corruption. This was done in the face of the fact that a grand jury has been secured to commence work on the same line. District Attorney McGovern charges the county board with disregarding every recommendation made by him and accuses the board in case action of impending the work of the grand jury.

TO PERPETUATE THE G. A. R.

Denver, June 21.—For the purpose of perpetuating the name of the Grand Army of the Republic, a society, called the Sons of the Grand Army of the Republic, has been organized in this city. One hundred names have been placed on the charter roll. The society will be extended to all cities and towns in the country as rapidly as possible. The requirement for membership is that a man must be a direct descendant of one who has fought in the Civil war.

DULUTH WEATHER REPORT—Fair tonight and Thursday; cooler tonight; fresh to brisk westerly and northerly winds.

Your Own Case

NOW, just take you own case—not somebody's else—but your very own. Don't you really feel better inside and out when you KNOW that you have that fresh, clean-cut, crisp appearance that only a neat, stylish suit can give you? Doesn't it give you a sort of desire to throw back your shoulders and look the world squarely in the face? And do you know what that feeling is? It's nothing more nor less than SELF-RESPECT.

That's what we mean when we talk of clothes that give you not only comfort, style and satisfaction, but SELF RESPECT as well. It is not a mere empty phrase. It is pregnant with meaning if you will only put everything else out of your mind for just a minute and really THINK it over.

The point of all this is that you cannot be too careful and scrupulous in attiring yourself. Man is judged a great deal more by the clothes he wears nowadays than you may think. And nothing but perfect, painstaking workmanship, combined with style, common sense and honest materials, can give you, in your new clothes, all that you should have. We claim to give you this sort of combination. We urge you to see for yourself. We want you to think of US every time you think of GOOD CLOTHES.

IS VICTIM OF BLACKMAIL

Young Manufacturer Left $560 In Barrel As Directed.

Newark, Ohio, June 21.—August Wehrle of the Wehrle company, the largest stove manufacturers in the world, is the victim of a scheme of blackmail. Wehrle is the junior partnr in the big foundry and acts as superintendent of the plant. Several weeks ago young Wehrle received a letter from an anonymous writer asking him to deposit $560 in an old trash barrel along the canal bank. Dire threats were made. The writer stated that if the order was not complied with, Wehrle would be kidnaped, tortured and finally killed. Destruction of the foundry was also threatened.

Wehrle reported the matter to the police after advising with his brother, William Wehrle, senior member of the firm. The police were inclined to look lightly upon the matter, but a few days later a second letter was received in a different handwriting, signed by a "Secret Service Detective," in which the writer claimed to have overheard the gang laying their plans for the blackmail. The young manufacturer, it is said, insisted on leaving the money in the place specified, thus ending the episode. The police objected, but Wehrle finally had his way about it, and accordingly the entire sum, it is said, was made into a neat roll and placed in the barrel along the canal banks, guarded by a squad of Newark police.

The barrel was approached several times by various persons, and the police feared that the money would be found by innocent parties. The officers therefore rescued the roll of money from the barrel and gave up the watch. Special detectives were placed on the case and have worked on it for several weeks, but no results came from their labors.

Both letters bore Newark postmarks, but were in different handwriting. Wehrle refuses point blank to talk. The entire plot was so amateurish in its originality that the police refuse to take much stock in the matter.

Wehrle is abou 27 years old and resides with his brother on Hudson avenue. He refuses to talk on the matter.

TOM LAWSON PROPOSES

Big Combine to Protect Insurance Policyholders.

New York, June 21.—Thomas W. Lawson has set out to organize the million and some hundreds of thousands of policy-holders in the three great insurance companies—the Equitable, New York Life and Mutual—for the purpose of making war on the "system," which he alleges has been looting these great storehouses of wealth.

goes a long way toward saving a situation. Economy is a mistake at such times. To begin with, appearances must be kept up. To advertise financial depression is disastrous. It is always distinctly encouraging to have seeming evidences of prosperity before the eyes. Again, if everybody began cutting down expenses, as men invariably do directly pistols fall, there would soon be little or no money in circulation. Clearly women are in the right—are they not invariably so?—and men wholly in the wrong in this matter. Tailors and outfitters answer emphatically in the affirmative. They droop and pine while drapers and modistes flourish.

IN ETERNAL REMEMBRANCE

By Kennett Harris.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"We all wondered what Mrs. Du Page could possibly keep in that little silver casket of hers, don't you know. All of us chaps were interested in the little widow and anything that belonged to her. We were interested in the color of her eyes, and the length of their lashes a goodish bit, don't you know; and the size of her shoes and the fit of her stockings around the ankles, and the blooms on her cheeks. We talked about all of these things. Not that we could say anything about them but to praise them. Her eyes were the color of a bunch of violets with the dew on 'em—Tenvoort said that. Tenvoort's one of these practical duffers, don't you know. Some of his bally poetry has been printed in the Top Crust Journal-Gazette. He was gone no end on Mrs. Du Page. As to the shoes, Cinderella would have got corns if she had tried to wear Mrs. Du Page's, and she had better taste in the selection and display of hosiery than any woman I know of. And if that bloom of hers ever saw the inside of a drug store, we were all mistaken.

"But we talked more about that silver casket than anything else, because it was such a devilish odd-looking thing, don't you know. It had four panels. One was decorated with a heart that was split right up the middle, another had something that looked like a tin horn turned upside down, the third had a monogram and the fourth a motto: 'Memoria in Aeterna,' surrounded by a wreath of forget-me-nots. On the lid there was a bally little cupid standing tiptoe on a grinning skull and pointing up in the air.

"Well, wherever Mrs. Du Page was that casket was sure to be somewhere around. It was generally in her boudoir, but sometimes I saw it in her parlor, and once when she gave a little luncheon it was standing on the sideboard. Knickerbocker Cuyver asked her what she had in it once, and she sighed and said that it was her little all. She told me when I asked that she would prefer not to speak of it, and the violets in her eyes became dewier than ever. So of course I dried up. It's horrid bad form to be inquisitive, and I ain't a bounder, I hope, whatever I am.

"Jimpley said he believed she kept love letters in it. Curzon guessed diamonds. 'She ain't sentimental,' said Curzon. 'I bet it's something practical.'

"'Love letters might be practical,' said Jimpley. 'I knew a girl had a bunch once and they brought her in an income of $10,000 a year. She kept 'em in a safety deposit vault. She was a practical girl, all right, and I know it.'

"'Did you write the letters?' asked Cuyver.

"I spoke up then and told them I didn't want to hear any more insinuations of that sort. I felt like punching all their heads. Some fellows think that if a woman is a bit lively when she ain't got anybody to look after her but an old aunt they can say anything they like. I know all about Mrs. Du Page. She came from Alabama and her husband belonged to one of the good families there. A fellow told me so—fellow by the name of Billinger, who I met at Mrs. Du Page's one evening. He said her husband was simply devoted to her, don't you know, and that she was devoted to him, though he was a lot older than she. Some of my people—the women—said that she was nothing but a chorus girl before Willie Du Page met her. I know some ripping nice chorus girls, you know, so I didn't think any the worse of her for that, if it was true. They told me that they didn't believe that she had a cent to her name, and that her giving out the impression that she had a lot of government bonds locked up in that silver casket was nothing but a bluff. The government bond idea was something that got out after a little while, but I feel sure that she never was to blame for it.

"I think they had got it into their heads that I wanted to marry her. Well, I didn't—not then. I went around to her place, don't you know, because she was a jolly clever little woman and a ripping good looker. Sometimes she made me feel like a fool, because she was so jolly clever, but she always gave me a good time, and I brought her flowers and candy and all that sort of thing, don't you know.

"And then the secret of the casket came out. A woman who knew the Du Pages down South was visiting the Kerners, and she told them that the casket held the last mortal remains of Willie Du Page. He was a cremation crank and he had the casket made before he died to hold his ashes, and he made Eulalie promise to keep it with her wherever she went. That we took for a tin horn on one of the panels was a funeral torch—classic, don't you know; and the Cupid signified Love triumphing over Death. The motto meant 'In Eternal Remembrance.'

"Well, as soon as I heard that I went right over to Mrs. Du Page and I told her what I'd heard and how jolly sorry I was for her. And she looked at me with those big eyes of hers so gratefully and thanked me for my sweet sympathy so prettily, I began to wish that she hadn't been so fond of Du Page. She gave me her hand, too, and I couldn't help keeping it, don't you know; it was so little and soft and warm, and it sent such funny little thrills up my arm and all over me that it was dooced pleasant. After a while she told me how much my friendship had been to her. And then she remembered that I was still holding her hand and took it away.

"'We won't think of sad things any more, Freddie,' she said. 'Now you're here I'm going to make you comfy. I'm going to wait on you myself. What would you like to drink?'

"I think that I said Scotch. I know that I helped her to carry the siphon. I remember that perfectly. Yes, it was Scotch; and she insisted that I should smoke. I don't think it was the Scotch that got into my head. I think it was the red frock that she wore. I didn't mention that it was evening when I called. It was, and she had on a red gown that left her arms and neck bare. Gad! she has a lovely neck. Yes, it was the dress and her eyes. There is always something about red—! Oh, I don't know how it happened, but I knocked against the table somehow and something tumbled over. I saw that it was the silver casket and that the lid had fallen open.

"I don't know exactly how it came that her arm was around my neck—her bare arm. • • • I'm gallant, don't you know. I'm a fool, maybe, but—but here I had a cigar in my hand and—I looked around for a place to set it down.

"'Give it to me,' she said, and she took it from me and dropped it into the silver casket.

"'Just ashes,' she added.

• • • • • • • • •

"I'm engaged to her. I wouldn't mention it to everybody, but I don't feel exactly right about it. My people say it's my money she's after. If it is, she's welcome to the blame money."

In Woman's Sphere

Social, Musical and Club Circles.

A pretty home wedding took place this afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Taylor when Miss Rosamond Grace Chamberlain became the bride of Russell C. Richardson. The house was prettily decorated with flowers and ferns. In the living room where the ceremony was performed white peonies and carnations with dainty ferns were used and a touch of color was given by two immense bouquets of pink peonies. In the dining room American beauties were used.

The service was read at 2 o'clock by Rev. Alexander Milne of the Pilgrim Congregational church and there were no attendants. The bride wore a dainty gown of cream crepe de chene and carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas. An informal reception followed the ceremony. Assisting about the rooms were Miss Taylor of Faribault and Miss Chamberlain of Pontiac, Mich., and Miss Feetham. Mrs. Charles Chamberlain, a grandmother of the bride, of Pontiac, Mich., was a guest at the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson left on the afternoon train for a short wedding trip and will return to Duluth where they will be at home.

BE GOOD NATURED.

No Reason To Object To Being Called So.

Why is it that most girls object to being called "good-natured?" For some unknown reason they do object, says an exchange.

A girl who had been spoken of as "good-natured" the other day, was asked why she did not like it, and replied that it meant that she was weak, easily fooled, didn't know how to say "no," or to stand up for herself.

Now that girl was absolutely wrong. Good nature does not mean any of those things. It means a happy, sunny nature, doing kindly little services for others, obliging, ready to do more than your share of work—no crossness or peevishness.

It does not mean that you are in the slightest degree weak, but it does usually mean that you put yourself in the background, doing for others much that they, taking advantage if your nature, will not take the trouble to do for you.

Don't be disgusted when people tell you that you are good-natured—it is one of the greatest compliments that they can pay you.

If you have ever lived with a peevish or sulk person you can appreciate the blessing of living with a good-natured one.

Peevishness is sometimes a result of ill-health, suffering has wrapped the entire nature, until nothing is good or lovely in the eyes of the unhappy sufferer.

But sulkiness is purely the result of brooding over real or fancied wrongs, making yourself and everyone else unhappy.

The good-natured persons will, of course, always be imposed upon to a certain degree, but you can be good-naturedly firm and make a stand when you think the selfish ones are pushing you too hard. Good nature is a great beautifier. Many an otherwise plain face is redeemed by its expression of good will toward all mankind.

No matter how pretty your features and complexion, if you have a peevish, discontented or cross expression you will not be admired.

There is an old phrase, "Handsome is as handsome does," and unless you live up to it, your good looks will count for nothing.

Men are always anxious to meet a pretty girl, but if they find that her beauty is only on the surface they soon tire of her.

Beauty is all very fine as a luxury, but for steady, every-day use, sweetness of disposition and good nature is much more satisfactory.

So don't despise the good old virtue of good nature. It will help you through many tight places and win for you many friends.

And don't imagine that because a girl is good-natured she has no other charms.

Cultivate good nature, it is invaluable through life.

Sometimes Right Thing.

Women have a good many sins laid to their charge, and extravagance in dress is one of them, says the London World. But there are some instances in which this not wholly feminine failing is commendable. It was recently stated that in times of financial depression men invariably curtail their expenditure in dress, whereas women go on arraying themselves just as if nothing had happened. This certainly counts one to them. It may look like foolishness and heedless extravagance on the face of it, whereas it really would love. Holding hands on somebody's front porch is nice. It is a part of love, but it is not all. Love means a cradle, and if you haven't a cradle to love you ought to be ashamed of yourself.

"Love is a woman's heart, and even God marvels at the immensity of a woman's heart. People who have hearts of the right dimensions find something in the world, and find it good to live in. A heart is something you can love with."

The pastor's remarks on love were part of his address on "Life," delivered before the preachers of the city at their basket picnic at the Desplaines camp ground. Fifteen hundred ministers were present.

"Life is more than love, though love is much," he said in another part of his address. "Life is more than a pocketbook. You might open your pocketbook and find nothing. Life is more than success in the world. The hour of success is too short to be the meaning of life. Success is only a segment of the whole circle of life. Life is more than work. Work is our salvation, it is said, but work does not last forever. Nor is life learning and scholarship. Scholarship is good if it doesn't worry you."

LINES ARE DRAWN

City and Traction Company Apparently Enter Finish Fight.

Manager Warren Makes Correction In His Published Interview.

The lines have apparently been drawn in the fight between the city officials and the street railway company, and it is unlikely that Mr. Lowry will now reply to the requests made at the mass meeting of the citizens, or that any further negotiations between the city and the company will be held.

Referring to the interview with City Attorney Bert Fesler, published in this morning's paper, in which Mr. Fesler stated that he had had no communication from the street railway company on Saturday, Manager Warren of the street railway company, this morning, made the following statement:

"I wish to correct my statement to The Herald reporter to the effect that I had communicated with the city attorney. It was to the mayor that I gave Mr. Lowry's telephone message, to the effect that he had just returned to Minneapolis, having ben delayed by illness, but would come to Duluth on the first of the week. After receiving this message from Mr. Lowry on Saturday morning, I tried to reach the city attorney, but was unable to find him, and finally reached the mayor. I talked with the mayor this morning and he recalls the conversation.

"When I made the statement to The Herald reporter I had it in mind that I had talked with the city attorney, but now recall that it was to the mayor. I am very sorry if my mistake in stating to The Herald that I had communicated with the city attorney on Saturday, instead of to the mayor, has caused the former official any embarrassment."

Since the council, at the recommendation of Mayor Cullum, threw down the gauntlet and directed the city attorney to immediately commence proceedings to enforce the provisions of the franchise strictly, and to compel the company to carry out whatever demands of the city can be enforced, it is not likely that either Mr. Lowry or Mr. Goodrich will come to Duluth, or that there will be any further negotiations in regard to the questions in dispute.

When Mr. Warren was asked regarding this today, he stated that he had called upon the city officials yesterday for the purpose of ascertaining if there would be any use now of Mr. Lowry coming to Duluth or attempting to reopen negotiations, but received no encouragement, and had advised his superiors accordingly, and that he thought it was not probable that they would attempt any further negotiations with the city.

EXCHANGE OF NOTES

Between France and Germany Will Exactly Define Policy.

Paris, June 21.—The Franco-German negotiations on the subject of Morocco have reached a stage where notes are being exchanged exactly defining the verbal assurances Premier Rouvier and Prince Radolin, the German ambassador here, have given. This is recognized as a difficult and delicate stage and as finally committing the two governments to a written line of policy. Therefore public apprehension has again been somewhat aroused over the possibility of new differences during the exchange of notes. The official view continues hopeful, but there is no desire to be over-confident that the conference on the question has been entirely settled. M. Rouvier's acceptance of the principle of a conference is conditioned on Germany fully defining the scope of the conference and relieving it from questions which constitute a menace to France or the sacrifice of rights and obligations under other agreements. The final decision appears to depend on how far Germany is willing to give these assurances in writing. The officials continue to believe that the exchange of notes will take considerable time on account of having each limitation on the conference strictly defined in advance, for the purpose of avoiding future controversy. In the meantime more or less of renewal of the tension is anticipated while the governments are debating on the terms of the written agreement.

CAMPAIGN SLANDER.

Marshall Attorney Given a Verdict of $100.

Mankato, Minn., June 21.—The June term of district court for Lyon county was adjourned by Judge Webber Monday afternoon at the courthouse at Marshall. The case which attracted the most attention during the term and drew a large number of spectators to the court room was the action of Thomas E. Davis against Elmer C. Patterson, both well-known attorneys of that city. The action was for $5,000 damages for alleged slander during the political campaign last fall. The local campaign of last year created considerable bitterness, and business and professional men of Marshall became more partisan than customary in local politics. The present trial was not a balm to the sores of any of those who participated or took a particular interest in the contest for county attorney or judge of probate, and, as the case proceeded, the political situation of the last campaign was gone over again. The jury was out on the case over night, and returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, assessing his damages at $100.

MUST GET LICENSE

No Fireworks Can Be Sold Without Council's Permission.

Applications Must Be Before Council Next Monday Evening.

Unless the one hundred or more dealers in fireworks in the City of Duluth arouse themselves between now and Monday, Duluth will have a Fourth of July without any fireworks, except what are purchased in Superior and brought across the bay.

Under the ordinance passed a year ago no person is allowed to deal in fireworks in the City of Duluth without first obtaining a license. The license has to be granted by the city council and Monday will be the last opportunity for the licenses to be passed upon before the Fourth. A meeting of the council will be held on Monday, July 3, but this will not give any opportunity to issue the licenses in time to sell fireworks before the Fourth.

All the licenses are issued by the city clerk, and a fee of 10 cents is charged by the city for the permission to sell fireworks.

The ordinance was passed in order to give the city control over the sale of dangerous explosives, and the dynamite canes and other inventions which are likely to cause damage, are prohibited.

The dealers appear to have forgotten the existence of the ordinance, and not a single license has yet been issued. All of the licenses issued last year have run out, and there will probably be some lively scurrying on the part of the dealers to get their applications in before Monday night.

Rev. R. Ames Montgomery, formerly pastor of the Glen Avon church, and now located at Xenia, Ohio, was yesterday given the degree of doctor of divinity by the Miami university of Oxford, Ohio. The honorary degree of LL. D. was conferred upon Secretary Taft at the same time.

SCHEDULE READY

First Yacht Club Pennant Race Next Saturday Afternoon.

Ten Cup and Pennant Contests on Alternating Saturdays.

The schedule of races for the season of 1905 has been arranged by the Duluth Yacht club. The pennant and cup races for both classes will commence next Saturday, June 24. There will be five races each in the two series, and they will be pulled off on alternating Saturdays. The contests held so far this season have been merely preliminary ones.

On July Fourth there will be a free for all race, which will not count in the pennant and cup scores. Fine American flags will be given as prizes. There will be two classes, one for sharp bows and the other for square bows. The Seagull, a yacht of slightly different type from the others, will also be admitted.

In the pennant and cup contests the boat scoring the most points in the entire series will be given first place, and will be awarded the prize. The pennant, a beautiful silk one, will be retained permanently by the winner, as will the Commodore Johnson cup, but the Commercial club trophy will be kept for one year only, and will be raced for from year to year. It is now held by Dr. Frank Lynam, who sails the Feather. Last year's pennant was won by R. W. Marshall. The commodore trophy will be raced for by the Class B boats, and a silk club flag will also be offered them as a prize.

At present there are six Class A, or sharp bowed boats and four Class B, or square bows. All of those in Class A were in use last year, but the others made their first appearance on the bay this season. They are smaller than the old type, but are quite speedy, and in some winds make better time than the sharp bowed craft.

The manner of scoring will be to give each boat one point for entering and one point for every boat beaten in each race. For example, if A comes in for first in a race where there are six entries it will be scored six points, one for entering and one for each yacht beaten. If the same boat be third it would receive three points, and if last it would get only the one point. The ones with the most points at the end of the season will be declared the winners. For each new boat entered, if there are any, one new point will be added.

A map showing the different courses will be posted in the club house. On race day a launch will ply between Patterson's boathouse, Fifth avenue west, and the club house, for the convenience of members.

MRS. SHAW SPEAKS.

Addresses High School Students on China.

This morning in chapel Mrs. Shaw, who has for ten years been a missionary in China, spoke to the students for a short time. She said that she wished that they could see the city in which she has spent the past ten years of her life, with its old walls, its little narrow streets, and its old temples built for the worship of their god Buddha. She added that there had lately been established a college for young men, which is doing much good work, especially since the Boxer uprising of five years ago, at which time China learned at a severe cost the lesson to be taught by modern civilization.

"Since then she has awakened," she said, "and has begun to realize that the old China must give way to the new; that the old conservative country that has existed within itself for so many long centuries is to be changed. She has learned a lesson from the example of Japan, and is striving now to follow her precepts.

"Four large and new institutions are to be built by the missionaries over there. One is to be a college for women, another for men, a third for the teaching of medicine, and the last will be a seminary for the study of theology. We look to these institutions to accomplish much good and to be a powerful factor in leading the Chinese to Christianity."

LITTLE RESISTANCE

Tokio, June 21, 4 p. m.—The following official dispatch was received today from the headquarters of the Japanese army in Manchuria:

"In the direction of Weiyuanpaomen our detachment occupied Lienwachieh, June 18, without encountering resistance. It also occupied Yengmulintzu, twenty miles northwest of Weiyuanpaomen.

"Farther north another force, the same day, dislodged the enemy from Hangtzu pass and the vicinity, ten miles north of Weiyuanpaomen, and occupied a line of hills northwest of Shihuiwotzu, and these seven miles north of Yangtzu pass. Our forces also routed the enemy holding positions north and northwest of the same place.

"In the Changtu direction our force advanced along the railroad and dislodged the enemy's cavalry and infantry, holding an eminence two miles north of the Shahotzu railroad station, and took possession of a line of hills south of Suimaotzu and eighteen miles northeast of Changtu, June 19. The station was found to be demolished. Our casualties were four men wounded. The enemy left ten dead, including the body of an officer. Our force captured one machine gun. The enemy's loss must have been heavy.

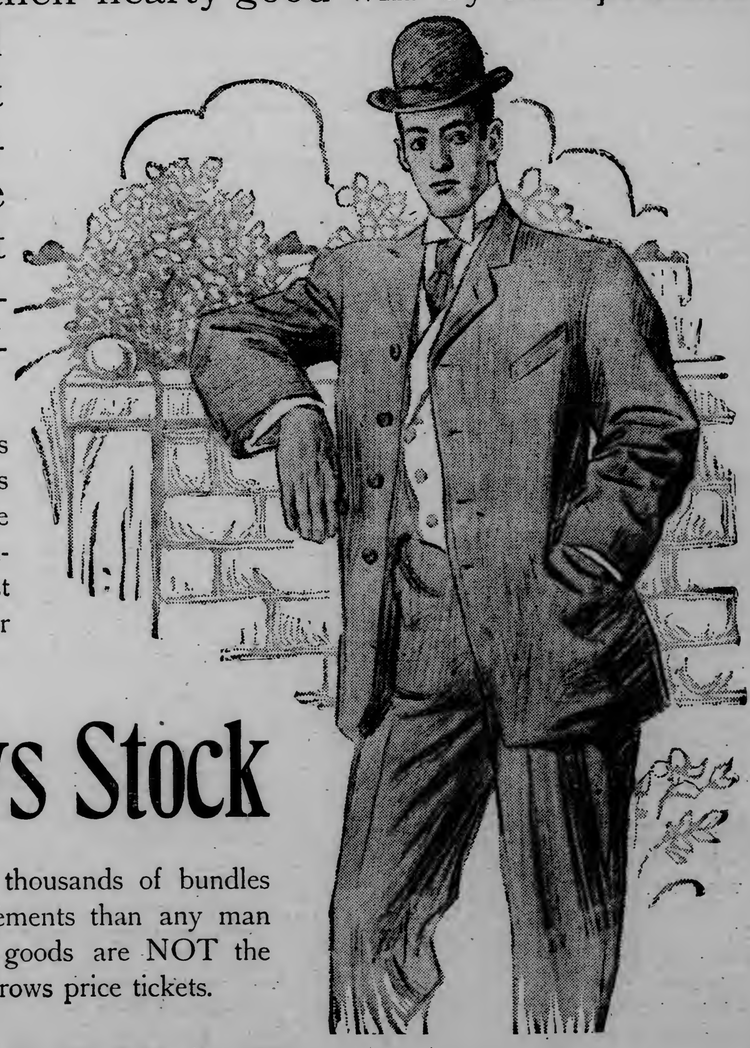
"Our force, advancing on the Fenghwa road, after a vigorous fight with infantry and artillery, from 3 in the morning of June 19, dislodged the enemy from Peifangchengkou, ten miles southeast of Hsillenchan, and occupied, the same morning, Liutiaokou, sixteen miles north of Changtu."

"A BEER ON ME."

Baraboo, Wis., June 21.—Carl Dangel accidentally fell into a ninety-four foot well in Greenfield Monday. His companions got a rope and started to draw him up, but when near the top the rope broke and and he fell the second time to the bottom. Another rope was secured and he escaped with only a few slight bruises. The first words he said were, "Boys, let's have a beer on me."

Now Watch Us Grow!

The people of Duluth have evidenced their hearty good will by the splendid start they have given us this day. It shall always be our greatest endeavor to present the best possible merchandise to be obtained in our line for the least possible amount of money. This, we think, is what you will expect of us, and upon this principle we know our future growth will depend.



Some advertising experts of this city have expressed grave doubts whether this outspoken heart-to-heart talk of Columbia advertisements would take with the people of Duluth. Why shouldn't it? The clothing business is as simple as most other kinds, and we like to conduct ours so that we can trust the people and have the people trust us. There is no necessity of mystifying statements in the papers, nor of promising you more than we can keep.

is on and we are confident that it will grow from day to day, as the thousands of bundles carried away from the store today are bound to be better advertisements than any man could write. Remember, the prices we published as values of the goods are NOT the usual exaggerations, but the true figures on the undisturbed old Burrows price tickets.

SICKLY WOMEN.

Nervous, Delicate, Fretful, Thin, Run-Down, Overworked, Unstrung Women Made Strong and Vigorous By Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

In the past fifty years Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has made over 4,000,000 cures. It is a gentle, invigorating tonic-stimulant and disease germ killer. It brings into healthy action all the vital forces, aids digestion, and enables one to get from food all the nourishment it contains. Purifies and enriches the blood, strengthens the circulation, soothes the nerves and steadies the heart's action.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

builds up and sustains the entire system. Mrs. Bernard Wolf, 518 Champlain St., Detroit, Mich., says: "Two years ago this spring I was run down, nervous and thin, did not seem to get back my strength. A friend recommended Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Three bottles cured me, and I never looked or felt better. My father had asthma for years, and though nearly ninety, 'Duffy's' completely cured him and keeps him strong and hearty, with a good digestion."

"Duffy's" is the only sure cure for consumption, bronchitis and all diseases of throat and lungs. It cures dyspepsia.

When you ask for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It is the only absolutely pure medicinal Whiskey and contains no fusel oil. Sold in sealed bottles only; never in flask or bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and be certain the seal over the cork is unbroken.

All druggists and grocers, or direct, $1.00 a bottle. Medical booklet free. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, New York.

GEN. CORBIN DROPPED.

Will Not Succeed Chaffee as Head of Army.

Washington, June 21.—Maj. Gen Henry A. Corbin is not to succeed Gen. Chaffee as chief of staff after all.

Corbin has had his eye on this place ever since it was created, and it is his one ambition to again reside in Washington and be at the head of the military establishment. Changes which will go into effect immediately are the promotions of Gen. John C. Bates as assistant chief of staff, the retirement of Brig. Gen. John P. Storr, chief of artillery, placed upon the retired list yesterday, and succeeded by Col. Benjamin K. Roberts, who was recently in command of Fort Washington, Md.

Gen. Roberts will be retired and the office of chief of artillery will be permanently filled by the promotion of Col. Samuel M. Mills of the artillery corps.

Brig. Gen. George M. Randall, who is now on his way back from the Philippines, has been appointed major general to succeed Gen. Storr, and will be placed in command of the northern military division of St. Louis.

Col. Thomas Lebo of the Fourteenth cavalry has been promoted to the grade of brigadier general, in place of Gen. Randall, and retired.

NO TRACE OF WHITE.

Des Moines River Is Being Dragged For Lost Lawyer.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 21.—Fred E. White, twice candidate for governor, and fifty leading lawyers of Des Moines and more than a score of policemen have been engaged dragging the Des Moines river for the remains of Virgil H. White, the attorney who was drowned Sunday night. No trace of the body has been found.

Mr. White has offered $200 reward for the remains of his son. Many believe that Virgil White committed suicide, but his friends scout the theory. He took a boat out in a rain storm and told Miss Oella Thompson, his sweetheart, that he was going to learn to row so he could take her.

TALKS OF TRIP

Assessor McKay Tells of Experiences In Unorganized Territory.

One Settler Valued His Dog More Than His Horse.

William F. McKay of the county auditor's office, who was appointed by the board of county commissioners as assessor in the unorganized townships of the county, has just returned from an extended trip through the northern part of the county.

In the course of his duty, which took him far into some of the unorganized territory where new settlers have been locating during the past year or two, Mr. McKay had to travel much of the distance through the country practically devoid of roads, and his experiences at times were far from pleasant. Aside from the difficulties encountered in getting about the country, however, he had some experiences that were fairly amusing. Among these was a visit he paid to a newly developing farming community some twenty miles north of Ashawa, which new town is now on the outskirts of the organized territory.

In the locality mentioned Mr. McKay came across a settler who has gone into the country in the past year and who showed unmistakable signs of having come from the South.

The settler was a tall, gaunt Missourian, who decided that the North country offered him greater opportunities for making a living than the South. During the comparatively short period he had been on his land he had made a number of improvements, and his farm, Mr. McKay says, is rapidly assuming a real agricultural appearance.

The Missourian greeted the assessor very cordially, and was very honest and outspoken in his answers to the usual questions asked by that official.

"Naow, that air critter over thar," he said, pointing to a young horse, "I reckon ort ter be worth 'bout $5, and that 'ere dawg I brought all the way from Mizzoury, and I reckon I wouldn't take less'n $15 fer him."

"I was surprised and interested," said Mr. McKay, speaking of his trip, "to find so many localities with rich soil that are being settled up. No one can appreciate the way St. Louis county wild lands are being settled up and put under cultivation until he has been out through the country miles away from the towns and sources of supplies and witnessed the strenuous fight that is being waged by the scores of hardy settlers in the effort to bring nature under subjection. It seems almost incomprehensible, in some instances, to imagine how a man would have the nerve to go himself or take his family into a new country so far removed from the civilized communities, and start out single-handed to develop a farm from the wilds. The soil is there, all right, but it is the difficulty that one has in getting in and out from some of those new farming localities that would seem disheartening. The class of settlers that are going into the far north country are determined and experienced men to whom no obstacles seem great. They appear to have implicit confidence in the country and are confident that in the near future the lands in their locality will be so well settled up that schools and roads will follow as a natural course.

"I believe that any person with an observing turn of mind that should take a trip through some of the distant lying newly developed farm land districts would return with a distinct feeling of admiration for those self-reliant and hardy fellows who have fairly cut their line of communication and started out with the determination to make for themselves and their families substantial homes in the northern part of St. Louis county."

The Stage

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—All next week, Pollard Lilliputian Opera company.

THE POLLARDS.

Next Monday, the famous Pollard Lilliputian Opera company will be heard at the Lyceum. The engagement is for six nights and two matinees. The Pollards require no introduction to American theatergoers, for the fame of the organization is world wide. It is composed of fifty clever children, ranging in age from nine to fourteen years, who exhibit a special aptitude for the stage. They are especially selected and trained for the production of light and comic operas, and their performances are first class in every particular, there being nothing childish or amateurish about their productions which are professional in every respect. Two new comedians recently added, are the Pollard Twins. Since the last appearance of the company in this country, it has undergone a complete reorganization and all the big girls who were with the Pollards last season, have been elliminated, and their places filled by younger performers. The repertoire consists of "A Runaway Girl," "The Belle of New York," "The Geisha," "Pinafore," "A Gaiety Girl" and others.

THE COURTS CRITICISED

Big Thieves Get Light Sentences—Little Fellows Get Limit.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 21.—Editorial writers throughout the state are commenting upon the sentence of John Nelson of Des Moines to imprisonment for two years for the theft of 117 pennies, as compared with the sentence of bankers and get-rich-quick grafters of Iowa who have received from thirty days to eighteen months sentences of imprisonment for the theft of various sums ranging from $30,000 to $250,000.

Nelson's crime consisted of the taking of a little girl's pennies which she had placed in a toy bank in her father's library. Letson Balliet, the self-styled "Cecil Rhodes of America," whose net profits by the fraudulent promoting of the White Swan Gold mine, of Baker City, Or., was estimated at $250,000, was sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment in the county jail at Red Oak, Iowa, three months or more ago. Tom Ward, cashier of the Le Mars National bank, was compelled to serve but thirty days in the county jail at Red Oak, Iowa, pleading guilty to the misappropriation of something like $25,000 of the bank's funds, and, during that time, was permitted to occupy the parlor of the jailer's residence and take a daily stroll down town unattended. Edward Soule, cashier of an Iowa Falls bank, received an eight-months sentence recently for misappropriating upwards of $40,000 of his bank's funds, and vigorous efforts are now being made to secure his pardon. Day Dunning, president of a bank at Mt. Ayr, who was convicted of misappropriating something more than $100,000 of the funds which depositors had entrusted to him, received a sentence of two and a half years and his friends profess absolute assurance of his early release. J. W. Brown, a Wapello banker, managed to steal something more than $25,000 from the depositors, and was let off with a sentence of two years.

No sooner had Judge McVey pronounced sentence on Nelson at Des Moines last week than the editorial writers got busy, and since then the Iowa judiciary has received a calling down that subjects them to contempt proceedings at the will of the jurists criticised. Chicken-stealing, by a special statute, is punishable by ten years' imprisonment, and a Council Bluffs thief recently got the limit. All of which is urged as a basis for saying justice in Iowa is sadly out of joint.

KOCH TRIAL NO. 3.

No New Witnesses Have Yet Been Subpoenaed.

New Ulm, Minn., June 21.—Sheriff Williams of Blue Earth county appeared in the city yesterday with subpoenas for witnesses in the coming trial of Dr. G. R. Koch. So far as can be learned there are no new witnesses, and the subpoenas call the old ones for the week beginning Monday, July 10.

If there is any new evidence in the case it has not been made public, and so far as the defense is concerned, it has nothing more than the additional blue boxes that apparently have the same address as was on the one sent to Dr. Gebhardt. The manner of the address and characters of the typewriter are strikingly similar.

Some witnesses that were left out of the case at the other trial have been called for the next one. These will testify as to the time of the homicide. They were subpoenaed last time but not sworn.

CHARGE OF MURDER

Is Made Against William Murray at Butte.

Butte, Mont., June 21.—Because he sought revenge for the stabbing of his brother, William Murray, now in the county jail, faces a charge of murder in the first degree for the killing of William Kiley, whom he shot down before the latter's wife and four children without warning, after accepting an invitation to Kiley's home and a treat in the shape of beer from the victim. Kiley was shot Thursday evening and died yesterday, his dying words accusing Murray.

On Thursday morning James Murray had an altercation with Kiley, and the latter drove a pocketknife into Murray's leg, inflicting a slight wound. That night William Murray called at Kiley's home, ostensibly to make a friendly visit, and while all were sitting about a table partaking of some beer furnished by Kiley, Murray suddenly drew a revolver and shot Kiley.

Mrs. Kiley is in a pitiable condition as the result of her husband's death, and it is feared her mind will give way. Between her moans and sobs she calls down curse after curse upon Murray.

SEQUEL TO SUICIDE.

Iowa Woman Had Four Husbands Living.

Marshalltown, Iowa, June 21.—By the filing of the report of the administrator of the estate of W. I. Gower in court yesterday, it developed that Lillian May Gower, to whom he was married, and who committed suicide two weeks after Mr. Gower's death, was not his legal wife. It is shown that Mrs. Gower had been separated from all three husbands, but had never secured a divorce, all husbands being living.

She first married in Tama county as Lillie Ramsdell, her correct maiden name, to August Bargholte, Jan. 1, 1894. Other marriages were: At Marysville, Kan., Feb. 15, 1896, to Charles R. Dayton; at Webster City, Iowa, Aug. 10, 1898, to F. J. Bartlett; at Marshalltown, to W. T. Gower, some time in 1900.

Although her husband had been dead only two weeks, Mrs. Gower was living with another man named Hedstrom, when she killed herself. Gower left an estate valued at $4,000. It is supposed that fear of disclosure of her dual life by a settlement of the Gower estate led to Mrs. Gower's suicide.

A WORKING BRAIN

Can Be Made Successful on Right Food.

A busy man in one of America's largest watch factories tells how by change of food he gained a clear brain and steady nerves and averted a mental and physical breakdown. He says:

"I was accustomed all my life to the ordinary diet of the average table. I thought that meat, potatoes, and other vegetables and fruit were necessary, and that tea, coffee and pastry in moderate quantities were not injurious.

"But I found, in course of time, that my dietary was affecting my health seriously. For four years I continued to run down. In time my nerves became seriously affected, they seemed constantly keyed up to the highest tension, and I became subject to the most violent billous attacks which used to leave me in a weak and nervous condition for several days. The climax seemed to have been reached a few years ago, when I found myself about as near a physical wreck as a man could well be, and alive. Physicians, tonics and othe medicines, visits to the country, etc., etc., were of no avail.

"In sheer desperation I concluded, a few months ago, to see what effect a diet of Grape-Nuts food would have. I had often heard of it, but had little hope it would help me. I at once cut out all the heavy dishes with the tea and coffee that I had always used and began to eat Grape-Nuts with cream and a pinch of salt. Afterwards, I added fruit, with occasionally an egg beaten up in milk, and entire wheat bread. This has been practically my diet for more than two months.

"I found that with the new diet I gained complete relief almost immediately from all the distress that used to follow every meal, my billous condition was speedily regulated and cured, my nerves have grown healthy and steady—in short, my run down constitution has been reconstructed and built up. As to the effect upon my mental powers, I have only to point to the fact that I have recently been placed in a responsible position in our establishment where complete concentration of mind is required to deal with complicated records and reports, and that I have been enabled to keep my accounts absolutely correct, which my numerous predecessors uniformly failed to do.

"I think these things speak volumes in favor of Grape-Nuts food as a nerve and brain builder. I ascribe all my improvement, mental and physical, the fact that I am possessed of steadier nerves, a clearer brain, a fine appetite, and have gained healthily in weight, to the cutting out of heavy food and the systematic use of Grape-Nuts food." Name given by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

W. A. STEINER DIES.

Passes Away After Illness of Three Years.

After a lingering illness of about three years, W. A. Steiner died at his home in the Temple building, last evening.

Mr. Steiner was formerly local manager of the Barnett & Record company, the Minneapolis contracting firm. He spent the winter in Florida for his health, but returned late in February not much benefited by the change.

He is survived by his wife, and one son, William G. Steiner, who is in his second year at Michigan university.

Mr. Steiner was 56 years of age, and has lived in Duluth since 1889.

SOCIETY MAN

Of British Columbia Peppered With Bird Shot.

Victoria, B. C., June 21.—Charles H. Gibbons, a prominent newspaper writer and notorious "stringer" of the coast, inflicted a nasty wound by a shotgun on J. K. McCready, a society man, last night.

McCready was bidding a fond farewell to Mrs. Gibbons at the door of her carriage when Gibbons rode up on a bicycle armed with his fowling piece. McCready received two doses of birdshot, but is not fatally hurt. He has not sworn out information against Gibbons, who, citizens said, was actuated by jealousy. The attorney general is investigating.

DANES ORDER

San Juan, P. R., June 21.—Former President Sam of Hayti, has been driven from St. Thomas by the Dutch authorities. He was given the choice of speedy departure or certain conviction and long imprisonment on a charge of abduction, made by a young girl.

Some of his friends declare that he is now in the British Isle of Tortola, and others that he is at Fort de France, Martinique. His family remains in his palatial home on one of the hills overlooking the harbor of St. Thomas.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Of the Minnesota Electrical Contractors' Association.

Minneapolis, June 21.—Members of the Minnesota Electrical Contractors' association met at the Masonic Temple yesterday for their fifth annual convention. President William Burgess of Duluth called the meeting to order, and there was a fair attendance of the membership.

The morning was given over to organization and routine reports of officers and committees. The delegates and guests took luncheon at Dayton's tearooms, and the afternoon was given over to a technical discussion of trade topics, which was Greek to those not posted in the intricacies of the trade.

Today the convention's time is being taken up with discussions of trade matters, and in the evening a banquet will be given at the Dutch room at Donaldson's. The election of officers for the ensuing year will be the last business of the convention. Trade affairs are progressing with tranquility in electrical circles in the state, and there is little for the convention to do save to fraternize and talk over the mechanical features of the business. The association numbers within its ranks some of the leading electricians of the Northwest, and these are expected to add to the store of knowledge of their fellows before the meeting ends.

About twenty of the leading establishments of the state are represented at the meeting.

SIOUX BURYING GROUND.

The discovery on an Iowa farm of many relics, including human skulls and skeletons, of an Indian race of the existence of which there are no local traditions and no other evidences, has interested and puzzled historians and scientists of the region, says the Kansas City Journal. Professor Van Hyning of the state historical department cincludes that the graves are a splendid representation of the once thrifty and powerful nation of the Sioux, and that the graves antedates the settlement of the white man. Black locust trees, two feet in diameter, are growing on some of the burial mounds, which alone is proof of great age.

THE FASTEST ANIMALS.

Thompson Seton classifies animals as follows regarding speed, says the New York Globe: First, the greyhound, with a record of 34 miles per hour; the race horse 32, American pronghorn antelope 30, Jack rabbit 28, fox 26, coyote 24, foxhound 22, and American gray wolf 20. A man's speed works out at about fourteen miles an hour. speeds were determined by actual observation with a stop watch.

The African black antelope and the hunting cheeth are said to be near the head of the list as regards speed.

JAPS GREAT READERS.

The French minister in Japan M. Harmand, has been inquiring into the importation of foreign fooks into Japan, says the Kansas City Journal. In 1901 Germany supplied the greater number of books, 96,394, Great Britain being second with 87,608. The next year, however, the importation of English books virtually doubled, while the German supply fell off a little. In 1903 the imports of English nearly doubled again, the number being 315,518—more than all the other countries put together. A remarkable thing about the figures is the rapid rise in the demand for Russian books in 1903. Whereas in 1902 Japan only bought 123 books from Russia, the next year the number rose to 1,139.

FIRST PATENT IN CHINA.

The Chinese government, according to German papers, has granted its first patent, says the Kansas City Journal. It is for an electric lamp, the inventor of which is an inhabitant of Nanking, the old capital of the Chinese empire, who calls his lamp the "bright moonlight," and asserts that it is far superior to foreign glow lights that hitherto have been sold at Shanghai and other Chinese cities.

CHAINED LIKE A DOG

To Kennel Was Boy By His Father.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 21.—Chained like a dog by a massive collar around his neck, heavily padlocked and attached to a dog kennel, Henry Michalski, aged 10, suffered throughout the entire day, and when released at night by neighbors could not stand. He is in a serious condition from heat and hunger, and may die. Stanley Michalski, his father, who chained his son to the dog kennel, was arrested charged with extreme cruelty.

The case is one of the most cruel that has ever come under the eyes of the South side police. The Michalskis live at 2826 Plus street. The elder Michalski is a mill-worker and has been noted for feats of extreme cruelty to his family. He said that his son was a bad boy, and he had thought best to chain him for the day. At times the sun in this part of the town registered 100 degrees.

GAMES TODAY.

Grand Forks at Winnipeg.
St. Cloud-Brainerd at Crookston.
Open date for Fargo and Duluth.

The prohibitionist bunch from up Fargo way gave the Champs a rude jolt in their mad, tumultuous dash for the pennant yesterday afternoon at Athletic park, in the final game on the home grounds until the July 3 series.

A nice thick coating of whitewash was administered to the league leaders by a gentleman named Hanson and his team of blindpiggers. Mr. Hanson showed a miserly disposition in dealing out the hits when Duluth players were occupying positions on the sacks, and the result was ample revenge for Monday's game.

Mr. Mullen's curves were more or less puzzling to the visitors, but during the first five innings the proverbial hawk was as tame as a barnyard hen when compared with his wildness. During the five innings he passed five men to first base on balls and hit a sixth.

In the first inning Donovan drew four of the wild ones, went to second on Mehl's sacrifice, and after Traeger had drawn another base on balls from the generous Mullen, was caught at third on Rose's infield hit to McShane. But the soul-stirring sensation that holds down the third corner for Duluth was not content to get the one man, and he tried to cut off Rose at first. The result was another heave into the bleachers, and Traeger came trotting home. Nothing doing in the second.

In the third Donovan drew another of the free tickets and promptly showed his appreciation by stealing second. He went to third on Mehl's hit, and while O'Dea, Weiler and Bennett were engaged in a little game of tag with Mehl who was hopping back and forth between first and second like a chicken on a hot stove, Donovan sprinted home.

The fourth passed peacefully.

In the fifth the prize package third baseman who led off for the farmers, got his base again, this time on a safe bingle. Neighbors chose this time to make the second error chalked up against him since the team came home on June 1, and failed to stop the ball. Donovan went on to third. Mehl was an easy out, and Traeger brought Donovan home on a clean single. But the little rally was stopped suddenly by a fast double play, which caught Traeger at second and Rose at first.

Little Snowball Alberts, the tow-headed substitute catcher, who cavorts around in the center field when not busy behind the bat, cracked out a single as a starter in the sixth, but that was as far as he got.

A second double-play in the seventh stopped a very promising chance to score.

In the eighth the boy wonder who holds down third bag pulled off another of his dazzling, circus stunts, picking up a hot liner with one hand while on the run, whipping the ball across to first before the runner had thrown his bat away.

The Alphonse and Gaston act of Bennett and Erickson which happened in the second inning must not be forgotten. Both started for a high fly and then stopped. Both started again spasmodically and halted. Then Si held out his glove while Erickson waved encouragings. The ball hit the glove and bounced, and the big outfielder dove under it in time to save Si an error.

Both teams will leave today for Fargo where they will continue the struggle for the remainder of the week.

LOSES AGAIN.

Crookston Unable to Shake Off Hoodoo.

Crookston, June 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Although outbatted and outfielded, the St. Cloud-Brainerd team won from Crookston yesterday by the score of 3 to 1. Howell's home runs were responsible for two of the scores made by the visitors, and the third came on an error by Zeider.

Inability to hit with men on bases lost the game for Crookston. The score:

WIN TWO.

Grand Forks Takes Two Games From Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, June 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Winnipeg dropped two games to Grand Forks here yesterday, one bad inning in each contest deciding the outcome.

Both games were pitcher's battles. Green lost his own game in the first, by a bad throw to the plate which was followed by four runs. In the third inning of the second game a wild pitch, a base on balls, two hits and two errors let in four runs. The weather was cold, and the grounds in poor shape. The scores:

JIM BOZEMAN WINS THE STEEPLECHASE.

Detroit, June 21.—The feature of the Highland Park races yesterday was the steeplechase, which was won by Jim Bozeman, with Jockey Ruffel up, in a driving finish.

New York, June 21.—James B. Brady's Oiseau, an added starter and favorite at 3 to 5, yesterday easily won the Swift stakes, seven furlongs straightaway at Sheepshead Bay. Gallavant, backed from 7 to 1 to 4 to 1, won the Zephyr stake in a drive by a length and a half from Vagabond. Security and High Chance were coupled as the E. E. Smathers entry. Three favorites won.

St. Louis, June 21.—A thunderstorm just before the opening of the races made the going very heavy at the Delmar track yesterday, and gave the mud runners the advantage. Three favorites were successful.

GERMAN CONSUL

St. Paul, June 21.—It is announced that Germany, through its St. Paul consul, will make an inspection of the iron mines on the Mesaba and Vermilion ranges this summer. The German consul has communicated with the officers of the state labor bureau, and it is probable that the state officials and the German representatives will co-operate in the work.

The inspection on the part of Germany will be thorough. By ascertaining the methods in vogue in the United States, it is said that the German emperor hopes to extend the development of the mining industry in his country. He has heard of the vast iron ore mines of Northern Minnesota as the basis on which the United States Steel corporation is operated.

It is said that the German representative will pay particular attention to the kinds of machinery used at the mines and the docks at Duluth as well as the transportation facilities, the output and the wages and condition of the workmen.

Removal of Game and Fish Warden Probable.

St. Paul, June 21.—Informal proceedings were instituted in St. Paul yesterday, which may mean the removal of S. F. Fullerton from the position of executive agent of the state game and fish commission. It is said that Beecher Ward of Fairmont, formerly a member of the commission, is back of the proceedings, the nature of which has not been divulged.

PUGS ARE INJURED.

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 21.—Billy Stift of Chicago, who was defeated by George Gardner at Ogden Monday night, has a broken right wrist, having sustained the injury in the fourth round when he swung a glancing blow across Gardner's head and neck. Stift also bit off the end of his tongue and is in great pain. Jimmy Gardner, who a week ago fought a twenty-round draw with Jack O'Keefe in this city, is confined to his bed as the result of a low blow accidentally delivered by O'Keefe. The attending physicians pronounce Gardner's injuries serious.

BEDE AND EATON

Arranging For Bringing of Fern to Duluth.

Washington, June 21.—Representative J. Adam Bede and Guy A. Eaton were at the navy department yesterday conferring with the officials relative to sending the United States steamer Fern to Duluth for the use of the naval militia of Minnesota. The present program contemplates that the vessel will be turned over to the militia at some point en route, probably Montreal, to be taken by them the rest of the way. The Fern is now at Norfolk, Va., being repaired to fit her for the cruise. She will be taken through the St. Lawrence and the great lakes.

REVISED ITS LITERATURE

Postal Officials Accused of Deal With Get-Rich Concern.

Chicago, June 21.—Evidence tending to implicate officials of the postoffice department in the affairs of the Continental Financing company, the alleged get-rich-quick concern, has been unearthed by Attorney Gordon Ramsey, who is conducting the investigation for Attorney General Stead.

From letters found in the headquarters of the concern in the Reaper block, it appears that the financing company, of which Henry Wulf, former state treasurer, was president, became involved in trouble with the postoffice authorities, and that its secretary, J. W. Lobb, went to Washington with an attorney and "settled matters" in such a manner that the business was allowed to continue.

No suspicion is entertained against the Chicago branch of the postal secret service. In fact, it appears that Inspector Ketcham, acting with Chief Inspector Stuart, was instrumental in bringing the methods of the concern to light. Inspector Ketcham made a report on the financing company to Washington on May 12. He also made certain recommendations for the guidance of the department, as a result of which Lobb was cited to appear in Washington and show cause why a fraud order should not be issued against his concern by the postoffice authorities. Lobb immediately retained an attorney, who presented his case to the department at Washington.

The fraud order was not issued, but Lobb was compelled to reform the literature of the concern to a marked degree. It is this agreement involving changes in the literature which the state investigators would like to have the Washington authorities explain.

Additional light on the situation was shed by the discovery of a letter addressed to George J. Crane, Minneapolis, Minn., which it is believed Lobb dictated shortly before the receiver took charge of the offices. It is signed by the Continental Finance company, with a space left for the name of the secretary. The letter warns Crane that he will get into trouble with the postoffice department if he pursues the financial scheme he has in hand.

The number of persons at one time or another who "invested" in the financing company is now known to be $2,760. The amounts invested were small as a rule. It is believed that the total receipts were about $100,000. The accountants have found thus far record of $60,000 received.

Besides $26,000 in notes signed by subscribers, the receiver has found $2,500 in cash. The notes are unsecured, and, according to Attorney Ramsey, are probably of little value.

SPANISH CABINET RESIGNS.

Madrid, June 21.—The entire cabinet has resigned and its resignation has been accepted by King Alfonso. The resignations followed the rejection of a vote of confidence, introduced in the chamber by Deputy Llorens. Senor Besada, minister of the interior, in supporting the motion said the cabinet had the confidence of the crown and was backed by public opinion, but it remained to be seen whether it had the requisite parliamentary majority. The minister severely attacked Senor Mauray, former president of the chamber, charging him with clandestinely fighting the government.

SERIOUS WRECK ON CANADIAN PACIFIC.

Winnipeg, Man., June 21.—The fast westbound express of the Canadian Pacific and an eastbound stock train collided head-on at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, twenty miles west of Kenora, resulting in a bad smashup of rolling stock. Engineer Perry of the express and W. Stacy, express messenger, both of Winnipeg, were killed. Bertram Watt, fireman, is seriously injured. Sam Bird, engineer of stock train, and B. A. Parsons, mail clerk, were also injured. Railway officials state that no passengers were killed or injured. The express, which was due here at 9 o'clock last night, did not arrive until 7 o'clock today. Misunderstanding of orders is supposed to be the cause of the wreck.

HUGE TASK.

It was a huge task to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease, as that of C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Ia., but Electric Bitters did it. He writes: "My kidneys were so far gone I could not sit on a chair without a cushion; and suffered from dreadful backache, headache and depression. In Electric Bitters, however, I found a cure, and by them was restored to perfect health. I recommend this great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver or stomach." Guaranteed by all druggists. Price 50c.

MR. BOWEN GETS HIS.

It is cruel to be harsh with the man that is down, and there appears to be absolutely no doubt that Herbert W. Bowen, late United States minister to Venezuela, is down; but just the same The Herald cannot refrain from commending President Roosevelt for his action in the matter and for the manner in which he acted.

In the language of the street, Mr. Bowen has "got his," and in the opinion of The Herald he had it coming. It is something, that the president, after thoroughly investigating the case, should have dropped the offending individual from the service. But it is more that Bowen was a prominent man, that he was an official of marked ability, and that he had rendered this government conspicuous service in his diplomatic capacity. Such a man has many friends, and very likely some of them are powerful. They will be angry at Bowen's dismissal, and they will hold it up against the president. That the latter should, under these circumstances, have discharged Bowen as promptly and as vigorously as though he had been merely the eighteenth assistant waste-basket cleaner in the treasury building, is another instance of President Roosevelt's decision, firmness, courage and backbone.

Mr. Bowen seems to have permitted his personal enmity to Loomis to carry him off his feet, and to lead him into practices unbecoming a gentleman and a member of the diplomatic corps. He seems to have hawked his scandals from officer to officer, and when they yielded attention too slowly, he seems to have lugged them into the newspapers. He was after Loomis' scalp, and he does not appear to have been very particular how he got it. The result is that he has lost his own. He fell into the pit he had digged for his superior officer.

Mr. Loomis seems to have been a little reckless in mixing up his private and his public capacities, too, but he seems to have done nothing very serious, certainly nothing warranting the bitterness and persistence of Bowen's attacks upon him. Whatever Mr. Bowen may say, his enthusiastic dislike of Mr. Loomis led him into a venomous and child-like attack upon him, and into conduct ridiculously inconsistent with the dignity and manliness that should be part of the make-up of a United States minister. In discharging him the president has done the proper thing, and he has done it in a properly vigorous manner.

HOW HE SUCCEEDED.

Edward Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, has been letting the public in on the secret of his success.

It is not quite what you naturally would have expected from the presiding genius of such a ladylike publication. Naturally we should have looked for a more ladylike expression. But it means something, and it is the only secret of success. Asked by an interviewer for the secret of his success, he gave it willingly. For the benefit of those who wish to take advantage of it for a change in methods, here it is:

"Work. I worked like the devil."

You seem disappointed. You look as though you thought you were going to hear of some royal road to success, which would cut straight through the thickets of work and trouble and hardship, and let you trundle right into the soft lap of luxury without any exertion on your part. There isn't any such road. Bok never had time to look for it, probably, because he was so busy getting there along the only road that leads there. Your short, straight, smooth road usually leads over a precipice of temptation into the abyss of failure.

Edward Bok gets more salary than any other editor in this country, and he earns it. He is married to a daughter of a multimillionaire, and he earned her, too. Not long ago he was a poor Dutch immigrant in New York, selling lemonade from a bucket. He carried papers, cleaned windows, worked in a bakery, ran errands, did anything to make a living. He left school at 13, worked days, and studied stenography at night. He began to take down Henry Ward Beecher's sermons, then printed and sold them, then started a Brooklyn magazine, which he afterwards sold and then he got into the publishing business. He attracted the attention of Mr. Curtis of Philadelphia, who offered him $10,000 a year to edit one of his publications. He made the Journal what it is, and seven years later he married Curtis' daughter.

"Work. I worked like the devil." To be sure he did; so did every other conspicuous success. "Work for the delight of it; that's better," he added afterwards to the interviewer. Maybe it is better. It sounds better, anyway. But it was work that made him, and that was the idea he was trying to express.

Work is the only road anywhere.

ROAD BUILDING.

Monday evening The Herald published an interview with a member of the board of county commissioners, in which he stated that in his opinion the board should use all of its road funds on districts that are settling up instead of putting it out in districts where there are not many settlers, and where land owners are attempting to get roads through in order to get rid of their property. It was furthermore stated that this represented the opinion of the county board as a body.

The argument seems sound enough, and yet it must be remembered that one of the biggest land speculators in this state is the state itself, which is holding vast areas of tillable land with the hope of selling it. If roads were put into that land the state would have a better chance to sell it, and could no doubt get the cost of the roads back several times over in the increased value of the land. Yet the state is not building any trunk roads for the development of its unsettled land. Indeed, up to this year it has even refused to sell its land, the policy being to hold on to it for higher prices.

The judgment of the county board in this matter is good, yet it is not likely that it intends to follow it absolutely. To continue to spend all the road money in settled districts and to refuse to spend any in unsettled districts would pretty nearly ensure that the unsettled districts never would be settled. But as the settlers spread, the policy of the county always has been and probably always will be to spread its road work as rapidly after the advancing settler as its means will permit. It is a large county, the need for roads is great, and the amount of taxes the taxpayer will stand for is limited. So the county has to do the best it can with the limited amount available toward keeping up the old roads and extending new ones into the newly settled country.

The state does not begin to do its share in this development. It should itself build all the trunk roads into undeveloped territory, leaving the county and the township only the work of connecting the trunk roads and giving the settlers suitable highways to them. As it is now the state's aid is exceedingly small, and the local taxpayers have to stand the burden not only of building their own roads and improving their own property, but of increasing the value of the state's property also, though it does not contribute a dollar toward the expenses of local government.

THE FREE LUNCH.

If you see a male face shrouded in gloom these days it may be worth while to inquire whether Alderman McEwen's proposed ordinance abolishing the saloon free lunch has not something to do with it.

For great interest has been aroused in this proposed bit of municipal legislation, and steady patrons of the free lunch who have at great trouble and expense organized free lunch routes for their personal use are deeply concerned in its prospects. Briefly, the ordinance proposes to bar out of all the saloons in the city every vestige of free lunch except a bowl of crackers and cheese whose size is limited.

A reform so striking, so thorough and so revolutionary can hardly do otherwise than create great concern among the people. It is no wonder that patrons of the saloon free lunch are declaiming fervidly about the constitution, the rights of freemen and other abstract topics. There seems to be some color of merit to their doubt whether the council has the power to prevent a saloon keeper or anybody else from giving away food if he wants to make a good fellow of himself that way, and some of them can hardly be blamed for claiming that it must be the restaurant keepers of the city who are back of the ordinance.

On the ground that the free lunch fills stomach capacity that might otherwise demand strong drink, they might even be justified in claiming that the free lunch is a great moral agency. They can hardly claim that it does any harm, either to the public or to the individuals that consume it. The practice of giving something to eat in saloons is a time-honored custom, and it is difficult to see wherein it does harm unless it is to the saloon keeper that strains himself to give it too elaborately, or the restaurant man who misses the chance of selling a few lunches. Bishop Potter of New York has called the saloon the "poor man's club," and if the poor man is not going to get a bite to eat with his beer it is going to be a pretty tame club, and maybe the poor man is going to drink more beer to drown his sorrow at the loss of the lunch.

The Herald is in sympathy with all reasonable reforms, but it finds it difficult to muster up enthusiasm about the abolition of the saloon free lunch. Perhaps it does not matter much either way, but certainly it does not seem clear that any great and lasting benefit to humanity is going to result from the elimination of the roast beef sandwich that the saloon man gives with his drinks. It is recalled that on numerous occasions when the saloons got to over-doing the lunch feature, and in a rivalry to see who could give the most got to giving course dinners, the saloon men themselves have sought by common agreement to do away with the free lunch. They failed, and it seems likely that the municipal effort to accomplish the same thing will fail, too.

Anyway, it seems like the common council's time might be put in to better advantage trying some other kind of reform, unless it has everything else attended to except this.

THOSE BAND CONCERTS.

Anybody heard anything lately about that municipal open-air concert proposition?

Not long ago The Herald spoke of the proposed arrangement of band concerts in the public parks during the summer evenings, pointing out that it would be an excellent thing from several standpoints. It was supposed at that time that some of the city authorities were looking the matter up to see what could be done about it, but nothing has ever developed.

It is not too late even now to start the project, if nothing has been done with it. A concert or two each week would be greatly appreciated by the people, and the patronage of Duluth's excellent band that would be involved would be merited.

It is to be hoped that in some way it may be arranged that there shall be concerts in the parks during the coming summer, at such times and places as expediency may dictate.

Hotel Gossip.

"Because the Two Harbors people objected to allowing the construction of a short piece of road ten miles northeast of the city, in the town of Two Harbors, the town was divided, diverting $7,500 in annual taxes," said Henry Clark, a Lake county farmer, who owns 320 acres of land about ten miles northeast of the north shore town, at the St. Louis.

"The new town is known as Silver Creek township. After a sharp fight this spring the division was authorized. About four years ago the first effort was made to build the piece of road, which was to measure only a mile in length. It was to lead from the county road, near the lake to the Alger-Smith logging railroad, where the latter crosses my place. This would have given the farmers and settlers in that section direct rail communication with Duluth, without their stopping at Two Harbors at all. By traveling a mile they could reach the railroad, where before they had to go ten. Evidently the Two Harbors business men were afraid this would injure trade, for they prevailed upon the authorities to vote against building the road.

"This did not suit the farmers interested at all, and steps were taken to bring about the division of the township. There were five county commissioners, and as three of them were from the village of Two Harbors our chances for getting the town divided did not appear very good. We knew the two outside commissioners would do what they could to help us, but there was considerable doubt expressed as to the ability of the settlers to bring one of the other three to favor the proposition. The men were approached on the matter, however, and to the surprise of a good many two of them were brought to the settlers' way of thinking, and we got four out of the five votes, so the division was authorized, and shortly after this the construction of the road was ordered. It will probably not cost more than $1,000 altogether.

"The Alger-Smith road is quite an accommodation to the settlers up in that country. It even carries our mail for us. There is a man regularly in the employ of the company who carries mail for the men employed in the camps, and by the payment of 10 cents a month he also carries it for us. You can hardly say that he is in the employ of the company, for his salary is really paid by the men, each of whom is taxed 10 cents a month for the delivery of his mail. This 10 cents goes to the carrier. As there are at times as many as 2,000 men working for the company, the mail carrier makes a pretty good thing out of it. In the neighborhood of 500 are working this summer, for the concern is doing a lot of summer logging.

"There is a lot of unused farming land through that region, but it is no easy matter to buy it. All the owners seem inclined to hold onto it for a rise in value. It is as good as any going for agricultural purposes, and it seems a certainty that prices will advance during the next few years. Good returns on the investment are prtety sure. I know one man who controls 7,000 acres, and I understand that none of it is for sale now at the prevailing market price. One thing that adds to the value of the land up there is the fact that much of it is covered with hardwood, mostly birch and maple. There is also quite a lot of basswood. The country is different than it is around Duluth, and has more hardwood. While the land was originally valued almost entirely for its pine, I believe that the hardwood on some of it will yet prove to be of the most value. I can now get $9 a thousand feet for it delivered at the railroad, and in a few years it will be worth twice that. Wood that we thought was hardly worth the cutting down in Michigan a few years back is now bringing $18 a thousand feet.

"The settlers are making little improvements on their places right along. My latest idea is a trout pond. I placed a dam across a little creek and now have a pond about thirty rods long by seventy-five feet wide. It is eighty feet deep in some places. It is well stocked with little brook trout. I am now planning on another pond of about the same size, to be placed farther up the stream."

"When I was in the insurance business, nearly thirty years ago, in the East, there was no such thing as a rating board, or a fire map, as we have now, and each agent required certain qualifications to entitle him to an agency for any company, and in addition he had to be an expert, to a certain extent, with a large share of what is called common sense," said W. E. Ground of Minneapolis, at the Lenox.

"As competition became more keen the appointment of agents whose personality or ownership controlled business regardless of their qualifications for the work became more and more prevalent. Then followed the adoption of tariffs, more or less crude, based on the limited experience of the companies in the field. From these was developed the present system of ironclad rules and agreements, with more amplified and technical tariffs and schedules, and it is this condition that has led to the grossest kind of inequalities in the matter of rating.

"Often rates are fixed at certain times to suit certain conditions, and through the ignorance or inattention of solicitors or other agents these rates are allowed to endure through sweeping changes of occupancy and internal and external hazards, until the changed conditions are accidentally discovered, perhaps, and the abuse is corrected. Then it is that it will frequently occur that the resurvey, even after beneficial improvements have been made, discovers increases of hazard which did not exist when the previous survey was made. As a result, the rate is raised, and then the angry owner of the property seeks redress from some other company or agent, only to find that he can do no better there. Cursing combinations, he makes the best terms he can, and lets it go at that."

The Weather.

Some of these bright days it will pay you to take a trip out into the woods and witness the richness of nature's productiveness at this season. This is the season of the brightest, richest and most beautiful flowers, and there are hosts of them in the woods that will open your eyes when you will look them up for the first time. Even in the swamps, which seem unlikely places, there are wonders. For instance, there is the swamp laurel—the kalmia—with its strange, wax-like petals and its rich beauty with something of the wierd in its dead luster. Alongside it is the pitcher-plant, which has to get its nitrogen from animal life, and is therefore equipped with an ingenious trap for insects. In the swamp, or in the damp shade of the woods, is the moccasin-flower, which belongs to the orchid family and possesses a bizarre beauty that is all its own. The richest flowers of the season are blossoming now, and you should not miss seeing them.

The weather was a little unsettled last night and this morning. It rained during the night, wakeful ones reported, and this morning, though it was warm and pleasant, it was still cloudy and the sun shone only through clouds that threatened more rain. Early, there was scarcely any wind at all, and later, when it sprung up it seemed undecided about what direction it was going to blow from, though it settled into the northwest after a time, bringing fears that it would be drawn later into the northeast.

It will not go there, according to the weather man: It will be fair tonight and Thursday, though cooler tonight, and the winds will be "fresh to brisk" and from westerly and northerly quarters. In Wisconsin's northern parts, the predictions are for light frosts tonight.

Showers fell yesterday or last night in most districts east of the Rockies. It is cooler in the lake country and the Northwest, with temperatures close to freezing near Pembina and Devils Lake, N. D. The barometer is lowest over Arizona and the lake region.

Following were the highest temperatures reported during the twenty-four hours ending at 8 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

When "Teddy" Was a Coward.

When a boy the president was, like the average American youth, somewhat timid about appearing before an audience to "speak a piece." However, the time came when his teacher insisted that he should take part in the closing exercises. He chose for his recitation that good old standby of the American schoolboy, "Marco Bozarris," which begins:

At midnight in his guarded tent,
The Turk lay dreaming of the hour
When Greece, her knees in suppliance bent,
Should tremble at his power.

As his turn came the future president stepped bravely forth and began:

At midnight in his guarded tent,
The Turk lay dreaming of the hour
When Greece, her knees——

Here his memory failed, but he promptly commenced where he left off:

Greece, her knees——

Still memory failed to respond. Again he started:

Greece, her knees——

It was no use. He had forgotten the remainder of the verse, but strenuously tried again:

Greece, her knees——

"Grease her knees once more, Theodore, and see if she won't go," kindly said his teacher.

The Virtuous Editor.

He was poor but honest. So were his parents before him.

He immediately started a country weekly, attended strictly to business, pleased everybody, went to church regularly, never drank, smoked, chewed, swore, stole, lied or beat his creditors.

This last fact was due to the circumstance that he had no creditors. Nobody would trust him.

His accumulation is owing partly to his frugality and many virtues, and partly to other causes.

The Lesson of the River.

I.

Here you are, a-sighin', when the world is half a song;
The river turns the mill-wheel, but it's singin' all day long!
You never hear it growlin' when the rain's a-comin' down,
Or sighin' out its sorrow past the meadow an' the town.

II.

Here you are, a-mumblin' of the sorrowfullest words,
When the wind laughs in the blossoms
'round the breasts of singin' birds!
Moanin' in the winter over memories of May,
When the hallelula season it is with you every day!

III.

Get out in the sunshine—see the lilies of the light;
Tell the world "Good mornin'," an' be thankful for the night;
An' quit a-countin' all the clouds on Jordan's stormy banks,
While Love's banners are a-wavin' o'er the hallelula ranks!

Job Said It, Too.

In a recnt article on political conditions in England, Justin McCarthy quotes the expression. "By the skin of his teeth," and parenthetically apologizes for using what he calls "such a vulgar expression." Humorous writers are enjoying a laugh at Mr. McCarthy's expense, calling his attention to the nineteenth chapter of Job, twentieth verse, where he may find the words: "I am escaped with the skin of my teeth."

Twenty Years Ago.

Company K started off in high spirits on Tuesday evening for the annual encampment of the Second regiment, M. N. G., at Faribault. They made a handsome appearance in their new uniforms, and with the flag presented by the young ladies of Duluth, received very favorable comments from all who saw them.

At the meeting of the village council, Tuesday evening, the engineer submitted estimate of gradign Lake avenue, below Superior street—$8,327. The plans will raise the roadway, on an average, eight feet above the water line, thus giving the required depth for the contemplated sewer. The bond of Village Treasurer Eyster of $50,000 was approved, and his salary fixed at $500 per year, instead of a percentage, as in the past. It was decided to grade Third street, Rice's Point, with sawdust, in preference to anything poorer than gravel.

Mrs. Dowse has been seriously ill for the past week, her sickness commencing with an attack of quinsy. It is thought now that she is out of danger.

Mrs. James Hunter and Miss Markell secured the band of the United Empire, Tuesday evening, and invited their friends to a dance at the Vineyard rink.

Mrs. W. A. Sussemilch left on Tuesday for Rockford, Ill., to visit her mother, who is sick.

Another accident occurred at Rice's Point Sunday evening, making the second one of the kind within three days. John Plumbly, a carpenter employed in Elevator E, was run over by the cars and killed almost instantly. He was about 45 years old and unmarried.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS

St. Cloud Journal Press: Hoch, the man of many wives, now proposes to write a book. Hang him quick.

Mankato Free Press: Food experts estimate that at least 30 per cent of the food and drink consumed in Minnesota is adulterated, according to the standards prescribed in the statutes.

Deer River News: It's all 40-rod whisky, if the breath is taken as a guage of test.

Mankato Free Press: A representative of the railroad interests made the sage remark that the rate question touches everybody. Why, certainly, the railroads generally do the "touching."

St. Peter Free Press: Our esteemed namesake, the Mankato Free Press, in speaking of the need of harmony in the next state campaign, advises that all Republicans be invited to occupy places on the harmony bench without any regard to the differences of the past, as the only course that will lead to success. Correct, sonny. But that doesn't necessarily mean that the bolters of 1904 shall dictate the nomination of 1906.

Walker Pioneer: The resources of the pulp trust have been severely taxed by the large fleets and squadrons which the Russian admiralty are building on paper.

Clarissa Independent: It would be well if Luther Burbank would turn his attention from creating breeds of thornless blackberry bushes and try and produce a breed of graftless politicians.

Hinckley Enterprise: Our contemporaries who are making so liberal a use of plate matter had better read the stuff if they do not care to aid the railroad bureau of education.

International Falls Press: There seems to be a great many Republican newspapers in the state preaching harmony and carrying a club.

Northome Record: Census rumors go to show a tremendous and unheard of increase of population in Northern Minnesota, although it is reported there is an actual decrease in the southern portion of the state. While the decrease there is undoubtedly temporary, the increase in the northern part is surely permanent.

Rush City Post: That sham battle business down at Fortress Monroe is as silly as it is expensive. It is like men making mud cakes to learn the art of farming. There is no "funny business" in war, and it is impossible to learn the art of war by fighting sham battles. It is a safe bet that the officers who plan such things part their hair in the middle and wear masculine corsets.

SMILING POINTERS.

"It's got my best expression, I think," she said. "The artist took it at what they call the exact physiological moment."

Cleveland Leader: "Failed, did he?"

"Yes. Liabilities were half a million."

"Goodness! What are his assets?"

"Not a cent."

"And yet you denied that he possessed true financial genius!"

Philadelphia Ledger: "Don't be discouraged. She may learn to love you, and when she does she won't have to say so; she'll tell you with her eyes."

"Yes, but her 'noes' repeatedly tell me that she doesn't."

Cleveland Leader: "Woman," said the very young man, oracularly, "is a snare and a delusion!"

"Which may account for the fact," breathed the girl meaningly, "why men are so prone to hug their delusions."

Chicago Tribune: Her (in grand stand)—Why does the man that throws the ball make all those queer motions with his arm before he lets it go?

Him—He's got to do something to justify the salary they pay him. It keeps the attention of the crowd centered on him a little longer.

Throw Out Your Sunshine!

Success: What a satisfaction It is to go through life radiating sunshine and hope instead of despair, encouragement instead of discouragement, and to feel conscious that even the newsboy or the bootblack, the car conductor, the office boy, or anybody else with whom one comes in contact, gets a little dash of sunshine. It costs nothing when you buy a paper of a boy, or get your shoes shined, or pass into an elevator, or give your fare to a conductor, to give a smile with it, to make people feel that you have a warm heart and good will. Such salutations will mean more to us than many of the so-called great things. It is the small change of life. Give it out freely. The more you give the richer you will grow.

Unwise Self-Study.

Pittsburg Gazette: People who wish to be well should not be always thinking about their health or devoting too much attention to the possible dangers which may menace it. This, in substance, is the conclusion drawn by the author of a recent book on hygienic affairs, and it seems to stand on a sound and rational basis.

More than one authority has expressed doubt as to whether the modern fad of dwelling so frequently on the health and functions of the physical system was not doing more harm than good. There are, of course, certain simple and fundamental principles of hygiene which every intelligent person ought to know and to follow. But, outside of this, it is a question if many persons, especially those of a nervous temperament, might not profitably drop the study of themselves, materially speaking, remembering that the normal body is a machine, containing recuperative forces which will work wonders if they are not impeded by continual worry and the excessive use of drugs.

The time is close at hand when thousands of people from all the large cities will swarm into the country to spend the summer. Many of these will carry with them some ailment of a more or less trifling sort, which has troubled them during the winter, and regarding which they have perhaps consulted more than one work on the art of getting and keeping well. In such instances about the most sensible thing to do would be to leave the books at home, cut loose as far as possible from the pernicious habit of physical self-analysis, and simply resolve to get the utmost out of the sunshine and fresh air, combined with such outdoor sports and games as they may find enjoyable and helpful.

On Onion Eating.

Osborne, Kas., Farmer: When you see a man eating onions on Sunday make up your mind to one of three things: He is either an outcast from society, married and not afraid of his wife or he has an immortal cinch on the lover of the girl he is going to see in the evening.

A Sure Symptom.

Milwaukee Sentinel: Beaks—Did Wilkins get intoxicated at the banquet the other night?

Beaks—How bad?

Peaks—Well, after the last course he wanted to organize a quartet and sing "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The age for being no fool like an old fool is always one year ahead of where you are.

It is simply amazing what long runs of luck some men can have to remain bachelors.

There's something terribly generous about the way a man can spend some other fellow's money for him.

A woman considers she is perfectly dressed for summer when she appears to have on even less than she has.

If she can't find any other reason for doing it a girl will marry a man to make some other girl mad about it.

No Rest for the Wicked.

Brooklyn Eagle: Trains are now being fitted with wireless telegraph machines. So are ships. So are automobiles. So are pedestrains. Great Scott! Is there to be no hiding place left to quiet folks when they go off on a vacation?

"They Have the Money."

Pittsburg Dispatch: Those Illinois and Nebraska farmers who threaten to go after the beef combination by building a packing house in Chicago and entering the business shows the extent of present-day prosperity. The capital of the concern is to be a million and a half, and they have the money.

A Melancholy Reminder.

Canadian Northern May Use the Alger-Smith Road.

Line Is Now Being Extended Toward Fort William Branch.

The latest rumor in local railroad circles is to the effect that the Canadian Northern is planning on gaining entry to Duluth within the next few years by means of the Alger & Smith logging road, which is now being extended east and north from its present terminus, thirty-five miles east of Knife river.

While the Alger-Smith line is used altogether for logging purposes now, it is said the main line extensions are being built with an eye to the future, and that it will be used as a regular railroad after the timber has been cut away, or possibly even before that. The work of construction is being done with a good deal more care than is ordinarily the case with mere logging roads, and some of the expensive work, such as building trestles and filling them in, seems hardly necessary, unless it is planned to make the line a permanent one.

The road is now building in the direction of the Paulson iron mine, forty-five miles from Grand Marais, and it is said that from twenty to thirty miles of rails will be laid this summer and fall, and that the remainder of the distance to the Paulson mine, which is connected with Fort William by a branch of the Canadian road, will be covered next year. This would give direct rail communication between Fort William and Knife River, a station on the Duluth & Iron Range road. It would not be a very great undertaking to build another line between the end of the Alger-Smith road and Duluth. The line is tapping a region said to be rich in iron ore. Heretofore none of the mines in that country have been worked to any extent, owing to the lack of railroads, but with the new road the ore could easily be brought to Duluth or Two Harbors.

The Alger-Smith company now operates four engines on its Northern Minnesota line, and it is understood that an order has been given for a few passenger coaches. The passenger traffic has increased to such an extent that it cannot well be handled with the present equipment.

The Paulson mine is in Minnesota, eight miles from the Canadian border. It has not been worked for some time past. A train is run over the branch line once a week. One of the Alger-Smith roads in Michigan was disposed of to the Grand Trunk when that line built through.

Another rumor has it that the steel trust is interested in the logging road.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Polish Woman Sues Neighbor For Kissing Her at Her Wedding.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Jamestown—A case of unusual interest has been entered on the dockets for the July term of district court. The complainant is Mrs. Mary Bander, wife of Walter Bander of Fried, in this county, who brings suit against a well-known young farmer of the neighborhood, George Cysewski, in the sum of $2,000. The complainant alleges that after the marriage in the Polish church, in the presence of a large company, and before leaving the altar with her husband, the defendant embraced her and gave her a rousing kiss. For this damages are claimed.

Cleveland—Catholics are advertising for bids for the erection of a new church, the bids to be opened July 10 by Rev. Mr. Baker of the Jamestown parish.

Grand Forks—In the district court the First National Bank of Grand Forks was given a default judgment of $10,33 against J. A. Wright, a Minneapolis promoter, who has been interested in the Kenmare Dry Coal and Manufacturing company.

To secure a loan Mr. Wright indorsed the company's note for $10,000 several years ago, on which but $2,000 had been paid. The company's interests have since been turned over to a Chicago trust company. Mr. Wright was not represented in court.

On Feb. 3 last the bank attached Mr. Wright's two-thirds interest in the Phillips block, which has also figured in recent Kenmare deals. The property, valued at $25,000, was turned over to Mr. Wright and E. C. Bates for shares of the company's stock by Thomas Beare. He sued to recover the property, claiming that he had been led into the transaction by fraudulent claims. The district court gave him a judgment, which the supreme court set aside, leaving Mr. Wright as a two-thirds owner of the property attached by the bank.

Fargo—Frank Jones has been arrested on a charge of striking Max E. Miller across the head with a fence paling. Miller has been unconscious since Monday night, when he was hit, and may not recover.

Miller became involved in a quarrel with Jones because of a Moorhead girl, over whom Miller's friend and Jones were rivals. Miller is employed in a local livery barn and Jones works at a Moorhead livery stable. Jones was arraigned and his hearing adjourned three days, pending a report on Miller's condition. Jones claims self-defense.

Mayville—The normal school commencement is in progress and a large class will be graduated. The program is as follows: Wednesday evening, reception to the school and alumni by the faculty and board of management; Thursday afternoon, laying of the cornerstone by Governor E. Y. Sarles; Thursday evening, commencement exercises and alumni reception and dance.

Prof. Myron J. Abbey of Highland Park has been elected to fill the vacancy in the faculty caused by the resignation of Prof. Robison, who has been offered a better position.

President and Mrs. Carhart entertained for the senior class last week. Out-of-town guests were Governor E. Y. Sarles, B. S. Russell of Jamestown, Edward Mollicke of Wheatland, A. Steenerson of Hillsboro, Alfred Blaisdell of Minot.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Mitchell—Charles Henermann, who conducts a plumbing establishment in this city, was held to the circuit court in the sum of $1,000 bonds on the charge of an assault to do bodily harm. Henermann made an assault on H. H. Collard, a conductor on the Omaha road, cutting him in the abdomen with a knife, which, however, inflicted but a small wound.

A party of twenty-five old soldiers and members of the Woman's Relief corps went to Aberdeen this afternoon to attend the state encampment. The name of Col. J. B. Wolgemuth of this city will be presented for state commander.

Mitchell has been without a baseball club for four years. A new club has been organized and with a liberal appropriation from the business men has commenced practice and expects to schedule a number of games, the first being with the Boston Bloomers on June 27.

Britton—The Britton Drug company has been formed and has purchased the drug stocks of Dr. R. R. Jones and Dr. H. Miller. The two stocks are to be combined.

Henry Widmann of the firm of Ingersoll & Widmann and Miss Johanna Halseth were married here.

Williams Brothers' Lumber company of Webster has purchased the lumber yards of the J. F. Erwin Lumber company, located at Langford, Britton and Kidder, S. D.

The Kidder Mercantile company of Kidder has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000. In addition to purchasing the general merchandise besiness of J. F. Kelly, this firm will handle farm machinery, lumber, coal and grain.

Britton will celebrate the Fourth of July this year, and arrangements are being made for many usual attractions.

A charter has been granted the Langford Farmers' Elevator company. Capital stock, $5,000. This company proposes to erect and operate an elevator at Langford.

Capt. H. W. Mountain has resigned from Company A, Fourth regiment, S. D. N. G., and Capt. W. W. Thorp has been elected to the vacancy.

NO SECRET ABOUT IT.

It is no secret that for Cuts, Burns, Ulcers, Fever Sores, Sore Eyes, Boils, etc., nothing is so effective as Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "It didn't take long to cure a bad sore I had, and it is all O. K. for sore eyes," writes D. L. Gregory of Hope, Texas. 25c at all drug stores.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Six Violent Deaths In One Day In Copper Country.

Calumet—Six fatalities was one day's record in the copper country. Joseph La Page, a farmer living a few miles from Chassell, was run down and killed by a Milwaukee passenger train last night. He was walking on the track and the train came around the curve. He was 60 years old and leaves a large family.

Mrs. Michael Coggin, aged 23, fell from a bridge while crossing a stream near Matchwood and was drowned.

John B. Erickson, aged 55, was killed by falling timber in No. 5 shaft of the Calumet & Hecla mine. He leaves a large family.

An Austrian trammer, name unknown, fell from a skip while riding to the surface in the shaft at the Trimountain mine and was killed instantly.

Jas. D. Jedrel was instantly killed and Hugh Cody sustained a fractured skull at Volunteer mine, Cascade range, Tuesday afternoon.

The men were removing a worn out cog wheel from a steam shovel and as they took out the pin the wheel crashed down upon them. Jedrel's head was crushed to pulp. Cody is not expected to live.

Rapid River—Dr. Laing of Rapid River, Delta county, will be confined to his home for several weeks, the result of breaking a leg. The doctor was riding a new saddle horse when the animal begaan to buck. To save himself from being thrown he jumped, fracturing both leg bones and dislocating the ankle as well.

Manistique—Malcolm Campbell, who was seriously injured by a circular saw in the Simmons Lumbering company's mill at Simmons, died at Manistique of his injuries. The man was not seriously hurt, but much time elapsed before medical aid could be obtained, and the loss of blood was so great that he could not pull through. Campbell was 50 years of age, and was the father of four children. He held a responsible position as filer with the Simmons Lumbering company, but it was not while engaged in his regular work that he received the wound resulting in his death. While he was working at the adjustment of a lath machine his hand was caught in the pulley of a belt and it was his effort to extricatae it that threw his arm onto the saw.

Menominee—Mrs. Arthur Laurent of Almyra street, Menominee, had a narrow escape from being killed by lightning about supper time the other evening. She was in the act of laying the table for supper when a bolt of lightning entered the back door and after striking the woman and playing havoc with the dishes, made its exit through the front door. Mrs. Laurent received a severe shock, her hair was singed and she was thrown violently to the floor, where she lay unconscious when her husband reached home. The children were crying, and the tablecloth and dishes were in a heap on the floor. The husband set to work to restore his wife, but it was two hours before she had recovered sufficiently to be able to tell how it happened. She described the bolt of lightning as having the appearance of an illuminated baseball, and said that both the rear and front doors were open giving it unobstructed passage through the house.

THE HORRORS OF WHISKEY

It is now universally conceded that drunkenness is a disease, and the drunkard should be treated for this disease with the one specific for its cure, Orrine. This remarkable remedy removes the craving for liquor; restores the stomach to a normal condition; creates a natural appetite, and makes the user a man again, free from all desire for strong drink.

Orrine is in two forms—No. 1, to be given without the patient's knowledge; No. 2, for those who wish to be cured. The medical profession indorses Orrine. It can be used at home, and cures the terrible habit without publicity or detention from business. Price is only $1 a box.

A HIKING PARTY

Y. M. C. A. Boys Will Take Tramp to Two Harbors.

Outing Committee Arranges Attractive Program For Summer.

A "Teddy Roosevelt hiking party" to Two Harbors is being arranged by the members of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. to take place as soon as school closes for the summer vacation.

The trip is planned on the same lines as those which the president is said to take at times with his sons. The boys will spend two days on the trip, leaving Duluth early in the morning. They will carry food and blankets in knapsacks, and spend the night in the barn of some farmer between Duluth and Two Harbors. The trip will be finished the following day and the boys will take the train home.

On the way frequent stops will be made to fish, swim in the north shore streams, play baseball and cook meals. The boys will take their time in order not to exhaust themselves on the tramp.

The party will be in charge of the physical director and the secretary, who will accompany the boys.

The outing committee, which will have charge of the regular weekly outings of the association during the summer months was organized yesterday afternoon, with the following officers: Chairman, Palmer Bevis; vice-chairman, Arthur Heiner; secretary, Dwight Larrowe; treasurer, Herbert Thomas. The other members are James Whiteside, Edward Nelson and William Chadwick.

Next Saturday the boys will take the launch ride to Zenith park, which was planned for last Saturday, but had to be postponed on account of the weather. The boys will start from the building at 10 o'clock, and take the car to West Duluth, where launches will be waiting for them. They will cook their dinner on the island and return late in the afternoon, after a program of aquatic sports has been pulled off.

Swimming parties will be arranged later in the season, when the members who don't know how to swim will be given instruction by the physical director.

Cross-country runs, tally-ho rides, yachting cruises, fishing trips, and all-night camping parties will also be included in the summer's program. The committee will meet next Monday evening and complete the list of events, which will take place between now and the time the boys leave for the summer camp at Deerwood.

PROSECUTIONS MAY FOLLOW

Investigation Into Equitable Affairs By Expert Accountants.

New York, June 21.—Acceptance by Chairman Morton of the resignation of James W. Alexander and James H. Hyde, as president and first vice president respectively of the Equitable Life Assurance society, is expected, according to the World, to have a far-reaching effect on the office staff of the executive. It is also expected, the World adds, that Mr. Hyde will shortly retire from several offices in controlled financial positions, and it is likely will resign from the directorate of other corporations to which he was elected on account of his ownership of a majority of stock in the Equitable. The resignations of Messrs. Alexander and Hyde, accepted yesterday, were for their posts as officers of the society, and not as directors. Both are expected to resign as directors in a few days.

Although Mr. Morton refused to commit himself on the subject, it is known that no effort will be made to elect a president or first vice president until the board of directors have reconvened, under the mutualization plan under the three trustees, Grover Cleveland, George Westinghouse and Justice Morris O'Brien.

As a result of the investigation by the expert accountants, already made, three directors, formerly connected with the society and auxiliary institutions, are said to be slated for prosecution. Two men connected with an auxiliary financial institution are also mentioned.

PREDICTED CIVIL WAR

St. Petersburg, June 7.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The following is a literal translation of the speech delivered by M. Ivanoff, the celebrated Russian lawyer, at the trial of Kalieieff, the murderer of Grand Duke Sergius. The proceeding was before a special tribunal composed of members of the "ruling senate," and was held behind closed doors at Moscow. Ivanoff was subsequently arrested for discussing the trial at a meeting of barristers. His speech has been circulated by hundreds of thousands by the social revolutionaries:

"Senators: In this trial two great events stand out before all else—the death of the Grand Duke Sergius and the penalty to which Kaleieff must submit. The facts are only too clear. They admit of no argument. I desire onl yto submit a few observations on the character of Kaleieff's act. May Kaleieff, whose life is in your hands, pardon me if I lack words and moral force to fulfill the duty assigned me. It is, senators, in a peculiarly difficult light that you are called on to judge this case. An unrestrainable political movement as a result of the complete bankruptcy of our present economic, political and military systems, has produced the present condition of affairs in Russia. Every section of the empire is in revolt, workmen have perished by hundreds in the streets of the capital. In the smoke of burning estates the peasant is looking for a solution of the conditions which are grinding him down. The intelligentsia is martyrizing itself. Two great forces are at war; the old regime, established centuries ago and young Russia which aspires to liberty. Hope that this struggle can end pacifically is lost. Civil war is close at hand and in the history of this great battle the social revolutionary party will be found to have written the most striking and terrible page, for it has written it in its own blood and the blood of those whom it considers the enemies of the people."

CONDUCTOR IS MARRIED

Popular Railroad Man From Virginia Takes Bride In Duluth.

At a very quiet wedding, held at high noon today, in the St. Louis hotel, Miss Ella Willis, of Traverse City, Mich., and Benjamin Adams of Virginia were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Morgan of Virginia.

Mr. Adams is a conductor on the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road, and is very well known on the ranges. The wedding was intended to be kept secret from his numerous friends in Virginia, but some of them happened to be in Duluth today, and they telephoned the news to the range towns in order that Mr. Adams and his bride might be given a reception fitting the occasion on their arrival home.

REVEALED AS WOMAN IS MONK

Who For Years Was Sought By Devout Pilgrims.

Budapest, June 21.—The famous monastery of Tziducani has been thrown into great excitement by a singular discovery. For thirty years the monastery has been famous as the residence of the venerable Father Basile Popovice. From all quarters people have come in pilgrimage to obtain the blessing of this monk, whose ascetic life and singular virtues were widely known. A few days ago Father Basile died. He was 90 years old. His body was given to the monastery servants to be prepared for interment, and they discovered that the monk was a woman.

It was a rule of the monastery that all monks should grow beards, and Father Basile had a few hairs on his chin; besides his voice was strong and he worked in the garden till at last he was regarded as one of the most active and vigorous members of the confraternity.

It is recalled that thirty years ago the horrible murder of a husband and two children was perpetrated in a remote part of the district. The wife disappeared, was never found, and was believed to have committed suicide. Popovice came as a suppliant for admission to the monastery the second night after the commission of this crime, and there is strong circumstantial evidence that she was the murderess.

CHLOROFORMED A WILD BEAR

Which Had Been Caught In a Big Steel Trap.

Williamsport, Pa., June 21.—When big game hunters from the Rockies and from foreign lands boast in the presence of Dr. W. E. Delaney of this place of their great fights with wild beasts, he will shut them up by telling them how he chloroformed a wild bear.

Dr. Delaney's practice is in the remote Black Forest region, and he has a light, rubber-tired tricycle that he uses on the Black Forest narrow-gauge railroad. A few nights ago he had a hurry call to perform an operation in the lumber camp eleven miles up the road, and set out on his tricycle. Seven miles up the road, in the heart of the forest, he found a huge bear kicking up a terrible rumpus on the track. It had been caught in a big steel trap, to which was attached a drag. The drag had caught fast between ties when the bear tried to cross the railroad, and there he remained, shaking the forest with his howls.

Dr. Delaney was obliged to go on or his patient would die. He could not carry the tricycle around the bear, so the bear would have to move. Dr. Delaney had no weapons, but in his medicine box he had nearly a pint of chloroform. Cutting a long pole he knotted his handkerchief on one end and soaked it in the chloroform. Then he shoved it under the bear's nose. The bear grabbed it in his mouth and chewed it. When he spat it out the doctor soaked it again in chloroform and repeated the operation. Soon the bear succumbed and the doctor released him from the trap and rolled him off the track. Taking pity on the bleeding brute, he dressed its wounds and bandaged them before leaving. When he returned four hours later the bear had disappeared.

Lowest Temperature with Bohn Refrigerators

The Syphon principle of ventilation of Bohn Refrigerators uses all the cold air with constant circulation, and makes temperature 38 to 42 degrees, nearly ten degrees lower than the average refrigerator.

This, of course, keeps butter, eggs, milk, fruit and the like, much longer than other refrigerators can. These fine results are secured while ice is being saved.

The Pullman Company and all the great railroads use the Bohn system, because it proved superior to all others in every official test.

Call and see these beautiful refrigerators, and remember we sell them exclusively.

INCREASE GREAT

New York's Population Close To Four-Million Mark.

New York, June 21.—From present indications it seems improbable that New York city will reach the 4,000,000 mark in the new state census report, although pressing it closely. From the best procurable figures, reliable statistics and reports from the still uncompleted districts in the city, it is predicted that the population in New York city on June 1 was 3,987,154.

Most important, however, to the New Yorker is the population of old New York, Manhattan and the Bronx, or New York county. Indications point to a total enumeration of 2,378,696.

Undoubtedly the most popular way to arrive at a true conception of the impressive size of the metropolis of the new world is to compare it with the population of other great cities at home and abroad.

The following table compares the largest nine cities in the world, in their order, from latest procurable figures:

Name and Year.	Population.
London, 1901	4 536,541
New York, 1906	3,987,154
Paris, 1901	2,714,480
Berlin, 1900	1,888,848
Chicago, 1900	1,698,575
Vienna, 1901	1,674,954
Canton	1,600,000
Tokyo, 1898	1,444,121
Philadelphia, 1900	1,293,697

New York may not boast of overtaking London, however, for in reality that center of human life contains 6,581,372 souls—within the metropolis and city police limits. In other words London's "Manhattan" has 4,613,812 souls, as against New York's 2,127,602, whereas her "greater city" has 6,581,372 souls as compared to Greater New York's 3,987,154.

It will be sixty days before the secretary of state will give out the official figures. All of the enumeration sheets go to Albany for footing up and tabulation.

Incomplete returns indicate that at least three new assembly districts will be created in Manhattan and the Bronx in consequence of the increased population.

While the returns that have come in to Philip S. Dow, who is in charge of the census enumerators in Brooklyn, are not complete, enough is known to indicate that there has been a surprising increase during the last five years. It will be found, also, when all the returns are tabulated, that there has been a surprising change in the population. There has been a shifting of the old and a building up of new sections, which will require considerable change in the make-up of the political subdivisions of the county.

In the Brownsville section what would make a fair-sized city has grown up since the last census was taken. What is known as the Flatbush section will show the most remarkable growth. Where ten years ago farming was carried on there are now blocks and blocks of houses. While this population is made up of many Manhattan people, there are also many Brooklyn residents who have moved there from the older sections of the borough. The same conditions prevail in the Bensonhurst and other suburban sections, where the growth has been rapid and continual.

NO DEPENDENCE IN EGGS.

Even Fresh Laid Ones May Contain Bacilli.

Paris, June 21.—"Eggs may be poisonous before they are laid," is the statement made by Prof. Metchnikoff of the Pasteur institute, in the witness box. According to the professor, the whites may contain disease-breeding microbes. These when heated survive in a vegetating state up to 60 deg. Centigrade, or 140 deg. Fahrenheit. Consequently a raw or even partly cooked egg, however fresh, may always be poisonous owing to the possible presence of lively bacilli in the white, and contained therein from the very beginning. The professor's evidence was given in a case before the first chamber, in which a pastry cook is being sued by twenty-five persons who had been made ill by eating some of his cream tarts, and by the heirs of a twenty-sixth, who died of it.

ANNUAL SESSION OF EPISCOPALIANS

Annual Addresses By Bishop Morrison and Archdeacon Appleby.

The tenth convocation of the Episcopal churches of the Duluth diocese began in Duluth this morning with holy communion services at Trinity chapel, in the East end. The services though held at an early hour were well attended and those present heard the commemorative portion of Bishop Morrison's address.

Shortly after 9:30 o'clock the clergy and catechists met in the Sunday school rooms of St. Paul's church. This meeting was followed at 10 o'clock by morning prayer in St. Paul's church and the convocation entered into business session, presided over by Bishop Morrison.

Bishop Morrison said it was with deep regret that he had to announce that Dr. J. E. Bowers of this city, who has so long filled the office of secretary could no longer continue in the duties on account of failing health. He spoke in the highest terms of the faithful service and said it was with reluctance that the convocation had been compelled to accept Dr. Bower's statement. In behalf of the congregation Bishop Morrison expressed appreciation for the former secretary's service and the convocation by a vote of thanks had its feeling in the matter spread on the records. Dr. Bowers, in a short talk thanked the convocation for the expressions of appreciation and regard and stated that he would be leaving the city tomorrow for his health, to be absent possibly two months.

The convocation then proceeded to elect a secretary and Rev. F. C. Coolbaugh of Cloquet was chosen, and Rev. R. S. Hanna as his assistant. Rev. Mr. Coolbaugh expressed his thanks and appreciation for the honor conferred and Bishop Morrison announced the following standing committees for the district for the ensuing year:

Organization and incorporation of parishes—Rev. H. M. Green, George Hargraves, G. V. Quillard.

Finance—Rev. George W. Barnes, Rev. T. C. Hudson, F. B. Millard, J. H. Dight.

Privileges—Rev. E. S. Murphy, Rev. F. Durant, J. A. Brown, T. R. Alleson.

State of churches—Rev. F. M. Garland, Dr. Ryan, Rev. A. T. Young, Dr. J. H. Beaty, Rev. Ernest M .Smith, Dr. J. E. Bowers, J. W. Campbell, Henry Taylor, Frank Shore.

Memorials—Dr. Appleby, Rev. J. C. Munson.

Swedish missions—Rev. W. J. Moody, Rev. George E. Remson, Louis Rletz, Rev. Olof Nordbladh, W. E. Hormann, W. S. Bishop, Louis Hulquist.

Indian missions—Rev. R. J. Mooney, Rev. Dr. Appleby, Rev. J. C. Munson, Rev. F. W. Smith, Rev. E. C. Kah-o-see, Rev. B. Brigham, A. E. Prudden, Mr. Culliford, Mr. Hargreaves.

Board of equalization and apportionment—Rev. H. F. Parshall, Rev. H. M. Green, Dr. A. W. Ryan, Rev. T. H. M. V. Appleby, Rev. C. R. Taylor, Rev. Joseph R. Alten, Rev. R. J. Mooney, Rev. B. Brigham, Rev. A. T. Young, Rev. F. M. Garland, J. W. Lyder, treasurer of Episcopal fund; W. S. Bishop, treasurer of district, and F. B. Millard.

Unfinished business—Rev. W. E. Vann, W. E. Morgan.

Bishop Morrison's annual address, which was a continuation of the commemorative portion, delivered at the holy communion services, followed the appointment of the committees. It was an exhaustive report, reviewing thoroughly the work in the district during the past year, and was listened to with closest interest.

Bishop Morrison said the total number confirmed, 270, exceeded in number the confirmations of any other year, with the exception of 1904. He commented on the fact that there had been fewer confirmations on the ranges, and that the class this year in Duluth was only forty as compared with a big class a year ago.

During his address he laid particular stress on the catechism, and especially urged it to the attention of the clergymen and laity. He said:

"The approach of confirmation gives you an excellent opportunity to bring the teachings of the year into direct personal application to souls. We should make the most of it. For a considerable period of time before the confirmation, the subject should be brought prominently before all people and should be kept before them. The instruction of confirmation should not be confined to the privacy of the class you are preparing, but should be the theme of your sermons and lectures. The catechism gives us the authoritative plan and system which we are to expound and enforce with all our power; the covenant between God and His people; the Christians' faith; the Christians' duty; and the grace which the Christian is to seek in prayer and in the sacraments that he may, in his belief and behavior adorn the doctrine of God and Saviour. The catchism is a wonderful compendium of sound theology and our people should all know it by heart and make its teachings the rule of daily life.

"The clergyman who treats the catechism as a light thing is either stupidly disloyal or criminally ignorant. He should go to his people with the catechism in his hand and say: 'This is the voice of the church speaking to you churchmen with divine authority. This is the church's rule of faith and conduct which it wishes you to follow. You must study this catechism that you be not ignorant of the principles of your religion. Nothing else can take its place.'"

Bishop Morrison stated that the mission work of the district has been considerably extended since the last convocation and went at some length into details, showing progress, the new missions established and the number of places where new churches are building or are projected. With reference to the Duluth churches, he said:

"Desirable improvements have been made in the church of the Holy Apostles, West Duluth, and St. Luke's and St. John's, Lakeside, and Trinity, Duluth, which last year, were under one pastor, but have been separated, and each will have its own clergyman. Both congregations are self-supporting."

Bishop Morrison commented on the good work in the Indian missions and said that the tenure of the sites of such missions is still in a very unsatisfactory condition. He also noted the various transfers and missionary appointments made during the year.

His report showed the number of clergy demitted, 2; clergy received, 4; clergy ordained to the deconate, 1; present number of clergy, bishop, 1; priests, 31; deacons, 14; students for orders in charge of missions, 4; churches consecrated, 2; confirmations, 270.

Bishop Morrison's address was followed by Archdeacon Appleby's report which was received with deep interest. In his summary he stated that during the past year he has preached and addressed 333 times; celebrated the holy communion on 115 occasions; administered the holy sacrament of baptism to 4 adults and 25 children; catechised various Sunday schools; performed one marriage; made a number of pastoral calls and written 3,963 letters; traveled by rail, wagon, buggy, boat, sleigh, canoe, steamboat and on foot, 25,575 miles. The offertories amounted to $167.17; the expenses amounted to $345.29, leaving a deficit in this fund of $178.12.

Following the report by Archdeacon Appleby, the convocation adjourned until 1:30 o'clock this afternoon, when the committees met to dispose of matters before them.

Luncheon was served in the parlors of of St. Paul's church, to the visiting clergymen and laity, this noon, by the ladies of St. Paul's church.

This evening there will be a public meeting at St. Paul's church at which a number of addresses will be delivered. Those on the program to participate are Rev. Theodore Sedgwick, rector of St. John's church, St. Paul; Rev. Edward Haupt, vicar St. Mark's, Minneapolis; Rev. Irwin P. Johnson, rector of Gethsemane church, Minneapolis, and Mrs. W. S. Bishop of Duluth.

Tomorrow morning, at 9:30 o'clock will be held the corporate communion of the Woman's Auxiliary, at Trinity chapel. The sermon will be delivered by Rev. I. P. Johnson. This will be followed by a business session at the chapel, while the convocation will take up unfinished business at St. Paul's church.

Tomorrow evening the convocation will close with a reception to the clergy, delegates and churchmen of Duluth, at the Episcopal residence.

VERY BUSY SEASON

Engineer's Department Confronted With Exceptional Amount of Work.

Sewer, Paving and Road Improvement Contracts Are Numerous.

With contracts aggregating over $250,000 to oversee, in addition to all the field work, the furnishing of estimates, and the routine work of the department, the city engineer's force is having one of the busiest periods in its history.

The work on the new reservoir for West Duluth is an expensive and very particular job. It will cost in the neighborhood of $40,000, and from the nature of the work great care must be taken in the inspection of the materials and labor.

On First street the new creosote block pavement is being laid, and from the fact that the creosote blocks are somewhat of an experiment in Duluth, extra care has to be taken with the inspection.

Plans, detailed specifications and estimates for the big paving contract on West Superior street are also being drawn up, involving considerable extra labor.

The residents of Park Point are also figuring on gas and water mains and a sewer system, to be installed this summer. The contract for the gas and water extensions has already been let, and work will be commenced as soon as the pipe arrives. The general oversight of this work, and the drawing up of the plans and specifications also falls upon the engineering department.

Duluth Heights is also heard from, and plans, specifications and estimates for an independent water system and a sewer system have already been drawn up by the department.

The annual order from the board of public works to inspect all of the bridges in the city, is also due, and this in itself is no mean task. There are 127 wooden bridges in the city of Duluth, scattered from Lakewood to Fond du Lac. Of these many are old wooden bridges which have not been touched since they were built in the boom days, and they have to be gone over very carefully to make certain that they are in fit condition to stand traffic. Many of the bridges are without means of access and it is necessary to walk from a mile to three miles to reach some of them.

In addition there is the oversight of all the road work in the outlying parts of the city. The contract has been let for the resurfacing of London road, and the completion of the Fond du Lac road is also in progress. Work is also being done on the new Snively road, and the Hermantown and Pike Lake roads.

The work has never been scattered as it is this year, and as a result of the difficulty in reaching the scene of much of the work, the council is now considering the request of the city engineer for the purchase of a horse and runabout to be used in conveying the engineers and their instruments to such outlying spots as the new reservoir, the Fond du Lac road and Kenwood, where the work on the Snively road will be done. The money appropriated for the department has been used economically and the city engineer reports that the purchase can be made without crippling the fund.

NEW SYNDICATE

To Make War on the Theatrical Trust.

New York, June 21.—To fight the theatrical trust a new syndicate has been organized. The combination is composed of that veteran opponent of the trust, Harrison Grey Fiske, David Belasco, who being unable to get satisfactory booking for his stars, has fulminated against the "trust" before and behind the curtain, and has figured vigorously in the law courts in connection with things theatrical, and Lee Shubert, of Shubert Bros. The latter were widely known as up-state managers, and later dipped into theater direction here, in Chicago and other cities.

The triumvirate aforesaid join hands for the reason that they have the common belief, and insist that they have good and valid reasons for it, that Klaw & Erlanger, as the booking representatives of the theatrical trust, have discriminated against them outrageously, when they have knocked at the door of syndicatedom and asked for theaters in which to play their companies. An address to the public has been prepared carefuly and is to be issued.

THE COLUMBIA OPENS DOORS

Old Great Eastern Store Now Under New Management.

The Columbia Clothing company store, corner of Third avenue west and Superior street, formerly known as "The Great Eastern," was opened this morning to the public for the first time under the new management, and the great inauguration sale, which will continue, it is announced, until every garment bearing the Burrow's label is sold, was begun. The Columbia pennant was in evidence, proudly flying over the big building.

All day long the store has been crowded with people, many of whom were from Superior, where the proprietors of the Columbia have been in business since Superior was a village. William Billstein, Frank Nathan and Felix Seligman were on hand to welcome all comers. This is the popular trio who have so ably and successfully built up the extensive business of the Columbia in Superior. Their reputation for integrity and square dealing is thoroughly established, and is so well known in Superior and Duluth that the people will have no hesitancy in extending their patronage to the local establishment.

The highest standard of excellence in the purchase of stocks will be maintained, and low prices and fair dealing with the public will be the rule here as it has been with the Columbia in the city across the bay. Owning both these big mercantile establishments, Nathan & Billstein are in a position to get the best values in everything, for, by buying in large quantities, they will be enabled to get the lowest prevailing market prices, and can get much better values than if they were conducting only one store. It is their intention to make the Duluth establishment the favorite gentlemen's clothing store of the two Head of the Lakes cities.

GOOD ROADS CONVENTION

Opens In Pavilion on Grounds of Lewis & Clark Exposition.

Portland, June 21.—The fifth annual convention of the National Good Roads association, the first of the gatherings of national importance to meet in Portland this year, at 2 o'clock this afternoon, began its sessions in the festive hall at the Lewis and Clark exposition grounds. When the opening selection of the Administration band had finished, Col. Moody called the gathering to order. This was hardly accomplished when the proceedings were interrupted by the arrival of D. B. Huss, dust begrimmed from travel, who had just reached the Lewis and Clark grounds in an automobile from New York, bearing a letter from Melville E. Stone, general manager of the Associated Press to the president of the Lewis and Clark exposition.

The reading of the letter was finished amid a round of applause.

M. Wiraford, attorney general of Oregon, in absence of Governor Chamberlain fittingly welcomed the visitors to Oregon, as did Col. J. S. Jackson, U. S. A., retired, on behalf of the commercial interests of Portland.

William D. Wheelwright, for the chamber of commerce, of which he is president, welcomed the visiting delegates and eulogized the great work to be accomplished by them. The felicitations were concluded by President G. W. Allen of the board of trade and R. J. Holmes, president of the Manufacturers' association of the Pacific Northwest.

President Moore then pictured the crusade of the good roads train on its pilgrimage across the continent, told of the good work that had been done in that way. He advocated support of the Brownlow-Latimer bill, now before the national house of representatives, which will provide a fund of $24,000,000 for the development of good roads, predicting that nothing can prevent its ultimate triumph as it was an industrial necessity.

He was followed by A. S. Mann of Florida, vice president of the association. Following Mr. Mann's speech, Col. W. H. Richardson, secretary of the association, submitted his annual report.

The secretary's report reviewed at length the activities of the association since its first meeting in Chicago in November, 1900. During the past year the association has constructed no object lesson roads, as was done in the first four years of its existence. Instead it organized special car campaigns, sending out cars over several railroads.

As a result of these campaigns, good roads' conventions have been held in twelve states and forty-six Good Roads associations have been formed during the year. Reports that have been gathered show that where these campaigns have been carried on great impetus has been given to road building. In the states visited during the year and in the states traversed by good roads trains previously sent out over the Illinois Central and the Southern railroad systems, some $34,000,000 has been raised by bond issues and direct taxation and is being expended in permanent road construction. Never before since the days of national roads and turnpikes, the report says, has there been so much active road building accompanished in the United States as during the past few years.

THE BURMESE DWARF

Prepared to Wrestle Any One of His Weight.

London, June 21.—Dwarfs are common enough in a world that offers every facility for the production of misshapen humanity, but the perfect dwarf is extremely rare. To this exclusive class belongs Smaun Sing Hpoo, a native of British Burmah, who has arrived in London and is appearing at a local theater. Smaun is now 22 years of age; he scales twenty pounds, and is two feet ten inches in height.

These figures are not so remarkable as his other measurements, for he is 22 inches round the chest, 22½ inches round the hips, and is perfectly proportioned. He is very sturdy in build, and his muscular development is extraordinary. In fact, he is quite a pocket Hercules. The Burmese dwarf is a finished man of the world. He has been traveling in many parts of it for ten years. His English is quite good, and he has a smattering of French and German as well. Smoking a big cigarette—a habit he acquired in Burmah at the age of 3—he expressed himself as quite delighted to be in London, and made anxious inquiries after an actor.

He is a wrestler, and is prepared to meet any one of his weight in any style. Smaun eats heartily. He never allows his pleasure to interfere with his business, and has not missed one performance in his ten years' travels. His performance on the rings, at which he is an expert, suffices to keep him in good condition, and he has never had more than an occasional headache since he left his native land. His parents, by the way, were of normal size.

Five Young Women From St. Luke's Hospital Conclude Training.

Rev. Theo. Sedgwick of St. Paul Makes Graduation Address.

The graduation exercises of St. Luke's hospital took place last evening at St. Paul's Episcopal church, and five nurses finished their course and went out into the world to care for the sick. Rev. Theodore Sedgwick, rector of St. John's church, St. Paul, was the principal speaker of the occasion, and Dr. A. W. Ryan, rector of St. Paul's, also made a brief address. Miss Mary G. Thornton, superintendent of St. Luke's hospital, presented the gold badges given by the hospital board, after Dr. Ryan had presented the diplomas. The musical part of the services was elaborate, St. Paul's full choir taking part.

After the services in the church a reception for the nurses was held in the rectory, next door to the church, at which the following received: Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Ryan, Miss Mary G. Thornton, superintendent of St. Luke's hospital; Miss Fanny Root, assistant superintendent, Mesdames William Stone, Frederick Lee Gilbert, W. J. Suffel and Wylie, assisted by Misses Nellie Swanson, Victoria Johnson and Sophia Miner.

The names of the graduates, of whom there were five, follow:

Miss Mabel Miller, Danville, Cal.; Miss Lillian G. Anderson, Duluth! Miss Ada - Knox, Marquette, Mich.; Miss Clara L. Reed, Paisley, Canada; Miss Una J. Morrison, Car Bridge, Scotland.

Mr. Sedgwick, in his address, spoke with feeling to the nurses who were graduating. He held up to them their profession as a high and noble one, and endeavored to impress them with the idea of living up to the ideal he pictured it. Said he:

"I have been asked to address you, and I deem it a peculiar privilege. We speak at many commencements, but this graduation is of more than usual interest. I recently addressed the commencement at St. Mary's school. Those young girls are just beginning their womanhood; such a graduation is truly a commencement. Their future is all untried, every avenue is open to them. They have simply made a fair, even start.

"But the graduation from such an institution as the training school of nurses of this hospital is different. You are mature women. You have received the training in the special department of service which you desire to make your life work, and you are now beginning your professional life. The future is only partially untried ground. You know, just as the doctor knows, in a measure what he is going to be called upon to do when he leaves the hospital. Therefore you enter upon this new phase of your life with a pretty clear idea of the duties that fall to your undertaklgn.

"Heretofore you have been under authority. After this you will be independent and this means responsibility. We never grow into any larger phase of life without added responsibility. This is expected and must never be shirked. The swimmer, when he gets out of his depth is glad to know his new power. So you will have great responsibility at times, but this is your privilege because of your ability to graduate from this institution. This is why we laity honor your profession.

"Nursing in these days is a profession especially adapted to women. There must be avenues in which women can earn their livelihoods. They are increasing, but many them are not womanly. We note here and there a woman entering the legal profession. She is a very lonely and conspicuous object. We do not regard it as a particularly feminine calling. In medicine she is gaining a recognized place, but even her own sex do not cordially support her efforts in this profession. In stenography she excels men and she has won a large employment.

"In nursing she chooses a sphere which is peculiarly hers. Men cannot compete with her at all. Woman here has an opportunity to exercise all her talents. If she has ten talents, she has the chance to gain another ten; if she has five, she has the chance to gain another five. If she has but one, it is not for her to bury it. If so she must retire from her profession. By her ability and by her knowledge the professional nurse has won a place in the social order so that no woman no matter what position she may occupy, can lose an iota of her prestige; she only adds to that by her professional skill. She is honored, she is respected; she is accorded the highest courtesies and it is for her to maintain the position which the profession guarantees her.

"There are some who have not a high and noble idea of their profession. They ignore it, and they should be made to feel the wrong they do their noble sphere of opportunity open to womankind. I refer to those who go into nurseries for dollars and cents, to get their $25 a week; and that is to be all and end all of their business. Every laborer is worthy of his hire and no laborer is more worthy than that patient, interesting gentle nurse who by day and night watches at the bedside. But to be there only for money's sake is degrading to the profession.

"What I want to do in speaking on this occasion is to uphold the profession as one that exists for the high and noble purpose of the amelioration of that great half of the world—the suffering half. The physician who excels in his profession is the man who wants to discover more knowledge always for and from the patient to whom he can minister. How he can succeed in restoring health under its varied conditions of disease. He is indeed worthy of his hire, and greater gratitude should be shown them than is often given.

"The clergyman goes into the profession because he wants to heal the moral diseases which cause so many of the physical ones. He wants to follow his Master, going about doing good, and the one who cares for the sick is fulfilling a Christian profession and she is following in the footsteps of her Lord who went about healing the sick. Let the nurse realize the splendid opportunity that is afforded her to ennoble her profession, and so bestow a gift on humanity. Let her realize how she can make her profession an inspiration to herself and to those to whom she ministers. It is this realization I would leave with you.

"I know the many hard places you will have to fill. You will have hard times physically. You will have trying times for the lack of ordinary courtesy which will hurt you. You know this as well as I. I do not want to magnify the hard side, but rather that which will give you inspiration.

"And, first, be a Christian nurse. This is not to intrude your religion upon your patients, but keep your religion strong and earnest, that you may be stronger for your task. You are not working alone for yourself; you want to serve your Master. And no one has a sweeter opportunity than you. When weary and tired, and your patient seems to make no headway, remember you are caring for one who has a soul before God. Your charge will be more sacred. Remember the place this soul may yet fill, and you may be the means of restoring it to its place of service. This is your work for the Master. To assure yourself of your willingness to serve, give, when the opportunity presents, a little time to district nursing as your gift for the Master.

"Have great sympathy in your work. The physicians have instructed you not to show sympathy to your patients. This will often intensiry their irritability. Your physicians are right. There is often mistaken sympathy. I refer to a larger sympathy for the life you are trying to save, for the soul which is precious in God's sight, that you may be drawn to your patient, and never repelled by the one under your charge. Oh, have a large sympathy because of the value of the life you are protecting.

"Another thing to give you inspiration is the power you possess there for your art. You will constantly increase the knowledge you now have, and you are helping to wipe out the diseases which we have suffered from, and you are doing a great work toward creating a stronger human constitution."

"You must gain inspiration from placing your work before yourself; your work is nobler than you are."

Mr. Sedgwick spoke of the splendid work done by the nurses during the Spanish war, and closed by saying:

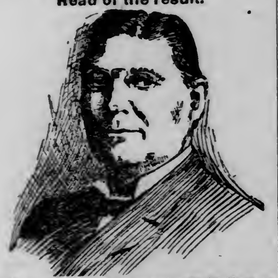
"Is this idealism? Maybe so, but it is ideal of every good profession which deals with human life."

European and American Specialists FAILED TO CURE ECZEMA

This Doctor Then Tried

D. D. D. Prescription

Read of the result.



For over 10 years I have suffered with Eczema on my hands. I tried leading specialists in Europe and America, and none could do me a particle of good. My hands were swollen until they were like huge sores. I did not dare to wash them properly, as I found that every soap I used made the disease grow worse. The European doctors knew no more than the American. I finally used Three D's Eczema Cure, carefully following directions, and I find that it is all that you claim for it, it has completely cured me. I shall take great pleasure hereafter in recommending it to any patient.

Yours truly, DR. S. M. JONAS,
Feb. 2, 1905. 3560 Prairie Ave., Chicago.

What we do for others we can just as surely do for you. No use to dose the stomach; you can't reach the skin that way. No use to go to health resorts; water won't kill parasites. There is only one scientific and logical treatment; D. D. D. Prescription. It actually slaughters the parasites in the skin that result in Eczema and all skin diseases. Try a $1.00 bottle today, and you will be convinced. Remember, we refund every cent if D. D. D. Prescription fails to cure.

Even if Mr. Loomis had been guilty, said the president, Mr. Bowen's conduct would have been unpardonable. The letter quotes certain correspondence and testimony.

The report of Secretary Taft on the case on which the president's action is based, is a voluminous document, reviewing the charges and evidence taken.

The letter of Secretary Taft to the president, reporting on his inquiry into the case, says that the evidence shows that the only transaction which Mr. Loomis ever had with the New York and Bermudez Asphalt company was a mere transfer of funds from Caracas to New York, in which Mr. Loomis was indiscreet in becoming personally interested in the Mercado claim.

In another transaction in which President Castro regarded Mr. Loomis as acting on behalf of the American syndicate, Mr. Taft says that Mr. Loomis was "certainly treading on dangerous ground in bringing his official life so close to a transaction in which he must expect to have a great personal interest."

After exonerating Mr. Loomis of other charges, Secretary Taft says:

"The transactions of Mr. Loomis show what seems to me is apparent, that he was not discreet in withholding personal participation in enterprises in furthering which he might find his position as minister useful. Caracas is full of concession holders and concession hunters. All gossip of the town is full of the charges of corruption against every diplomatic official. Under these circumstances it seems to me it was the business of the minister of the United States to keep his skirts especially clean of personal participation in any business which might bring him into contact with the government.

"Mr. Loomis shows that he was intensely interested as American minister in encouraging investment of American capital in Venezuela with a view to assisting both countries and bringing them together, that this was known to many at Caracas and attracted to him all kinds of propositions that for his efforts to further American business interests, he received the thanks of an association of American manufacturers. While this was all doubtless true, it did ont justify Mr. Loomis in becoming personally interested in any of the schemes even with a mere nominal interest, as that might lead to others of a substantial interest, because it would end in making his public duty and private interests conflict.

"One canont read this evidence without being convinced that Mr. Loomis has been most cruelly slandered in charges against his integrity as a public official and as a man, but with the very great satisfaction that we find in his complete exculpation from all charges of dishonesty, we cannot be blind to the fact that his failure to hold himself aloof from all plans of investment and exploitation of the country to which he was accredited, and from allowing himself to take personal interest in transactions in which he or his legation might have to act in an official capacity, perhaps have lent color to cast aspersions on his character, which his enemies have been only too willing to support.

"I cannot close this without commending the dignity and self-restraint with which Mr. Loomis has met the charges which have been made against him, charges made, I am sorry to say, with recklessness and epithets likely to have provoked from one of less self-control, counter insult and attack. I cannot say, because I do not think that the record of Mr. Loomis as minister in Venezuela is shown in this record such as to disqualify him from service as minister in the diplomatic service of the United States, but I sincerely hope that his bitter experience in this case makes it unnecessary further to point the moral that one who occupies the position of minister of the United States cannot afford, in any country to which he is accredited, in which business enterprise must more or less be effected by government favor or concession, to make personal investments of any sort or to leave any doubt as to the absence of all personal interest in any matters which he may bring before the government to which he is accredited."

The president's letter to Secretary Taft follows:

"To Secretary Taft: Sir:—I have read your report of June 19 on the Bowen-Loomis matter, I agree with all your findings and conclusions regarding Mr. Loomis and have nothing to add thereto.

"There remains to be considered the case as affecting Mr. Bowen, against whom Mr. Loomis has made counter charges. Mr. Bowen has denied that he made 'charges' against Mr. Loomis. This is a mere matter of terminology. In his letter to Secretary Taft of April 2, beginning 'My Dear Bill,' and signed 'Herbert,' he writes:

"'As I understand that you are to be the head of the department of state during the absence of Mr. Hay, I feel that you are fully informed as to the terrible scandal in the situation here; consequently I enclose herewith copies of papers, which will furnish you with the facts that I think you should know.'

"Then follow certain cablegrams including a report that Mr. Loomis was paid a check, and the custodian of the Bermudez Lake had in his possession this check and also a letter promising that the United States would not intervene, and the president of Venezuela felt safe, because of these facts. A copy of a letter to Mr. Hay of Feb. 18, 1905, in which Mr. Bowen distinctly expressed his belief that this alleged, and as it turns out, wholly fictitious check and fictitious letter were in the hands of President Castro, who because he had them had undoubtedly felt safe to refuse arbitration. He furnished letters which he claims to have found in Loomis' safe a year ago, which he sent to Mr. Hay, together with other documents, and Mr. Bowen intimates that Mr. Hay stated in return that he had performed his whole duty in sending these letters to him. Mr. Bowen makes certain comment on the documents as follows:

"'To Mr. Russell, now minister to Colombia, through the influence of Mr. Loomis' (which statement, incidentally, is untrue). Mr. Bowen again says 'Mr. Loomis collected the Mercado claim for the Venezuelan government; got a share of it for a small sum and never reported the case to the department of state and again he says, he dealt with Buchanan, whom Loomis subsequently got appointed minister to Panama.' (Which is again an untruth, Mr. Loomis had nothing whatever to do with the appointment of either Mr. Buchanan or Mr. Russell.)

"In Mr. Bowen's statement dated at East Orange, May 10, he says: 'I have never preferred charges against Mr. Loomis.' Yet three lines further down he says that to his mind it has been proved conclusively that Mr. Loomis is a 'dishonest official' and a few lines further down says he had 'not preferred charges against Mr. Loomis' and that none were needed.

"The documents themselves were charges. The documents Mr. Bowen explains, were submitted to Mr. Hay in the spring of 1904, and that a year had passed without further action by Mr. Hay. (Which, by implication at least, looks as if Mr. Bowen was accusing Mr. Hay also of misconduct.)

"In this same communication of May 10, Mr. Bowen goes on to say, 'that I was justified in so doing (that is, in securing the publication of the attack on Mr. Loomis.) I have but to show how Mr. Loomis abrogated the agreement that President Roosevelt and Mr. Hay had authorized me to make with the Venezuelan government; how he thus ruined our whole case, and how he seemed likely to bring still further disgrace on our government.'

"Mr. Bowen then goes on to state after he had received by cable, Jan 18, from Mr. Hay, one cablegram of which he approved, a protocol arrived by cable from Mr. Loomis, and that this protocol, as he calls it, and of which he complains, he answered by a cablegram to Mr. Hay. He adds:

"'I was of course more astounded than the Venezuelan government that Mr. Loomis should thus destroy my work and override the decision of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hay, and thus derogate from our prestige as a strong and straight nation.' And he ends his letter by the statement, 'If the newspaper representatives were influenced by what I was justified in trying to influence them, because Mr. Loomis was dishonest while minister at Caracas, and as assistant secretary of state, was guilty of abrogating the agreements President Roosevelt and Mr. Hay had authorized me to arrange with the Venezuelan government, and he seemd likely to deceive the government and the people of the United States.'

"It is disingenious for Mr. Bowen repeatedly to use such language and at the same time insist that he has made no 'charges' against Mr. Loomis. Moreover, it is quite impossible that Mr. Bowen can believe that the telegram signed by Mr. Loomis as acting secretary of state which he calls a protocol, really proves that Mr. Loomis 'was guilty of abrogating the agreements, President Roosevelt and Mr. Hay had authorized me to make with the Venezuelan government.'

"Mr. Bowen's statement is shown to be absolutely untrue by the statement of the solicitor of state, Mr. Penfield. But his own statement bears in itself its own refutation on this point. He shows that he at once answered the cable from Mr. Loomis by a cable to Mr. Hay, who would thus at once have had his attention called to the Loomis protocol, even if he had not known of it before and even if he was so neglectful of his duty to not inquire as to what cables had been sent in the matter in which he was dealing.

"As a matter of fact, the Loomis cable in question was sent by direction of Mr. Hay, with the assistance of Mr. Penfield and was signed by Mr. Loomis, simply because on the day it was sent it happened that Mr. Hay was confined to his house and could not get down to the state department. It is on its face an absurdity to suppose that Mr. Hay, who returned to his duties in the state department, within a day or two and who was repeatedly going over this whole Venezuelan matter and cabling to Bowen about it and receiving cables from him in return could have been ignorant if such a cable had been sent by Loomis during his (Mr. Hay's) absence. Mr. Bowen's allegation on this point is in reality a charge against Mr. Hay rather than against Mr. Loomis.

"Mr. Bowen, himself, admits that he showed these letters and made the statements to the representatives of the newspapers in question. I have already quoted his remark in his statement of May 29. 'If the newspaper representatives were influenced by me, I was justified in trying to influence them because Mr. Loomis was dishonest while minister at Caracas.'

"In the same statement he said that 'Mr. Loomis' friends assert that I instigated the publication of the scandal with which his name is associated.' That charge may be true. Whether it is or not, the newspaper correspondents who were in Caracas alone know. As the scandal was generally known throughout the whole community, I talked with them about it. I certainly never attempted to keep them silent. On the contrary, I urged them to tell 'the truth.' In his letter to me of June 8, he says: 'I had several private interviews with both Mr. Dater and Mr. Biddle in regard to information which they were sending to the Herald. In order to make my side of the case perfectly clear, I explained to them confidentially how Mr. Loomis' record in Caracas and the influence to which he must consequently bend balked me in my work. I felt that I could safely trust them. In all governmental and diplomatic circles, it is customary to trust and use the press. In no other way can information be placed before the public that the public should possess. What I wanted our people to know was not the Loomis scandal alone, but the whole situation in Venezuela. I did not believe for a moment that either Mr. Dater or Mr. Biddle would quote me, or attempt to reproduce from memory any paper I showed them, and I supposed, of course, that they would present the whole case to our people, and not merely the Loomis scandal. In fact they assured me that the interviews would be regarded by them as entirely confidential. . . . If my name is associated with the scandal it is only because there was a breach of faith somewhere.' Again in his letter of June 14, he says:

"'I talked with the Herald men because they said they would not betray my confidence. They did betray me, and one of them even tried to produce from memory the Mercado claim which I showed to him confidentially.'

"In short, it appears from Mr. Bowen's own statement as well as from the statement of Messrs. Dater and Biddle, and the letter from Mr. Wright, that Mr. Bowen, while minister at Caracas, instigated and requested, and actually secured the publication of attacks on the assistant secretary of state, and furnished to the press copies of documents believed to reflect upon the assistant secretary of state, which documents were already before the secretary of state for investigation. Mr. Bowen's excuse for this conduct, so far as it can be made out, seems to be that he expected the newspaper men to keep his connection with the charges secret. In other words, he apparently regards his case as improved, that he secured this attack upon his official chief in a furtive and underhand manner, and that he did not intend that his connection with the attack should be divulged.

"Of course, such conduct is inexcusable, and shows Mr. Bowen's entire unfitness to remain in the diplomatic service, without regard to whether these charges he has made against Mr. Loomis are true or false. Even if Mr. Loomis had been guilty, Mr. Bowen's conduct would be unpardonable. Inasmuch as Secretary Taft's careful investigation of the charges shows them to be false, his attitude appears in an even worse light. But it must be kept in mind that his unfitness for the service is clearly established by his own conduct, without any reference to the question of Mr. Lomis' actions. The department of state had explicitly forbidden just such conduct in a general circular issued over three years ago.

"It appears from the testimony that Caracas is seething with scandal and that all kinds of accusations are rife, not merely against Mr. Loomis and Mr. Bowen, but against practically every other diplomatic representative now residing, or who has recently resided there. There is no excuse whatever for repeating the injurious and malicious gossip circulated about these various men. Mr. Bowen himself, however, has not only furnished and brought forward a great deal of gossip about Mr. Loomis, but has evidently been one of the main sources from which it originated. He tried to tamper with the cable operator, through our consul at La Guira, Mr. Goldschmidt, in order to secure what he hoped would be incriminating telegrams against Mr. Loomis.

"Mr. Goldschmidt's reply was: 'It would be dishonorable to do what you ask of me.'

"Mr. Goldschmidt, in his letter of May 3, 1905, says: 'Mr. Bowen never lost an opportunity to belittle Mr. Loomis' character, ability, etc., when he spoke to me of him, and seemed to bear an extraordinary animus against his predecessor. Mr. Bowen asked one of the men he himself produced as a witness, Senor Pastor, to enter into the employ of a certain company for the purpose of obtaining (in plain words, of stealing) documents which he hoped might incriminate Mr. Loomis.

"He has evidently for many months, indeed for the last two years, devoted himself to hunting every piece of scandal or gossip of which he heard affecting Mr. Loomis until it has seemingly become a monomania with him and has caused him to show complete disloyalty to the service to which he belongs and therefor to the country which he has represented. It was his duty to make known to his superior officers any facts reflecting on the honesty of Mr. Loomis or any other officials but it was a breach of his duty to make loose and reckless charges, and especially to give these charges public currency after their submission for investigation by the department."

"Mr. Bowen has been a long time in the consular and diplomatic service; during much of that time he has done good work, and until recently I had hoped to promote him. If I could condone his misconduct in this case, I would gladly do so, but his unfulness in the diplomatic service is at an end. I do not desire to punish him; save for the great risk to the service which would be involved in his retention I would be willing to let his conduct go unpunished, save by a severe admonition. But I feel that it is impossible to retain him without exposing the interests of the government to a risk so great that it cannot justifiably be incurred. Accordingly, I would direct that his resignation be requested were it not for the statement made on his behalf in your presence and mine today, that he would consider a resignation as admission of misconduct, accordingly I direct that he be dismissed from the service. A TEST EXPERIMENT.

Peculiar Power Possessed By a New Medicine.

Of new discoveries there is no end, but one of the mose recent, most remarkable and one which will prove invaluable to thousands of people, is a discovery which it is believed will take the place of all other remedies for the cure of those common and obstinate diseases, dyspepsia and stomach troubles. This discovery is not a loudly advertised, secret patent medicine, but is a scientific combination of wholesome, perfectly harmless vegetable essences, fruit salts, pure pepsin and bismuth.

These remedies are combined in lozenge form, pleasant to take, and will preserve their good qualities indefinitely, whereas all liquid medicines rapidly lose whatever good qualities they may have had as soon as uncorked and exposed to the air.

This preparation is called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and it is claimed that one of these Tablets or lozenges will digest from 300 to 3,000 times its own weight of meat, eggs and other wholesome food. And this claim has been proven by actual experiments in the following manner: A hard-boiled egg cut into small pieces was placed in a bottle containing warm water heated to 98 degrees (or blood heat); one of these tablets was then placed in the bottle and the proper temperature maintained for three hours and a half, at the end of which time the egg was as completely digested as it would have been in a healthy stomach. This experiment was undertaken to demonstrate that what it would do in the bottle it would also do in the stomach, hence its unquestionable value in the cure of dyspepsia and weak digestion. Very few people are free from some form of indigestion, but scarcely two will have the same symptoms. Some will suffer most from distress after eating, bloating from gas in the stomach and bowels, others have acid dyspepsia or heartburn, others palpitation or headaches, sleeplessness, pains in chest and under shoulder blades, extreme nervousness as in nervous dyspepsia, but they all have the same cause, failure to properly digest what is eaten. The stomach must have rest and assistance, and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets give it both, by digesting the food for it and in a short time it is restored to its normal action and vigor. At the same time the Tablets are so harmless that a child can take them with benefit. This new preparation has already made many astonishing cures, as for instance, the following:

After using only one package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets I have received such great and unexpected benefit that I wish to express my sincere gratitude. In fact, it has been six months since I took the package and I have not had one particle of distress or difficulty since. And all this in the face of the fact that the best doctors I consulted told me my case was Chronic Dyspepsia and absolutely incurable as I had suffered twenty-five years. I distributed half a dozen packages among my friends here who are very anxious to try this remedy.

SENSATIONAL DEVELOPMENTS

In Philadelphia Scandal Follow Each Other In Rapid Succession.

Philadelphia, June 21.—The arrest of John W. Hill, who resigned last week as the chief of the bureau of filtration, on the charge of forgery and falsifying certain books and papers belonging to the city, and the annulment of a $700,000 contract held by D. J. McNichol & Co., were the dramatic developments yesterday in Philadelphia's sensational political upheaval. Hill entered a bond in the sum of $10,000 for a hearing. An interesting feature of the case is that Stuart Wood, of the firm of R. R. Wood & Co., which concern has furnished iron piping for the filtration system, who is a member of the committee of seventy which is fighting the Republican organization, became Hill's bondsman. The arrest of Hill is the third that has occurred in connection with city contracts since the mayor began his fight for municipal reform. The warrant charges Hill with having committed forgery, in that he made, or caused to be made, a statement giving a false estimate of the work done by the firm of McNichol & Co. on the filtration plant, and also with falsifying certain books and papers of the city for the purpose of defrauding the city. Former Chief Hill received a salary of $17,000, the highest compensation received by any city employe. Up to a few weeks ago Mayor Weaver had the highest regard for the ability of Chief Hill as an engineer. So well did he think of him that last April he urged the city council to raise his salary from $12,000 to $17,000.

The rescinding of the $700,000 contract, held by McNichol & Co., caused consternation in political circles. In revoking this contract the mayor notified the director of public works to take immediate steps to advertise for bids for the work and material remaining to be done and supplies. The original value of the contract was $560,000, but on March 17 this was increased to $700,000 by a supplementary contract. Up to date $213,000 has been paid for work done.

The McNicol firm has had contracts for about two-thirds of the work in constructing the filtration system. So far the system has cost the city upward of $22,000,000, and it is estimated that it will cost about $5,000,000 more to complete the work. Mayor Weaver said last night that he issued the order rescinding the contract because he felt that the city's interests would not be safeguarded unless he did it.

DON'T BE FAT.

My New Obesity Food Quickly Reduces Weight to Normal, Requires No Starvation Process On Your Part, and Is Absolutely Safe.

Trial Package Sent Free to All Who Write, By Mail, Postpaid, in Plain Wrapper—Write Today.

The Above Illustration Shows the Remarkable Effects of This Wonderful Obesity Food—What It Has Done for Others. It Will Do for You.

Excess fat is a disease. It is caused by imperfect assimilation of food. Nutriment which should go into muscle, sinew, bone, brain and nerve does not go there, but piles up in the form of superfluous fat, which clogs the human machinery and compresses the vital organs of the body and endangers health and life.

My new Obesity Food, taken at mealtime, compels perfect assimilation of the food and sends the food nutriment where it belongs. It requires no starvation process. You can eat all you want. It makes muscle, bone, sinew, nerve and brain tissue out of excess fat, and quickly reduces your weight to normal. It takes off the big stomach and relieves the compressed condition and enables the heart to act freely and the lungs to expand naturally and the kidneys and liver to perform their functions in a natural manner.

My natural, scientific Obesity Food does the work. You will feel better the first day you try this wonderful home food.

Mrs. Grace Reid Gates, 6068 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., says: "My Dear Mr. Kellogg, I have been taking your wonderful remedy lacking two days of a month, and I have never felt so well and hearty and comfortable in years. I weighed nearly 195 when I began your Obesity Food and Treatment, and now I have reduced my flesh more than 48 pounds.

"It really seems almost a miracle. I did not suppose it possible to lose so much flesh and not be hungry, but your food is wonderful.

"I eat all I want, but my weight is steadily decreasing. I have consulted a doctor several times, and he says my heart is very much stronger than ever before, and my color is the picture of health.

"I had tried so many things to get rid of my fat, and none of them did it. I had no notion of trying again, until I got your letters, and now I am very glad I did.

"I have the time and will take pleasure in answering letters to those who write me."

YOUNG CHILD LOSES HIS LIFE

Three-Year-Old Boy Is Fatally Burned at Hibbing.

Hibbing, Minn., June 21.—Arthur Basle, a 3-year-old son of Peter Basle, a miner, died yesterday afternoon as the result of being severely burned. Basle lives at the end of Cedar street. Yesterday morning after the larger children had departed for school, Mrs. Basle busied herself with her household duties and the child was left alone in the kitchen for a few moments. In some way he secured a box of matches and carrying the matches into the yard began to light them on a stone. One of the burning matches evidently fell into the box and the flash of flames set fire to the child's dress. His mother hearing the screams of pain ran to the yard and found the little boy with his clothing almost burned off and his legs and body almost charred.

Pedro Dominick, a miner, employed in the Hawkins mine at Nashwauk, was smothered beneath tons of ore yesterday while at work in the mine sheds.

Howard Le Pard, the steeple jack who fell fifty feet down the side of a smoke stack at the Sellars mine by the breaking of his swing stage, is not as seriously injured as was first believed. He has a broken collar bone, but is not injured internally.

DEMONSTRATIONS

At Gomez Funeral Result In Some Disorder.

Havana, June 21.—The body of Gen. Maximo Gomez was interred last evening after a funeral service replete with demonstrations in honor of the dead general as to lead, in several instances, to scenes of disorder. The most serious trouble occurred while the great procession was passing Central park, when some reckless young Cubans rushed toward the field gun caisson, on which the general's remains were borne, demanding permission to carry the body. They were thrust back, and then a big crowd rushed forward and swayed back and forth across the broad street, temporarily disorganizing the procession.

At the cemetery there was considerable disorder. The bulk of the great crowd was restrained from passing through the cemetery gates until the arrival of the procession, and this resulted in much crowding and pushing, and in several sharp charges by mounted police, with no worse results, however, than some bruised heads and bodies. The arrival of big forces of rural guards soon resulted in the restoration of order, and the burial of the remains of Gen. Gomez was accomplished, just before sunset, in the presence of a great but quiet and reverent multitude.

The procession was the largest since the establishment of the republic. In it were included the entire executive, legislative and judicial departments of the government, the foreign ministers and the legation and consular staffs, the governors of every province, provincial and city officials of Havana, the military, police, firemen, local and visiting clubs and societies, and 1,000 personal friends.

ALEXANDER AND HYDE ARE OUT

New York, June 21.—Following the establishment of a new and independent investigation of the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance society, by direction of Paul Morton, chairman of the board of directors, came the announcement last night by Mr. Morton that he had accepted the resignations of J. A. Alexander, as president, and J. H. Hyde, as first vice president. These resignations, with those of Second Vice President Tarbell, Third Vice President Wilson, Fourth Vice President McIntyre and Assistant Secretary Winthrop were placed in the hands of Mr. Morton at the meeting of the board of directors, at which he was elected chairman with plenary powers over the affairs of the association. The new chairman announced that he would hold them in abeyance until he had time to acquaint himself further with the affairs of the society. When Mr. Morton was asked last night whether he would give any reason for the acceptance of the resignations, he replied:

"When do the resignations take effect?"

"They take effect now."

Mr. Morton declined to say whether he had taken any action on the resignations of the other officers, nor would he say anything more regarding the affairs of the Equitable society.

Inquiries at the residences of Mr. Alexander and Mr. Hyde elicited the information that no statement would be given out by either of those gentlemen.

Plans Laid to Astonish the Britishers of Uppertendom.

London, June 21.—Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mrs. Frank Mackey of Chicago are planning a London season of notable splendor and lavish expenditure. Both have rented fine mansions in order to entertain on a grand scale.

Mrs. Palmer was early in the field and made a particularly good stroke by getting the duke of Abercorn's historic town residence in Greene street, close to Hyde Park.

Mrs. Mackey has for the coming season the home in Curzon street of that other famous Anglo-American, Mrs. Adair.

Lady Cunard, who was Miss Burke of Chicago—she married the son of the founder of the steamship line—has taken for the London season 15 Mansfield street, which is owned by one of England's wealthiest provincial bankers, Mr. Gurney of Norwich. The distinguishing feature of this mansion is its ceiling decorations by Angelica Kauffman, which are said to represent that artist's finest work.

The question that naturally comes to one's mind is, How much does it cost? There are several ways of getting rid of money and most of them are known to Americans, but the London-house-for-the season enterprise is about the most expeditious of the lot.

It cannot be done for less than $30,000. Well-informed persons say the season probably will cost Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. Mackay from $150,000 to $300,000 each. Both women are going to do the thing just as well as can be done. Other American hostesses, such as Mrs. John Jacob Astor, the duchess of Roxburgh and Lady Bateman (the former Mrs. Knapp), probably will get off for something like $100,000.

About the lowest price at which one can get a fashionable house for the season is $2,500.

Nominally one can secure for $2,500 a mansion containing, say, ten bedrooms, three reception rooms, a ballroom and stabling for five or six horses.

The word "nominally" is especially good in this connection, for the sum mentioned applies to the house just as it stands, with furniture, of course, and does not include linen, plate, servants or horses and carriages. All these are costly, and to possess them and do anything like the sort of entertaining that is expected from Americans in the West end will make the cost of keeping up an establishment of the size mentioned not less than $10,000 a month. That foots up $30,000 for a modest "season."

Mrs. Palmer starts off by paying the duke of Abercorn $15,000 for the use of his house (not including plate and linen). Hampden House, as it is called, was built in 1725 and derives its name from Viscount Hampden, who for many years inhabited it. Viewed from outside it is low and rambling and none the more impressive for being built of ugly red brick. It is a spacious place, however, and with its gardens, occupies nearly an acre of ground. Its bedrooms number twenty-two, and there are ten sitting-rooms, a state drawing-room and a ballroom.

Hampden House contains also the finest individual collection of paintings in London. Many of the works of art are priceless and they will remain in the mansion during Mrs. Palmer's occupancy. The house is famous, too, for the beauty of its art panelings.

Mrs. Mackay's house contains twenty-five bedrooms, a splendid ballroom, eight reception-rooms and especially commodious quarters for the servants. There is stabling for nineteen horses. The house and furniture alone cost Mrs. Mackey $15,000. She supplies her own plate, linen, servants and horse and carriage.

Nowadays the American hostess in Mayfair usually solves the "help" difficulty by engaging a butler of experience and making him responsible for getting the others. The correct number is about fifteen, and their wages, including the butler's, will be $1,500 for three months.

Plate and linen can be rented for the season for $500, but it is more swagger to buy them outright, so most Americans do so, and spend $10,000 in the process.

You cannot have less than five pairs of horses and as many vehicles, but it is quite the thing to rent these. The cost for the season, including the maintenance and services of coachmen, will be $15,000.

An automobile will cost $3,000 or more. All this, of course, is outside the actual entertaining, which is the thing that eats up money fastest.

In order to get at the cost of entertaining during a London season the question was put to one of the best known "hewse agents," as they are called in Mayfair.

"To do the thing with the lavishness which tradition demands," said this personage, "will cost, at a conservative estimate, from $40,000 to $50,000. That is, of course, exclusive of house rent. On household expenses for a family of, say, four, with occasional guests, fifteen servants and incidentals, not counting special entertainments, but including lights, flowers and wines, a hostess would spend something like $5,000.

"There must be at least three balls or dances. These are expensive in London. There would be from 500 to 1,000 guests. To provide music, supper and sometimes breakfast, dancing favors and any special entertainment for the sake of originality, it would be necessary to spoil $20,000.

"Then there are twelve reception days—one each week—at, say, $200 each. That would pay for the music, flowers and tea. Two musicals are usually given. With the best talent they will cost $3,000. Four state dinners are customary; the expense for them would be $4,000.

"These, with a box at the opera costing $2,000, are the things that are expected Entertaining at Henley, the Derby, Ascot and New Market are optional. Likewise you needn't b presented at court unless you please, but if you are it will consume another $1,000."

But perhaps the expenditure that comes as the greatest shock to Americans who rent London houses is the amount of money it takes to get one's social activities "noticed" in the newspapers. To get the announcement that "Mrs. Rocks of New York has taken Lord So-and-So's Mayfair residence for the season" into the chief London daily and weekly journals costs more than $500. The fashionable Morning Post alone charges $25.

This preliminary announcement generally is sent out by the agent through whom the house is taken. For publicity of subsequent doings during the "season" about $2,000 will be required. The newspaper rule on this point is a hard and fast one, and the only exception to it is royalty.

The Misery of Piles

They are ignorant of the fact that there is an internal remedy that will positively and painlessly cure.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific
The Internal Remedy

strikes at the prime causes of piles—indigestion, congestion of the liver and constipation. These causes are removed and removed for good. Get a bottle today and see how well it proves the truth of this statement.

For dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, biliousness, catarrh of the stomach and kindred ailments it is the greatest remedy that has ever yet benefited mankind.

When these troubles are taken care of and cured, Piles will be a thing of the past.

IT SHOULD BE INVESTIGATED

Washington, June 20.—It happens that at the very time President Roosevelt is launching a commission of assistant heads of departments to investigate the methods of business in the national government, the department of agriculture is under fire because of allegeds "leaks of information" regarding the reports of the cotton crop. In the opinion of many public men the reports of leakage would not be the only reason why the affairs of this department should be scrutinized.

As matters now stand the department of agriculture is a power unto itself. No one dares to question it. It is free from molestation by congress. One reason is that it is the agent of congress in distributing "free seeds" to constituents. In addition, whenever a member of congress attacks the department he is accused of being an enemy of the farmer.

In a short life of twenty-five years, the agricultural department has become one of the greatest political and governmental forces in the United States. It is a machine absolutely in the control of one man, if he chooses to use it. In 1881 the first agricultural department appropriation bill carried a total of $253,300. The agricultural bill passed by the last congress totaled $6,822,000.

It has been the best advertised branch of the government. Whenever something novel is about to be undertaken the story has gone forth that the department of agriculture was going to do something for the farmer which would increase productiveness a thousand fold. It must be admitted that in many cases the benefits never have been realized. But the report of the failure never has succeeded in catching up with the widely heralded account of what the department hoped to do.

There have been some notable failures in the department. One was the expriment made in the Connecticut valley by which the farmers were to be shown how to raise Sumatra tobacco under canvas in such a way as to duplicate the climate of Sumatra. The experiment was a failure, but it was not known to be a failure until the Connecticut farmers invested a great deal of money.

Another instance was the effort to discover the hog cholera germ and stamp out that disease. Still another was the campaign of the department to destroy the cotton boll weevil with the red ant of Guatemala. It had been discovered that the red ant fed on the boll weevil, and the ant was imported into Texas, but it has changed its diet.

It must not be inferred that the department has not done good work, but in the last half dozen years it has given a great many evidences of science gone mad in the thirst for notoriety and advertising.

POTTER TO AID

His Former Wife Who Is Now In London Penniless.

Daughter's Love For Mother Touches James Brown Potter's Heart.

New York, June 21.—Society is astir over the report that James Brown Potter has gone abroad in order that he may relieve the financial distress of his former wife, Cora Urquhart Potter, who still bears his name on the stage and in private life. The report is persistent, notwithstanding that Potter is accompanied by his second wife, formerly Miss May Hanley, and his daughter, Mrs. James A. Stillman, Jr.

When Mrs. Potter was forced to retire from the management of the Savoy theater, London, after a series of disastrous theatrical ventures, she tried ineffectually to raise funds in London. As a last resort she appealed to her daughter. Mrs. Stillman was eager to go to her mother's aid, but she is entirely dependent on her husband, and he was not disposed to provide funds necessary to pay Mrs. Potter's debts and re-establish her in London.

It is reported that through her daughter Mrs. Potter's former husband was induced to go to her aid.

The financial downfall of Mrs. James Brown Potter is not without its pathos. Her health is broken and her spirits are crushed. Her prestige, such as it was, is gone and she has lived to see her superb residence on the Thames, Bray Lodge at Maidenhouse, valued at $500,000, pass out of her possession. Her lavish gowns—among them the famous "emotional" creations of the Paris habitmaker, are hers no longer, and most of her jewels are another's. Yet Cora Urquhart Potter has never been a pampered woman in any sense. She has fought—struggled hard for recognition as an actress of the first rank at home and has been coldly treated, sneered at and called "good enough for Australia, perhaps, but—"

Three times with Kyrle Bellew, Mrs. Potter toured the world, yet never made money from her art, or was ordered a great actress, outside of Australia. Prosperous times came to her, but through mining ventures engineered by the versatile Bellew. From the time that she first gained wide notoriety by reciting the indelicate verse, "Ostler Joe," at a select gathering of the smart set; through the days of her appearance as "Cleopatra" on a New York stage, clad in a robe as abbreviated as it was filmy and transparent, Mrs. Potter felt many a shaft of scorn from pitiless members of her sex. She apparently thought her work was art. The critics said it was indecency.

Shortly after her marriage to James Brown Potter of New York, Mrs. Potter, so the story goes, was approached by Bishop Potter, who was not then as eager as he is now, for an alliance between church and stage.

"It would please the Potter family if you would drop the name of Potter when before the foolights," said the bishop.

"What! Drop the name that I have made famous?" replied Mrs. Potter.

In 1890, Mr. and Mrs. Potter were divorced.

For the past five years, Mrs. Potter has appeared continuously in London in various theaters and recited "Antigone" at the Bristol (Eng.) musical festival in 1902. The members of the Potter family tried to extort a promise that she would not act in concert halls, but failed.

Mrs. Potter's social position, however, was assured, notwithstanding the sniffs and shruggings of the blue-stockinged dames. Everything was while, socially in London, from King Edward down, was at her beck. The former New Orelans beauty with her soft, Southern ways well knew how to manipulate her friends so as to be constantly advertised—usually free of charge, as she was "good copy." She was a promoter par excellence, but so the critics decided for her, had not enough of "the divine spark" to carry her plans through.

She quarreled with Stephen Phillips when he cast her as "Calypso," in his classical play of "Ulysses," to be played in Beerbohm Tree's Her Majesty's theater in 1902, and retired in a rage. Phillips thought Mrs. Potter played the part of the enchantress with too much passionate abandon to please an unemotional English audience. He told her so and she snapped at him. And that ended it.

Her jewelry, costumes and scenery in "Du Barry," which she produced at the Savoy theater, London, was the direct cause of her financial ruin. Mrs. Potter had allowed the actor-manager bee to fit in her headgear for some time. It stung her. So, she claims, did her country solicitor at Maidenhead. It is he she most blames for her money difficulties.

Those who don't know her and don't care to, say, "Mrs. Potter never was an actress and now she knows it."

DYING OF FAMINE

Is, in its torments, like dying of consumption. The progress of consumption, from the beginning to the very end, is a long torture, both to victim and friends. "When I had consumption in its first stage," writes Wm. Myers of Cearfoss, Md., "after trying different medicines and a good doctor, in vain, I at last took Dr. King's New Discovery, which quickly and perfectly cured me." FAITHFUL MAID

Of Maude Adams Presented With a House.

New York, June 20.—Mrs. A. Adams, mother of Maude Adams, the actress, has solved the servant problem to her own satisfaction and to that of a faithful maid who for ten years accompanied her daughter back and forth across the country wherever her engagements took her. Mrs. M. L. Smith, the colored maid, was the soul of devotion, and watched Miss Adams as a cat watches a kitten. In hotels and on Pullman trains the maid was as familiar a figure as Miss Adams.

In return for this faith service, Mrs. Adams, with the full approval of her daughter, has just presented a house and lot at Auverne-on-the-Sea, N. Y., to the maid who is now a matron and has a lucrative laundry business. The house is a comfortable $3,500 cottage, on the bay, north of the railroad. It has eight rooms and has been beautifully furnished.

Miss Adams, who has been very ill after an operation, but is now better, has sent word to her former maid from her home at Lake Ronkonkoma, L. I., that the gift is given gladly in recognition of the long friendship between maid and mistress.

HID UNDER BEDS

Sleuths Also Acted as Bellboys or Telephone Operators.

Did It to "Get the Goods" on Arkansas Lawmakers.

Little Rock, Ark., June 21.—With six members of the last general assembly, including the president of the senate, under indictment on charges of bribery, perjury and conspiracy, and the practical certainty that at least as many more indictments are yet to come, Arkansas is facing one of the greatest political upheavals that any member of the solid South, with the possible exception of her Northern neighbor—Missouri—has ever experienced.

Since the Pulaski County Grand jury about three weeks ago undertook an investigation of the charges of boodling made openly in connection with a number of measures before the legislature, disclosures which have shaken the state from end to end have come in rapid succession. Some of the leading members of both branches of the legislature have become involved and some evidence has been introduced before the grand jury which is declared to have brought the inquiry perilously near to the governor's office. No one ventures to predict where the investigation will end.

Prosecuting Attorney Lewis Rhoton of the Little Rock district, who instituted the investigation, is the man of the hour in Arkansas. He is already being boomed for governor two years hence by the country press, which hails him as a second Joe Folk.

The record left by the grand jury as the close of its first session is as follows:

A. W. Covington, president of the senate, indicted on two charges of receiving brides.

Senator A. T. Gross of Crawford county, indicted on charges of bribery and perjury.

Senator A. W. Rison of Perry county, indicted on a charge of offering a bribe.

Senator H. K. Toney of Jefferson county, one of the senate leaders, indicted on a charge of soliciting a bribe.

Representative George F. Chapline of Monroe county, leader in the house, indicted on a charge of bribery and conspiracy to obtain a bribe.

Representative C. B. Andrews of Nevada county, editor of the county Democratic organ, indicted on charges of offering and receiving bribes.

With the arrest of these legislators and the prospect of other indictments, have come charges that the last general assembly as a whole was rotten with corruption. The reports of the unlimited supply of money which was poured into the two branches by the small army of lobbyists which camped about the statehouse during the four months' session, have staggered the state Democracy, which has been in undisputed possession of the state administration since the reconstruction days. It is claimed that over $100,000 was disbursed as a corruption fund in the senate alone, and that a sum almost as large was put into the house.

It is claimed that boodle was used to secure the passage or defeat of at least a dozen bills. Of these the most prominent were the Killough levee bill, which was the result of a bitter fight between Governor Jeff Davis and Lieutenant Governor O. N. Killough; the pure food bill, similar to the one which figured in the Missouri boodle scandal; the state capitol bill, appropriating $800,000 for the completion of the new capitol building now in course of construction; the Felsenthal bill, dividing Union county into two districts and naming as the county seat of the new district the town of Felsenthal, recently founded by the wealthy Felsenthal family; the telephone bill, requiring long-distance telephone companies to make physical connections with independent companies, and the Cache River bill, providing for the creation of a big levee district.

The biggest sensation was caused by the indictment of President Covington of the senate. President Covington has been one of the closest friends and staunchest supporters of Governor Davis, and he has been regarded as a probable candidate for attorney general or governor. He is charged with accepting a bribe of $6,000 from Caldwell & Drake, the contractors who are building the new statehouse, to influence his vote on the state capitol bill. He is also charged with accepting a bribe of $1,000 from Ike Felsenthal to influence his vote on the Felsenthal bill. Senator Covington led the fight from the floor of the senate for the passage of the Felsenthal bill over the governor's veto.

Of the remaining members under indictment, Senator Gross is charged with soliciting a bribe of $1,800 on the pure food bill and with perjury; Senator Risen with offering another member a bribe of $125 on the Killough levee bill; Senator Toney with soliciting a bribe of $600 on the telephone bill; Representative Chapline with offering another member a bribe of $125 on the Killough bill and with conspiring to secure a bribe of $1,500 on the Cache river levee bill; Representative Andrews with offering and receiving bribes in connection with the Killough bill.

The indictment of Senator Gross brought to light the operations of a Pinkerton detective, who was brought here early in the session to spy upon the legislators. The detective represented himself as an agent of a baking powder company, and under that guise did considerable lobbying in connection with the pure food bill. His trap was carefully laid, and according to the evidence given before the grand jury it is alleged that Senator Gross walked into it.

It has developed since the adjournment of the legislature that the plans for the investigation were made at the beginning of the session, and that throughout the four months' session some of the best detectives that could be secured in the country had the members constantly under surveillance.

Some of these detectives worked under Circuit Attorney Foik in uncovering the boodlers in Missouri, and were secured by Prosecuting Attorney Rhoton upon the advice of Mr. Folk.

It is said that some of these detectives acted as bellboys in the hotels in order to gain access to the rooms of the legislators. A story is told of one detective who lay under a bed in a room in one of the hotels for eleven hours waiting for certain expected events to transpire. Girls in the telephone exchanges are said to have been in the employ of the prosecuting attorney, and to have recorded certain long distance telephone messages, which will be presented to the grand jury before the investigation ends. The officials have made every effort to keep their operations secret, and during the session of the legislature the members were completely unconscious of the traps which had been laid for them.

It has been generally believed that the whole investigation was started by Governor Davis, and until the arrest of President Covington argument in support of this contention was found in the fact that all of the legislators indicted were either pronounced anti-Davis men or had been opposed to some of the governor's pet measures. It is said that at least two of the affidavits upon which indictments have been based were made in the governor's office.

IS RESENTED BY GOVERNOR

Vermont's Executive Does Not Like Telegram of Capt. Clark.

St. Joseph, Mich., June 21.—Capt. Lloyd Clark of the United States supply station here, and a brother of Admiral Clark, U. S. N., who commanded the battleship Oregon during the battle off Santiago and when the battleship made the famous voyage from Pacific waters to join Admiral Sampson's fleet, yesterday sent the following telegram to Gov. Bell of Vermont, protesting against the hanging of Mrs. Mary Rogers:

"Vermont is again threatened with the horrible disgrace of twenty-two years ago. The reputation and honor of the old Green Mountain state is in your hands alone and every true Vermonter believes in that highest justice that is the sister of mercy. Should this poor weak woman meet her doom on Friday, in a state where my brother has been so greatly honored, please face his picture toward the wall. Every real Vermonter would hang his head in shame before the world. Have the mercy of the Master and may that peace of the bravely merciful be always yours.

(Signed)

"LLOYD AND ALICE CLARK."

Soon after Admiral Clark's daring performance of bringing the Oregon to Cuban waters, the Vermont legislature voted an appropriation to have a life size picture of Capt. Clark on the walls. It is with his brother's consent that Capt. Clark makes his request.

Essex Junction, Vt., June 21.—Governor Charles Bell arrived here last night from Windsor, where he had been in conference with the prison officials regarding the arrangements for the execution of Mrs. Mary Rogers. When shown the dispatch telling of a telegram sent to him by Capt. Lloyd Clark, he said: "I have not yet received such a telegram, but if it comes, all right. I, as governor, do not propose to accept advice from any ex-Vermonter who wishes to disgrace his native state in this way and especially from one whose brother has been so highly honored by the state as Admiral Clark has been. The picture is the property of the state of Vermont and it will not be tampered with by any outsider. It will hang in the state house just as it was hung. Vermont is in the habit of standing on its own bottom and it will do so now."

BLOOD POISON MAN'S GREATEST ENEMY

The disease that has done more than any other to wreck, ruin and humiliate life, is Contagious Blood Poison. Sorrow, shame and suffering go hand in hand with this great enemy, and man has always hated and fought it as he has no other disease. It is the most powerful of all poisons; no matter how pure the blood may be, when its virus enters, the entire circulation becomes poisoned and its chain of horrible symptoms begin to show. Usually the first sign is a small sore or ulcer, not at all alarming in appearance, but the blood is being saturated with the deadly poison, and soon the mouth and throat begin to ulcerate, the hair and eyebrows drop out, a red eruption breaks out on the body, copper-colored splotches and sores make their appearance and the poison even works down into the bones and attacks the nerves. Not only is the disease hereditary, being transmitted from parent to child, in the form of scrofula, weak eyes, soft bones, weak, puny constitutions, etc., but is also so highly contagious that many a life has been ruined by a friendly hand shake, or from using the toilet articles of one infected with the poison. To cure this blighting, deadly curse the blood must be purified, and nothing will do it so quickly and surely as S. S. S. It goes down to the very bottom of the trouble, drives out every particle of the poison and makes the blood clean and strong. It does not hide or cover up anything, but from the first begins to expel the poison and build up and strengthen the system. S. S. S. is guaranteed purely vegetable. We offer a reward of $1,000 for proof that it contains a particle of mineral of any kind. Book on the disease, with instructions for home treatment, and any advice desired, without charge.

GREATEST HARVEST

Known to History Is Predicted For This Year.

Railroads Making Preparations to Carry the Immense Output.

New York, June 21.—It is now accepted by all interested in obtaining information as to the status of the wheat crop that the agregate produced will run millions of bushels over the amount of the average crops for the past decade. Many well informed persons believe it will be the largest crop of wheat that the country ever harvested. Sufficient is now known of this crop to assure immense demand for its transportation and thus add to the business, not only of railroads by the carrying of it to market, but to guarantee ready cash in large amounts to the farmers who produce and to the merchants who supply the farmers. So well, so good, and now interest is keen as to cotton and corn.

Both are regarded as in better condition than three weeks ago, and the prospects, to speak in the most conservative manner, are quite favorable to large results in the fiber crop and the cereal also. Reports from Canada, northwest portion, are all glowing and enthusiastic upon the wheat prospects in that important wheat country, and present conditions all point to a "record breaker" wheat production in the Dominion this year.

Even with the exceedingly large supply of wheat that is anticipated, there are no believers in very low prices for the grain, as it is known there is but little of last year's crop left in the granaries of the world and that the very largest offerings of wheat will be quickly absorbed by dealers and consumers.

It is with wheat as it is with cotton and with steel. The world desires them and can afford to pay for them to a far greater extent than ever before. The absorption of these great staples can only be measured at any time in the future by the ability of the people to pay for them. Wheat is rapidly taking the place of rice in Asiatic markets and of rye in the poorer districts of Europe. The financial conditions of the people all over the world will permit a much larger use of these important articles, and however great the supply, it will be found the products will be freely taken from the furnaces, the fields and the plantations. Nature is bountiful this season and mankind never before was so intelligently organized to enjoy the widespread results of soil and labor.

If the world is given peace politically and socially the masses of the people on this earth will rapidly and surely progress in all matters, assuring greater comforts physically to individuals, superior conveniences to communities, advancements in home life and a betterment of conditions in every way.

The conqueror's way for centuries divided the human race into two classes, masters and masses. It was the rule of the might of the few over the rights of the many. The slaves of Egypt, Greece and Rome, the trails of England, the peasants of Spain, of France and Germany, the serfs of Russia, existed for generations with life itself subject to the wills of brutal masters.

Property of the most trifling value could only be accumulated by these unhappy human beings to eventually be added to the possessions of their cruel oppressors.

The millions born to these conditions spent their lives not for their own happiness, pleasure, advancement or profit, but their minutes, hours and years upon God's green earth were all taken by the hundreds or the thousands who claimed them as their own. Millions are still in the fetters of despotism, imperialism, absolutism, but each year is freeing millions, and happiness and prosperity comes as freedom is achieved.

Three hundred years have done more to free mankind from the shackles which the few forged for the many than 5,000 years had done before. Fifty years last past have witnessed greater progress in the uplifting of man than the preceding 300 years, and in the ten years just ending there has been a wider spread of intelligence, a better understanding among the people of the world, a more correct view of the rights of man individually and collectively than in the fifty years just prior to the ten.

As the people are freed from the political, social and financial burdens of the past their prosperity increases, and the result is growth in personal and real property. It is idle to compare the business of the present with that of the past, for the purpose of ascertaining the safety line of production in great staples, either in manufacturing or agricultural lines. Timid men, pessimists, men who imagine themselves conservative by reason of living in a rut, are lost amid the unprecedented activities of the present time. Their fears are unfounded; their councils are erroneous; their so-called conservatism, folly, and their experiences antiquated and devoid of application, for the best of all reasons—conditions of humanity have all changed.

There are cities in Illinois today that were open plains sixty years ago, that each year now purchase more ostrich plumes than were sold in the entire kingdom of France in any year of its existence. The government plan for the building up a railway system in the Philippine islands will require more steel and iron than the entire state of Ohio purchased in any five years forty years ago, and in the 30 years that the Philippines have been opened to European civilization these islands have never taken such a tonnage of steel and iron as will now go into them during the next five years. The present good times are not forced by unsound speculation or wild inflation of values in general. They are produced by natural demand, sustained by ability to pay for what is demanded. The world never had so much cash as now, and the world is using that cash every hour. The business men of the world, the people of the world (for the people after all are the business men of the world) are no longer dependant upon the issue of money by banks or governments. The new money is being dug out of the ground every day. It goes to work as money the hour it strikes the mint. The old crops of money are all doing business and the new crops will for years pour into the mints and pour out into circulation to add to the business by giving the people the means to pay with. Result: people better fed, better clothed, better sheltered, more business, more profit, widespread prosperity.

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis, ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, June 13th, 1905.

On receiving and filing the petition of Charles E. Ellis of the County of St. Louis, Minnesota, representing, among other things, that Roxanna E. Ellis, late of the County of St. Louis in the State of Minnesota, on the 25th day of January A. D. 1897, at the said County of St. Louis died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this County at the time of her death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this County, and that the said petitioner is a son of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to Hamilton H. Peyton granted;

It Is Ordered, That said petition be heard before said Court on Monday, the tenth day of July A. D. 1905, at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate office, in the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice hereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth in said County.

By the Court,
DAVID H. LAWRENCE,
Judge of Probate of Lake County.
Acting Judge of Probate of St. Louis Co., Minn.
(Seal Probate Court, St. Louis Co., Minn.)
Duluth Evening Herald, June 14-21-28.

If negotiations now pending are brought to a successful termination, Superior will once more resume her place in the Northern league, and Superior rooters will not be compelled to cross the bay and root for the visiting teams in Duluth.

For the last week or ten days it has been known that the St. Cloud-Brainerd management was dissatisfied with the condition of affairs in the twin towns. The support has not been up to what was expected, and while the team has not lost any great amount of money, the backers are willing to transfer their holdings to Superior if terms can be agreed upon.

The St. Cloud-Brainerd team has been playing good ball, and while its long series in Duluth was a disastrous one, it is still up with the van, and within hailing distance of the leaders.

The fact that Superior was dropped from the league circuit was a sore spot with the Superior fans, and they have done their little best by carefully supporting the visiting teams in Duluth. The absence of a ball team seems to have awakened in them a proper appreciation of it, both as an advertisement to the city and a source of pleasure, and they are more than ready to get back into league company, and escape from the grade of a municipality represented only by a "city" team, playing independent and semi-professional ball.

The desire to beat Duluth was never stronger than it is at present, and if the St. Cloud-Brainerd franchise is transferred to the town across the bay, there is no doubt but that every effort will be made to pull Van Praagh's bunch of ball tossers from their proud position at the head of the league.

The negotiations for the transfer are still in an embryo state, but they may be completed this week, and Superior may be watching baseball games before the first of July.

The Champs left town today in a rather crippled condition, and it would not be surprising to see them get their bumps on the present swing around the circuit. While every other team in the league is strengthening, the White Stockings are probably weaker now than they have been this season, and if they break even on the trip they will be doing well.

Miller, the left handed pitcher, is laid up in the hospital with rheumatism, and was unable to accompany the team. Mullen, who took his place, is a good man, but he is not thought to be Miller's equal.

Potts, the star twirler of the team, is laid up with a sprained ankle, which is still weak, and while he can pitch, it robs him of much of his usefulness.

Then McShane is likely to be replaced by another man on the third bag. The Crookston team is sadly in need of an infielder, and in response to repeated offers from the Crookston management, Van Praagh will probably release or loan the star third baseman to the tail enders, replacing him with a college player, who has been anxious to come to Duluth since the season opened. This deal has not yet been made, but it is pending.

Taking all things into consideration, the Champs are likely to encounter some livelier opposition on the present trip than they have yet met with.

FOR BOARD OF EQUALIZATION

Governor Johnson Announces Appointees for Nine Districts.

St. Paul, June 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The scramble for places on the board of equalization was brought to a close today when Governor Johnson announced his selections.

The list covers nine of the eighteen judicial districts, which the law entitles to representation on the board, one-half of the places becoming vacant each year. The lucky ones are:

Second district—W. A. Hardenberg, St. Paul.

Fourth district—Titus Mareck, Minneapolis.

Sixth district—E. T. Champlain, Vernon Center.

Eighth district—M. Machbar, Jordan.

Tenth district—T. J. Meighen, Preston.

Twelfth district—R. D. Galy, Renville.

Fourteenth district—Jason Weatherhead, Ada.

Sixteenth district—H. L. Shirley, Breckenridge.

Eighteenth district—Frank McKnight, Buffalo.

It is needless to say that everyone of the appointees is a Democrat, though this by no means gives that particular party control of the board.

The other districts will be filled by Governor Johnson next year and then the administration will be in full control.

Unless it was the board of grain appeals nothing in the gift of Governor Johnson has been more eagerly sought than the places on the board of equalization.

IMPOSTOR AT WORK.

Alleged "Sister" Soliciting From Duiuth People.

A woman, representing herself to be a member of the sisterhood in one of the orders of the Roman Catholic church, has been visiting houses in various parts of the city soliciting funds, asserting that they are to go to a newsboys' home in Boston. Her actions and statements indicate her to be an imposter, and at the residence of Bishop McGolrick it is stated that no individual answering her description has been given permission to solicit from the people of Duluth. No legitimate member of the Roman Catholic clergy or sisterhood from outside the city soliciting in Duluth without first obtaining the approval of Bishop McGolrick and his permission to approach the people of Duluth in the interest of his mission. This permission is always written and any person soliciting legitimately can show it.

CLASS HAS BANQUET.

The tenth anniversary of the graduation of the Central high school class of 1895 was observed in Duluth last evening by the holding of a banquet at the Spalding hotel. Thirteen of the original forty members were present. Four of the class have died.

The occasion was a merry one, and reminiscences of the old school days, with several happy toasts, kept the banqueters in a pleasant frame of mind until the night was well advanced. The room was prettily decorated in lavendar and white, the class colors. A number of letters of regret from invited guests who were unable to be present were read. Among the outsiders present were Mrs. Maud Clark Wakefield of West Salem, Mass., and Henry Meining of Minneapolis. H. H. Peyton acted as toastmaster.

"A Few Fleas Are Good for a Dog," was the subject of M. Wakefield's toast to "Our Teachers." The response by Miss Agnes Campbell, one of the teachers, told how "We Know What We Are But Not What We May Be." Miss Noyes and Mrs. W. B. Dunlop, two other teachers, were also present.

The subject of Powell Grady's toast to the new members was "A Good Friend Is One's Nearest Relation." Mrs. Anna Ospel Chapman gave the class history. There were several extemporaneous speeches, all of them in a happy vein.

Those present were: Misses Ella MacFarland, Jennie Crowley, Georgia Everest, Alice Jones, Nellie Cate, Agnes Campbell, Miss Noyes Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Peyton Mr. and Mrs. William Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Dunlop, Mrs. Maud Clark Wakefield, Powell Grady and Henry Meining.

POISON FOR MRS. ROGERS

Windsor, Vt., June 21.—A letter containing poison and making an offer of $2,000 if the substance were given to Mrs. Mary A. Rogers, who is to be hanged here Friday for the murder of her husband, was received by Superintendent Lovell of the state prison today. The letter was turned over to the federal authorities.

The letter, which bore no signature was mailed at Boston yesterday, according to the postmark on the envelope. It says the writer wished "to save the state of Vermont and all womankind from this impending disgrace," and requested Mr. Lowell to arrange for Mrs. Rogers to take the powder which was enclosed, promising, "If the gallows is cheated on Friday," to mail him two one thousand dollar bills. The writer says if further details are desired to insert a personal in a certain Boston paper to "Justice."

TO CONSIDER HOOKER CASE

New York Legislature Is Called In Special Session.

Albany, N. Y., June 21.—The legislature today convened in special session to consider the case of Justice Warren B. Hooker of the state supreme court, whose conduct in connection with postal affairs at Dunkirk and Freedonia formed the subject of an inquiry reecntly by the legislature, which adjourned leaving the matter in abeyance. The assembly investigating committee recommended Justice Hooker's removal.

The charges against Hooker were formally adopted by the assembly this afternoon by a vote of ninety-eight to two and were transmitted to the senate. The assembly took a recess until next Tuesday, when Judge Hooker is called on to answer the charges. The senate took up the matter as sent over by the assembly.

PAUL JONES CEREMONIES

Paris, June 21.—The ministry of marine and the American embassy are arranging the details of the ceremonies which will attend the removal of the body of Paul Jones, which is set for July 6 from Paris and July 8 from Cherbourg. Application has been made to permit the landing of 534 American marines with their arms. These will come to Paris by special train during the morning of July 6 and act as escort. They will be accompanied by Rear Admiral Sigsbee and his staff. The French naval and military authorities are also arranging an escort. After simple services in the American church on the Avenue de L'Alma the body will be borne with the honors due to an admiral to the St. Lizarre railway station. The plan to transport the body on a torpedo boat down the river Seine has been given up and it will go by rail with the naval escort. The date, July 8, for the embarkation of the body at Cherbourg was chosen so as to precede the festivities on the occasion of the meeting of the British and French fleets at Cherbourg July 10.

JAPANESE ARE ACTIVE

St. Petersburg, June 21.—Gen. Linevitch in a dispatch to the emperor, dated June 19, says:

"At 4 o'clock this morning the Japanese commenced an offensive movement on our front west of the railway. Shiauteh-jouan was occupied by strong detachments of Japanese.

Another dispatch from Linevitch, dated June 20, says:

"On the east of the railway the Japanese infantry at 3 in the morning, June 19, began to advance in the direction of Banlaschamyne, but their advance was stopped at 9 a. m.

"The Japanese on the Mandarin road also commenced an offensive movement at 2 in the morning.

"Towards 9 o'clock our advanced posts retired slightly. The Japanese artillery opened at 10 o'clock and our advance posts retired further and at noon the Japanese occupied the village of Siaocheouschi, near Yaomaline."

DECLINE IN WHEAT

Market Lower and Holds Within Rather Narrow Range.

Rust and Low Yield Reports and Bad Weather Ignored.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 21.—The wheat market was rather narrow this morning. Reports of rust damage in the Northwest and disappointing yields in the Southwest, together with rains where they were not wanted, failed to incite any marked buying. The Liverpool market closed ¼-⅜d lower, Berlin ½c higher and Budapest ¼c lower.

The July option in St. Louis fell ⅝-¾c and in Kansas City ½c, bu. in other markets there was very little interest in it. The September option fell ¼c in Duluth, ⅝c in Chicago, ⅝c in Minneapolis, ⅜c in New York, ¾c in St. Louis and 1-⅛c in Kansas City.

Car receipts at Duluth were 5, against 33 last year, and at Minneapolis 105, against 133 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 110, against 166 last year. Chicago received none, against 19 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 184,000 bus., last year 259,000 bus. Shipments 204,000 bus., last year 274,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 27,000 bus.

In the Liverpool market corn closed ⅜d higher. In the Chicago market September corn closed ⅛c higher. September oats closed a shade higher. Primary receipts of corn were 683,000 bus., last year 773,000 bus. Shipments 725,000 bus., last year 164,000 bus. Clearances were 203,000 bus

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was dull and interest was about equally divided between the old and new September options, with nothing at all doing in July. New September opened ⅛c lower at 84½c, advanced to 84⅜c at 9:50, fell to 84⅛c at 10:05, rallied to 84⅜-½c at 10:25 and then fell to 84⅛c again at 11. Another rally carried it to 84⅝c at 12:18, but it failed to hold and fell back to 84c, closing there, a loss of ¼c. The old September opened ⅝c lower at 89c, and held all morning between that price and at 88⅝c. The close was at 88c, a loss of ⅜c. The July was unchanged at $1.11½, with no trading.

Flax was dead. The July option closed 1c higher, with no trading and September and October were unchanged.

Oats fell ⅛c and September rye advanced 1c.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Notwithstanding Rain, Wheat Inclines to Bearishness.

Chicago, June 21.—Notwithstanding additional rains over a large portion of the wheat belt sentiment in the wheat pit here today was inclined to bearishness. Lower prices at Liverpool had a depressing effect. July opened ⅛@¼c lower at 88⅞@89c. After declining to 88⅝c the price rallied to 89@89¼c, but later eased off again to 88⅜c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 110 cars against 108 cars last week and 185 cars a year ago.

Later sentiment suddenly turned bullish and prices rose rapidly. The July delivery was especially strong advancing to 90c. One reason for the sharp upturn was the high price being paid for cash wheat (of the new crop) in Southwestern markets. Reports of delay to harvesting owing to rain, furnished additional reasons for the active demand. Late in the day all of the advance was lost on profit-taking, the market closing rather weak with July off ⅛@¼c at 88⅞@89c.

Selling by several of the bull leaders caused an easier undertone in the corn market. July opened ⅛c lower at 54⅝c and eased off to 54¼c. Local receipts were 411 cars with 119 of contract grade.

In sympathy with wheat a firm tone developed in the corn market. July advancing to 54⅞c. On the bulge a number of influential longs took profits, causing a reaction. The market closed easy with July off ⅛c at 54⅜c.

The oats market was steady. July opened unchanged at 31½c and later sold at 31⅜@⅛c. Local receipts were 65 cars.

Provisions were easier. September pork was off a shade to 2½@6c at $12.80@12.82½. Lard was down a shade at $7.40. Ribs were 2½@6c lower at $7.72½.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

State crop reports:

North Dakota—The past week has been another wet one, heavy rains having fallen in all parts of the state, doing considerable damage to grain on low land by drowning it out. On some low land in the eastern part of the state, which had been reseeded the second time this spring, the grain has again been washed out. The weather has been very cool, with only occasional intervals of sunshine, and while very favorable for wheat on high land, has been unfavorable for most other grain. One small hailstorm is reported, but is said to have done no damage.

Wheat continues to do very well, except where injured by too much water on low land; it is stooling well, and in most sections covers the ground with a rank growth. It is doubtful if the plant ever looked better, or was more promising at this time of year than it is now. Weeds are fast appearing in the fields, especially on old land, and in some places bid fair to choke the grain, unless warm weather comes soon to cause a rapid growth of the latter.

Some early sown rye is heading out, and the crop in general is in an excellent condition. Late sown barley is just coming up and more of it would have been sown, had the weather been favorable. Flax seeding is now practically finished, and that sown recently is coming up fast. That sown early is up, and as a rule looks good, but the weather has been too cold and wet for it to make much progress.

Corn planting is finished and most of the crop is up, but is not making any growth to speak of, on account of the cool weather, and is at a standstill in all parts of the state.

Oats have not done so well the past week as they did previous to the recent rains. Some complaints of the crop being thin have been received, the color being poor, caused by too much moisture, but with warmer weather they are expected to make a marked improvement.

Minnesota—A week of showery weather. There were local heavy rains in northern and northeastern portions on the 13th, with a little hail and some high winds. Late in the week there were severe thunderstorms in central and southeastern portions, causing the deaths of at least two persons by lightning, the loss of crops on hillsides and in valley bottoms, and the washing out of railroad and wagon bridges; in Washington county a number of destroyed buildings showed evidences of tornadic action. The days were moderately warm on the 13th, 14th and 16th in the southern half of the state. Except in low places and where the heavy rains caused washing, the rains have thus far caused little injury to spring wheat, oats, barley, flax, corn, potatoes, the grasses and gardens, and all are doing splendidly, but an early change to dry weather is needed to prevent lodging of the sappy and heavy grains. A little rust is reported in Stevens and Brown counties where the oats are affected in small spots, but no rust has been reported on the wheat. Early barley and Early Champion oats are beginning to head. Rye is all headed. The cultivation of corn and potatoes was general on the higher lands till the 16th, but there are many fields that are still weedy.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Our market opened a shade easier and for a short time prices ruled lower, but on very moderate business. While wheat was for sale, however, it was quickly absorbed, market rallying sharply though slowly to a full cent advance over yesterday's close for July. The decline late in the session was caused entirely by profit-taking sales. The weather map for one thing promises more sunshine and a desire to take at least a portion of profit by the leading long interests naturally invited other profit-taking sales. It is still a weather market, subject to rapid movement according to weather changes, but underneath all this it must not be forgotten that the cash situation is strong, but mostly of a retail character. A small lot of new wheat has been received at Kansas City and a moderate amount expected at St. Louis tomorrow. The general situation looks unchanged. We feel the wise thing to do is to buy wheat on the set-backs.

Corn—This market closed practically unchanged. For a while early in the session strength was quite pronounced, partly in sympathy with the strong wheat market and aggressive buying by the leading bulls. Sentiment seems to favor the bull interest to realize would likely cause some reaction. It is true the cash situation is strong, but the demand is not urgent. The market acts strong and at times shows wonderful snap. We would, however, only buy corn on recessions.

Oats—There seems to be rather liberal sales of oats on the swells. The cash situation is slow. If the present promise of the crop materializes and we harvest a crop already promised, we feel some difficulty will be had in maintaining present prices.

• • •

Ben Bryan, Chicago: But for Valentine's selling yesterday, we should have had a good advance. He is bearish and does not believe in crop damage or rust reports. It is a weather market. Hicks predicts rainy weather the last part of June and a wet July. We may have some forced declines in wheat, but I still believe purchase on all soft spots would only buy corn on breaks.

• • •

Dennis, Chicago: The situation in corn continues to be strong. We keep shipping it as fast or faster than we receive it and the receipts promise to give out before the shipping demand does. Believe in playing the long side even yet. The July looks as though shorts would force it higher and see no place for a September short to win out yet. Buy the September now on weak spots.

BRIBERY AND FRAUD CHARGED

In Suit Brought Against the International Harvester Company.

Chicago, June 21.—Charges of bribery, conspiracy and fraud are made against the International Harvester company by Mrs. Margaret Swift of this city in a bill in chancery filed yesterday in the circuit court.

Mrs. Swift is the wife of Robert C. Swift, who was formerly employed by the harvester company as the head of the experimental department, and against whom suit was brought by the company accusing him of appropriating to his use, through the sale of a patent, money obtained from the company on alleged false representations.

In her bill Mrs. Swift charges bribery of legislatures, particularly those of Illinois, Kansas and South Dakota. She charges that it has been the practice of the company to spend large sums of money in this state and elsewhere for the purpose of influencing legislation. The attorneys for the harvester company declared last night that there is no merit in the bill filed by Mrs. Swift.

They assert that at the time of the discharge of Swift from the employ of the harvester company he made threats "to make trouble," and in their opinion the suit of Mrs. Swift is the fulfilment of these threats.

PHILADELPHIA BANK

Goes Into the Hands of Temporary Receiver.

Philadelphia, June 21.—The City Trust & Safe Deposit company of this city closed its doors today and has gone into the hands of a temporary receiver. A notice was posted signed by A. L. Taber, acting receiver, stating that the trust company had been closd by order of the banking department of Pennsylvania.

Clinton, Mo., June 21.—The Salmon bank, the oldest and largest financial institution in Henry county did not open its doors for business today. The secretary of state was notified last evening.

RATE IS FIFTY CENTS.

Fee for Inspecting Flax Into Vessels Reduced.

The board of railroad and warehouse commissioners has made a further cut in the fee for inspecting flax into vessels. The announced reduction was from $1 per 1,000 bushels to 90 cents. Members of the Duluth board of trade did not feel that this was as much of a reduction as the circumstances warranted and so notified the commission.

A communication has been received from Commissioner Staples stating that the first announcement was in error in giving the rate on inspecting flax into vessels at 90 cents, and that it was intended to be 50 cents, and that the commission was glad to correct it.

NOT HER FIRST FALL.

Kaiserin Tries to Keep Accidents From Emperor.

Berlin, June 21.—The recent accident to the German empress is not the first her majesty has sustained. A little more than a year ago she had a fall from her horse while out riding in the company of the kaiser and their son, Prince Adelbert. In both instances the empress showed great presence of mind, and on the last occasion gave instructions that the emperor should not be informed, as the blood from the wound in her left temple would soon be stopped. But, however, the bleeding increased, and the kaiser was told of the occurrence. The empress, according to some, has never succeeded in making her court the brilliant affair which it is said the kaiser has been ambitious to have it. Her majesty has been devoted to her home. In a public speech the emperor once described her as "the jewel which sheds lustre by my side."

Homeseekers and Settlers to the Northwest.

IRREGULAR CLOSE

To Stock Market After Display of Bullish Enthusiasm.

New York, June 21.—Some liberal buying orders were executed in the opening dealings, but the resulting movements were generally small except in some of the specialties. Smelting, Sugar and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo rose above a point and United States Steel preferred, Tennessee Coal, Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Union Pacific large fractions.

Expanded dealings and a number of diversified demands gave a lively appearance to the early dullness in stocks. Strength centered in a number of specialties. Reading and some of the Southern railroad stocks gave evidence of profit taking. Atlantic Coast Line yielded 1¼ and recovering all but a fraction. Large blocks of the metal stock were bought, especially the Smelting and United States Steel stocks. Prices reacted before the end of the hour, when Reading receded to 1½ under last night.

Ontario & Western suddenly spurted to 55, but as it met large realizing sales the general list was inclined to yield. Later buying became animated and the market broadened comprehensively, led by Illinois Central, which rose 2¾. Tennessee Coal gained 2¼ and there was one point gains in Union and Southern Pacific, St. Paul, New York Central, Atlantic Coast, B. & O., United States Steel Copper, Pressed Steel Car, Locomotive and others of less importance. Northwestern rose 2, Central of Jersey 3 and Pacific Coast 4½. Corn Products preferred dropped 4¼ on the passing of its dividend. Beet Sugar preferred lost 1⅞ and Wisconsin Central preferred 1. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Bullish enthusiasm continued quite rampant on the specialties, the demand increasing and broadening in all directions. Gains of a point were too numerous for mention and there were many of 2 points and upwards. United States Steel preferred and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo jumped 2 and Sloss-Sheffield Steel 7.

Heavy buying of Reading brought up the conspicuous laggard. Other stocks that are also under Pennsylvania control advanced strongly in sympathy. Reading improved 1⅜, C. & O. 1¼, B. & O. 1⅝ and Norfolk & Western 2 points. Realizing orders sent the usual leaders down a good fraction at 2 o'clock and Reading reacted a point.

The 1½ per cent dividend on Ontario & Western without designating a period proved disappointing and that stock lost its rise. Reading also fell back to about the lowest on fears of a disappointment over that dividend. Sentiment was disturbed by the report of the closing of a trust company in Philadelphia. Prices reacted and trading became quiet. Sloss-Sheffield Steel had risen 6 and Long Island, Consolidated Gas and Steel Foundries preferred 2½ to 3. Great Northern preferred lost 2. The spirit of expectancy of the Reading dividend announcement threw the late trading into extreme dullness and the closing was unsettled and irregular.

THE SHERIFF VISITS FAIR

Returns From Trip to Portland and Pacific Coast.

Sheriff W. J. Bates returned this morning from a three-weeks' trip to the exposition at Portland and various coast points. Sheriff Bates left in a party composed of County Auditor Halden, Probate Judge Middlecoff, the former auditor of Itasca county, and two friends from the ranges. The members of the party scattered after getting into the far Northwest to look after various interests that had drawn them out there.

Sheriff Bates says that the Portland exposition had not commenced to receive any very large crowds while he was there. The exhibition itself he characterized as a very interesting one though, of course, not on so large a scale as the World's fair or the Louisiana Purchase exposition. He also visited Seattle and San Francisco and of all the coast cities regards Seattle as his choice.

"There is a large movement to the Alaskan gold fields by way of Seattle," said Sheriff Bates. "At this time of the year Alaska travel is quite heavy. The trip can be made from Seattle to Dawson City in seven or eight days and there are many people taking it simply to see the sights. I learned from one party that was on his way to Dawson City for the sixth time, that Carl Johansen, formerly connected with H. B. Bryberger here, is doing very well at Dawson and has accumulated considerable wealth.

"At several points along the coast we met people who formerly lived in Duluth and in many cases they usually had a mine or some stock or something to sell. Most of them seemed to be prosperous, however.

"Generally speaking, the far Northwest seems to be in a prosperous condition, but every place we visited seemed to have its drawback, and I have decided that I like to live in Duluth just as well as any place I visited."

BEDE IS AFTER SOME CANNON

Washington, June 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Bede this morning called at the navy department to endeavor to complete the details as to the voyage of the United States ship Fern from Norfolk to Duluth. Mr. Bede did not accomplish much today at the navy department because of the absence of Assistant Secretary Darling. That official, however, expected to be at his desk tomorrow, at which time Mr. Bede hopes to complete all arrangments for the navigation of the Fern from Norfolk to Duluth.

Mr. Bede also is desirous of securing certain equipment in the matter of guns for the use of the naval militia of Minnesota. A full equipment of cannon is desired and will probably be obtained.

MORE NOTES, LESS GOLD.

Alarming Condition of Russia's Financial System.

London, June 21.—Lucien Wolf, a writer upon economic topics, gives the following interesting and important figures regarding the decrease in the Russian gold reserve taken from the last official reports:

"On Jan. 1 the gold reserve was officially returned at 1,239,000,000 roubles. A few weeks later a loan was negotiated in Berlin which added a sum of 210,000,000 to the reserve, making a total of 1,449,000,000. At the beginning of April, according to an official statement circulated all over Europe by the minister of finance, the gold reserve was set down at 1,528,000,000, showing a loss in three months of 121,000,000. Sir Howard Vincent reports the return of the State bank on April 21 as estimating the gold reserve at 1,044,826,000 roubles, showing a further decline in three weeks of 283,174,000 roubles. The net decline is probably much greater, as during April the Russian government contracted an internal loan which, although a failure, must have transferred a good deal of the gold to the vaults of the State bank.

"With regard to the increase in the note issue the facts are as follows: At the end of 1903 the authorized net issue was 630,000,000 roubles; during 1904 it was raised to 900,000,000 roubles, so since that time it has been gradually increased to 970,000,000 at which it stands today. The net result of this reciprocal depletion of the Russian exchequer is that since the beginning of the year it has lost 404,000,000 roubles in gold, and that its liabilities for notes have increased since the beginning of the war by 540,000,000 roubles, making a total of 744,000,000 roubles."

HAVE NEW NAMES

Number of Vessels Sailing Here Under New Handles.

Most Changes In Gilchrist Fleet to Avoid Confusion.

Not a great many vessels have had their names changed since last season, and none of the larger ones whose port of hail is Duluth have switched their handles. The only craft hailing from Duluth which has had its name changed since last year is the tug Ada Barrett, now known as the Circle. She formerly belonged to W. C. McClure, but has since been transferred to the service of the United States engineers, and they probably wanted some name in keeping with their trade. They have their launchers named Arc and "sich," so Circle was chosen for the tug. Square or Compass will probably be the next.

The old Bloomer Girl, which was used as a ferry and excursion steamer some summers ago in this port, will probably be remembered. She is now doing service in Milwaukee under the new and fancy name of Silver Spray.

Of the larger type of steamers which get into this port and which have had their names changed are the Panama, which was the John Craig; the Vermillion, which was the J. C. Gilchrist, and the C. C. Hand, which was the R. E. Schuck. All of these belong to the Gilchrist Transportation company. The probable reason why the J. C. Gilchrist was given a new name was to avoid confusion. There are still three Gilchrists in the fleet. One is plain Gilchrist, another the F. W. Gilchrist and a third the Joseph C. Gilchrist. The J. C. Gilchrist was the smallest of the quartet, being of only 1,827 gross tons. There were two R. E. Schucks, so the smaller of the two has been changed to Vermillion.

THE GARY IS FAST.

Excess of Speed Puzzles Officials of Line.

Chicago, June 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the puzzles of marine construction has been furnished by the E. H. Gary, which arrived at South Chicago today, with a cargo of iron ore from Ashland. The steamer made better time than her machinery calls for. Cases where steamers have fallen below the speed indicated by their power are numerous, but with the Gary it is the other way. The big boat with 12,000 tons (net) ran from Mackinaw City to South Chicago, a distance of 336 miles, in twenty-seven hours and forty minutes. This is a fraction over twelve miles per hour. She was expected at noon today, but at 8:30 this morning, she passed the harbor entrance, and at 9 o'clock the work of unloading was underway.

The four steamers ordered by the United States Steel corporation last winter, of which the Gary was the first in service, were designed with comparatively low power for their size, and were intended to make a little over ten knots per hour loaded. Why the craft should go nearly two miles faster than planned is the thing which is puzzling officials of the steel corporation today.

SMALLPOX OR NOT?

Doctor and Health Inspector Fail to Agree on Disease.

A. O. H. Is Addressed By Rev. Father Kelly—Other News.

There is a dispute on between Drs. David Graham and Jern and Health Inspector Kitchen regarding an affliction which J. Melvin Glover of 17 Fifty-fourth avenue west, has. The doctors agree that Glover has smallpox, but the health inspector, it is claimed by the physicians, sets his opinion up against that of the medical men and asserts it is another disease. Glover, who is teamster for the St. Louis Lumber company, is badly broken out with what appears to be smallpox, but the health inspector is just as positive one way as are the doctors the other way.

As a result the house has not yet been quarantined, and the health officer says he will bring Health Commissioner Murray down first. In the meantime, with no quarantine on the house, there is nothing to prevent the spread of the disease, if it is smallpox.

Dr. Murray, the health commissioner, denies that Inspector Kitchen disputed Drs. Graham and Jern, but that he merely wanted to get his opinion on the case before quarantining the house. Dr. Murray was to examine the case this afternoon.

FATHER KELLY SPEAKS.

Division No. 4, A. O. H., held its regular meeting last night in Gilley's hall. It having been announced that Rev. J. F. Kelly, pastor of St. James church, would address the members there was a large attendance. Father Kelly spoke on the "Good of the Order." He reviewed the origin of the society in the penal days in Ireland, when Irishmen organized for the protection of the priests of Ireland in the discharge of their sacred duties to their flocks. It was then known as the Red Cross society.

He called the attention of the members to the importance of attendance at meetings, saying this was the first duty of all to take an interest in the work of the society in the building up of its membership. Irish history, he said, should be taken up, read and discussed, from time to time. By this means a great deal would be done for the advancement of the members, and also create an interest in attending meetings. Several points in Irish history were referred to by the speaker that were very interesting to all Irishmen, but more especially to the members of the A. O. H. It was a very instructive talk and it was greatly appreciated by all the members of the local division.

Return From Sad Errand.

Judge and Mrs. J. B. Flack have returned from Tetino, Wash., where they were called by the serious illness of their daughter, Mrs. Horsburgh. She died just three hours after they arrived there. They have been absent for about three weeks. Since going west, Judge Flack has visited the fair in Portland, which he says is good. He there met Mrs. David Adams of the West end. On the train going out he saw Mr. and Mrs. Jewell of the West end also.

Has Finger Crushed.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The drill team which West Duluth camp, No. 1555, M. W. A. sent to the national convention to compete in the senior class drill at Milwaukee, won third prize, making a good showing and winning quite a valuable prize. The Modern Woodmen of West Duluth are feeling quite chesty over the affair.

Mrs. Carl Bailey will go to St. Paul.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Canning are here from Cleveland. Mrs. Canning was formerly Miss Margaret Zech and came to West Duluth to be present at the wedding of her sister, Miss Dora Zech a week from Thursday.

A new boiler for the blast furnace arrived this morning and was taken to the plant.

The Dynamite club of West Duluth held a meeting last evening and discussed the lack of activity of the Russian branch of the order of late. It was decided to communicate with the officials there. The members present were Charles Stiger, I. Deatherage, W. E. Kerns, John Lauermann, Dennis MacDonald, Arthur Hamilton, Charles Lovelace and J. E. Sullivan.

DISORDERS RENEWED

Chicago, June 21.—The first serious strike disorder in some time occurred, today, when thirty wagons belonging to the American Express company were blocked by teamsters at Van Buren and Clinton streets. A deputy sheriff on one of the wagons took the reins and tried to drive around the obstruction, but in the sudden swerve of the horses, a pedestrian was knocked down. A large crowd which had gathered thereupon began to jeer and threaten the deputy. He succeeded with difficulty in driving a block north, but here the crowd had grown so dense and threatening that the officer was compelled to draw his revolver. This held the mob in check until the arrival of a squad of police which dispersed the crowd.

Convinced that the new strike committee of the teamsters' joint council cannot effect a satisfactory settlement of the futile labor war, union labor leaders today, for the first time discussed the practicability of calling off the teamsters' strike, ordering the men who have been out of work for many weeks to get back their places if they can and making no effort to bind organized labor to conditions with the employing interests.

"Before the unions will consent to a condition of settlement that forces them to abandon the union button," said International President C. P. Shea of the teamsters' brotherhood, "they will call off the strike and permit the members on strike to make individual efforts to return. The rank and file will never agree to give up the union emblem."

It is planned to have representatives of every local union involved in the strike, attend a meeting tonight. The committees appointed by the joint council expects to be able to report to this meeting some progress made in negotiations with Chairman John V. Farwell, Jr., of the Chicago Employers' association, action committee. These committeemen expect also that they will get a rousing affirmative vote on the settlement proposition, which they hope to be able to present to the delegates. That would mean the end of the strike.

CIGAR BOX MAKERS ELECT THEIR OFFICERS.

St. Paul, June 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following officers have been elected by the Western Cigar Box Manufacturers' association which is holding its annual meeting in St. Paul: W. H. Wilson, St. Paul, president; A. O. Fisher, Chicago, vice president; A. H. Widman, St. Joseph, second vice president; E. H. Defebaugh, Louisville, was re-elected secretary and treasurer.

The delegates voted that the third and last meeting of the year shall be held at Chicago, on the second Tuesday in October.

Today, the delegates and their families went to Lake Minnetonka for an outing.

FORMAL TRANSFER TO THE NORTH BUTTE CO.

Of the Speculator Mine and Other Properties at Butte.

Butte, Mont., June 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The formal transfer of the Speculator mine to the North Butte company of Duluth, Minn., was made yesterday, although the latter company, has been practically in possession of the mine for several weeks past. The balance of $2,000,000, which was still due on the purchase price, was paid to Kountz Bros.' bank in New York on Monday, and deeds to the ground in this city were turned over to Joseph B. Cotton of Duluth, the attorney for the North Butte company, who has been here for several days.

The price paid by the North Butte company for the Speculator $5,000,000.

Articles of incorporation for the North Butte were filed for record in the office of the county clerk and recorder in this city Saturday and also in the office of the secretary of state in Helena, they having been brought to Butte by Joseph B. Cotton of Duluth, who represents the company in a legal capacity.

All of the ore taken from the Speculator property since April 1 has been credited to the account of the North Butte company and the proceeds placed in the strong box of that corporation to meet the expense of operation and lay the foundation for dividends on the stock. It has aggregated from 500 to 700 tons per day. The new company intends to maintain this output for a while and then increase it to 1,000 tons if it can be done. The only thing that might interfere with such a vast increase is the ability of the hoisting engine to get it to the surface. As an aid to this part of the work skips will soon be substituted for the present method of handling the product after it reaches the surface.

The money paid for the property will give John A. Creighton of Omaha $2,333,330, and John M. Daugherty, his confidential agent, $166,670, the former being the holder of 7,000 shares of stock and the latter 500 shares, which block was presented to him by Mr. Creighton. The Largeys will receive the remaining $2,500,000, one-third of which will go to Mrs. Largey, and the remainder to her four children, each of whom will pocket a little over $416,000. There are 15,000 shares of Speculator stock and it was sold at the rate of $333.33 1-3 per share.

There is no doubt that the North Butte Copper company has made a good buy. The Speculator has been a large producer of copper-silver ore for many years, and having recently added valuable claims to its possessions is in shape for continued unlimited production. Its principal mine, the one after which the company took its name, is one of the old locations in the Butte district, having been worked many years. It was not until after the death of P. A. Largey, however, that the company was organized to work it. At the time of Mr. Largey's death Mr. Creighton owned half of it and Mr. Largey the other half. The half belonging to Mr. Largey then became the property of his estate, and it was necessary to organize the company in order to make division of it among his heirs, five in all.

Besides the Speculator mine the company owns the Edith May, Jesse and Miners' Unions claims, all of which it acquired by purchase last year and this year. The new company will have even greater possessions, for it has been buying up claims outside of those mentioned and is still reaching for more. As to the prospects for the erection of a smelting plant in which to treat the product of its mines, nothing is yet known, but the chances are that steps in this direction will be taken before many months, for the new company expects to operate on an extensive basis. The Speculator company sold all of its ore to the Amalgamated and the new company will continue the same course until such time as it decides upon a course of its own, provided it has a course in contemplation. It may find it more economical to sell its product than build and operate its own plant, in which event the Amalgamated will get the output.

A. C. Carson, who has been superintendent of the Speculator for some time past, has been retained by the new company and will act as general manager and agent for the North Butte people.

MARRIED AT CASS LAKE.

Bemidji, Minn., June 21.—The marriage of Thomas Bailey, Jr., to Miss Ethyl Ludwig took place this morning at Cass Lake. The marriage was a very quiet affair and only a few friends of the contracting parties were present. From Cass Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey will go to Duluth to enjoy a short wedding trip, after which they will return to Bemidji to make this city their future home.

ASSAILANT SENTENCED.

Helsingfors, Finland, June 21.—Matti Hjalmar Reinikke, the revolutionist, who shot and seriously wounded Governor Miasoredoff of Viborg, March 20, was sentenced today to twenty-six months' penal servitude.

WOULD JOIN BOYCOTT.

Singapore, Straits Settlements, June 21.—The Cantonese merchants here today initiated a movement, in support of their compatriots to boycott all American products. Pending the result of the appeal against the Chinese exclusion act, the Chinese, apparently, are holding aloof from the boycott.

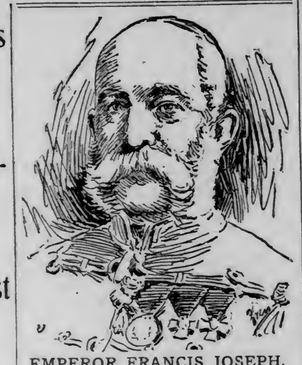
POSSIBLY THE LAST APPEARANCE OF AGED AUSTRIAN EMPEROR

Francis Joseph Appears Before People At Corpus Christi Festival.

Monarch Has Aged Greatly Since Last Seen In Public.

His Majesty Greeted Most Enthusiastically By His Subjects.



EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH.

Vienna June 22.—Amid accompaniments of medieval pomp and ceremony, the aged emperor of Austria, king of Hungary and Bohemia, etc., Francis Joseph, took part in the usual Corpus Christi festival today. His majesty was greeted enthusiastically by his subjects as he was driven through the streets, but it was the universal dictum of the Viennese that their emperor had aged greatly since they saw him take part in the ceremony two years ago, and the appearance of his majesty suggested to many minds that this was the last time the aged monarch would appear before his people as a participant in this beautiful festival of the Catholic church. The streets, which were crowded with people, were decorated with flags, boughs of trees, and at convenient places open air altars had been erected. The procession started at the Hofburg, proceeded to the cathedral on the Stephanplatz, where the religious ceremony was held, and then returned to the Hofburg. Gorgeous colors, crimson, gold and silver, magnificent forms and trappings, glowing tunics, the clanking march of soldiers and the silent tread of the clergy in strange contrast, the flashing of jewels, and the glare in the sunlight of the white robes of priests, barbaric and brilliant splendor, and silent prayers, marked the progress of the sacred and military procession in honor of the consecrated host. The lesser clergy came first. The equeries, pages and others of the imperial household. Kettle drummers in gala attire, the court chamberlains, many high personages of state, generals and other high military officers followed. The host was borne by the archbishop of Vienna, surrounded by prelates, and after him came the emperor. In former years it was the custom of his majesty to walk, but now, because of his age, he rides. Today he appeared in a gala coach, drawn by eight of the royal white horses, and accompanied by Archduke Franz Ferdinand, the successor to the throne; the other archdukes, all in magnificent uniforms, were in royal carriages, and came after his majesty. After the religious ceremonies, it took its way back to the Hofburg, over another route, in order to give the people increased opportunities to witness its glittering pageantry. From one of the balconies af the palace, the procession was witnessed by the archduchesses and their children.

WOMAN WILL NOT CHANGE HER RELIGIOUS FAITH FOR $30,000

Davenport, Iowa, Junes 22.—Refusing $30,000 rather than change her religion by becoming a Catholic is the act by which Mrs. Lucinda Ganson of this city has astonished her friends. Charles Simpson, a wealthy friend of the Ganson family, recently died in Sacramento, Cal., and Mrs. Ganson has received word that he left her $30,000 in his will, on condition that she become a Catholic. In the event of her refusal of the money on this condition, it was to go to a Catholic orphanage in Sacramento.

"Thirty thousand dollars is an immense sum to refuse," said Mrs. Ganson today, "but I cannot think of changing my religion for any amount of money.

"I don't feel that I could be faithful to the Catholic church, although I have nothing against it. I shall let the legacy go to the orphanage, and not imperil my own salvation by changing my religion or belief for money."

IRON BUSINESS REMAINS LIGHT

New York, June 22.—New business has been light in nearly all branches of the iron and steel trades, and in some of them, says the Iron Age, what is virtually a deadlock between buyers and sellers continues. Yet there is little uneasiness in any quarter. On the contrary, sentiment is rather improved, although there is little that is tangible in the way of new orders to justify it.

In pig iron, reports come from some distributing markets that inquiries are a little more numerous, but the tonnage being placed is light, and buyers are securing some concessions in prices. Birmingham reports sales of basic pig for Western delivery aggregating 15,000 tons, but the market is easier and $12 is being shaded for No. 2 foundry.

Practically nothing has been done in Bessemer pig in the Central West. The low prices for melting scrap have rather curtailed the requirements for pig in the open-hearth steel plants.

The only interesting item in the rail trade is the report that the Tennessee company has taken orders aggregating 55,000 tons for 1906 delivery from Southern systems.

The tonnage of structural material which is coming upon the market is very satisfactory, and some trouble in meeting deliveries is being experienced. Among the larger contracts placed is that for 24,000 tons for Philadelphia. The plate trade is in good shape.

BATTLE MAY BE ON.

Lack of News Indicates Operations Have Begun.

St. Petersburg, June 22.—The public which has no idea that negotiations for an armistice are on foot, believes that a great battle in Manchuria is now beginning and official dispatches from both sides bear out the idea that the Japanese have commenced their main advance, though as yet there have been no heavy collisions. Lieut. Gen. Linevitch evidently has imposed an embargo on press messages indicating that hostilities have entered on a serious phase.

If negotiations for an armistice are on foot they must bear immediate fruit in order to prevent a battle, perhaps, greater in its casualties than that of Mukden.

NELIDOFF CHOSEN

As One of the Russian Peace Plenipotentiaries.

St. Petersburg, June 22.—M. Nelidoff, Russian ambassador to Paris, has been definitely appointed one of the Russian peace plenipotentiaries.

M. Nelidoff is a skillful Russian diplomat, who, as ambassador at Constantinople for a number of years, handled some of the most delicate problems connected with Russia's near Eastern policy. He and Sir Phillip Currie, the British ambassador to Turkey in 1896, had some historical tilts on the field of diplomacy, and it was reported at the time that Sir Phillip charged his Russian colleague with double dealing.

In November, 1903, M. Nelidoff was transferred to Paris, and Prince Ouroussoff, who was Russian ambassador to France, succeeded M. Nelidoff at Constantinople.

ATTEMPT TO POISON

By Putting Paris Green Into a Well.

Owatonna, Minn., June 22.—On complaint of Mrs. Gertrude Lunstrum, Miss Hilda Johnson, who lives near Pratt, was arrested yesterday charged with an attempt to poison her and her father's family by putting paris green into a well.

EX-TREASURER MILLER

Of Itasca Will Be Tired In December.

Grand Rapids, Minn., June 22.—The district court has adjourned after a term of three weeks. Former Treasurer Miller's bond was increased from $5,500 to $9,000, and he will be tried on pending indictments in December. Judge McClennahan will hold a special term in September to finish the business.

AN APPALLING ACCIDENT COSTS LIVES OF TWENTY

Fast Train to New York Takes an Open Switch at Mentor, Ohio, and Piles Up In Awful Confusion.

D. J. ARBAUGH, Milwaukee, Wis.
Three unidentified dead, one of whom is supposed to be Arthur L. Johnson of Comey & Johnson, Cleveland.

INJURED.

AARON GORHAM, Norwalk, Ohio, fireman; may recover.
RUDOLPH RICARDAU, Brooklyn, N. Y., will probably die.
J. H. LANGDON, Chicago, reported in critical condition.
F. D. COUNTISS, president of S. B. Chapin & Co., Chicago, slightly bruised, injuries not serious.

Cleveland, June 22.—While traveling at the rate of seventy miles an hour, the famous Twentieth Century limited, the fastest long distance train in the world, ran through an open switch at the little town of Mentor, Ohio, east of Cleveland at 9:20 o'clock last night, causing one of the most horrible wrecks in the history of the Lake Shore road.

The engine was hurled into the ditch. A part of the train was crushed on top of it and the wreck was partly burned. The horrors of the wreck were doubled in the horrors of the fire. More than a score of people were killed and injured and the famous train was demolished.

The train was crowded, practically all accommodations being taken when it left the city. It was behind time an dthe greatest of speed was being made to make up the lost time.

A peculiarly distressing feature of the rescue work was that the injured were so crazed when they were taken out from under the mass of wreckage that they could not even reveal their own identity, despite urgent appeals and entreaties made by officials and others.

The order was finally given to search the living wreck victims in the hope that identification might in that way be established, but even when this was resorted to but three sufferers could be identified.

"So far as can be learned the switch was opened and locked; left open by some party unknown; probably a crank, and evidently for malicious purposes. Train No. 10, a fast eastbound train, passed through the same switch forty-five minutes ahead of No. 26, and it was all right at that time. It is positive that no other train or engine, either freight or passenger, passed through the switch between No. 10 and No. 26."

Traveling at the rate of seventy miles an hour, the heavy train was hurled to its doom with a momentum that was appalling. The scene of the accident was at the Mentor depot. The switch that caused the trouble is located about 130 yards west of the depot. As the heavy engine struck the switch the engine left the main track and swung violently to the left.

For a distance of twenty yards the engine ran on the rails, and then, leaping from the track, turned on its side just to the east of the depot. The momentum was such that the heavy tender was hurled entirely over the engine and was eneveloped in flames from the engine.

The Chicago sleeper, which was immediately behind the combination car, swung from the track and, crashing into the depot, was completely buried in the wreck of the building. The violence of the crash was such that the depot collapsed on top of the wrecked coach. The hapless passengers in this coach were crushed and maimed in the wreck, and then completely buried in the collapse of the structure.

The next sleeper following was left off the track behind and the other remained upright on the rails. An instant after the crash of the wreck the boiler of the great engine burst with terrific force, scattering fire and steam through the wreck in a manner that made escape for the helpless imprisoned passengers impossible.

The wrecked combination car, which had landed crushed and splintered on top of the engine, was at once enveloped in blinding flames and scalding steam. The cries of the imprisoned passengers were heard above the roar, but they were beyond all human aid and the car became a pyre for a number of human beings.

A score or more of physicians from Cleveland, Collinwood, Ashtabula and Painesville went to the scene of the wreck at the request of the Lake Shore officials. After the physicians had treated the injured, the latter were placed aboard a special train and brought to this city, where they were hurried in waiting ambulances to the several hospitals.

The wrecked train was making nearly seventy miles an hour when the accident occurred, according to the fireman, Aaron Gorham of No. 9 Rose avenue, Norwalk, who, although badly bruised, miraculously escaped death and was brough to the Cleveland general hospital.

"We were speeding like the wind" said Gorham, "when the engine left the track. It occurred so quickly that I little knew what happened until we crashed into the Mentor freight house. I neither heard nor saw the engineer after that.

"The engine overturned, and somehow the tank managed to fall upon me, but not heavily, and I was sheltered by it. I lost consciousness from the terrible blow which I had received on the head and I knew nothing until I was dragged from underneath the wrecked engine."

Gorham is 35 years old and single. His mother is seriously ill at their home in Norwalk, and Gorham begged that if possible the news be kept from her.

One of the most appalling features of the wreck was the burning of the dead and injured.

A. P. Head of London, England, had inhaled flames and smoke. His tongue was swollen and his lungs were seared so that the doctors declared he could live only a few hours.

H. H. Wright of Chicago was pinioned in the train and was partly extricated by his own efforts when the flames overtook him and burned him so severely that he died later. He was brought to Cleveland on the relief train and taken to the Cleveland general hospital. His arms and head were burned so that he was hardly recognizable.

Mentor, the scene of the wreck, is the home of the widow of the late President James A. Garfield. Mrs. Garfield has lived in Mentor for a number of years. Her residence, however, is about two miles west of the scene of the wreck.

Conductor Alexander Hammond of the limited told his experience thus: "I rushed back to the switch immediately after the wreck. It was open, and locked open. I tried it and found that it worked all right. The switch light was out. Not a wheel rolled over the switch since No. 10, the eastbound Chicago and Boston train, went through forty-five minutes before. J. Prior, colored, of New York, a porter on the second car of the train, was busy preparing berths for the passengers when he felt the train leave the main track. He said he just went up into the air, and then he lurched sideways. That is all I can say about it. I fell against a window and broke it. I crawled out of the window, coming out on the under side of the train. Whenever a face appeared at a window I grabbed for the man and pulled him out. All were saved, but I was hurt a little. My hand was cut and my shoulder sprained severely."

James H. Gibson of Chicago, a passenger on the train, died at a Cleveland hospital early today from his injuries. Gibson was conscious up to within a very short time of his death, and spoke calmly of his experience. He said:

"I can tell very little about it, for I soon lost consciousness and saw but little of what occurred after the crash came. I was seated in the smoker pretty well back and the first realization I had of an accident was when I felt myself suddenly hurled over the backs of the seats and found myself in darkness among a struggling and shrieking mass of humanity. There was a frightful roaring and hissing of steam and I seemed to be stifling in a dense cloud of it. I grabbed about blindly and felt as it seemed to me uphill above me, what I realized was a window frame. With my hands I broke the glass and managed to drag myself through the window.

"There was such a cloud of steam everywhere that I scarcely knew which way to go, but I had the instinct to stagger away from the blinding steam that I could feel was scalding my flesh.

"I must have lost consciousness about this time, for I have only a confused recollection of people coming to help me, and the impression that my hands and arms were bleeding where I had broken the glass, then I remembered nothing more until I was on board the train coming to Cleveland."

William Barclay Parsons of New York, who was chief engineer of the construction of the New York subway when the same was built, was on the train, but escaped injury.

A quantity of first-class mail was destroyed by fire, which consumed all except the two rear coaches. The mail was largely composed of through pouches from the West and destined for Eastern points. Just how many pouches were destroyed the railroad

ANOTHER INDIAN STEAL ALLEGED

Kansas City, June 22.—A special to the Journal from Muskogee, I. T., says:

It is alleged that a steal in connection with the payment of Chickasaw warrants has been discovered, which will outrival the famous Creek warrant steal, and may involve a fugitive banker of Tishomingo and "men high up." The amount cannot be determined at present, but it is between $100,000 and $200,000.

This sum represents Chickasaw school warrants that were paid, and afterwards, it is said, refloated. One firm in St. Louis, it is understood, has about $60,000 worth of these warrants, and some of them are known to have come through a combination of which Kirby Purdom, the absconding banker of Tishomingo, was said to be the leading spirit. A large number of these warrants are thought to be fraudulent. The grand jury is making an investigation.

GOVERNOR TO REPRIEVE HOCH

Springfield, Ill., June 22.—Governor Deneen will grant a reprieve to Johann Hoch, sentenced to hang tomorrow for wife murder. The reprieve will be granted so that Hoch's case can be taken to the Illinois supreme court. This is the closing day of the term of the court. The governor thinks Hoch ought to have a chance to present his case before that body. Governor Deneen stated to the Associated Press today that a reprieve would be issued as son as Hoch's attorney and the state's attorney could agree on the length of time for which a reprieve would be necessary.

GRIEVANCE AGAINST ICE TRUST

Minneapolis, June 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—County Attorney A. J. Smith has decided to investigate the alleged Minneapolis ice trust. Information bearing on such a combination has been communicated to Mr. Smith. One of the parties with a grievance is A. J. Davis, teller in one of the banks, who claims that because of some trouble with one of the companies, he was unable to get any ice. Some of the drivers say they have been instructed not to serve certain people with ice. If the evidence warrants, the attorney will lay the the facts before the grand jury.

COURT INTERFERES WITH THE HANGING OF MRS. MARY ROGERS

Appeal To Supreme Court To Be Granted By Judge.

Will First Give Governor a Chance To Reprieve Her.

If He Does Not She Will Be Remanded By Court.

MRS. MARY ROGERS.

Brattleboro, Vt., June 22—The habeas corpus petition of Mrs. Mary M. Rogers, under sentence of death for the murder of her husband, was denied by Judge Wheeler, sitting as a justice of the United States circuit court today.

It is understood that an appeal to the United States supreme court will be taken and that pending a decision by that body Mrs. Rogers, whose reprieve expires tomorrow, will not be hanged.

Later Mrs. Rogers' attorneys formally filed an appeal. Judge Wheeler announced his readiness to grant it, but said he would not sign the necessary papers until 4 o'clock today, in order that Governor Bell might have an opportunity again to reprieve Mrs. Rogers. At the same time the judge declared that if the governor did not grant a further reprieve, the court would issue an order returning Mrs. Rogers to the custody of the United State's marshal, pending a decision on the appeal. Counsel for Mrs. Rogers said that she would not be hanged tomorrow under any circumstances.

THE DEGREE OF L.H.D. GIVEN PRESIDENT BY WILLIAMS COLLEGE

Root, Choate and Others Honored With Honorary Titles.

President Addresses Students and Public of Williamstown.

Williamstown, Mass., June 22.—President Roosevelt who reached here last evening after a busy day at Worcester, spent the night at the home of President Henry Hopkins of Williams college, which institution today, will confer on the president, the somewhat unusual degree of L. H. D. (Doctor of Letters.) The weather this morning was cloudy, but there was a promise of fair skies. The town is filled with visitors which include large numbers of the college alumni and relatives and friends of the graduates. The president who was greatly refreshed by a night's rest, faced a day of activity, which, according to arrangements, called not only for his participation in the commencement exercises, but the delivery of an address to the people of Williamstown, an early departure on his return to Washington, with speeches to be made at North Adams and Pittsfield, and possibly other places, as his train passed through.

During the morning, the president and his party were driven about the town and into the Berkshire country beyond. Former Secretary of War Elihu Root and Former Ambassador Joseph H. Choate, who were here to receive the degree of L. L. D., from Williams college, were members of the party. The cordiality of the people was displayed at every point as the president passed.

The drive ended in time to give the president a few moments leisure before the procession was formed on the college grounds prior to the commencement exercises in the Congregational church.

Long before the hour fixed for the exercises, the church was thronged. As the academic procession, headed by the president and Dr. Hopkins entered the church, the audience rose and remained standing until the president was seated on the platform.

The feature of the exercises was the conferring of the honorary degrees. Prof. Richard Austin Rice, on behalf of the board of trustees, bestowed them. Besides the president, Former Secretary Root and Former Ambassador Choate, the recipients of degrees included Stephen B. Penrose, president of Whitman college, state of Washington, doctor of divinity.

Each one named was cordially received by the audience, the president's reception amounting to an ovation. President Roosevelt delivered a short address and at the conclusion of the exercises the president proceeded to the steps of the church where he addressed a large assemblage.

SOME ANXIETY OVER ANSWER OF GERMANY IS FELT AT PARIS

Paris, June 22.—Official circles here observe the outward appearance of entire tranquility over the Franco-German negotiations, but an undercurrent of considerable anxiety prevails relative to Germany's answer to the French note. This is somewhat intensified by publications purporting to give Germany's intention to insist that the Moroccan conference be not trammeled by specific limitations on its scope. Nothing, however, has yet been received from official sources indicating that such is the purpose of Germany, and Premier Rouvier's associates maintain that as his note is couched in a calm, conciliatory tone, there is reason to expect that Germany will answer him in a similar spirit of conciliation. However, a considerable element in parliamentary circles shows much solicitude regarding the outcome of the negotiations. Reports from the front continue to show marked military activity and a feeling of unrest among the people living along the border.

ATHLETES BEGIN WORK.

Several Thousand Gathered at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, June 22.—The twenty-ninth festival of the North American Gymnastic union which has gathered on the state fair grounds, over 3,000 German-American athletes from twenty-nine states in this country, representing 175 turnvereins and a picked team from Germany, representing 800,000 members of the German gymnastic union, began its work today, after the formal opening of last night.

At the grounds the athletes turned out of their tents at the sound of reveille at 6 o'clock, and after a hearty breakfast, were escorted to the German house, to take part in the festival parade, to witness which great crowds had gathered along the downtown streets.

The parade was a gorgeous spectacle, for which the committee had been preparing for several months.

TAKE OVER A GRAVEL MINE

St. Louis County Officials Do Something Besides the Sights.

It has quietly leaked out that while a party of St. Louis county officials and some of their range friends were in the West on a recent trip out to the Portland fair and the Pacific coast, they also examined some reported gold properties and have launched a new company.

The El Dorado Republican of June 15, a paper published at Placerville, Cal., says:

"During the past week a party of people from Duluth, Minn., arrived at Placerville and went out to Indian Diggings with Grant S. Estey to examine a gravel mine formerly owned by the Andreason brothers near that place, which is said to have some unusually rich developments in the tunnel by which the gravel beds have been opened. The visitors are Messrs. W. J. Bates, Joseph Backus, F. W. Miller, Charles Jesmore and J. B. Middlecoff.

"As a result of this visit there is now incorporated a mining company styled the Thelma company, having a capital stock of $100,000, of which $60,000 have been subscribed. The board of directors comprise Odin Haldon, Duluth; H. R. King, Grand Rapids; James A. Billings, Placerville, and Christian and Harold Andreason, Indian Diggings."

DESTROYED BASS FRY

Suit Brought Against Tower Lumber Company By State.

St. Paul, June 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state game and fish commission today began proceedings against the Tower Lumber company, St. Louis county, in an effort to recover $20,700 damages.

It is alleged that the company ran its logs into Vermilion lake and destroyed the bass fry which the commission had arranged to collect there. In addition to the civil suit a criminal action will also be brought aganst the company.

NO ASSISTANCE FROM LONDON

To Efforts of the President to Bring About Armistice.

Washington, June 22.—No assistance is expected in Washington from the London government in whatever efforts the president may initiate to bring about an immediate armistice, or to prevent a clash before the convening of the Washington conference. While the London government, as an ally of Japan, has shown itself in hearty sympathy with the president's policy to bring the belligerents together, it feels that it cannot undertake to suggest an armistice at this time. The British officials believe, according to advices reaching this government, that Japan would be sacrificing a great deal to consent to an armistice at this time and that after a great defeat on land the Russians will be more ready to discuss peace. This, however, is but an honest difference of opinion between Washington and London. Only the belief here is that another defeat may inspire the Russians to continue the war indefinitely. It is understood, however, that London will do nothing to hamper in any way the president's efforts, having expressed its sympathy with his general purpose.

FAVOR BLOCK SYSTEM.

Denver, June 22.—The annual convention of the Train Dispatchers' association, which is in session here, has reiterated its stand in favor of the "block system" for handling trains, and the delegates appear to favor some legislative action to enforce the adoption of this system.

KILLED BY SNAKES.

"Railroad building in Brazil some years ago was primarily a fight against rank vegetation and labor troubles," said Thomas E. Cassidy, who was formerly an engineer there, in the New Orleans Picayune. And he told a strenuous story of how an anaconda killed two men and frightened 1,500 others to such an extent that the building of the road ceased forever.

"I was born in England, and was there educated as an engineer," he said. "Way back in '87, nearly twenty years ago, I went to Argentine, and, after remaining there a short time, went on to Brazil, where the incident of which I have been reminiscing occurred. My memory is fading now, for none of its can remember very distinctly the happening of a time so long ago, but as I look back across the years I can still see the horrible sight of those two men being ground to jelly by the great anaconda of the forest. I can still see the rioting of 1500 hungry men and the burning of the Brazilian undergrowth as it made impossible the extension of a railroad.

"The road was being built directly through a dense forest, such as is common in the land of the equator. Those who have seen the everglades or the delta of the Mississippi, or the great woods in parts of Canada, can never imagine the growth one witnesses there. Great, giant trees seem to pierce the sky, so high do they go, and spread over all branches and leaves which make all dark and mysterious beneath. Those rank luxuriant grasses, bushes, flowers, water growths and vegetation of every kind make a mass almost impenetrable. When the great rains of the tropics swept over it one could almost see the growth going on.

"But suddenly, like one of the great storms, there came a time of trouble and despair, from which I narrowly escaped with my life. I think we had been leading the kind of life I have described for some two weeks when we reached a place called Itapulco. We had started to work in the morning as usual, and all of the 1,500 men were engaged in the battle against the wilderness. It had rained during the night, and the sun had not been up long enough to dry up the moisture, which made the humidity almost unbearable. The place where we were working was swamp land, the black, rotting swamp vegetation over a black alluvial soil. It was here that we met the anaconda, which was the prime cause of the breaking up of the camp.

Probably most of the laborers had seen anacondas before. Certainly I had. They could be seen coiling around the branches of the trees at a distance. On most occasions we did not come within speaking distance of them, but at this time the great serpent was asleep, apparently, despite the noise. Coiled around a great black tree, with its spots visible and its appearance making one shudder, it awaited its victims in the small animals of the forest. Some men surrounded the tree, jabbering among themselves, and intensely interested. Two of them went very near the tree, actuated by some mistaken idea of bravery, and evidently scheming to entrap the monster, which was coiled several times around the tree. Perhaps the boa awoke just at that minute. Perhaps he had been only waiting, but in an instant he partly uncoiled from the tree and caught the two men together in its power. It must have been 30 feet long, and, with its monster strength, it crushed them so that those at some distance heard their bones crackle like kindling. Then it buried its great fangs deep in the body of one of them, quickly sinking into the pool of water at one side of the tree, for we had been working along the side of a stream. It was a horrible sight and the men were frightened, some of them superstitiously, as never before.

"They made it known that they wished to go no further, and murmured among themselves like mutineers at sea. It was in the afternoon of the same day that we heard that the material had been stopped at headquarters, and so there we were, without means to go ahead. There was no food and no money to pay the men. Against them there were four engineers, including a Captain Balfour and a man named Averdiek and myself. They demanded our provisions, as on the following day they grew hungry. We had but little, and could give them none, and then came the deluge. The grumbling grew to threats and the threats to a wild riot, the men burning the entire camp. Perceiving our danger, for they had threatened our lives, those I have mentioned, including myself, took the three mules in the camp and made off back the way we had come in building the road as fast as we could. The fourth engineer, a Swiss, we left there, as he could find no mule. Of his fate we never learned, and even of the fate of the road we were ignorant, for we soon took ship for England, and I never saw the tropics again."

WOMEN IN SESSION

Auxiliary of Duluth Diocese Holding Ninth Annual Meeting.

Rev. Irving P. Johnson of Minneapolis Delivers Opening Address.

This morning the ninth annual meeting of the Women's auxiliary of the Duluth diocese was held at Trinity chapel on East Superior street. The meeting opened with devotional services led by Bishop Morrison and was followed by an address by Rev. Irving P. Johnson of Minneapolis, who took his text from Acts viii, 8: "Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached Christ unto them."

He said, in part:

"There is something pathetic to us in the thought of this Grecian Jew journeying along the dusty road from Jerusalem to Samaria. Before him lay a vision that to many of us would be appalling. The city of Samaria squalid and dirty, part of a tyrannous empire containing little of what we would consider cultivated society. It was composed of dirty streets and dirty houses which many of us would dread to encounter. It was unstable in its religious life. Simon had gained the ears of the people; he was the leading religious figure and the leading spiritual power in the city. And Philip was going there to endeavor to civilize, regenerate and ennoble the people. No Jew but a Christian Jew would go to the city, except for business purposes. And after 1,900 years the figure of one lone man going to a heathen city to teach Christ to the inhabitants is not a strange one. It has been repeated and repeated so often that no doubt ought to remain of the feasibility of that method. If the problem was presented to us today of how Samaria was to be cleaned, cultivated and made better, the answers would probably be many and different. Some would say education. But the doubt would arise whether the people would care for it; if the intellectual desire would not be lacking and we would see that by education they could not be redeemed.

"Others will say present philosophy to them. Give them the theory of God, of spirit and of matter and they will be liberated from slavery. But I doubt if they would be freed after being taught all the philosophers from Plato to culture philosophers of Boston. They would lack the interest to turn the pages. What was the power that was used in this first missionary journey mentioned in the Holy Script; the power that reared the church in Samaria, the kingdom of the living Christ? We find the power in our text, "He Preached Christ Unto Them." It was by the preaching and learning of that simple text that the people were lifted out of the brutality of savagery and helped out of the cruelty of ignorant superstition. We must remember that when we talk of the power of philosophy and other methods we speak in fiction that when we consider the Christ method we are dealing in facts and history. The former is the dream of metaphysicians, the latter a communion with the Master.

"We hear much of doctrines but the simple doctrines of the religion of Jesus Christ are easily acceptable. They are the doctrine of the blessed trinity, the doctrine of incarnation, the doctrine of resurection, the doctrine of ascension and the doctrine of the coming of the Holy Ghost. They are facts, blessed facts all of them. And today when we hear Americans cry for freedom from doctrines, we later see them following first after this new doctrine and then that new dogma. Christ's teaching and the salvation we may receive from that life and death is not merely a beautiful painting upon which we may gaze nor a symphony of music which may delight us but it must impress us as a living help to be lived and preached until the end of time."

Mr. Johnson closed his address with a special talk on the Samaritan-like attitude of the Christian of today against the heathen and warned his hearers against the self centered and uncharitable condition of mind that may find lodging in the seemingly Christian life.

Following the address, holy communion was administered, and the business session of the auxiliary followed, with the president, Mrs. J. D. Morrison, presiding. The reports of the different secretaries were read. Miss Carrie E. Redman gave the annual report of the secretary-treasurer; Mrs. H. B. Sturtevant reported as secretary of the church periodical club; Mrs. F. E. Berry for the junior auxiliary; Mrs. Henry Taylor for the Little Helpers, and Mrs. Le Quesne as box custodian.

The following committees were appointed by the president:

Nominating committee—Mrs. J. E. Bowers, Mrs. H. F. Parshall and Mrs. R. J. Mooney.

Printing—Miss Carrie E. Redman.

Plan of work—Mrs. Henry Taylor, Mrs. Beatty and Mrs. Lonegren.

Finance—Mrs. W. H. Stultz and Mrs. W. H. Jones.

It was decided to endeavor to raise $100 for general missions and funds in excess to be devoted to any special mission work that the members may decide.

The meeting adjourned until 2:15 this afternoon, when the reports of the appointed committees were heard, the president's address delivered, and a short address given by Bishop Morrison.

TWENTY-TWO WERE KILLED AT LODZ.

Lodz, Russian Poland, June 22.—Twenty-two persons were killed as the result of yesterday's firing by dragoons and Cossacks on a procession of 50,000 workmen, which had been organized as a demonstration against the government. Ten of about 100 wounded are dying. Two women were crushed to death in the rush of the panic-stricken crowds after the fight began. This morning some workmen, in revenge for last night's shooting, shot a Cossack and two policemen.

Will Have No Part in Peace Negotiotions.

St. Petersburg, June 22.—The Russ says it is authorized to say that Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador at Washington, will not participate in the peace negotiations, but will leave the United States immediately on the arrival of Baron Rosen, his successor. From important sources the Associated Press confirms the statement of the Russ, that Count Cassini will have no prat in the peace negotiations.

LAW IS UPHELD.

Grindeland Law Sustained In Recent Trial.

The Smith-Baker Commission company of this city has been defeated in a trial in Crookston, in a case which involves points of much interest to all grain men. A dispatch reviewing the case says

The Grindland law passed some years ago, requiring all commission merchants in the state handling and selling grain for individuals to make daily reports as to the sales made, time, name of purchaser and amount received, has been upheld in an important case of the Smith-Baker Commission company of Duluth against H. B. Bornlan of Hallock, a track buyer, who the commission firm claimed had overdrawn his account with them, and refused to settle according to the figures upon the firm's books.

Smith, Baker & Co. alleged in their complaint that Bornlan had overdrawn his account for wheat shipped them during the year 1904 some $1,124, and Bornlan in his answer alleged that he had not been credited upon the firm's books with the proper amount, as the true contents of the car should have been.

"The commission firm on the other hand claimed that Bornlan's weights, as given in his bills of lading, were padded. During the trial of the case it came out that the commission company had not complied with the provisions of the Grindeland law in regard to daily reports of sales, but contended that Bornlan was the firm's agent, rather than the firm Bornlan's. This contention, however, was not upheld, as it was proven that the latter was an independent purchaser.

Attorney J. H. Whiteley of Duluth appeared for the Duluth Commission company. The provisions of the Grindeland law read that every commission merchant doing business in the state must make report to every customer for whom he disposes of goods within twenty-four hours after the consummation of the sale and must specify time of sale, name of purchaser and amount received. This case is the first one on record in Northern Minnesota in which the law has been brought out prominently in a civil action."

The case is to be appealed.

"TAINTED FORTUNES"

Madison, Wis., June 22.—The commencement day address at the university of Wisconsin was delivered this afternoon by Hon. Carl Schurz of New York. He said, in part:

"This republic should stand as the gentleman par excellence among nations, a gentleman scorning the role of swashbuckler, whose hip pocket bulges with loaded six-shooters and who flashes big diamonds on his fingers and shirt front, a gentleman modest in the consciousness of strength, carrying justice, forebearance and conciliation on his tongue and benevolence in his hand, rather than a chip on his shoulder. If this republic is to endure and to be successful in its highest mission, it must put its trust rather in schools than in battleships."

President Van Hise in his address severely scored "tainted fortunes" and deplored the upbuilding of universities by such means.

The degree of doctor of laws was conferred on Carl Schurz, Justices J. B. Cassidy and R. D. Marshall of the Wisconsin supreme court, Prof. Werner Spalteholz of Gemany, and Former President John Bascom of the university of Wisconsin. There were 428 in the graduating class.

THE BURGLAR ALARM.

Its Ramifications Have Hurt The Burglar's Trade.

Some distance from New York there is a farm which is run entirely by electricity. The owner has set up a complete electric plant and this produces the current for lighting and heating as well as for supplying the power for other operations connected with the farm, says Pearson's Weekly.

The farm land obtains its electric power from a large stream on which are two falls, one 60 feet and the other 150 feet high.

The rush of the falling water turns huge wheels which are connected to a motor of immense horse power, which runs several smaller ones. One motor of 10-horse power works a mowing machine, another a thrashing machine, and a third a circular saw for cutting logs.

The churns and other appliances in the farm dairy are all run by electricity, and the farm itself is lighted by several huge arc lamps.

Another farm, situated in Western Canada, saves about $2,500 every year by using electricity for manual labor.

Mowing machines, chaff cutters, plows, harrows, reaping machines and the like are run by an electric current. The farmhouse is brilliantly lighted, and the kitchen supplied with an electrically heated range, while in the laundry the flatirons are heated by electricity.

The Americans were the first to utilize electricity as a burglar catcher.

A well-known professor of Chicago, attached to one of the universities, discovered that any money he left in the pockets of his overcoat, that was hung up in a lobby during lecture hours, seemed to disappear mysteriously.

One day he arranged wires that carried a generous current inside the pocket of his coat, and this brought the thief to a realizing sense of iniquity.

The appropriator of other men's goods inserted his hand, and the electricity gave him such a twinge that he yelled vigorously, and was caught literally red-handed.

The professor's little dodge resulted in an effective system of protection being applied successfully to several museums in America and England. Wires conveying an electric current were run underneath the lid of each case containing valuable articles.

If the cover was lifted or disturbed in any way, an alarm was instantly transmitted to the office of an attendant or night watchman, and several electric gongs were sounded simultaneously.

Four museum pilferers were captured in one month in America in this way.

Electric burglar alarms are very common nowadays, and there is hardly a public institution or palatial residence in the kingdom that is not fitted out with one or two of them.

Several of the best orchards are surrounded by a net of fine wire mesh, six or eight feet high, with a couple of copper wires, some distance apart, stretched along the top of it.

Every night a strong current is switched into these, carrying electricity right through the wire mesh, making it a perfect terror to thieves and others of that ilk.

The popularity of the electrical calculating machine is daily increasing in America, where it was invented. Those who are using it declare that it is three times as simple as the calculating machine which works by hand.

The latter machine, by the way, became an essential in the world of science long since, and almost every life insurance and government office in Great Britain has one in use.

Eight of the machines were placed in the accountant's department of the Bank of England some years ago, and proved an immediate success. Joseph Chamberlain introduced the invention into the house of commons, where it has been found an invaluable assistant in drawing up statistics.

Whether the electrical calculator will oust the mechanical one remains to be seen.

Dr. Hammond, a Washington physician, has found that sleep can be induced by sending a mild electric current through the sympathetic nerves of the spinal column of the brain, and he has placed upon the market a small battery of his own design, for the benefit of those whose overwrought nerves force them to discover some reliable method of producing sleep artificially.

By means of an electric battery and a keyboard, similar to that of a piano, the Rector of Rundall rings his church bells before every service, and also at both weddings and funerals. This is quite a new idea, and if it ever becomes fashionable the majority of the bell ringers in this country will starve.

Metal can now be welded by electricity, and no eye could tell where the junctions are made. Railway metals are welded into continuous lines of a mile or so long by this method, and many of the rims of wheels for motor cars and similar vehicles are being electrically welded.

George Maxwell, one of the most successful speculators on the board of trade at Chicago, was robbed literally by electricity. One evening while in his office the telephone bell rang, and, in reply to his "Hullo," a masculine voice, rough and rasping said:

"I'm Thomas Jefferson Odell, the famous burglar. I and two of my friends have gained access to your house. The cook, the chambermaid and your wife are lying here in the drawing room, gagged and bound. We have disposed of the black coachman, and some bundles of rag and straw, soaked in petroleum, have been judiciously distributed about the house ready to be ignited."

"You scoundrel!" shouted the agonized Maxwell.

"Don't speak so loud," was the calm retort, "you'll smother the instrument! Now listen to me. I need a little loan of £2,000 cash. It is now 5:30 o'clock. At this very moment my confederate has entered your office to receive the money. Refuse to pay it to him, and your house will be burnt to the ground with your wife and servants in it."

Mr. Maxwell, turning round, saw a stranger dressed in the height of fashion before him.

"I have called to collect a little matter of £2,000 for Mr. Odell," said the visitor.

Mr. Maxwell, without a word, went to his safe and handed the stranger two packets containing £2,000 in notes. Then Odell's confederate stepped to the telephone and said:

"I have the money. Free Mrs. Maxwell and the servants, and leave the house as you found it."

Then he strode out of the office with the grandeur of a Spanish hidalgo.

When Mr. Maxwell arrived home he found his wife as calm as possible, and after he had finished the recital of his adventure he was told by his wife that nothing had happened in the home as he described, but a well-dressed man, calling himself Odell, had called some time before, and stating that he was a business friend of Mr. Maxwell, asked permission to use the telephone to send him an important message.

This permission was given him, and after using the 'phone for a short time he left the house.

Maxwell, discovering how he had been sold, rushed to the police, and although they put the smartest detectives in the service on the case, they failed to capture the clever Odell and his confederate.

RICH MAN'S TROUBLE.

J. D. Pocketfiller Arrested For Giving Money Away.

Life: John D. Pocketfiller, the notorious multi-millionaire, was in Magistrate McShamrock's court yesterday on the charge of trying to give away money on the street corners. It appears that Mr. Pocketfiller, disguised with a chestnut wig, stood on the sidewalk at a busy down-town corner, carrying a large sack filled with bank bills done up in bunches of $100 each. He would hold one of these bunches in his hand and offer it to passersby in an offensive way, muttering, "Please help me, kind people; I am very rich; take this little gift and make me happy." That Mr. Pocketfiller was a nuisance of the most irritating description could not be denied. Ladies gathered up their skirts and swept disdainfully past; busy merchants elbowed the millionaire contemptuously aside; street urchins thumbed their noses at him, and one fat-necked politician into whose hand Mr. Pocketfiller attempted to thrust a package of bills was thrown into such a rage that he not only hurled the money back into the millionaire's face, but followed it with a fistful of silver coins which he pulled from his own pocket. The coins scattered over the sidewalk, where it was noticed that people kicked them into the gutter like scraps of orange peel. The very idea of money had been rendered distasteful to the populace by Mr. Pocketfiller's presence and his insolent behavior.

The millionaire was finally taken into custody, much to everybody's relief, at the instance of a well-known clergyman, the Rev. Saintly Longface of Brooklyn, who deposed that Mr. Pocketfiller had rudely offered him a hundred thousand dollars for the foreign mission fund. After listening to the testimony, Magistrate McShamrock promptly sentenced the prisoner to hard labor for life at 26 Broadway, with the injunction that he must not cease to let his wealth accumulate. "I have no patience with these un-American notions," remarked the magistrate. "What would this country come to if our capitalists persisted in giving away even a small fraction of their fortunes without expecting something in return? It will be a gloomy outlook for the future of our magnificent trusts if such things are suffered to continue. Public sentiment demands that this donation business be stopped here and now. I understand that this is not Mr. Pocketfiller's first offense, or I should have let him off with a term in the United States senate."

A brief interview was subsequently granted with Mr. Pocketfiller at cell No. 26. The prisoner looked cheerful, despite the onerous conditions of his sentence. "I cannot account for my remarkable lapse," he said. "I am told I have been occasionally taken with similar fits before, though this is the first time I was dragged into court for it. The public seems to be getting unusually fastidious nowadays. I am sincerely sorry for what I have done, and trust that the wholesome austerity of life in this institution and close application to business will make me a better man."

Conquered Duluth in a Day!

With ten minutes delay on account of some legal formality; The Columbia Clothing Co. took possession of the old "Great Eastern" store at 10:10 a. m. yesterday. From that minute till now, the expectant crowds have continued to pour through the wide-open gates, sure of a hearty welcome and certain to leave with a good word for us.

It certainly is a case of Veni, Vidi, Vici.

WE CAME, like the modest fellows we are, making neither much noise nor any apologies.

WE SAW that with such a corner and such merchandise as Burrows had, in such a city as Duluth is, we'd be at once the leading clothiers of this section, if we could have the people believe in us as our old friends in Superior do.

WE CONQUERED Duluth in a day, but we will exercise our ruling position with care, always giving only the best merchandise and charging the mildest possible prices, trying to be good friends of the other gentlemen in the clothing business, and asking no man to desert their old trading places, as Duluth and its contributary territory is big enough for all of us.

Of course we will take all the trade that we can attract in a legitimate way, but we will do no personal soliciting and we will not buy any man's trade or influence just now.

The Sale of All Burrows' Goods

at the lowest special Columbia prices is an attraction, few who look into the matter will be able to resist. As juggling with price-figures is no unusual thing with advertisers, we prefer not to fling many figures at you until you know us better, but invite you to come in and see the new price-tickets and the goods to which they are strung together.

Clothing Company

Successor to the "Great Eastern."

COAL FOUND NEAR DULUTH

Anthracite Discovery Within Forty Miles of This City.

St. Paul, June 22.—A discovery of anthracite coal, about 40 miles from Duluth, on the line of the Northern Pacific, has been made known to the state auditor's office in a letter received from Edward E. Lewis of Duluth.

Mr. Lewis wrote Auditor Iverson to ask him that the state pay the bounty for coal discoveries. The Duluth man did not give the exact location of his coal mine, but said that he had three good kits of anthracite coal open within three miles of the Northern Pacific, and about 40 miles from Duluth.

No bounty on coal discovery is authorized by the laws of the state, and Auditor Iverson so informed Mr. Lewis. If the coal is on state land it will be necessary for the discoverer to enter into a contract with the state. Only one such contract has been entered into by the state, and that with the Quodenaw Development company in 1903. This company secured a contract for the mining of coal in Aitkin county, and pays the state 7½ cents per ton royalty.

SUICIDE BY HANGING.

Hamburg, June 22.—Frau Liza Schenk, a professional faster, committed suicide by hanging because she was starving, owing to her failure to get fasting engagements.

Menominee County Sued For Damage to an Automobile.

Menominee—The papers in two damage suits against the county of Menominee have been filed with the county clerk and the cases will come to trial at the August term of the circuit court. One is brought by Harold Astrup and Louis Mattard of Nadeau, who sue for $800 damages for a broken automobile, the damage being caused in an endeavor to get out of the way of a team about three miles south of Nadeau. The machine was backed into a log with the result that the automobile was broken beyond repair. The other suit is brought by Oliver Perra of Neadeau, who asks $600 for injuries to a team and the damage of a carriage.

Crystal Falls—The $22,000 worth of Iron county bonds which fell due on the first day of July will be taken care of on what are considered very advantageous terms. Two bonds, amounting to $2,000, will be paid on maturity and $20,000 worth refunded at 4½ per cent interest. The rate on the present issue is 6 per cent. In addition, the bonds are to be paid off in series of $4,000 every two years so that in ten years from the first of July the debt will have been lifted. The Iron County National bank offered to take the bonds at par under the foregoing conditions and the offer was accepted. The bank agrees to pay all the expenses of the issues excepting the printing of the bonds.

Sault Ste. Marie—George J. Lundy of the Soo has presented the Sault Ste. Marie lodge of the Woodmen of the World with a set of working tools, consisting of an ax, wedge and beetle, made from cypress wood taken from Lookout mountain, Tenn. Mr. Lundy secured the wood when on a recent trip to the South and made the tools on his return to the city. They are highly polished and are much prized by the officers and members of the lodge.

Escanaba—The Escanaba city council passed a resolution calling upon the Escanaba Electric Street Railway company to remove all defective ties from the street car track on Ludington street, which is about to be paved, and to replace the old rails with new steel of the class demanded in the specifications adopted for the improvement of the thoroughfare. Hereafter on all tracks and switches which may be built in the future, rails of the weight and height designated in the specifications must be used.

PROJECT OF TUNNEL

Between England and France Has Been Revived.

Paris, June 21.—The project of a tunnel between England and France under the channel has been revived. This time the proposition appears to have substantial railway backing. It was really seriously discussed at a conference held here between the administrators of the Northern of France and the Southeastern & Chatham Railway companies. Opinion as to the feasibility of the plans were expressed, it being added that the time was approaching when the prejudice against it, which exists in England, must disappear.

The objections have been chiefly from naval and military authorities, who have expressed the idea that such a project as the channel tunnel would have a tendency to do away with the isolation which is regarded as a source of great strength from a military and naval point of view. Those who favor the construction of the tunnel urge that it is absurd to argue along these lines since, should the government of Great Britain desire it, the explosion of a few pounds of dynamite in the tunnel would render the isolation of England as complete as at the present time. Indeed, an invading army from the continent would be mad indeed to attempt a dash through the tunnel, since they could never tell what hour an English engineer might explode a mine, with the result that the invading hosts would be in a predicament even worse than the hosts of Pharaoh at the time of the passage of the Red Sea by the Israelites.

NOTICE OF HEARING—

Application being made to me by Fred A. Williams, according to Chapter 42 of the General Statutes of 1894, for deed of so much of Lots 31, 33, 34, 36 and 38 West Perry Street, in that part of Duluth formerly called Portland, as lies within the limits of Lots 12 and 13, Block 106, Portland Division of Duluth, according to the recorded plat thereof; it is Ordered that said application be heard before me at the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said County and State, on Saturday, July 8th, 1905, at 9:30 o'clock a. m., at which time and place all persons claiming such portion of said described lots on said West Perry Street, or any right, title or interest therein, are hereby summoned and notified to attend and establish their right thereto, or to make any objections they may have to the granting of said application and hearing; notice to be given to all parties in interest by publication hereof in The Duluth Evening Herald once in each week for three successive weeks before said day of hearing.

Railroads.

EXPLAINS IT!

Reasons For the Great Western's Big Issue of Stock.

Goes to Mason City and Fort Dodge Railroad.

The Chicago Great Western road is sending out a circular explaining the immediate purpose for which the $14,000,000 of preferred B stock, to be authorized by the directors next September, will be issued. The new stock will be transferred to the Mason City & Fort Dodge railroad, controlled and operated by the Great Western, in return for an equal amount of non-cumulative preferred stock to be issued by the Fort Dodge company.

The Great Western acquired the Mason City & Fort Dodge railroad in 1902, under a contract for 100 years from April 1, 1901. The total length of the line is 378 miles. This is the second issue of Great Western securities on account of the Fort Dodge road, an increase of $20,000,000 in the Great Western common stock having been authorized in February, 1903, for the acquisiton of the lines already leased. Of this amount, however, only $12,700,000 has been issued.

The Great Western thus disposes of its own additional stock without obtaining additional properties directly. But it secures $14,000,000 of preferred stock that is practically a Great Western issue, and that may be sold for the betterment of the Great Western system.

Changes In Road Bed.

The Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha road is making some changes in the road bed between the Blue Earth river bridge at Mankato and the Minneopa Falls. The new line will run along the river side of South Bend. It will be direct, and three heavy curves will be cut out. The piece of work will cost the road $300,000. Winston Bros. of Minneapolis, have been awarded the contract for the work.

May Be Electric Power.

There is an unconfirmed report to the effect that, following the example set by certain of the Eastern roads, the Northern Pacific intends to use electricity instead of steam on certain parts of its Pacific coast lines. Owing to the wide distribution of water power, it is said that electricity can be generated very cheaply in Washington and Oregon.

C. A. Wester Resigns.

C. A. Wester has resigned as road-master of the Omaha road for the Minnesota and Iowa divisions. Mr. Wester has been called by the road to Eau Calre, where it is believed a better position will be given him. Louis Larson of Eau Claire has been appointed to succeed Mr. Wester.

CLEVER SWINDLER

Chicago, June 22.—A swindle which gained the operators more than $100,000 is believed to have been unearthed in the arrest in the Great Northern hotel of Zebular B. Stuart.

Under the alluring name of the Imperial Brokerage company alleged bogus certificates of the New Orleans Jockey club have been sold to hundreds of investors. These certificates, representing a value on paper of $100, were sold for $99 each, and the subscriber was to receive 5 per cent weekly dividends from the profits of the jockey club.

Papers found in the room occupied by Stuart showed that more than 1,000 of the fraudulent shares were disposed of, most of the purchasers being residents of Los Angeles.

RUNAWAY CAUSED

By Fire Crackers and Eli Johnson Is Badly Hurt.

Irving School Events Crowding In Thickly—Memorial Window.

The Fourth of July celebartion started today and too soon for Eli Johnson, a milkman living at Seventy-third avenue west and Redruth street. As a result of it Mr. Johnson is laid up at his home with a cut head and a broken arm.

He was in his rig this morning at Fifty-sixth and Raleigh street when a car was passing. Some boys had put explosives on the car track, and the car, in passing over them, set them off with great noise. The horse, attached to the milk wagon, became frightened and bolted. Mr. Johnson jumped out but kept hold of the lines, endeavoring to stop the runaway. The horse turned the corner and in doing so one side of the wagon ran up on the sidewalk.

The rig upset onto Mr. Johnson, crushing him underneath. The horse then wound itself around a telegraph pole and was stopped. Mr. Johnson was cut and bleeding pretty badly when picked up. He was taken home and treated there.

MEMORIAL WINDOW

For Miss Kennedy Is to Be Installed.

The memorial window in honor of Miss Laura Kennedy, a beloved teacher of Irving school who died some time ago, will be placed in the school tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock with fitting ceremony. The window is a beauty and is copied from one in the Boston public library. J. L. Washburn and Supt. R. E. Denfeld will speak and Miss Grayce Frances Turner will sing. Principal Foster of the school will have charge of the affair.

Parents and friends, in particular, and the public generally are invited to attend.

The fund for the window was subscribed by the pupils and alumni of the school, where Miss Kennedy taught for years and where she made herself beloved by all who had the good fortune to have her as a teacher.

FOUR LATONIA FAVORITES WIN

Other Interesting Races Wednesday on the Various Tracks.

Cincinnati, June 22.—Four favorites won at Latonia yesterday. In the steeple chase handicap, Belle Dodson, which finished first, bumped into Varner after going over the last jump and Jockey Dupee, who had the mount on the latter, claimed a foul, which was allowed by Judge Trevelyan. On the way to the jockey room, Archibald, who rode Belle Dodson, struck Dupee. Archibald was latter ruled off for life by the judges.

St. Louis, June 22.—Tristan Shandy, Willowdene and Chief Hayes were the winning favorites at Delmar track yesterday. The track was heavy. There was a large attendance.

Memphis, Tenn., June 22.—In a blinding rain storm Shenandoah, at liberal odds, won yesterday's feature, the fourth race, from a fair field. Gregor K., the favorite, could never get within striking distance. Stand Pat and Horse Radish were well backed. Edward Sheridan, the odds on favorite, ran away with the last race at a mile, winning pulled up by three lengths.

TRY IT! TRY IT!! TRY IT!!

New York, June 22.—Sidney Paget's Tradition yesterday won the Mermaid stakes for 3-year-old fillies at a mile and a furlong at Sheepshead bay over a track that was fetlock deep with mud. Tradition and Zala were coupled as the Paget entry and held at the prohibitive price of 1 to 6. Yesterday was the fourth running of the Mermaid stakes, which has been won by Gunfire, Daisy Green and last year by Beldame. Two favorites won.

KAISER FOILED

In Attempt to Beat Train With Auto.

Hamburg, June 22.—Emperor William, while coming from Hanover to this city in an automobile, ran a race with an express train on a line whose tracks ran parallel with the highway, hoping to prove his contention that the automobile would win such a contest. He maintained a speed of sixty miles an hour, until to his chagrin, the road made a curve and compelled him to abandon the race. Near Colle a tire burst and the automobile tilted until it almost overturned.

SUMMER SCHOOL

At Park Rapids Has Attendance of Fifty.

Park Rapids, Minn., June 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Park Rapids summer school opened yesterday at the public school building. The attendance is about fifty to start with, and many others are coming as soon as their schools close. The enrollment will probably reach 100 before the close of the term. The school is under the management of Prof. F. O. King, superintendent of the Aitkin schools, assisted by Miss Carolyn Johnson of Minneapolis and Miss Nellie K. Merritt of Brainerd.

LITTLE BUSINESS TALKS.

If you have a "little store," run it in a "big way." Advertise it as though it were twice as big—and it will soon be twice as big.

Merchants who advertise effectively are never hampered or shackled by clock, calendar or weather prediction. There are so few "wrong times" to advertise that they may be disregarded.

"The prudent man may direct a state—but it is the enthusiast who regenerates it." Truer of business than of statecraft. In the building of a successful business, Prudence merely hangs on to the coat-tails of Enthusiasm.

A LETTER TO OUR READERS.

53 Cottage St., Melrose, Mass.
Dear Sir: Jan. 11th, 1904.

"Ever since I was in the Army, I had more or less kidney trouble, and within the past year it become so severe and complicated that I suffered everything and was much alarmed—my strength and power was fast leaving me. I saw an advertisement of Swamp-Root and wrote asking for advice. I began the use of the medicine and noted a decided improvement after taking Swamp-Root only a short time.

I continued its use and am thankful to say that I am entirely cured and strong. In order to be very sure about this, I had a doctor examine some of my water today and he pronounced it all right and in splendid condition.

I know that your Swamp-Root is purely vegetable and does not contain any harmful drugs. Thanking you for my complete recovery and recommending Swamp-Root to all sufferers I am."

Very truly yours,
I. C. RICHARDSON.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, sent absolutely free by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root. If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

The Stage

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—All next week, Pollard Lilliputian Opera company.

THE POLLARDS.

"The Belle of New York" is the opening attraction of the Pollard Lilliputian Opera company at the Lyceum next week for the first night of its engagement here. The company is composed of clever juveniles from Australia, who are professionals in everything but size. They are exceptionally clever and their performances are compared more than favorably with the older operatic organizations. Among the principal features are the Pollard twins Freddie and Johnnie, both clever singers and dancers. The company numbers fifty principals and chorus.

Secures More Land.

Through deeds recorded yesterday, the Lake Superior & Southeastern Railroad company has acquired from George L. Raymond and wife of New Jersey, 58 lots in Oneota division of Duluth, for $12,300. The company has been steadily acquiring its right of way in Duluth through purchase outright and the prospect of condemnation proceedings is said to be slight. At the present time the railroad company owns a large portion of the land surveyed for its right of way from West Duluth to Eleventh avenue west.

DROWNED WHILE BATHING.

Staples Youth Goes Down In Crow Wing River.

Staples, Minn., June 22.—Ben Fowler, 16-year-old son of Grant Fowler, railroad carpenter in the employ of the Northern Pacific railroad at Staples, was drowned Tuesday afternoon at Wheeler's Ford, on Crow Wing river, three and a half miles north of town.

Ben Fowler, Howard Daniels, Nellie Simpson and Grace Chadbourne, all under 16, had gone to the picnic grounds at Wheeler's Ford to spend the day. Late in the afternoon young Fowler decided to go in bathing and, from the report of Howard Daniels, Fowler threw up his hands and went under. The river being very high and swift, his companions on shore could give him no help. Immediately after the accident, the young people drove to town and notified the parents of the drowned boy. Immediately a party of business and railroad men were organized to search for the body. The searching party reached the grounds at 9 p. m. and a heavy rainstorm broke loose, which, with the darkness, made a thorough search impossible till morning. In the morning a thorough search will be made by boats, hooks and dynamite. It is presumed the body will be found lodged along the shore or in a jam of logs, as the boy was dressed in overalls and shirt when he went in bathing. The young man was well liked and promising, and the townspeople keenly feel the loss.

IS IT ANY WONDER

That Malta-Vita Melts In Your Mouth and Satisfies as No Other Food Can.

Do you know why Malta-Vita is so delicious, so crisp, so sweet? Do you know why it is the most satisfying and healthful food in the world?

Because—

Malta-Vita is made from the best white wheat.

Before the process of manufacture begins, the wheat is cleaned and scoured and dust and refuse are drawn out of the big factory by suction, leaving it as fresh and pure as your own kitchen.

The grain is thoroughly cooked in water and steam and matured in fresh, pure air. By this time the starch in the wheat has been gelatinized, or, in other words, has lost all its indigestible characteristics.

Now the wheat is mixed with the highest quality of malt extract and this malt extract, a most active, digestive agent, converts the gelatinized starch into malt sugar.

You understand, of course, that malt sugar, (maltose) in which Malta-Vita is always so rich, is of wonderful food value, very strengthening and easily digested. It makes the digestion of the crisp flaked wheat an easy task, too, even for the weakest stomach.

Malta-Vita is baked under such intense heat that when it comes out of the ovens, its crisp brown flakes delicious beyond description, it contains only a little more than 1 per cent of moisture.

Do you wonder now why it melts in your mouth?

And here is another thought.

Throughout the entire process of manufacture Malta-Vita is practically untouched by human hands. Machinery—clean, shining machinery—conveys it through all the changes, even to the filling and sealing of the air-tight, moisture-proof packages.

Malta-Vita is the perfect food for old and young, weak or strong. For the run-down or overworked digestive organs it is a God-send. It makes red blood, refreshes the brain and the nerves, builds up bone and muscle. It is so satisfying and healthful that no home should be without it.

Malta-Vita is 10 cents at all grocers—same high quality, same big package as when it sold for 15 cents.

The testimonial concert which was tendered Gerard Tonning last evening at Steinway hall was a splendid success and in the program presented the most artistic work of which Duluth musicians are capable was given as a testimonial for Mr. Tonning who has been so closely identified with the musical growth of Duluth.

The opening number was presented by the Beethoven trio consisting of Fred G. Bradbury, violin, Mrs. Marie Geist Erd, cello, and Mr. Tonning at the piano, and in the two numbers given, "Morceau Mignon" by Elgar and "Serenade" by Widor, the trio appeared to fine advantage. The trio also presented one other number of the program, Greig's "Norwegian Dance No. 1." George L. Tyler sang the tenor aria, "Oh Castle Flor" from "King of Lahore," with splendid dramatic feeling and artistic interpretation. He was enthusiastically encored. Mr. Tonning played one of his own compositions a ballad for the piano, "And the Minstrel Sang," and was heard at his best. The aria of the page from "The Hugenots" was the selection pleasingly given by Miss Grayce Frances Turner. The quaret from "Verdi's Rigoletto" was splendidly sung by Mrs. James McAuliffe, Mrs. C. B. Gilbert, Philip Gordon Brown and Mr. Tyler. The "Gondeliera" and "In the Old Palace" from Mr. Tonning's suite for violin and piano "In Venice" was played by Charles Dexter Ostergren and Mr. Tonning. Philip Gordon Brown sung Schumann's "Two Grenadiers" and the aria from "Barber of Seville," "Una Voce Poco Fa" was exquisitely sung by Mrs. James McAuliffe. The program closed with the duet "La Favorita" by Donizetti sung by Emily Ellis Woodward and Philip Gordon Brown. The concert was under the direction of Mr. Tyler and the accompanists were Mrs. George L. Tyler, Mrs. S. P. Stocker and Mr. Tonning.

NEW PROFESSION.

One For Women Which Is Not Crowded.

In most lines of activity the supply is more than equal to the demand, but occasionally a profession is opened to women which is not overcrowded. The latest vocation to be adopted by members of the fair sex is the preservation of birds or animals. Women have formed Audubon societies, but the preservation of birds after death is a new profession for them and one in which but few persons are engaged, says an exchange.

A love of nature is an absolute essential to success. In the woods or highways of the suburbs birds are found, and observation of their mannerisms and color naturally is desirable to produce either for business or pleasure, a perfect reproduction of the original. There is a good field for this work, as schools, colleges, museums and families are making demands for specimens, and the supply appears to be inadequate.

Taxidermy is a simple profession to acquire, requiring delicacy, diligence and accuracy, however. Woman will excel in this, as her fingers are delicate and strong and the sympathetic chord strongly developed. But slight expense attends the acquirement of this new field of commerce, but some knowledge from an experienced woman taxidermist may be valuable as an asset for rapid progress.

An energetic woman of Austin, Ill., well known as the president of a club, an organizer of the City club and a director in the Local Improvement association, talks most scientifically and delightfully of this attractive field for women. She has preserved over a thousand birds and animals, some of very large size, as she is a naturalist of renown.

And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuffed and other skins
Of ill-shaped fishes.

It is thought that in 1517 birds were mounted in Amsterdam, and that taxidermy originated through a desire to preserve for exhibition the strange quadrupeds and brilliant-hued birds brought to Europe by the early navigators, and to this is due the genesis of the modern natural history museum.

The woman taxidermist, to make a success, must be artistic in presentation. The field is now open to her, as some birds are becoming extinct and their preservation a scientific and historical necessity. In outlining this suggestion, birds have been suggested primarily, but animals, large and small, will be in demand, especially pets whose age has endeared them to their owners.

The taxidermist at Austin has found such an interest in this work that she is the recipient of many inquiries. It is a simple, inexpensive, pleasant and profitable occupation, but like all professions, it requires knowledge, diligence, patience and application.

THE CONCLUSION OF ROY

By Will F. Lindley.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Hello, Jim!"

"Roy Gordon, by all that is wonderful; what on earth——"

"Let's get out of the crowd," he interrupted, starting for the entrance of a nearby fashionable hotel. "You dine with me tonight."

I followed, hardly realizing that I had met the old "chum of my boyhood. Gordon and I had been inseparable in those happy days in that little Alabama village. Together we had attended the village school and were then fellow students at the university. When we left college, I had entered the offices of a great western railway system, and Gordon, following the ambition of many years, had adopted the stage as a profession. We had lost all trace of each other and only once had I read in an Eastern journal of the success of Roy Gordon, actor.

Gordon reached the door of a room as we stepped from the elevator and turning the knob invited me in.

"Have a cigar," he said.

I took the proffered weed, lighted it, and settled myself in an easy chair, asked him to tell me all about himself.

"Well," he finally said, "You see, Jim, it's this way. You knew that when we left college I contemplated a career as an actor."

"Yes," I assented.

"I found the way steep and the road strewn with many stubborn obstacles, but my heart was in my chosen work and after a time I began to gain recognition along with the best of them.

"Everything was well with me after that until nearly two years ago. We were playing in Chicago—on for a summer 'run.' It was there that I met Marjory, who afterwards became my wife."

"Then you are married? I had never heard."

A shade of sadness crept into the gray eyes and the lines about his mouth hardened.

"Yes," he answered shortly. "I'm coming to that.

"Marjory came to play 'bits,' and it was but a few weeks until she was given the 'ingenue,' playing opposite me during a considerable part of the action of the piece.

"I recognized her great talents and also saw other qualities that captivated me. Before I was scarcely aware of it, I found myself desperately in love for the first time in my life.

"I laid siege to her heart and we were married in September. Our happiness was supreme and life had a new significance to me.

"We played together with different organizations until last summer, when we decided to make our home for a few weeks at least at a noted Wisconsin resort.

"It was but a few hours' run from Chicago and I made frequent business trips between the lakes and the city.

"We had made preparations one morning for a day of angling far up the lake; when I received a message calling me to the city. It was later than usual when I returned, and the hotel with lights dimmed, it seemed at rest. As I entered our rooms, the gas was burning very low and my wife was slumbering peacefully."

"Noiselessly I made preparations for retiring. As I removed a shoe a bit of yellow paper just under the edge of the dresser caught my eye.

"I secured it and spread the crumpled paper out upon my knee, then carried it nearer the gas jet, and what I read, Jim, stupefied me. It was a telegram from a person who signed himself 'Jack,' asking my wife to meet him on the beach but a short distance from the hotel as soon after midnight as possible.'

"My brain reeled and I crushed the note in my hand. With uplifted hand I staggered toward my sleeping wife, but instead I turned away, sank into a chair and buried my face in my hands."

"Marjory slept oblivious to my utter misery. It did not seem possible, Jim, that she, whom I believed to be all that was good and true, could be guilty of unfaithfulness. As I sat there I turned the telegram over in my mind a hundred times. Could it be, I argued, that some one had intruded upon her and in her indignation she had thrown the bit of paper where I had found it. I decided to ask for an explanation when she awakened.

"Sleep was unthought of, but I crept stealthily to bed and lay awake, a victim to the doubts and fears that assailed me.

"A clock in the distance tolled hour after hour. My wife stirred uneasily and I was instantly on the alert, although I lay quite still, feigning sleep."

"Slowly, with great caution, she turned back the light coverings, left the bed and drew on a lounging robe and fumbled carefully in a corner for a pair of slippers.

"I saw plainly every move, my heart beating so violently that I almost expected her to hear and know that I was awake and conscious of her perfidy.

"Deftly she opened the door and passed out, closing it softly.

"I rose, dressed quickly, and leaving my shoes behind, passed down the stairs and into the night air. I kept within the shadow and followed Marjory to the water's edge.

"The silence was intense, with only the gentle lap of the water on the sand. She stopped hesitatingly and I sank down behind a clump of shrubbery.

"A few moments passed and as I peered from my place of concealment I saw a dark form coming rapidly down the beach.

"Marjory saw and called softly, 'Jack!'

"'Yes, Marjory,' came from the shadows, and I saw my wife clasped in another's arms.

"I sprang forward, determined to avenge that cruel wrong, but my more sober judgment brought me to a sudden stop, and back I went to my hiding place, fearing that they had discovered the presence of a third party and a witness to their clandestine meeting.

"I lived years, it seemed, in those few minutes, crouching in the shelter of darkness. I decided upon a plan of action and hurried back to the hotel. When my wife returned I was, to all appearances, sleeping soundly.

"The next morning at breakfast she was silent and preoccupied and eating was a mere pretense. As we left the dining room I suggested that she go into the city that morning and do some shopping she had planned. I escorted her to the train.

"I hastened back to our quarters, packed my trunks, settled our indebtedness at the clerk's desk, and wrote a note, telling Marjory of what I had witnessed the preceding night and that I intended passing from out her life. I enclosed the note with half of my available cash in an envelope and left it with the hotel people to be delivered upon her return. I boarded the next train for Chicago and within a few hours was speeding eastward toward New York.

Carefully he flecked the ashes from the end of his cigar, struck a match and held the flame against the half-burned stump. I noticed that his hand trembled as he did so.

"And that, Jim," he continued, "is the cause of this," and he touched the gray strands at his temple.

"And have you never heard of her?" I asked.

"I received two letters. I returned them unopened."

Going to a trunk in the far corner of the apartment, he returned with a photograph, which he placed upon the table.

"Her photograph," he explained.

The face was that of a young woman who possessed more than ordinary beauty. A wealth of brown tresses covered a shapely head, and frank eyes gazed at one from the face of a woman of refinement.

The telephone signaled and Gordon took down the receiver.

"Mail?" "Send it up," he ordered.

He stepped outside the door and returned bearing a single letter. Silently he held it out to me and said briefly, "It's from her."

The envelope was addressed in rather a pretty girlish hand and bore a Chicago postmark.

"Open it," I suggested.

He looked steadily at me for several seconds, took the letter from my outstretched hand, turned it over, and then broke the seal.

Eagerly I watched his face as he read. His hands shook and his face paled. As he finished, the letter fluttered from his fingers and fell to the floor.

"Jim," he said, and his voice trembled with emotion, "I'm a fool." Tears glistened in his splendid gray eyes, as he gathered the note from the floor and placed it in my hands. "Read it," he requested.

Mechanically I took the letter, spread out the pages and read:

"Chicago, ——.

"My Dear Husband—

"Twice, Roy, have I mailed letters to you, only to have them returned unopened. You have given a loving heart small chance of explaining what you deemed my unfaithfulness. Roy, why did you reach such a nasty conclusion? I meant to tell you that day when I returned from the city, but you had gone. Can you imagine the grief of a wife who idolized you? You left a note in which you accused me of a violation of our sacred ties. Roy, my husband, if you had but given me a chance to tell ere this what I write below! The day you were called to the city I received a message from my brother Jack, of whom I had never told you, for reasons that follow. He had been a trusted clerk in the office of a wealthy Chicago concern. A fellow clerk fell ill and Jack, in order to help his friend, who was soon penniless, took a small sum from the firm, fully intending to return it before his shortage was discovered. Circumstances prevented and he was a fugitive. He asked me to meet him on the beach under cover of darkness, as he dared not meet me in the light of day. I met him, as you saw, and gave him what money I had at the time. Roy, do you not see how you have wronged me? MARJORY."

As I finished I turned to the window, that I might conceal my emotion.

"Jim!"

"Dinner waits, gentlemen."

INFLUENCE

Which American Missionary Exercises In Cebu.

New York, June 22.—An American resident in Manila recently made a trip to the Island of Cebu, in the Philippines, and has sent to friends here an interesting account of his meeting with an American missionary on that island and of the influence he exercises over the natives. The missionary spoken of is Rev. Frederick Jansen, who has been stationed in Cebu by the Presbyterian board of foreign missions. After telling of the influence, social and moral, which Mr. and Mrs. Jansen exercise in the city, the Manila resident says: "While I was in Cebu the constabulary (which is the native militia officered by Americans) was obliged to reckon with him. A pueblo way up in the mountains refused to come into the camp and be vaccinated, until they received orders from their pastor, El Senor Heverando Frederico, as he is called. So upon learning this from the officers, Mr. Jansen tramped away up over the mountains, had his people brought into Camp Walker, and told them they should be vaccinated and obey all the laws. He then arranged for a separate camp for the "Protestantes" and they are to have a pueblo of their own until the reconcentrado policy is no longer necessary. This is in the heart of the Pulajane country where the ladrones are out in large companies and yet escaping capture. Nevertheless, the constabulary officers told Mr. Jansen that he was perfectly safe in the mountains, as the Pulajanes seemed all to be his friends. At any rate, they seem to have it understood among them that he is not to be harmed, and as for the real Protestantes in the far-off pueblos, they were perfectly overjoyed to find that their pastor had come out to stand between them and the Pulajanes on the one hand, and an undue harshness of the constabulary on the other."

WAGES PAID IN GERMANY

Lower Than In England But American Wages Higher.

London, June 22.—In an address last week Bonar Law, one of the great statistical authorities of the British empire, contrasts wages in England with wages paid in Germany. Bonar Law, who is not only one of the members of parliament, but who is also parliamentary secretary of the board of trade, said that certain newspapers and orators were never tired of pointing out that wages in Germany were lower than in England. This was true; but they forgot to point out that they were higher in America than in Great Britain to a much greater extent than wages in the United Kingdom were above those of Germany.

It was to be remembered that the industrial competition between nations was in the nature of a race, and it was necessary to take into account, not only the point from which they started. Compare the countries from that point of view. Liszi, the German economist, whose book was published about the time that the corn laws were abolished, stated that wages in Germany were only about a fourth of what they were in England. That that was not so much of an exaggeration was borne out by the first fiscal blue book, which showed that during these sixty years the wages of Krupp's workmen in this country had advanced only about 25 per cent. The rate of wages also was not the sole consideration; for what was the use of having a high rate of wages if employment could not be obtained. There were two ways by which the position in Germany and this country could be compared in this respect. One method was the trade union returns, and it must be borne in mind that Germany was the only country where such returns could be compared with those of this country, for in Germany, as here, the men returned as unemployed were only those who received out-of-employment benefits from their societies.

Returns from the societies for the end of March this year showed that in Germany the number of trade unionists giving returns was 782,000, and in the United Kingdom at the same date the number returned was 578,000, and the percentage unemployed was 5.6. From these figures it follows that among skilled workmen four more men out of every hundred were looking in vain for employment than was emigration. Until the fiscal system in Germany was changed by Prince Bismarck, the number of emigrants from the German empire exceeded 100,000 per annum, and was, indeed, nearly as great as from this country. In 1903 the number of emigrants from the United Kingdom was 147,000, whereas from the German empire, with a population of 50 per cent greater, the number was only 35,000.

SNOWBALL HIT GIRL

Last Winter and She Still Is Unconscious.

Braddock, Pa., June 21.—A boy threw a snowball last December at Tina House, aged 14, and struck her in the head. She was taken to the Mercy hospital, Pittsburg, and is still there. An operation was performed the early part of the week for a fractured skull.

Her condition since last December has puzzled noted physicians and surgeons from various portions of the country. She would be insane at times, and for other periods she would be unconscious, and lost flesh at an alarming rate. After being in the hospital almost a fortnight the surgeons have found her skull was fractured toward the back of the head. She is still unconscious.

COMES TO CLOSE

Visiting Delegates of Episcopal Convocation Complete Business.

Enjoy Day In Boat Rides And Seeing the Sights.

All the business of the convocation of the Episcopal church of the diocese of Duluth was transacted at a session held at St. Paul's church yesterday afternoon, leaving today free for the clergy and visiting lay delegates to enjoy the sights of the city.

This the visitors have been doing in the fullest sense this morning and this afternoon. From boat rides on the bay, trips down Park Point, a visit to the aerial bridge, to street car rides out to Lester park, the visitors have been having a good time.

This evening the tenth annual convocation for this district will come to a close with a very pleasing social session at the bishop's residence, where the delegates from outside the city will be entertained by Bishop and Mrs. Morrison. The reception will also be for the churchmen of Duluth.

This afternoon a boat ride is being taken about the bay and lake, the visiting delegates, clergymen and lay members, being the guests of the resident members of the church.

At the opening of the business session yesterday afternoon Bishop Morrison read an invitation from the Commercial club extending its privilege to the visiting delegates. This was accepted and a vote of thanks was tendered the club for the courtesy.

Reports were read from officers and various committees, pertaining to the church work and progress. Rev. W. S. Bishop, treasurer of the convocation, showed a balance of $2,423.89 in the convocation fund.

A. R. Davidson, G. G. Hartley and J. H. Dight were elected trustees of the diocese, and the following lay delegates were named for the missionary conference of the Sixth missionary district to meet at Denver: Clergy—Rev. Messrs. F. H. Parshall, F. W. Garland, E. C. Coolbaugh and Drs. Ryan and Appleby; laity—W. J. Lyder, F. B. Millard, J. H. Beatty, C. B. Moran, W. H. Davy.

Rev. G. W. Barnes was elected register of the diocese.

Bishop Morrison appointed as a committee on report blanks, F. B. Millard, H. M. Green, A. T. Young and C. E. Kockall and Mr. Millard, J. W. Lyder and J. H. Beaty were chosen a committee to consider the men's thank offering.

The committee on the formation of a clergymen's relief fund is comprised of the three deacons, each of whom is to choose a lay delegate to also act on the committee.

Bishop Morrison appointed Dr. A. W. Ryan, Rev. F. C. Coolbaugh, Rev. W. J. Moody, Rev. H. F. Parshall and Rev. F. M. Garland as a board of examining chaplains.

The business session was attended by twenty-seven clerical and twenty lay delegates.

ARMY STORES SCANDAL

Will Be Investigated By Statutory Committee.

London, June 22.—Under pressure from all sides, Premier Balfour has made a further concession in regard to the investigation into the army stores scandal and today announced in the house of commons that the government would immediately introduce a bill creating a statutory committee to inquire into the scandal. This commission will be armed with powers to compel the attendance of witnesses and enforce penalties for perjury, etc.

No question has excited so much interest in the house in many years. The government was subjected to a perfect hail of queries openly suggesting ministerial responsibility and the government's desire to prevent an investigation.

CLAIM TO THRONE

John Rustgaard Is Direct Descendant of Norwegian Dynasty.

Former Duluth Citizen May Ascend to the Purple.

If John Rustgaard, formerly assistant city attorney under Mayor Truelsen, should ascend the throne of Norway, and get to slashing around with kings and dukes, and emperors, wouldn't the people of Duluth sit up and take notice?

Yet such a contingency is not beyond the bounds of possibility.

When John was selected by his erudite superior as assistant city attorney, it was for his quality of having a "backbone like a telegraph pole," but a few of his friends knew that under that rough exterior there coursed blood that had the blue of a Duluth summer sky faded to a dull grey. In fact he was the triple distilled essence of royalty, descended from a line of ancestors that went back to some place near the time when the maternal ancestor of the human race got too flip with the fruit.

Mr. Rustgaard, when he came to this country, tried to live it down. He became Americanized and the prospects are that he would have lived and died a poor but honest American citizen, if Norway and Sweden had not agreed to disagree.

Then some enterprising reporter on a Minneapolis newspaper lit his pipe and turned John into a real, live claimant for the throne of Norway.

Mr. Rustgaard may have had an inkling of the future. Perhaps he had consulted a medium, or perhaps he just had a "hunch," for at any rate he left Duluth several years ago for the Klondike, and on his return is believed to have buried himself some place in the wilds of the far West.

And now just because he had such an unfortunate taste in his choice of ancestors, Mr. Rustgard finds himself faced with the horrible possibility of being hauled from his peaceful and retired life in the wild West, and forced to assume the purple and the cares of royalty.

There is a rift in the clouds, however. The hope that leavens all human trouble is not denied Duluth's famous son in his time of storm and stress. Norway may decide to relegate her kings and queens and princes to the scrap heap along with other relics of barbarous times, and assume the enlightened condition of a genuine republic. In such a case Mr. Rustgard might return and run for president, and still die an honest man.

But whatever happens, the good sense of the Duluth people will be vindicated. They recognized in the lined descendant of the old Norwegian dynasty a man who was sharp enough, and honest enough to be the assistant city attorney, and even his kingly ancestors were not sufficient to prent the proper honor being shown him.

But if Norway decides to become a kingdom, and if the king is chosen from the descendants of the old dynasty, and if John Rustgaard should prove to be the most direct in succession, the good Duluth citizen will go home some evening, and read to his wife how King John went up to King Edward, and slapping him on the back exclaimed: "Hello, Eddie, how's your good health?" Then will come the answer telegraphed to every corner of the globe, "Fine. How's yourself, Jack?"

And even— the mind stands aghast at the possibility, but it is not beyond the range of human comprehension—Richard Harding Davis may be sent to interview the new monarch, and the whole world will then ring with the knowledge of just what King John had for breakfast. But here the brain stops, overwhelmed with the prospect, and meanwhile John is quietly pursuing the even tenor of his way in the Western country, doubtless content to live and die an American citizen.

A PARADE OF AUTOMOBILES

Duluth Club Will Hold Banquet Next Monday Evening.

The banquet of the Duluth Automobile club, postponed on account of the accident which recently befell W. J. Stevenson while out in his car, will be held next Monday evening at the Commercial club, Mr. Stevenson, who is to act as toastmaster, having recovered from his injuries.

Preceding the banquet, which will begin at 6:30 o'clock, there will be an automobile parade, participated in by all of the machines in the city, thirty-five or forty in number. It will start at Ninth avenue east and Superior street, and will proceed east on Superior street to Twenty-third avenue, where it will turn about and head for the down-town district. The electric machines will lead, the gasolines will come next, and the steamers will bring up the rear. There are more gasoline cars than any other kind. None of the autos will be decorated.

Plates will be laid for about forty at the banquet. Some people from the outside will be in attendance.

SUDDEN ENDING OF CONTEMPT CASES

Milwaukee, June 22.—Proceedings in the contempt cases against a number of supervisors came to an abrupt ending, today, in Judge Brazee's court, with the understanding that the committee of supervisors would like to take further steps looking to an investigation of alleged corruption among its own members which would interfere with the work of the grand jury. The jury began its work of investigation of alleged corruption today. A large number of indictments is expected before the jury completes its hearing.

DEATH OF MRS J. J. EKLUND

Wife of Prominent Physician Dies After Four Days' Illness.

Mrs. Nanny Asp Eklund, wife of Dr. J. J. Eklund, died at St. Luke's hospital this morning at 3:35 o'clock, after a brief illness. She was 40 years of age. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence, 13 East Third street, and services will also be held at the First Swedish Lutheran church, corner of Second avenue west and Second street, at 2:30 p. m. They will be conducted by Rev. Carl Solomonson.

The announcement of Mrs. Eklund's death comes as a surprise to her friends, for it was believed that she was on the road to recovery. There was a sudden turn for the worse yesterday, however, and in spite of all that could be done to increase her vitality no improvement could be noted in her condition. Up to last Saturday evening she had been in excellent health since she was operated on for a tumor four years ago. Saturday night she was taken violently ill. Dr. C. A. Stewart and Dr. A. J. Braden were called in and they did everything possible to alleviate her sufferings. By Monday the attending physicians had relieved her of nearly all pain and distress, and it was believed that an operation could be avoided. Monday night the illness was again aggravated and it was decided that her only chance for life was to have an operation performed.

Accordingly the patient was removed to St. Luke's hospital Tuesday morning, and at 11 o'clock she was operated upon. The operation was pronounced a successful one, for almost immediately Mrs. Eklund began to show signs of improvement, and she steadily grew better until about 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, when there was another turn for the worse. She was conscious up to within an hour of the end, and toward the last she did not appear at all distressed or worried.

Mrs. Eklund, who was Miss Nanny Asp before marriage, was born at Bottnaryd, Kronobergs Lan Sweden, August 25, 1865. She came to America with her parents when very young, and resided with them at St. Peter, Minn., until her marriage with Dr. Eklund in November, 1888, when she removed to Duluth with her husband. At St. Peter she was a prominent member of the Swedish Lutheran church and in Duluth has always been a leader in the work of the First Swedish Lutheran church, faithful and active in all duties connected with the institution. For several years she was secretary of the Ladies' Aid society, and filled the position with credit and honor. Quiet and unassuming, but with a kind heart and cheery smile, she had many friends, and her friendship was valued highly by those who were privileged to know her. Besides being secretary of the Ladies' Aid society, she acted as Sunday school teacher, and the children were devoted to her. She took great pride in her home, and her home life is said to have been ideal.

Besides her husband she is survived by one son, William, fifteen years of age, and a father and sister, who reside at St. Peter. They are expected to arrive in the city today.

QUICK WORK BY POLICE

Stolen Valise Is Recovered Before It Is Missed.

Quick work on the part of the police department yesterday afternoon resulted in the arrest of a thief and the restoration of the stolen property before the owner knew it was missing.

While walking along Superior street yesterday, Chief Troyer noted a man carrying a valise. The chief knew the man and suspected something was wrong. He followed him to the Union depot, where the man opened the valise and began to examine its contents. The chief immediately placed him under arrest, and at headquarters it was found that the valise was the property of J. E. Finland of Proctor. He was informed of the theft, and, after a search, discovered he had lost the valise.

The thief, who gave his name as James Weaver, pleaded guilty to petty larceny and was given a thirty-day sentence this morning.

NO ENTRANCE FEE

For Duluth Autos at the St. Paul Carnival.

St. Paul, June 22.—The fine drying weather of the early part of this week had a wonderful effect on the country roads of Minnesota and with the continuance of such weather travel to St. Paul in all sections of the 1905 St. Paul anto carnival tour will be very pleasant. Entries along the Chicago-St. Paul section of the tour have been fully up to expectations, but the interest in the other section has not been as great as the committee would have liked to see. On this account the Chicago Automobile club and the automobile club of St. Paul have decided to waive claim to the $10 entrance fee and allow the automobilists who wish to make the run to St. Paul to do so and take advantage of the arangements that have been made so far without any fee at all.

This arrangement applies, of course, to all the routes except the one over which the Chicago cars will travel. Duluth, Grand Forks, St. Cloud, Fergus Falls and other places off the Chicago-St. Paul route are included in the latest ruling.

Robert W. Spangler, the official inspector of the Chicago Automobile club, arrived in St. Paul after a careful examination of the roads of the main section. He reported that the drying weather had produced a marvelous effect on the roads and that a few days more like those of the early part of this week would put them in the best possible shape. The official maps will be ready for distribution next week.

LEAD THE SIMPLE LIFE.

Dwellers Out Doors Find Health In Riviera.

Geneva, June 21.—The curious and romantic looking followers of the simple life who have attracted so much interest on the Riviera, and particularly at Mentone and Nice, during the winter, have, with the warmer weather, begun to move their camp into Northern Italy, and, near Como, there is an increasing colony of these strange people who seem well supplied with money, and who are now in search of a secluded and favorable estate on which to form a new garden of Eden.

As the Simple Livers wear no clothing beyond sandals and one long, flowing, toga-like white gown of light woolen fabric, and as they spend almost all of their lives in the open air, they will probably settle down in one of the warm sheltered villages near Lake Como, where the rigors of winter are not too severe.

The queer little commonwealth has been joined by all kinds of people, including Englishmen, Germans, French and Russians.

The men wear long hair and picturesque beards, while the women, robust and the picture of vigor and health, have an almost Amazonian appearance. They pass their lives in the open air and when compelled, as during some of the recent severe weather, to sleep in houses, they remove doors, windows, carpets and curtains and sleep with scarcely any covering, on a hard simple mattress.

They bathe at least twice a day, are strict believers in vegetarianism, and an uncooked food diet; their drink is water, and as far as can be ascertained, they are one and all free thinking Christians.

Of their family histories and past positions in the world they do not speak, though among them are persons of undoubted distinction. They claim to be the healthiest and most rational livers on the earth, and declare that all who desire to escape disease and unhappiness are bound in time to join their ranks and adopt their rules, which are those of nature and Christ.

One member of the band, a well-educated German, named Paul, says that four years ago he was given up by the best physicians of Europe with not another year to live. He adopted the Simple Life as his last chance, rambled in the sunshine, in the fields and forests, over the mountains and Alpine pastures, sleeping at night under trees or sheltered by rocks throughout the entire summer, and when winter came, instead of dying he felt full of vigor and new life.

WOODMEN PARADE.

Over 10,000 Turn Out In Milwaukee Procession.

Milwaukee, June 22.—Today's session of the head camp, Modern Woodmen of of America, was devoted to memorial services in memory of John W. White of Rock Falls, Ill., a former attorney general and neighbor of the society.

Several resolutions were offered and referred to the proper committees.

The selection of the city for the next convention was to have come up today, but was put over until tomorrow. Peoria seems to have the lead in the race for the honor, although Detroit, Buffalo and Cincinnati are still making claims.

The afternoon was given over to the great Woodmen parade, when over 10,000 members of the society turned out.

Judge Dibell Renders Judgment Against Northern Lumber Company.

Judge Dibell has filed findings in the alleged trespass action brought by Hans Johnson against the Northern Lumber company and others, in which judgment for $1,163.04, with interest at 6 per cent from Jan. 1, 1903, is rendered in favor of Johnson against the lumber company and other defendants.

Johnson claimed that the company or its agents removed a quantity of pine, tamarack, balsam and cedar from his lands in section 7-68-14, in which locality the company also owned lands. The court fixes the amount of timber illegally taken at 232,668 feet and its value at $5 per 1,000 feet.

IS IT WORTH WHILE?

A terrible price has been paid by humanity for the reduction in running time of passenger trains between Chicago and New York.

The Twentieth Century limited on the Lake Shore railroad ran into an open switch at Mentor, Ohio, last evening, while speeding at the rate of seventy miles an hour. More than a score of lives will pay the forfeit, and many more passengers were terribly injured. The engine and part of the train piled into the ditch in a heap, cars crashed into the station, the ruins of which buried them, and to add the horrors of fire to the horrors of the wreck, the wreckage that pinioned helpless, shattered victims began to burn.

The Associated Press reports say that the train "was behind time, and the greatest of speed was being made to make up the lost time."

Nobody can read the horrible details of this indescribable calamity without pausing, sick and horrified, to ask:

"Is it worth while?"

Is it worth while that a single life should pay the price of shaving the running time between the two great cities? Is it fair that the lives of passengers and employes should be offered up as a sacrifice on the altar of modern business rivalry? Would it not, indeed, be better that the trip should be made at a snail's pace, rather than that such horrors as this should be possible?

The railroads running between Chicago and New York have been striving to see which can make the trip in the shortest time. Cut to eighteen hours, one railway magnate calmly announces that his road will make it in seventeen. Another responds that in that event his trains will cut it to sixteen.

Then somebody leaves a switch open, and with all the hideous force generated by the momentum of seventy miles an hour, one of those beautiful, bewildering trains is smashed into a heap of burning wreckage, and the groans of the dying go up to heaven to bear horrid testimony against the greed and unholy rivalry that produces such conditions.

Is it worth while?

THE ARMISTICE.

Should the Jap be blamed for continuing his advance on Vladivostok, when the peace negotiations now in hopeful progress will be seriously menaced by that move?

The situation is curious and anomalous. The victorious Jap and the whipped Russ have each met half way the advances of President Roosevelt toward patching a peace. The Russ because he is badly beaten and wants to save what he can while he can save anything, and the Jap because he is sated even with victory, and is willing to see the end of the contest; for different reasons and for the same reason—weariness of war—both are willing for peace, if not anxious.

At the same time, over in Manchuria, Oyama is ready to deal the final, crushing blow that would end the rule of Russia in Manchuria and remove from Japan's elbow a dangerous neighbor. With a superior force, with a superior fighting spirit, with the momentum of previous victories, Oyama is ready to close in and capture Vladivostok. Should the Jap abandon that situation, and leave Russia with one foot still in Manchuria? Can she even afford to stand still while peace negotiations are in progress? Will not her army lose something of its strength in the months of idleness? Will not Russia have a chance to reinforce her position quietly? Even if she promises not to, have previous experiences with her justified a belief in her good faith? If peace negotiations approach a climax, and the settlement of Russia's position in the East is reached, would not the fact that she still holds Vladivostok give her the right to claim a foothold in Manchuria?

No doubt the continuation of the Vladivostok campaign will imperil the prospects of the peace negotiations. But looking at it from the Japanese viewpoint, peace or no peace, there is but one thing to do: go in and finish Russia's conquest in Manchuria, tear off the last clinging claw of the bear, and then, with Russia possessed of a long line of railroad ending nowhere, and the danger of her nearness removed, Japan could talk about peace with still better reason for expecting to get what she demanded.

NORWAY AND SWEDEN.

Apparently nothing further remains to be done in the division of the sister Scandinavian nations than to settle a few formalities and arrange a new basis of relationship between the two countries. The hopes of those who looked forward to a peaceable ending of the difficulty are therefore not to be disappointed, and the world will again applaud the temperateness and coolness of the two nations that have been able to pass through such a crisis without the spilling of a drop of blood.

The attitude of Sweden appears to be more of sorrow than of anger. The king, apparently, recognizes that it will be best under all the circumstances for the division to take place. He regrets to see it, of course, and it can hardly be that the parting of the ways is wholly void of tender regrets on either side. No matter how determined Norway may be to end the present union, and no matter how much justification there may be in her action, there are years of friendly association to look back upon, which can hardly be forgotten.

Since the union was attended by bickerings, however slight, it is perhaps well that the division has come. As allied, neighborly nations it is not improbable that after the first bitterness of the separation wears away they will be more friendly than before. Talk of separation not long ago bred fears that division would give Russia a chance for which she has been looking. For one thing, Russia now appears to be past oppression of foreign nations for a while. For another, there appears to be no reason why even under present conditions these two countries should not form an alliance that would present even a more united front to the oppressor than did the union.

Recognition of Norway by the United States and other countries need not be longer delayed. Sweden herself will recognize her shortly, and there is now no reason why every nation should not accord her the courtesy of exchanging ministers. Then comes the most interesting feature of the incident—the political future of Norway. Will she be accorded a king from the house of Bernadotte, and rest contentedly under the rule of a limited monarchy, or will her people insist upon the establishment of a republic? With a huge sigh of relief at the passing of all danger of bloodshed, the world will turn with interest to watch the developments of Norway's new government.

THE ROYAL ARCANUM.

A Milwaukee dispatch to The Herald the other evening told how a member of the Royal Arcanum had come out in an open letter attacking the methods employed by the officers of that order, and charging that the scheme to change the rates is fraudulent. These, among others, were the charges made in this man's letter.

The case of the Royal Arcanum is of great importance not only because of the strength of this society, but because it appears to be just what old line insurance people have always claimed must be the ultimate action of the fraternal insurance concerns. The society's first method of collecting was to impose an assessment upon each member based upon his age when he joined the society. There was no limit to the number of assessments, but when the society was first organized, as its membership was made up of men under middle age, the assessments were few. This made very cheap insurance, and naturally the society, like all similar ones, grew rapidly in popularity. It had social advantages, too, and so far as the outside world knows, its financial affairs appear to have been honestly and competently administered.

This is the theory of the change in the Arcanum's methods: It's membership grew older, and as they did the death rate increased. As the society had no reserve fund, the payment of death benefits had to fall heavier upon the members, unless new members enough could be acquired to keep the rate down, and this grew steadily a more difficult task. In the old line companies a man pays more than his insurance is worth at the start, but it is different in the assessment companies, where he pays what it is worth only at the start, and later the new members have to pay part of the expense of carrying his insurance.

A year or two ago, the supreme council of the Royal Arcanum determined to fix a definite number of assessments yearly, and to make them large enough not only to pay the death benefits but to create an emergency fund. This was done, but it was not sufficient. The death rate is still increasing among the older members, and the supreme council believes that the old method was founded on a false basis. Hence the decision to make a change in its system of assessments. It is claimed that it is necessary, as under the old system $2,000,000 could not be made to pay benefits of $2,500,000 to $3,000,000.

The experience of the Arcanum, however true or false these theories may be, will be watched with interest by all of the newer societies who have not yet reached the stage in their history at which the Arcanum finds itself.

HOW TRIFLES COUNT.

A Bridgeton, New Jersey, widow died recently, leaving an estate of $25,000 which she accumulated in a manner that shows that the day of fortunes made up of pennies has not gone by, as many people seem to believe.

Her estate is in the courts, but that has nothing to do with the lesson. What is material is the fact that she died leaving $25,000, and the manner in which she acquired this comfortable fortune.

For thirty-five years this woman had conducted a small candy shop near a public school. Her principal patrons, in fact practically all of her patrons, were the children that attended that school. Their purchases were mostly in penny lots, and one that bought a nickel's worth of candy was something of a little plutocrat. Yet they were the sole source of her income. In the three decades and a half of her business career, the profits on these penny sales had mounted up until at her death she was worth $25,000. In the meantime she had lived, frugally, of course, but she had lived, and she had never been hungry. Her tastes were modest, and her dress and fare were of the plainest, yet she lived happily and slowly but steadily accumulated a fortune.

In these days when the pennies are ridiculed, and the "get-rich-quick" fever is raging violently, it is wholesome to hear of such an instance as this. It shows that in spite of the enormous fortunes that are wrested out of the vortex of fevered finance, the old-fashioned, wholesome way of getting rich by living within one's income and saving the pennies is still the best way and the surest.

Hotel Gossip.

"I am on my way up into the Pike lake country on a fishing trip," said Charles Loos of Fort Wayne, Ind., at the McKay. "I am not going to Pike lake itself, for that is visited so often by city people that the sport offered there is not so good as in some of the smaller lakes a few miles away. There are some of these that are scarcely ever fished. They are known to only a few city people, and as they have no boats on them, it is necessary to carry your craft along with you, so it is likely that there will be good fishing in these places for some little time to come. I expect to land some nice black bass.

"Indiana is pretty well settled up, but there is still good fishing in some of the lakes down there. I probably wouldn't be up here at this time, only I have the chance of visiting relatives at the same time I am in the Northern Minnesota country. I would rather go after black bass than anything else. Different fishermen have different bait for the bass, but my favorite is an imitation minnow, with fifteen hooks attached. Casting with this I get better results than any other way. I never had any success trolling for bass. A good many people think frogs the best bait going, but I do not find them equal to the imitation minnow. If you have the right make you are pretty certain of success, provided there are any fish to bite."

"I shall never forget a scare I had while I was expressman in a little jerkwater town out West about ten years ago," said A. R. Shroder of St. Paul at the St. Louis. "There were days when I had a lot of money in the office, and sometimes I would have to keep it over night. When this occurred I always planned just what I would do if robbers tried to take the cash away from me. The plans pointed to trouble for the robbers, but whether the trouble would really have developed or not I never had an opportunity of knowing. One night, however, something did nearly happen.

"When it came time to close up the office I had $300 in cash. There had been several robberies the preceding week in that vicinity, and I was even more on my guard than usual. I worried a lot over the money, and had a hard time trying to decide what I had best do with it that night. There would be no chance to send it out by train before the next day. Finally I concluded that I would guard it with my life, if necessary, and patting myself on the back for my heroism, I took the cash to my room at the close of business hours and hung around pretty close until bed time. My roommate had left town that morning to go up the country, saying he would not be back until the next day or the day after, and I knew if anything did turn up I would have to fight it out myself.

"My room was without a lock. I don't suppose there was a lock in the whole town. This made the situation worse. Earlier than my usual time for retiring I began to make preparations for the night. Over $200 of the money was in silver, and I thought it would be a good idea to make this aid in my defense. First I placed a long bench directly in front of the closed door, and on the end of this I stacked up the silver, in piles several inches in height. The floor had no carpet on it, and I figured that the falling money would make such a racket that it would wake me up, and besides this it would take the robbers some time to pick it up, so the chances of their being caught, if I were put out of the game, would be good. I also braced a chair against the door, and then drew my bed in front of the pile at the side of the bed farthest from the door I placed a small stand to hold my two revolvers. After all this was done I felt reasonably certain that I would be able to furnish entertainment for anyone who might try to enter the room.

"These preparations took up some little time, and when they were complete I had worked myself into such a state of excitement that it was not easy to go to sleep. In the course of three or four hours, however, I dozed off, and soon afterwards was sleeping soundly. About 3 o'clock I was awakened by a noice at the door. I stealthily reached for a revolver, but before I could lay my hands on it the door swung open with a crash, and my bed was slid along the floor for several feet. Of course the stand and revolvers toppled over, and were lost in the darkness. The falling silver made a great old racket, and altogether the noise was sufficient to scare away an ordinary burglar. I quickly leaped out of bed and began to feel about for the guns, determined to begin firing operations at once, but before my hands came in contact with either one of them the man who had created all the disturbance began to laugh and struck a match. By its light I saw my roommate standing before me. He had returned sooner than expected, and to give me a little scare had made this informal entrance. I had my scare all right. I have often wondered since just what would have happened if I had gotten hold of a revolver before they fell to the floor."

Love of Titles.

Boston Herald: An American journalist, returning after an absence of some years abroad, comments upon the profuse application of titles which is becoming frequent in this country. The practice is essentially a modern one. Daniel Webster in his lifetime was never spoken of as "Senator" Webster, but always as plain "Mr." Webster. Nowadays, however, it is invariably "Senator" this and that; and almost everybody has some kind of a handle to his name. Thus we have "Forecaster" Jones, "Undertaker" Smith, "Conductor" Robinson, "Superintendent of the Poorhouse" Brown, "Common Councilman" Shucks and "Selectman" Bumps, and so on. If this kind of thing keeps on, we shall end by resting our claims to respect and consideration upon those painfully minute social distinctions which prevail in Germany, where men or women inscribe their names in hotel registers with the addition of such descriptive phrases as "cousin to an apothecary," or "brother-in-law to a corporal."

The Weather.

The day opened with a sky of clearest, cleanest, brightest blue, unmarred by the faintest shadow of fleeting cloud. The wind was light, with perhaps a touch of the East in its breath, and the sun shone brightly and delightfully. Over in the west the moon hung high in the heavens, pale and dissipated after a night out, in hopeless competition with the sun. The features of the day spelled perfection, and the heart of nature seemed rejoicing in the heyday of the year's adolescence. There are twelve months of varied climatic delights and incidents, but there is only one June, and it is only in June that such days as this can be.

It may not be so pleasant tonight and tomorrow, according to the weather man's view of it, but then it will be just as well to have the bad weather tomorrow in order to have a pleasant Saturday afternoon and Sunday. It will be cooler tonight, the weather man thinks, with fresh to brisk winds from the northeast, and there may be showers.

It was cooler this morning in the western lake region, the Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri valleys, and warmer in the Rocky mountain districts and the Northwest. Showers fell over the western lake region, the Red River valley, the far Northwest, the Platte and Ohio valleys, North Atlantic and Gulf states. The barometer is low over Northwestern states and from Western Montana southward to Arizona. In the lake region the winds were northerly and fresh except Chicago, where they were brisk.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, June 22.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Friday: Wisconsin—Fair and cool tonight, except warmer in west portion. Friday increasing cloudiness and warmer.

Minnesota—Probably showers tonight and Friday. Warmer tonight in south and west portions.

North Dakota and South Dakota—Showers tonight and Friday. Warmer tonight.

Upper Lakes—Fresh northerly winds becoming variable tonight and Friday. Generally fair weather.

SUNDAY BASEBALL.

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory in New York American: Down at Sheepshead Bay Sunday there was a game of baseball, and in the same field, not a hundred yards away from the diamond, there was an open-air religious service.

The man of God had an audience of thirty-three, while more than 3,000 attended the game of ball.

What does this mean?

It means that the people around Sheepshead Bay prefer baseball to the Gospel.

No other conclusion is possible.

If it had been the other way, the figures would have been reversed, and there would have been 3,000 at the religious meeting and thirty-three at the diamond.

How shall we explain this preference of baseball to the Gospel?

Is it because the people around Sheepshead Bay are wicked?

I think not.

What then, is the explanation we are seeking?

Simply this—the people in the Sheepshead Bay region enjoy the game of baseball, and as Sunday is the only day on which they can see the game, they take it in in preference to attending religious services.

It does not follow that the three thousand people who went to witness the game of ball instead of going to hear the Rev. Mr. Gray preach were depraved. Many of them, doubtless, were as clean in their thought and living as were those who listened to the sermon.

After being shut up all the week in the stuffy air of mill, shop and office and held down to the rigid discipline of business, they felt the need of the green fields and fresh breezes, the light and liberty of the great Out of Doors; and that, I suppose, is why they chose the fun of the game of ball in preference to the disquisition on theology.

This is not to say that religion is not a good and great thing. In my opinion religion is the best and greatest thing in the world. But this is far from saying that baseball, or the love of seeing baseball, is a bad thing.

Personally I lament the spiritual stupidity which dims our vision of the Divine—just as I abominate that other stupidity which will not see that oftentimes the Divine is right about us in the wholesome sports which gladden the heart.

Rule for the Home.

Harper's Weekly: One of the necessary rules for an orderly family life is that every member of the family shall be free to absent himself whenever he feels like it and whenever his absence does not interfere with the rights of the rest of the family. And this rule ought to be especially insisted upon for the wife and mother. She ought to give her house a rest now and then by getting out of it, and breeze herself up by a little flight in the open. When she comes back, be sure she will be welcomed—or if she is not, then it is because she has not stayed long enough and the family has not yet got over feeling relieved. The husband ought to be allowed to go hunting and fishing without a sigh or a cling; the young boys should be free to visit, and even, when possible, to camp out in charge of some safe, unobtrusive man; the young girls too, of course. It is good to know that there are camps for girls now in the Adirondacks, in charge of Vassar teachers, where they can get the good of the wilderness in perfect safety. The wise house mother will see to it, as far as she is able, in these ways and a thousand others, that home, while a place of rest and also of duties, shall never become a prison.

Excitement and Health.

Atchison Globe: It is found that there is so little sickness in Louisville, Ky., annually at this season of the year as to be remarkable, and the fact is attributed to the races. Excitement tends to keep down a great deal of sickness. This is an established fact among physicians all over the world. The people get excited and interested and forget their aches and pains. One reason why old age is attended by so many ills is that as one grows older there is little going on that excites or interests. In Kentucky towns where there are no races there is as much sickness at this period as at any other.

Memphis News-Scimitar: Teddy is perfectly willing to bring them together for the purpose of talking it over, but very wisely refuses to umpire the game.

Bjet Your Bjoots He Does.

Chicago Tribune: It is reassuring, however, to learn that Bjornstjerne Bjornson cjordially indjorses the new mjovement of his cjountrymen.

Twenty Years Ago.

Burglars have lately entered or attempted to enter the residences of H. E. Long, Mr. Coburn, W. W. Spalding, Townsend Hoopes, J. J. Wilkinson and several others. Mr. Spalding saluted his visitors with pistol shots, but without any injury as far as known. On Tuesday night Mrs. Moore's house was entered, and Raymond Moore's pocketbook was taken from his pants and left empty in the hall below. It contained only $2.50. That same night the plants in the yard of F. J. Marsh were stolen.

At a recent meeting of the board of education notices of acceptances of the positions to which they were elected were received from Miss Hattie Gray and Miss Bessie Laythe. Miss Fannie Holden was elected a teacher, but not assigned to any special position. The resignation of Supt. Stultz was accepted, to take effect at the end of the school year. Permission was given to the German Lutheran church to occupy a room in the old High School building during July and August at a rental of $10 per month.

The Powder River Cattle company sent a man out West last week to select from their herds a cargo of cattle for shipment direct to England. The cattle will start for their long water voyage from the Northern Pacific dock here.

Miss Murdock starts for her home in Wabash on Monday to spend the summer vocation.

Mrs. W. C. Eyster has been in such poor health the last few weeks that she has decided to try the effects of another climate, and will leave for Northern Pennsylvania next week.

The failure of Cody Bros., hotel keepers at Tower, hits some of our Duluth merchants. George Benz & Co. are interested to the amount of $600; S. Levy, $200; J. H. Winterfield, cigars, $200; Silberstein & Bondy, carpets, $300. Winterfield and Silberstein went to Tower to see if they could save anything out of the wreck.

Leonard F. Wheelock, one of the oldest residents of Superior, committed suicide on Wednesday night by drowning himself in the Nemadji river. It is supposed that business troubles had unsettled his mind.

PASSING PLEASANTRIES.

Cleveland Leader: "Wot did yer tell de judge?"

"Dat everybody wuz tryin' to keep me down."

"An' wot did he do?"

"Sent me up."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "What did Van Osler say the fish weighed?"

"Thirty-two pounds and four ounces. He says he weighed it himself."

"Let's see—what's Van Osler's business?"

"He's a retail coal dealer."

"Huh!"

Chicago Tribune: "Pardon my boldness, Miss Cumleigh, but there is the loveliest dimple in your cheek when you smile."

"You are just saying that to flatter me, Mr. Jollius!"

Then she smiled entrancingly at him.

Sunshine: Judge (impatiently interrupting a lawyer's carefully selected citations)—Can't you take it for granted that I understand an ordinary point of law?

Lawyer (cooly)—Your honor, that's the mistake I made in the lower court, where I lost my case.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Did the bride feel very much depressed because it rained on her wedding day?"

"Not at all. Her father sells rain coats and she is his only child."

New York Sun: Walter—Haven't you forgotten something, sir?

Professor—Yes, I can't remember in what year Charlemagne was crowned, can you?

Cleveland Leader: Gwen—Goodness! Isn't Dora the silly thing?

Gertie—I think she is a genius.

Gwen—For mercy's sake, how does she show it?

Gertie—Well, she can wear a twenty-inch corset on a twenty-six inch waist for one thing. Can you?

Philadelphia Catholic Standard: "O, yes, Mr. Meekton and Miss Gabbie are very fond of each other."

"Why, I heard he didn't speak to her."

"That's just why she likes him. He doesn't attempt to get a word in edgewise."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS

Crookston Journal: Burbank is a wizard with plants, but any man can turn weeds to orange blossoms by a few words to a widow.

Fairbault Journal: Lincoln Steffens says that Tom Johnson has made Cleveland the best governed city in the United States. Tom will probably buy 100 copies of McClure's magazine to distribute where they will do most good, in return for this puff.

Red Wing Republican: Never mind if your baby does talk all the time. He may not be a politician. He might become a barber.

Bemidji Sentinel: As large a question as drainage is too gigantic for the politicians to make a football of. It is an economic question involving the future of a vast empire and people numbered by the tens of thousands.

Princeton Union: A few Minneapolis and St. Paul men will probably be greatly surprised some day when they learn that there is a little fringe of Minnesota outside of those two cities.

Eveleth Star: With Virginia stirred with internal dissensions, Chisholm racked with a feud that apparently is to be without end, and with Hibbing sadly afflicted with an unnamed incubus, it follows that Eveleth is the only city on the range pursuing the even tenor of its way and solely seeking development and offering business opportunities. We would advise our neighbors to curb their animosities.

Brainerd Tribune: The dove of peace may be pardoned for a little nervousness when hovering over St. Petersburg.

Albert Lea Standard: There is nothing more inspiring in this big world than the sight of the man who, in the midst of misfortune, keeps a level head, who can be knocked down gracefully and get up smilingly, and who can receive the "slings and arrows of outrageous fortune" without hating the world or despising himself.

Albert Lea Standard: A Minnesota lumberman recently testified that he cuts 225,000,000 feet of lumber a year. What is the use of arbor days.

Fairmont Sentinel: Bailey, of the Britt Tribune, says that Wesley ladies have adopted a new fashion. They tie corn husks to their knees, and when the husks switch together, they sound exactly like the rustle of a silk dress. Now we want Bailey to stand up and explain how in thunder he knows about it.

Princeton Union: All talk of Senator Nelson's not being a candidate again is only guess work. He is not yet ready to drop the senatorial toga.

Albert Lea Sentinel: If some men who badly clamor for justice, really were to get it they wouldn't be able to saw through the bars.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The more agreeable a man is to himself the less he is to others.

There is no use denying that if you kiss a girl's lips too often that nice taste of it rubs off.

Half the pleasure of making up a squabble with some people is the chance to have another.

A widow would give a good deal to know as much about married life as girls think they do.

A woman's clothes are a fine thing to give a man an idea of how much there is in the world he can never understand.

The Journalistic Output.

Portland Oregonian: Mark Twain once said that his average daily output of writing, when he works, is one thousand eight hundred words a day. That is about the average day's work of the newspaper writer on a large daily paper, day in and day out, seven days a week. In the course of a year this amounts to six hundred and fifty-seven thousand words. The ordinary novel contains about one hundred thousand words. The newspaper man writes enough to make a novel of the best selling type every two months, with plenty left over at the end of the year to make another book of very respectable size. Let us suppose that he works at the business forty years; he has written twenty-six million two hundred and eighty thousand words, or two hundred and forty books. Not even Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth could beat that, and yet there are those who imagine that journalism is an easy job.

ORGIA.

Who care for nothing alone is free—
Sit down, good fellow, and drink with me!

With a careless laugh and a merry eye
He laughs at the world as the world goes by.

He laughs at power and wealth and fame,
He laughs at virtue, he laughs at shame;

He laughs at hope, and he laughs at fear;
At memory's dead leaves, crisp and sere;

He laughs at the future, cold and dim—
Nor earth nor heaven is fear to him.

O, that is the comrade fit for me!
He cares for nothing, his soul is free;

Free as the soul of the fragrant wine—
Sit down, good fellow, my heart is thine!

For I heed not custom, creed nor law;
I care for nothing I ever saw.

In every country my cups I quaff,
And over the chalice I riot and laugh.

I laugh, like the cruel and turbulent wave;
I laugh at the church and I laugh at the grave.

I laugh at joy, and well I know
That I merrily, merrily laugh at woe;

I terribly laugh, with an oath and a sneer,
When I think that the hour of death is near.

For I know that death is a guest divine,
Who shall drink my blood as I drink this wine.

And he cares for nothing! a king is he—
Come on, old fellow, and drink with me!

With you I will drink to the solemn past,
Though the cup that I drain shall be my last.

I will drink to the phantoms of love and truth;
To ruined hopes and a wasted youth.

I will drink to the woman who wrought my woe,
In the diamond morning of long ago;

To a heavenly face, in sweet repose,
To the lily's snow and the blood of the rose;

To the splendor, caught from Orient skies,
That thrilled in the dark of her hazel eyes—

Her large eye, wild with the fire of the South,—
And the dewy wine of her warm, red mouth.

I will drink to the thought of a better time;
To innocence, gone like a death-bell chime.

I will dring to the shadow of coming doom;
To the phantoms that wait in my lonely tomb.

I will drink to my soul, in its terrible mood,
Dimly and solemnly understood;

And last of all to the monarch of sin,
Who scaled its ramparts and reigns within.

My sight is fading—it dies a way—
I cannot tell is it night or day.

My heart is burnt and blackened with pain,
And a horrible darkness crushes my brain.

I cannot see you—the end is nigh—
But we'll laugh together before I die.

Through awful chasms I plunge and fall—
Your hand, good fellow—I die—that's all.
—WILLIAM WINTER.

West End Building and Loan Association Gets Decision.

George W. Davis Held Indebted In Amount of About $800.

In the findings yesterday afternoon with the clerk of district court Judge Dibell has settled, so far as that court is concerned, the long litigation that has transpired in the case of the West End Building and Loan association against George W. Davis, Florence A. Davis and others. The court holds that the building and loan association is entitled to a judgment and decree that there is due it at the present time from George W. Davis an indebtedness represented by several bonds, notes and mortgages in the amount of $768.90 and the sum of $75 for attorney's fees. The aggregate amount is held to be valid first lien on lot 8, block 58, Endion division of Duluth and the court directs that the property be sold at sheriff's sale, the proceeds to be applied on the judgment, costs and fees.

The action was based on a transaction taking place in 1892 when Dr. Davis secured $5,000 from the building and loan company on a bond. In 1897 the company began to wind up its affairs and about that time went out of business. An agreement was made that Dr. Davis was to be credited with $1,011.99, leaving a net balance due May 1, 1897, of $2,326.24. By agreement the building and loan company received the rents from the mortgaged property from May 1, 1897, to Oct. 1, 1902, amounting to $2,300 and under this agreement the court finds that the amount received was to be applied on the amount of the debt remaining unpaid.

When the action was instituted about two years ago by the building and loan company, Dr. Davis alleged that he had already paid in more than the amount of the indebtedness and that he did not therefore owe anything and should have clear title to the property affected.

Since the trial the cause of action has been dismissed as to the defendants, D. D. Murray, F. E. Lindahl and John Panton, without prejudice.

With his findings, Judge Dibell makes a lengthy memorandum covering various phases of the questions raised and in which he says:

"After the date when the association ceased to carry out its building and loan plan, the defendant should not be required to pay on a building and loan basis, for the debt should be considered a straight loan on which he should pay interest. On the accounting which I have made, wherein the balance allowed the plaintiff is much less than it claims, the defendant is fairly dealt with.

"In 1892 he had fifty shares of these different series of stock, and with these he obtained a $5,000 loan on a second mortgage. His monthly dues were $90. In the first twenty months he paid only $190. His arrearages continued. His stock was not forfeited. It was allowed to mature, and did mature, as intended, and he was credited with its face value at maturity, receiving the profits which a paying stockholder received.

"To care for his arrearages one device and another was used. Notes were given, a new loan was made. Notes of the amount of $400 of the St. Louis County Agricultural society were accepted at their face. Some of the arrearage was carried as arrearage. All these things were done under a fair agreement of the parties, and the result was that on May 1, 1897, the loan stood as before stated.

"Of course the defendant has paid the plaintiff a large sum of money, but it is thirteen years sincet he loan started, and with arrearage so large and so constant the result could not be otherwise.

"While the building and loan plan was carried out the defendant had its advantages and disadvantages. The contract continued. Since then he has had a simple loan. A foreclosure was not hastened. Probably the defendant wished to save his property. Times were hard. Perhaps the defendant feared the sufficiency of its security. There is now no inequity in subjecting the property to the payment of the amout equitably due on the mortgage debt."

THE OVERFLOW OF THE DAMS

Along the Upper Mississippi Discussed By Maj. Derby.

St. Paul, June 22.—Regarding the report that the overflow of the government dams along the Upper Mississippi has caused considerable damage to property in the northern part of the state, Maj. George McC. Derby said last night:

"The overflowing of the government dams is due to the excessive rains that have prevailed during the last few weeks. The government is doing everything possible to prevent floods. It is utilizing its reservoirs to the fullest capacity. Some of these reservoirs are full and some are not. Of course, when a reservoir is filled, the rain that comes afterwards flows out and causes a flood.

"I receive reports from the government dams every day, and as far as I have been able to learn, the damage to property has not been very great. The worst floods have occurred in the vicinity of Aitkin. The residents of Aitkin have been stricken twice; the first flood ocurred two weeks ago.

"The heavy rains we have had recently are a rather exceptional circumstance. I think the condition at Leech Lake and Lake Winnibigoshish might be relieved if a channel were built connecting the two reservoirs. For instance, the reservoir at Lake Winnibigoshish is about full now, but there is considerable room in Leech lake. If there were a channel between the two reservoirs, the surplus water of one could be turned into the other. I shall probably make a recommendation to the government that such a channel be built."

BRIEF TELEGRAMS

The president has commuted to expire immediately, the sentence of William S. Jewett, who was convicted of misapplication of the funds of the First National bank of Wolfboro, N. H. Jewett was sentenced to imprisonment for seven years which would have expired Sept. 4, 1905. The pardon was granted on account of Jewett's ill health.

The navy department announces that the name of the old cruiser on the Great Lakes has been changed from Michigan to Wolverine. One of the greatest battleships authorized having been given the name Michigan, the department changed the name of the older ship to avoid confusion, giving a name of local color. The new name was suggested by citizens of the state of Michigan.

The trial of United States Senator John H. Mitchell, charged with using his office for private gain in connection with the land frauds in Oregon, began in Judge De Haven's court, Wednesday. For the first time in his life and at the age of three score and ten, Senator Mitchell faced a jury of his peers. United States District Attorney Heney's arraignment of Mitchell was most severe.

After being out more than thirty hours, the jury in the case of Dr. Otto T. Toepel, coroner of Wayne county, Mich., charged with obtaining extra fees from the state under false pretenses, disagreed and was discharged.

RESULTS YESTERDAY.

Winnipeg, 4; Grand Forks, 1.
Crookston, 8; St. Cloud-Brainerd, 3.

GAMES TODAY.

Duluth at Fargo.
St. Cloud-Brainerd at Grand Forks.

After tomorrow the St. Cloud-Brainerd aggregation will exist under another name, unless plans which are now well under way, fall through.

The negotiations for the transfer, which were announced last evening in The Herald, are making good progress, and Thomas Patterson of Superior will leave this evening for St. Cloud and Brainerd to close up the deal.

The team will finish up its series at Grand Forks, play three games at Fargo, and then return home to open the season on the Superior grounds next week.

Some new blood will be injected into the team, with the avowed intention of taking a fall out of the crippled White Sox.

• • •

McShane's place at third base will be filled by Welter, while Frank Summers, local player, will fill in at short stop temporarily. This shift breaks up what was undoubtedly the fastest infield in the league, and will considerably weaken the Champs at a time when all the other teams in the league are being strengthened.

• • •

If Crookston does not get into the game very rapidly, it will be through no lack of new players. McShane will fill a weak spot at third base for the Crooks, Zelder, a fast pitcher from the Three I league, has recently been signed to help out Sorenson, and Capron, an infielder and pitcher has also joined the team. Billy Hock is another new infielder recently signed, and Smith, who pitched yesterday and broke the hoodoo is also a new arrival. Shortstop Kipp, who slammed out a home run yesterday, was playing his first game with the tail enders. The team would not be recognized from the nine that played in Duluth and it should pull up with the van.

• • •

Fargo has secured a new backstop in Frank Corrigan, the old time catcher, who formerly played with the Fargo team under the name of Gilmore. He will catch today against Duluth.

• • •

Grand Forks has signed a new pitcher named Roy Reed, who will pitch against the homeless outcasts today.

WINNIPEG WINS.

Takes Final Game of Grand Forks Series.

Winnipeg, June 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Winnipeg took the final game of the series with Grand Forks by better work on the bases. Spanton was wild at the start, and a timely single by Rogers brought in two runs, which was sufficient to win the game. Hits were bunched in the eighth, scoring two more runs.

Maloney was quite freely, but his support was gilt edged, three double plays being pulled off by the Maroons.

Umpire Egan fined Hanrahan and put him out of the game for using abusive language.

The score:

Winnipeg	2 0 0 0 0 0 0 2 x	4	5	1

BREAKS HOODOO.

Crookston Finally Takes Game From the Twins.

Crookston, June 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The hoodoo is broken—Crookston won a game. The fans in the grand stand and bleachers when the ninth inning was over, and no calamity had befallen the Crooks and the score remained 8 to 3 in favor of the home team, sat speechless. As it was forced home upon them that Crookston had really and truly won a game, all alone and in spite of the umpire their funny bones waxed ticklish and everybody "laffed," rose slowly, evidently loath to leave the place till they had absorbed a double dose of the elation of a victory, and wended their way homewards.

After trudging to the ball park for eight straight days only to see the home team trimmed, it was a pleasant relief. To make it good the locals saw to it that the visitors did not get a look in at any stage of the game. Kipp, the new short stop, demonstrated to a certainty that he will do. He fielded his position well and made a home run with two men on the bags, which gave the fans a touch of high life they have not experienced this season, as, though several home runs have been made before, heretofore, there were no runners on bases. Smith was on the slab for the locals for the first time, having been released from the Fargo team yesterday. He did excellent work, allowing but five hits and they were scattered in as many innings. Had he received good support the Orphans would have been shut out. The locals started their run getting in the second inning when Schlatter hit, Kipp flew out on a fielder's choice, Ludwig drew a base on balls. Fitz flew out, but Sperry singled scoring Ludwig and Schlatter. Smith got first on being hit by a pitched ball and an error by Ronesch on Olson's grounder scored Sperry. Livingstone flew out and the trouble was over.

Zelder scored in the third by a hit, a sacrifice by Schlatter and a hit by Kipp. The locals got no more scores till the eighth, when Olson hit for one bag, Livingstone reached first on Johnson's error. Olson scored on Zelder's single. Schlatter failed to reach first and Kipp at this juncture sent the ball over the right field fence, the first one of the season over that fence, scoring three runs.

The visitors scored in the third, fourth and ninth on singles coupled with errors.

The Orphans will leave this morning for Grand Forks to open a series and Crookston opens a series at Winnipeg and will not return till July 6, when a series of four games will be played here with Grand Forks.

Corrected Standing.

The Northern League standing given today is corrected in accordance with the rulings of President E. H. Kent in regard to the games in which Pitcher Harris played. The correction takes two victories away from Duluth's percentage, and one loss away from both Winnipeg and St. Cloud-Brainerd.

The "yellow pug game" has not yet been passed upon, so it is still allowed to stand.

TEACHING YOUNG

Matters Interesting to Parents Discussed In St. Paul's Church.

Religious Training of Children Is Topic Which All Enjoy.

At last evening's meeting of the Episcopal convocation of the Duluth diocese held at St. Paul's church, four speakers were heard, three of whom spoke on the Sunday school as an important factor in religious work and the fourth who spoke on missions. Rev. Theodore Sedgwick of St. Paul, the last mentioned speaker, is a member of the board of managers of the mission work of the church. Those who spoke on Sunday school work were, in turn, Rev. Edward Haupt of Minneapolis, Rev. Irving B. Johnson of Minneapolis, and Mrs. W. S. Bishop of Duluth.

Rev. Mr. Sedgwick's talk was an appeal for the Episcopallans of the country to take more interest in the mission work and the talks of the other three consisted of urging the development of the Sunday school.

He spoke feelingly of the mission work of the church. Last year the board faced a deficit, and it is to fight a repetition of this that Mr. Sedgwick is speaking again for the missions. He said that the man who thinks the church has no right to meddle with missions is a reincarnation of the Jew who thought that all who were not Jews were dogs. Mr. Sedgwick spoke earnestly of the matter and it was plain to be seen that his heart is in the work of spreading the missions. He urged that Episcopallans should not become diocesan or parochial in their ideas, but should work for the whole church and the spread of the gospel.

Rev. Edward Haupt of Minneapolis spoke on the Sunday school. He asserted, among other things, that the American people boast of their educational system but are too content that it should be solely intellectual with nothing much of moral teaching in it. He claimed that it was recently given as an official opinion by the attorney general of Minnesota that even the Lord's Prayer cannot be given in the schools if there is any objection by anybody. This, Mr. Haupt declared to be religious toleration run to seed.

Mr. Haupt also asserted that in a majority of homes these days there are no family prayers and no religious observances of any kind; the father has ceased to be the priest of his household; so that all the child has to depend upon for religious teaching is the church. The church therefore, claimed Mr. Haupt must establish some system of teaching the child and taking the place of the teaching in the schools and at the home as it must do. Mr. Haupt declared that the church is doing a great systematic work in the boarding schools, but there is really no substitute for the Sunday school. He eulogized the Sunday school and said that but few people have the gratitude they should have for what the Sunday school teachers are doing. Mr. Haupt said that it is easy to forget the importance of the Sunday school, but that it should ever be kept alive.

"There is no panacea for existing conditions" said he, "except hard and persistent effort. Success in the Sunday school must be worked for."

Rev. Irving B. Johnson of Gethsemane church of Minneapolis, spoke on the teaching of the catechism to the children. He claimed that the cathechism of the church must be taught first to establish a proper basis for Christianity, and that the purpose of the cathechism is to train one in Christianity as a vocation, for St. Paul said that Christianity is a vocation. In connection with laying a proper foundation from Christian teaching, Mr. Johnson took a side fling at some of the theories of teaching children. He declared that some people claim that the teaching of the alphabet, multiplication table, etc., by rote, is out of date; that the reason should be appealed to. Mr. Johnson declared that just the same he wanted his children taught in the old fashioned way, so that they will have a proper foundation laid for teaching reasoning.

Mr. Johnson declared that there are three faculties which must be appealed to in the child if it is desired to make him like the Sunday school—memory, intelligence and affection. He advocated that just as much attention be paid to the service as is paid to the service for adults; give the children plenty of music and color, and some variety of hymns. He rather ridiculed the somewhat slovenly manner in which some Sunday schools are run, and said that there is nothing done to make it attractive.

"The Religious Training of Young Children," was the title of a paper by Mrs. W. S. Bishop. It was highly interesting, and after the service Mrs. Bishop was generally congratulated on its excellence. Mrs. Bishop said that to teach young children religiously, parents must first find out what religious means to themselves. Then unity in a religious way in the family is necessary. Power and moral nature should be developed in the child, and his responsibility of life should be made strong within him. Children are a charge given parents by God, said Mrs. Bishop, and parents must do their best for the child or account to God for the lack of care.

The child, the speaker said, must be trained to do right because it is right, not because of fear or any other motive. The child should also be taught that religion is not an emotion or a dogma, but a personal service.

RESPONSIBLE FOR DISCHARGE

Unionist Must Settle With Workman For Loss of Job.

Boston, June 22.—The Massachusetts supreme court handed down a decision yesterday holding that the attempt to force all laborers to combine in unions is against the policy of the law, because it aims at a monopoly of the labor market.

The decision was in the case of Michael F. Berry against Jerry E. Donovan, representative of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, and the defendant is held personally liable to damages for obtaining the discharge of Berry, a non-union shoemaker, from his position in a Haverill shoe factory, because he was not a member of the union.

The court holds that the contention that the discharge of Berry was justified on the score of warrantable competition was not a good defence in the case. The plaintiff was authorized to recover judgment up to $1,500 verdict ordered at a trial in a lower court.

The employing firm was under agreement with the union to hire only union men, and not to retain a workman after a notice from the union that he was non-union. Donovan claimed that he acted under this agreement.

LAW UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Dividing St. Louis County School Districts Into Precincts

St. Paul, June 22.—The law passed by the 1903 legislature providing that common school districts in St. Louis county having more than 300 voters shall be divided into precincts, and each precinct vote separately at annual meetings, was declared unconstitutional today by Attorney General E. T. Young.

The law purported to amend chapter 15 of the laws of 1899, which regulates the holding of annual meetings of common school districts throughout the state. By a mistake on the part of the person who drafted the amendment, however, the 1903 law practically repealed the provisions of the 1899 law as they relate to school districts outside of St. Louis county. The legislature intended to affect only St. Louis county, whereas the amendment passed, affected every common school district in the state.

Mr. Young holds, moreover, that the classification of school districts named in the 1903 law is unconstitutional. It classifies districts according to whether they are located in counties of from 50,000 to 150,000 or not. Mr. Young says that this classification is arbitrary and is not recognized by the constitution.

FINDS OF IRON ORE.

State Leases Taken Out For New Districts.

St. Paul, June 22.—State officials are wondering whether the entire northern part of the state contains a continuous bed of iron ore. Every day brings State Auditor S. G. Iverson fresh reports of the discovery of new ore fields.

Mr. Iverson received yesterday reports of the discovery of two new ore fields. One of these is located about thirty miles north of Brainerd in Crow Wing county. This is about fifty miles from the so-called Deerwood district. There were nine leases taken out yesterday in this section, the property being located in township 138, range 37, and township 138, range 28.

Another new district in which it is reported favorable finds of ore have been made is located just east of the Leech Lake Indian reservation in Cass county. This property is located in township 143, range 25. Three leases were taken out yesterday by David T. Adams of Duluth.

A CIRCUS WEDDING.

Two Forepaugh-Sells Performers Married In Ring.

Crookston, Minn., June 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fired by the management of the show because he made "goo-goo eyes" at Jennie Woikowisky, the pretty Russian acrobat with the Forepaugh-Sells shows, Bert Sutton, one of the star bareback riders of the circus, yesterday married the charming little Russian lass in this city, and as a result of the visit of the twain to Hymen's altar, he has been reinstated in the good will of the management and will continue with the show.

The ring wedding was the feature of the big show here and is the first of the season with the circus. The couple have known each other but eight weeks.

ANSWER OF BOWEN

Says He Believes That Loomis Is a Dishonest Man.

Says State Department Attempted to Bribe Him While Minister.

New York, June 22.—Herbert W. Bowen, former minister to Venezuela, yesterday made public a long statement in reply to President Roosevelt's letter dismissing him from the diplomatic service as a result of the investigation made by Secretary Taft into the controversy between Mr. Bowen and Francis B. Loomis, first assistant secretary of state.

Mr. Bowen declares that the "Venezuela scandal constitutes a national disgrace." He asserts that "the Loomis scandal," pervaded Caracas and constantly "grew worse and worse."

Mr. Bowen said that shortly after he called the matter to the attention of the department of state, he received a cable offer from Washington of diplomatic promotion that would remove him from Caracas.

"I admit," he declared, "that I regarded the offer as an attempt to bribe me, veiled under the offer of a higher position and inspired by Mr. Loomis. I make no dobut that in the course of the recent inquiry it has been sufficiently plain that I did not think Mr. Loomis an honest man and I did not believe his conduct as minister to Venezuela had been honorable."

Mr. Bowen said the recent departmental inquiry should not prevent "an open, impartial and full investigation into all the facts."

"Suppression of the truth will never establish it," he adds, "and tolerance of evil will never crush. No official, however high, should shelter a wrongdoer."

When he went to Venezuela in 1901, as successor to Mr. Loomis, Mr. Bowen declares he found current rumors affecting the honor and integrity of his predecessor, both as a man and as the representative of the United States government. Mr. Bowen says that feeling a sense of pride in representing the United States, these rumors were a source of continual mortification to him.

Epitomizing the rumors, Mr. Bowen says:

"Mr. Loomis, while minister, was reported to have used his public position to fill his private purse by obtaining interest in concessions and various claims against the Venezuelan government. He was commonly thought also to have been in the pay of the Bermudez Asphalt company and to have made use of his own position to give color to the belief that the United States government was especially in favor of the side of that corporation in its controversy with the government. I had no means of refuting these scandalous statements. Their substantial truth was assured by my diplomatic coleagues as well as by the general public at Caracas."

Mr. Bowen tells of sending to the state department information of the report current in Caracas, "that an incriminating check to Mr. Loomis and a letter from him to the governmental custodian of the asphalt property promising that the United States would not intervene in Venezuela were in the hands of one of President Castro's friends."

"Shortly afterwards," he continued, "I received a communication from the state department offering to me a position that was intended to be a stepping stone to an ambassadorship. It seems to me in the circumstances that my duty to the United States demanded that I should stay for the present at least in Caracas, and I declined the offer, personally advantageous as it was to myself. Concurrently with the report in Caracas that President Castro was in possession of documents incriminating the first assistant secretary of state, President Castro dispatched a special messenger to the United States. Concurrently with my refusal to leave my post at Caracas there began to apnear from Washington false reports in our papers, as 'Bowen asks to be recalled, he wants to sever diplomatic relations with Venezuela; he asks that a naval demonstration be made in Venezuela waters; he is at sword's-points with Castro.' False reports of this sort are ordinarily contradicted by the department of state. In this instance they were not. Anyone at all familiar with diplomatic negotiations with Venezuela will understand without further explanation the manifold embarrassments of such a situation."

After referring to the appearance of the Loomis charges in several papers, Mr. Bowen says:

"To say that I instigated these charges is the product of a vivid imagination. It was right after this that I was summoned by the state department to Washington and a departmental inquiry was made into Mr. Loomis' conduct in Venezuela, and I was dismissed from the diplomatic service. Yet I was neither responsible for Mr. Loomis' unsavory reputation in Caracas nor for the circulation of scandalous reports about him. He established his reputation himself while living there as American minister from 1897 to April, 1901, and the statements charging him with dishonest and dishonorable conduct were made with such detail of circumstances that mere denial by me was useless. What was needed was not their denial, but their disproof. I admit that after I found in February, 1904, in the legation archives the documents that I transmitted to the state department in Washington, I believed Mr. Loomis to be a dishonest man. I admit that after I received no explanation of these documents and no further investigation was made, though I reported the scandal to be still current in Caracas, most embarrassing to the interests of the United States, my belief in Mr. Loomis' dishonesty was not diminished. I admit that after I had notified President Castro of the promise by the secretary of state in Washington to cable me the basis of a protocol for settling by arbitration all the disputes of all the creditor nations, and secured President Castro's assent to enter into such a protocol, when the protocol cabled by Mr. Loomis as assistant secretary was found to merely cover the asphalt claim, my belief in Loomis' dishonesty was strengthened. In Caracas that protocol was attributed to the lawyer of the asphalt company, and he, in fact, did draw it up."

Here Mr. Bowen says he regarded his offer of a promotion as an attempt to bribe him. He adds:

"The statement that I attempted to steal or otherwise improperly procure information is unwarranted. I made use of confidential agents only, and of our consular officers in Venezuela. The state department, on at least two occasions, provided me with money to procure secret information.

With regard to the Mercado claims, Mr. Bowen says the text of a letter which was among the papers he found in the legation archives. This letter is addressed to W. W. Russell and says:

"Dear Sir: In reference to the portion of Mr. Mercado's claim which I bought, I want to state that the only terms of settlement which I will accept other than a full cash payment of about 30,400 bolivars in gold, are the following: I will accept 20,000 bolivars in gold and 10,400 bolivars in salt bonds at the rate of 80 per cent, or 5 per cent below the quoted market rate, provided it does not go below 80 per cent.

"Very truly yours,
"F. B. Loomis."

Mr. Bowen underlines the words "which I bought," in the letter. He also gives the text of a letter from Charles R. Mayors, addressed to Francis B. Loomis, and referring to services rendered by Mr. Loomis in securing a contract for furnishing a loan to Venezuela.

Mr. Bowen's statement then concludes:

"Mr. Loomis explains that if this contract which was to give a million and a quarter, had gone through, he intended to resign.

"The conduct of the man who as American minister was willing to participate in such transactions as the foregoing is considered by his official superior as merely indiscreet and he is retained in the public service.

"My personal fate and fortune are of little interest to the public. But it does concern the whole country that its diplomatic representatives abroad should be men of clean character and unsullied reputation, and every American citizen should be especially concerned when a man, who as minister to a foreign state has been the cause of grave scandals affecting his personal integrity and the honor of his government is promoted to the high office of first assistant secretary of state and controls diplomatic negotiations with the very government at whose capital he caused the scandals and gained a tainted reputation."

PRIZES FOR WOODMEN

Results of Competitive Drills of the Foresters Are Announced.

Milwaukee, June 22.—Interest was at a high pitch yesterday in the windup of the competitive drills of the Foresters at Camp Hawes. Joliet camp, No. 2872, with a score of 98.997, carried off first honors in the senior class, winning the prize of $450. Grand Rapids, Mich., No. 2314, scoring 98.885, was second, taking $350, and Kansas City, 1999, scored 98.85, gathering in $250. St. Paul, 674; Omaha, 120; Topeka, 456, and Omaha, 1454, finished in the order named.

In the junior class, Denver, 8259, with a score of 84.20 captured first place and $300; Des Moines, 8134, with 82.03, was second, taking $250, and Los Angeles, 7110, with 79.76 points, won $125. Lincoln, Neb.; Madison, Wis.; Havelock, Neb.; and Crete, Neb., were awarded the smaller prizes.

Merrill, Wis., Camp 882, was highest in the pony class, scoring 92.83, prize $175. Portsmouth, Ohio, 3883, scored 85.78, was second, and secured $125. Indianapolis, Columbus, Ind., St. Paul, Oklahoma City and Winona camps got places in the order named.

In the battalion drill, Battalion No. 2, Lincoln, Neb., Maj. C. O. Herrick, score, 85.53, was first, $450; Battalion 10, Rock Island, Maj. D. F. Dekay, 74.83, secured $350; Provisional Battalion, 27, Des Moines, and Marshalltown, Maj. H. C. Worthington, 72.163, third, $250; Bloomington, Ill., Battalion, Maj. C. A. Waterstreet, 69.999, fourth, $150.

At the afternoon session yesterday the head camp adopted, by an almost unanimous vote, the resolutions to extend the term of the head officers from two years to three years, thus making the head camp a triennial instead of a biennial affair.

At the close of the session the delegates to the head camp visited the encampment of the Foresters at Lake Park, where there was a grand review of the uniformed rank of the society.

Battalion drill: Lincoln, Neb., Permanent Battalion, Maj. H. C. Herrick, 85.33. Bloomington, Ill., Battalion, Maj. C. J. Waterstreet, 69.499. Minneapolis, Provisional Battalion, No. 57, Maj. R. M. Whyte, 61.49.

Pony class: Summers, Wis., 36.99.

REGISTER OF DEEDS RESIGNS

Prominent Republican Politician of Milwaukee Out of Office.

Milwaukee, June 22.—Otto Seidel, Jr., register of deeds of Milwaukee county, resigned his office yesterday. Seidel called in person at the county jail and handed his resignation to Sheriff Cary. The document recites no reason for Mr. Seidel's act and contains only a few words.

The resignation is understood to be the result of an affidavit filed in the municipal court by District Attorney McGovern, in which the declaration is made that Mr. Seidel made a confession to the district attorney concerning his actions while a member of the county board from the Sixth ward. This confession, it is understood, was made several weeks ago.

Under the law, Sheriff Cary will submit the resignation to Governor La Follette, who will appoint a successor. Seidel was elected last fall together with the complete Republican county ticket. He has been strong in politics in the Sixth ward for several years. He served several years in the county board and held responsible positions on the board.

LEFT NO WILL

As a Result a Rich Mine Has No Owner Now.

Relatives of George Adams, an Englishman, Not Found.

Denver, Colo., June 22.—The story of the Pompeii claim was told by a promoter from Gunnison county. His name is not important.

"In the stopes of the Pompeii claim in Gunnison county," he began, "wealth that none may touch lies uncovered. From the whim, craking idly over the shaft, hangs an empty bucket, and a heap of carefully sorted ore nearby represents the last labors of a life that was tragic though petty."

In speaking the promoter unconsciously uses terms of expression he purposely employs when writing a prospectus. He finds them effective in selling stocks, and his listeners do not object to occasional phrases that smack of rhetoric.

"George Adams," he continued, tipping his glass, and watching the play of light enmeshed in the lucent topaz of the liquor, "was wedded to the hills. A prospector, his solitary life made more bitter hatred implanted in his heart when a child. He never expressed a desire to inflict an injury upon those by whom he had suffered, but he was fixed in his determination that none of them should share the wealth he sought in placer and lode.

"Adams was born in Yorkshire, Eng. Left an orphan when barely more than a baby, his first recollection was of relatives by whom he was shamefully mistreated.

"As soon as he was old enough he was put to work in a colliery. There both of his legs were broken by falling timbers. His relatives, expecting that his injuries would soon prove fatal, refused to call in a surgeon, and for days he suffered extreme physical agony.

"At last some neighbors interfered, and the lad's bones were set. He had been neglected so long, however, that his legs were permanently bent out of shape, and he was always afterward lame. As soon as possible, after his recovery, he ran away, and eventually became a prospector in Colorado.

"For Adams the finding of the Pompeii claim spelled success. What suggested the name I don't know. Perhaps in the mind of the discoverer there were hazy visions of treasure beneath the lava and ashes that buried the old Italian city. Perhaps the evidences of volcanic action in the surrouding region, the intrusions and overflows of the Gunnison country, recalled the work of Vesuvius.

"From the time he located the claim his faith that it contained the treasure for which he had been searching so long did not weaken. His confidence was finally justified by the ore he unlocked from the rocks.

"A few months ago Adams was on the highway to fortune. In the latter part of his life, and he was well past 50, he had painfully struggled along hard trails that promised glittering rewards but led only to disappointment. The Pompeii claim was the last venture of many.

"The other claims he located were scattered singly and in groups over the mountains in which he wandered. Most of them were merely the graves of great expectations. On a few he was able to make a showing good enough to sell them to people who had money for development.

"Did they make mines, you ask?

"Not yet. Some of them are still promising prospects to which my own hopes are hitched. But Adams is the only one who up to the present date has cleaned up any cash from them.

"More than most of his kind, Adams was wise. Having learned in the school of experience that the prospector who depends on another man's grub stake must often go hungry; he determined to invest his little capital where it would make him independent. Resisting the temptation to use it in following a promising lead, he bought a few acres of fruit land on the famous North Fork of the Gunnison near Paonia and stored his prospector's kit while he was clearing his brush-grown fields, digging, irrigating ditches and planting an orchard.

"Then he went back to the hills. In a few years the orchard yielded him a small, but dependable income. It kept him in food while he was prospecting and supplied powder for the limited development he undertook on the claims he located. Always confident that some day he would find and make a mine, he looked forward to enjoying his wealth in his valley home.

"During the last few years Adams's hopes were all centered on the Pompeii claim. As soon as his income permitted he carried it to patent. Unaided he sank the shaft to a depth of 50 feet and began drifting.

"It was slow work. Every bucket of art or waste hoisted meant a climb to the surface. But he made progress. As he followed the vein the values increased.

"The ore shoot was two feet in width and most of it was of high grade. Fortune was his. No great wealth, as wealth is counted in these days of multi-millionaires, though even millions were a possibility of the future, but enough to satisfy at once all of his modest ambitions.

"The first carload shipment netted the owner $1,000. Another thousand was received for the second carload. A third was ready and there was assurance of many more to follow.

"Adams was holding his head higher. He had drank of the cup of success and it was like a draft from the fountain of youth. His step was as light as it was when he drove his first stake in the land that perpetuates the name of the unfortunate Gunnison.

"All his old enthusiasm returned as he dragged the golden treasure from drift and shaft. Each shipment he made added to the possible improvements for his orchard and home.

"Then came death. The relentless hand of that dread specter of the greater altitudes: pneumonia, touched him, and the wine of success turned to ice in his veins. Perhaps; in his desire to gather rapidly the fortune that was his, he ignored warning symptoms that at another time would have sent him hurrying from the heights. He waited too long and when he went he passed through the portal on this side of which all wealth must be left.

"Whose that wealth will be is a matter of doubt. Adams had no relatives in this country and no will has been discovered. If the English members of the family can be found and the relationship established, they can make good a claim to the property, undoubtedly, in spite of the fact that it was Adams's well known wish that they should not inherit a penny from him.

"However, the people by whom he was mistreated are probably long ago dead and their children or grandchildren his legal heirs. Perhaps, too, Adams was cantier than we have given him credit for and concealed his identity under an assumed name that will effectually prevent the tracing of relationship.

"Didn't Adams take more gold with him than my clients are likely to get out of the companies I promote?

"My boy, I resent the insinuation. Not every promising prospect makes a mine. Not more than one in ten, in fact. I'm at work on my tenth now and I haven't yet developed a bonanza. But I expect to win out yet and so will the people who stay with me."

Incidents Preceding Bad News That Marred Wedding.

Kansas City, Mo., June 21.—Wendell Baker of Dayton, Ohio, and Miss Josephine Hoffman were married two days ahead of time at the home of the bride's parents to permit the groom and his mother, Mrs. Baker, to go at once to Dayton in response to a telegram notifying them that Mrs. Baker's parents, P. Wendell and wife, had been burned in an accident, and that the former had died of his injuries. In view of the sad news it was decided that the marriage of Mr. Baker and Miss Hoffman should be solemnized at once and they were made husband and wife by Rev. S. M. Neel, pastor of Central Presbyterian church. Invitations sent out for the ceremony were canceled, and Mr. and Mrs. Baker, together with the bridal party that came here with him and his mother from Chicago and Dayton, went to the latter place on a night train.

Superstitious persons are recalling that Mrs. Baker, while inspecting the furnishings of the Elm Ridge club with friends Friday night, was completely taken with a dresser, saying she had one like it, but two years ago broke the mirror.

"It's a superstition that to break a mirror calls for seven years of bad luck, but thus far I have escaped," observed Mrs. Baker.

Saturday night a wedding dinner was served by a society woman for Mr. Baker and Miss Hoffman. Fifteen guests had been expected. Only thirteen came, and when the party sat down the fact was commented on. The guests refused to sit at the table until the thirteen was broken by the arrival of a young woman who had been hastily summoned.

THE HISTORY OF CHAMPAGNE—No. 5.

EVEN THE IDEAL CHAMPAGNE GLASS was invented by Dom Perignon, who also discovered Champagne. This glass he called a "flute." The original was a very slender V-shaped glass, bubbling from the tip of which the endless effervescence seemed like the spring of life itself. It is ever so with

Extra Dry

Equal in effervescing qualities, flavor and boquet to Champagnes of foreign make—at half the price. The duty, not the quality, makes the difference.

This is because the vineyards in which grapes for Great Western are grown have been cultivated so long (longer than any other wine-producing vineyards in America) that the soil has at last attained those peculiar qualities which have for centuries imparted the flavor and conditions hitherto found only in the grapes of the French Champagne district. Great Western has these qualities—and is made with equal care.

MORTON IS PRAISED

President Lauds Integrity and Ability of Naval Secretary.

Why Special Counsel In Santa Fe Rebate Case Resigned.

Washington, June 22.—President Roosevelt has taken occasion to express himself in most positive terms complimentary of the integrity and ability of Paul Morton, formerly vice president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway company, and now completing his duties of secretary of the navy that he may accept the duties of chairman of the board of directors of the New York Equitable Life Assurance society. These expressions are contained in two letters, one addressed to the attorney general and the other to Mr. Morton. The letters were made public today by the administration, together with a number of others, which, taken together, show the precise point of difference between the department of justice and Messrs. Harmon and Judson, who recently resigned as special counsel for the government in the rebate case involving the Santa Fe road and the Colorado Fuel and Iron company. The special counsel wished to bring contempt proceedings against the officials of the road, which would have included Mr. Morton. Their position was that the testimony adduced before the interstate commerce commission established a violation of the court order March 25, 1902, restraining the company from entering into any agreement to transport interstate commerce at rates less than the published tariff of the road. This testimony, they contended, constituted a prima facie case against the officers of the road, and the only way of ascertaining their guilt or innocence was through contempt proceedings.

Attorney General Moody opposed bringing the contempt proceedings, on the ground that, while the evidence before the commission might show a violation of the injunction by the road, it contained nothing connecting any officer of the company with such violation. President Roosevelt took the same view. Both the president and the attorney general agreed that contempt proceedings should be insituted impersonally against the corporation, in both the Colorado Fuel and International Harvester cases. The latter case, the president says, stands exactly on the same footing and involved practically all the Western roads. The president's letter is as follows:

"White House, Washington, June 12, 1905.

"I have received and carefully considered your letters of the 31st ulto. and 3rd inst. I entirely agree with your conclusions. In my opinion you would be wholly without justification in proceeding individually against the officers of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railway for contempt whom neither the interstate commerce commission nor the special counsel you have employed have developed a single fact of any kind beyond the holding of their offices, tending to implicate any one of those officers. One of the officers, Mr. Morton, is a member of my cabinet. This fact is not to be allowed to shield him, nor on the other hand is it to be allowed to cause him to be singled out, or the officers with whom he is associated to be singled out for attack.

"At about the same time that the injunction was obtained against the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, an injunction was obtained against several other Western railroads. Subsequently it was developed by the interstate commerce commission that, under the guise of a division of rates, unlawful rebates were given by these railroads to the International Harvester company, just as a rebate was given by the Atchison in the case of the Colorado Fuel company. Upon attention being called to the cases by the interstate commerce commission, the unlawful practice was abandoned in the Harvester case, as it was abandoned in this case of the Colorado Fuel company. The two cases stand precisely on a par. No one has suggested and as far as I am aware, no one has thought of suggesting that we should proceed individually against the officers of the roads engaged in this International Harvester company affair; yet, the case is exactly parallel to this Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe case, and if such action as you have refused to take was taken against the officers of the Atchison, Topeka & Sata Fe railroad, it would also have to be taken in the case of the International Harvester company against the officers of every railroad running west of Chicago. There, is of course, no possible excuse for discriminating one case from the other.

"You advise me to direct the submission of the printed evidence taken by the interstate commerce commission (the only evidence before the special counsel) to Judge Phillips, who had issued the injunction, to see whether on this published evidence in which there is not a syllable directly bearing on Mr. Morton or any one of his colleagues in the management of the road, action could be taken against any one of them personally. I did not take this advice for two reasons: First, if it were not for Mr. Morton's being in my cabinet, neither you nor I would dream of following such a course in this instance, and we could not follow it save on condition of also following it in the case of the Harvester company and in all similar cases—which, in my judgment, would put us in a wholly untenable position. Second, I have received from Mr. Morton, a letter, of which I enclose you a copy, together with a copy of my reply, in it you will see that Mr. Morton not only states in the most unequi vocal manner that he had no knowledge whatever of the unlawful practice complained of, but also shows by the quotation of documents issued under his direction, that all such unlawful practices were specifically forbidden by him and that the attention of his subordinates were immediately called to the necessity of complying with the law in this respect. When there is thus one shadow of testimony against him, and when whatever evidence has been submitted shows explicitly that he is not guilty it seems to me that there is no warrant whatever for our proceeding against him.

"The course that you have followed in dealing with all these corporation matters, has been coherent and resolute and has had my heartiest approval. The aim of the administration has been in the first place to stop the unlawful practices. We have not proceeded personally against any of the officers unless there was legal evidence showing that their conduct had been wilfully of such a nature as to render it our duty to try to punish them personally no less than to try to put an end to the objectionable practices. You perhaps remember that when the administration brought the Northern Securities suit there was much criticism of us for not undertaking criminal proceedings against the principal directors in the Northern Securities corporation. The view of the administration at that time was that such a proceeding would be unjust to the men concerned and not to the advantage of the public. Events have, I think, shown this view to be correct. In the same way, when a year or two ago, injunctions were obtained against the corporations known popularly as the beef trust, no effort was made at the time to proceed personally against the individuals in those corporations. Since then testimony has been offered us to show that the packing companies have violated this injunction and that the violation was deliberate and wilful on the part of a number of individuals. Of the weight and sufficiency of this evidence it is not for me to judge.

"With my approval, the department of justice, with the assistance of the department of commerce and labor, has for some months been endeavoring to find out whether or not they can obtain legal evidence of such wilful and deliberate violation of the injunction by any individual. If the grand jury now sitting Chicago finds indictments against any individuals connected with the packing corporation, it will be because in their judgment such legal evidence of the violation of the injunction has been laid before them. If you at any time get legal evidence of any such wilful and deliberate violation by any officer of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe or of any other railroad running West of Chicago, of the injunction in the Colorado Fuel case, or of the injunction in the International Harvester company case, you will of course proceed as you have already proceeded in the Chicago beef packing cases. But at present not only has there been no such evidence produced, but there has been no attempt to produce such evidence; and, as regards Mr. Morton, there is seemingly conclusive testimony to the contrary. You will not, however, take action against any official of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad which you do not take against the official of any other railroad under precisely similar circumstances.

"In both this Colorado Fuel case and in the International Harvester case I direct that proceedings for contempt against the companies be taken by the government. Whether, as the cases develop, proceedings against individual officers become necessary must depend in each instance upon whether testimony is obtained showing that such individual officer has either by act or connivance been personally guilty in the matter. If there are any railroads guilty of the practices which we have enjoined other railroads from following, but which have not themselves been enjoined, proceedings should be begun to put them under a similar restraint.

"You have expressed your doubt as to whether the injunction granted is in sufficiently explicit terms to cover either the case of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe or the similar case of the International Harvester company. I agree, however, with your feeling that even though there is much doubt, an effort should be made to obtain the judgment of the court on the question. Sincerely yours,

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

"Hon W. H. Moody, Attorney General."

In a letter to President Roosevelt, dated June 5 last, Secretary Morton reviewed the rebate case at length. He said the arrangement between the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and the Colorado Fuel and Iron company was entered into in the year 1901, prior to the time that the restraining orders enjoining the Western railroads from cutting rates or departing from published tariffs were issued, and prior to the passage of the Elkins bill. When the injunction ordered was issued by the court, positive instructions were given by him verbally to his subordinates to comply in every respect with its terms. These instructions were issued to everybody concerned, in writing, and are a matter of record. When the Elkins bill became a law early in 1903, all of his instructions were reiterated and the most positive orders issued that under no circumstances or conditions would any deviation from the law be permitted. Mr. Morton adds:

"Notwithstanding all these precautions, the old arrangements of billing the coal and coke at a delivered price and not separating the freight rate from the price of the commodity in the tariff was not corrected until some time last November. It was evidently not regarded in the tariff printing bureau as an irregular arrangement and entirely escaped attention. * * * I have always been opposed to rebates and all kinds of 'graft' in the business, and I do not believe there is another railroad officer in the Western country who has tried to be fairer in his relations to the public or more fearless in denouncing and trying to prevent the evils and abuses of railroad management. At the same time I have been just as insistent in demanding that the railroads should have fair play."

The correspondence closed with a letter from tue president to Mr. Morton, reading, in part, as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Morton: I have received your letter of the 5th inst. in reference to your own action concerning the rebates which the interested commerce commission have found to have been granted by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad to the Colorado Fuel company at the time you were vice president of the railroad. Not a shred of testimony, so far as I know, has been presented from any source, whether by the interstate commerce commission or by the special counsel employed by the department of justice, which personally implicates you in granting these rebates. In your letter you show not only that you were ignorant of the existence of such rebates, but that you had taken every possible step to see that neither in this case nor in any other were any rebates granted, and you quoted documents which show that your subordinates were repeatedly and explicitly warned to obey the law as regards these rebates, as well as in all other respects. With this showing on your part, and in view of the fact that, as I have said, not a shred of testimony has been produced against you from any source whatever, I do not think you need pay any further heed to the accusations that have been made against you."

GET FAT BY SUCTION.

Beauty Doctor's Sucking Machine Gives Plumpness.

London, June 21.—The stairs leading to the mystic apartments of Miss Carol Bromley, a beauty doctor of Osford street, are thronged with streams of lean people. Miss Bromley claims that she has discovered the secret of making thin people plump by means of pneumatic suction. Unique as the process seems, the principle which underlies it is highly scientific, though quite understandable. The pneumatic suction machine sucks at the hollow flesh at the rate of several hundred sucks a minute. Half an hour's treatment, five days in the week for a month, under the sucking machine, is warranted to practically transform a skeleton man into a fat lady.

HENDRICKS SEVERE

Arraigns Management of Society In Scathing Terms.

Albany, N. Y., June 22.—The report of Superintendent Francis Hendricks of the state insurance department to Governor Higgins upon his investigation of the Equitable Life Assurance society, was made public here and in New York last night. It is described in the title as a "preliminary report" and it sharply critises the management of the society as well as the new trust arrangement for voting the stock agreed upon by Thomas F. Ryan and three trustees, designated by him. In conclusion, Superintendent Hendricks says:

"No superficial measures will correct the existing evils in this society. A cancer cannot be cured by treating the symptoms. Complete mutualization with the elimination of the stock to be paid for at a price only commensurate with its dividends, is, in my opinion, the only sure measure of relief.

"This report with a copy of the evidence taken on in this investigation will be transmitted to the attorney general for such action as he may deem proper."

James W. Alexander, president, and James H. Hyde, first vice president, respectively, whose resignations were accepted by Chairman Morton, are severely arraigned in the report. Gage E. Tarbell, second vice president, is exonerated, Mr. Hendricks finding that no substantial evidence appears in support of the charges against him. Mr. Hendricks said it is an open question whether President Alexander and the other officers and directors who participated with him in the transactions of "James H. Hyde and associates," are not disqualified under section 36 of the insurance law from hereafter holding any office in a life insurance company. The report characterizes these transactions as unlawful. Mr. Tarbell's name is not in the list of participants in these transactions. The policy holders, however, the report sets forth, are under great obligations to Mr. Alexander and the other executive officers for demanding the mutualization of the society and the retirement of Mr. Hyde from its control.

Of Henry B. Hyde, and the organization of the safe deposit and other subsidiary companies, Mr. Hendricks says:

"Under his direction and management the society grew on the public confidence and before his death it became one of the largest and most extensive insurance companies in the world. But he did not neglect his own interests or those of his immediate associates and dependents in the society."

The organization of the Equitable Safe Deposit company of Boston by Henry B. Hyde, and its lease of space in the Equitable building, Boston, is criticised and the lease declared to be unprofitable to the parent society.

Under the heading, "The Missouri Safe Deposit company," the report says:

"The late Henry B. Hyde, who by this time had become a firm believer and an expert in safe deposit business, concluded he could improve on the Boston lease by $4,000 a year in favor of himself and friends and to the loss of the society. In 1902, when it was desired to sell the St. Louis building, the purchaser objected to this lease and the safe deposit stock was bought by the Equitable Life at $250 a share, James H. Hyde, the owner of 1,410 shares, receiving $352,500 in cash for his share.

Of James W. Alexander's share in these leases, Mr. Hendricks made the following statement:

"James W. Alexander says he signed these leases under the direction of Henry B. Hyde. I believe that to be the fact and it is the most charitable construction which can be placed upon his acts."

The organization of the Equitable Trust company of New York, originally the American Deposit and Loan company, was gone into thoroughly by Mr. Hendricks, and he calls attention to the fact that the Equitable Life paid $500 a share for 10,563 shares of Equitable Trust stock and this stock has now a book value of $383.33 per share, a loss to the life society of $116.66 a share. Mr. Hyde, however, and certain other shareholders secured holdings at $150 a share and have a book profit of $233.33 per share. This transaction shows, Mr. Hendricks declares, that the officers and executive committee of the Equitable Life were not solicitous for the society's welfare, but were active in promoting their own private interests. A loss to the Equitable resulted from the consolidation of the Western National bank of New York with the National Bank of Commerce in New York, according to the report.

The syndicate transactions of James H. Hyde and associates are referred to as "notorious." James W. Alexander's name is given in the list of participants. The total profits of the syndicate are placed at $186,107, of which $63,731 each went to James H. Hyde and James W. Alexander. Another participant was William H. McIntyre, fourth vice president of the Equitable, whose share was $14,420. All of those who took part in these dealings, the report says, should be compelled to pay back the sums received by them. "This is only very mild punishment," says the report.

McIntyre testified that he was not a member of the executive or finance committees, and was therefore blameless. On this Mr. Hendricks comments as follows:

"His comprehension as to the duties of a director toward his trust estate is not surprising, for he was reared in the society since the age of 14, and under the immediate tutelage of the late Henry B. Hyde."

Extravagance and waste in salaries are severely condemned. The increase in this respect in the executive offices was from $380,100 in 1900 to $613,600 in 1904. It was found that President Alexander's salary was advanced from $75,000 per annum to $100,000, without his request, in order that James H. Hyde's salary might be increased to the same figure. Chauncey M. Depew, the report shows, is paid $20,000 a year as attorney. David B. Hill received $5,000 a year, and Elihu Root, for 1905, $25,000, also as attorneys.

Of James H. Hyde's directorates in various corporations, Mr. Hendricks expresses the opinion that he "was put on thees boards for the reason that he was the financial head of a great insurance corporation, whose assets were so large, and whose ready money was always available for the purchase of securities, which these great corporations are largely in the market to sell."

The pension of $25,000 to Mrs. Henry B. Hyde is condemned as unnecessary, and probably illegal.

LEPERS NO MENACE

How Held That the Disease Is Not Contagious.

Losing Much of the Horror Once Felt For It.

Johannesburg, June 22.—There is considerable excitement throughout the colony over the spread of leprosy at Bloemfontein and vicinity. The subject matter has been brought before the public eye by letters signed by about twenty Boers residing at Bloemfontein, protesting against the removal of their relatives to Robben island, off Cape Town. Inasmuch as the distance from Byoemfontein to Cape Town is nearly 1,000 miles, the separation under these conditions is regarded as practically absolute, inasmuch as visiting in the future will be impossible. The Boers who sign the document plead in pathetic terms, claiming that if isolation is deemed necessary by the colonial authorities that it be carried out near their homes so that near relatives can from time to time visit those dear to them. It is urged that in no part of Europe is isolation enforced, and that there are plenty of emigrant lepers residing in Paris and London, where they cause no alarm and never infect others.

A medical report upon the subject has the following:

"The last few years have witnessed a widespread change in professional opinion as to the contagiousness of leprosy. Although no one now denies that it may be communicated from person to person if food can be taken directly from the leper's hands, there are few if any who hold that contagion by breath or touch or clothes is a common cause of the disease. Most definite in this direction is a recent avocal by Dr. Nansen himself, an authority who, as the distinguished discoverer of the leprosy bacillus, has long held the foremost place amongst the believers in contagion and advocates of segregation measures. In speaking of the measures now adopted in Norway, Dr. Nansen has quite recently written: "We have no particular rules for the transportation of patients. I see no reason for them. Leprosy is a disease which it is not necessary to have any particular dread of.

"Now that we have so clear an avowal from so high an authority there can be no longer any pretext for the maintenance of the Cape Colony isolation laws. Surely the miseries of Robben island may now be allowed to come to an end. It was in supposed obedience to Dr. Nansen's teaching that the law referred to was enacted, and that this and other segregation prisons were organized. Now that Dr. Nansen makes the acknowledgment we cannot too quickly hasten to undo the evil which has resulted.

"However, the petition from Bloemfontein does not amount to a request for the abolition of the isolation laws, but contents itself by begging that the isolation may be carried out nearer the homes of patients, so that they may not be wholly out of reach of their friends. There need not be the slightest hesitation in treating lepers in South Africa as they are treated throughout Europe and India. Almost with the sole exception of South Africa isolation is everywhere voluntary: most of the lepers remain at their homes and no harm comes of it. Many have for a long time been convinced of the truth of what Dr. Nansen now avows as his belief. It is felt sure that the risk of contagion in leprosy is infinitely small."

The medical report then calls attention to the really efficient means of preventing leprosy. The duties which lie before he Cape government in this matter it is claimed are to supervise the fish curing establishments on the coast and to favor in every possible manner the abundant use of pure salt. The report continues:

"From very ancient times leprosy has been the curse of the Chinese race. But it does not spread over the whole of China. Opportunities for contagion are afforded everywhere; the people are the same and their habits are the same; but while leprosy is very abundant in the district about Canton it is unknown at Peking. The North of China produces abundance of salt and very little fish, while the south has abundance of fish and but little salt. The Peking district exports salt, the Canton district imports it, and what is worse, the government taxes it. The Chinese of South China do not communicate the disease to their fellow countrymen of the North. The conditions favoring its spread are absent in the latter. Can we need more conclusive proof that the real cause of the disease is something quite other than contagion? Imprisonment of the poor unfortunate leper is an absolutely futile expedient. On the other hand there is good reason to believe that the desired end may be obtained by the simple measure of preventing the use of badly cured fish. Salt is the true antagonist of leprosy, and it is the first duty of all governments to see that its use is in no way hindered by taxation. The enlightened Japanese have repealed all taxes on salt, and though a proposal was recently made in their parliament to re-enact them in order to raise funds for the war, it was refused, in China the tax still exists and salt can not be moved from place to place without a permit and a heavy payment. But a tax is still maintained in the Indian empire. It has been repeatedly mitigated, but it still exists. Rumor states that a further reduction of it is likely to be proposed as a boon to our Indian fellow subjects in commemoration of the impending visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales. It is to be hoped that this boon will take the form of a complete abandonment of a monopoly which ought not to exist in any civilized state. Such remission would be hailed with gratitude by the peasantry of India. And it should not be forgotten that it was from the personal interest taken in the leprosy question by the prince's illustrious father fifteen years ago that much of the progress in this connection is due."

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured in Three Days.

Morton L. Hill, of Lebanon, Ind., says: "My wife had inflammatory Rheumatism in every muscle and joint; her suffering was terrible and her body and face were swollen almost beyond recognition; had been in bed for six weeks and had eight physicians, but received no benefit until she tried the Mystic Cure for Rheumatism. It gave immediate relief and she was able to walk about in three days. I am sure it saved her life." Sold by all druggists.

SHE MADE HER THREAT GOOD

Woman Deserted By Husband Slays Him at Los Angeles.

Ridgewood Heights, R. I., June 22.—Just a year ago last April Mrs. Coleman E. Thaisz, a handsome woman, left her home here with the avowed intention of tracking her husband, who had deserted her because she threatened to take his life and follow him to the ends of the earth if necessary for this purpose.

Neighbors who knew the family well and to whom Mrs. Thaisz had stated her purpose, have learned by dispatches that her mad pursuit had continued from city to city across the continent to Los Angeles, Cal. There she found her husband on Monday, and, luring him into an orange grove a few miles from town, shot him dead, putting a bullet through her own heart and falling across his body.

Residents of this village are deeply stirred by the tragedy, because it had its inception here. Thaisz was a prosperous druggist. The couple had no children. The husband was unassuming and devoted to study and research. His wife could not understand his studious moods, and they seemed to arouse her to insane jealousy.

She complained that her husband had ill-treated her. Neighbors never saw anything to justify the complaint, but, on the contrary, extended their sympathy to the husband.

Matters came to a climax in the spring of 1904. Thaisz told several of his friends that he felt as if he was constantly in the valley of shadows.

He sold his business, receiving $2,300 in cash, and, assigning $1,500 to his wife, told her he was going to Pittsburg to establish a business there, and would send for her. He left a week later, and sent his wife a letter in which he said he would never live with her again.

Mrs. Thaisz showed this letter to her neighbors. She told them she had taken a solemn oath to kill her husband.

"When I see him, which will be sooner or later," she said, in a manner which chilled his hearers, "I will kill him. I will follow him to the ends of the earth, but I will find him, and then I will slay him."

POLICE THINK WHITE IS ALIVE

Their Explanation of Failure of Search For Body.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 22.—The mysterious disappearance of Virgil H. White, a young lawyer of Des Moines and son of Fred. E. White, Iowa's most prominent Democrat, deepens as the investigation continues.

Virgil White was last seen at Waveland park Sunday afternoon at 6 o'clock. As he was leaving the park in company with Miss Ocila Thompson he fell upon the ground, face downward. Miss Thompson, who is secretary of Drake university, laughed and said: "Virgil, that is a sign that you will be drowned."

After leaving the girl White went to the Des Moines river and in a rainstorm that was almost blinding took out a light canoe. The boatkeeper, J. Higbee, protested against the use of the boat.

"I'll have this canoe and I don't care about the price," said White.

The following morning White's hat marked with his name, his collars and cuffs and his necktie were found under his boat on a sandbar in the river. It was immediately supposed that White was drowned. The river was dragged and nets were placed to catch the body. Fifty leading lawyers and 100 members of the Knights of Pythias order, to which White belonged, joined in the search. No trace of the body has been found.

Fred. White arrived in the city Tuesday and offered large cash rewards for divers and swimmers. He worked for several hours and left only when a telegram was received announcing that his wife had heard the sad news and was lying at the point of death. Carl Kleinschmidt of South English, Iowa, was left in charge of the work of searching for the body, and the father returned on an errand which promised to be as sad as the one that brought him to Des Moines.

No grounds for suicide can be found. White had a case which he was to try in district court yesterday. Peculiarly enough he was to oppose Judge Ryan in the case. Ryan dropped dead of cerebral apoplexy only a few hours before the time of the trial. Saturday, when the case was set, both men were strong and well and ready for a legal battle.

The police, having failed to obtain a trace of the body, have advanced the theory that Virgil White, for causes unknown, has skipped out and left the world to believe that he was the victim of accidental drowning.

WATERWAGON STOPS

In California Town When Law Bars Liquor.

Ione, Cal., June 22.—Once Ione was an anomalous town, for the saloons supported the city water wagon. Now Ione is still queer, but not anomalous. For Ione, made "dry" by law, is likewise dry in other details.

The law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors within two miles of a state institution has made Ione the driest town in the state. Even the streets are "dry."

The Preston reform school is located here. When the law went into effect a few weeks ago the saloonkeepers did not close up, but they stopped selling liquor and handed out as thirst-quenchers all sorts of soft drinks. Now, like everything, Ionite is not partial to such stuff, and in consequence the cash registers of the saloon men did not ring very often. The reduction in receipts brought about a curtailment of expenses. The first item cut off the list was street sprinkling.

The "water wagon" man received so much a month from each merchant and liquor dealer to keep the dust down. When the saloon men refused to pay him he very naturally shut off the water when he passed the saloons. Soon the main street of the town took on the appearance of a checker board. Wet spots alternated with dry spots, and, as the saloons are rather numerous in Ione, the dry goods men and others soon realized that the sprinkler was doing little good.

When the merchants decided that it was useless to keep the sprinkler going, the "water wagon" man promptly hunted up another occupation. The streets of Ione now look like a road in a desert and dust is everywhere.

MAY JOIN WITH HAUGE SYNOD

United Norwegian Lutherans Seem to Favor the Plan.

Minneapolis, June 22.—Union between the United Norwegian Lutheran church and the Hauge Norwegian Lutheran synod may not be far away. Both organizations have signified a desire for union, and as there is practically no difference between the two, on doctrine, there seems to be no obstacle to the amalgamation of these important branches of the Norwegian Lutheran church.

The United church yesterday received a telegram from the Hauge synod, now in session at Red Wing, announcing the appointment of a committee of five to consider the question of uniting with other Lutheran bodies and expressing the hope that the United church would appoint a similar committee. President Dahl expressed pleasure over the receipt of the telegram, and said that the matter would be referred to the standing committee on union, with instructions to meet with the Hauge synod committee at the first opportunity.

A lively debate took place over the application of Rev. Messrs. S. T. Brevik, of Wadena, Minn., and C. J. Edwards of Duluth, Minn., for membership in the United church. Both of these men have belonged to other Lutheran synods and have in some of their actions been hostile to the United church, its affairs and the faculty of the theological seminary.

But when it was announced that they had made apologies, and had been forgiven, both were admitted to the United church.

Sixty-one congregations have been admitted to membership in the United church at this convention, thus far.

IS FIT FOR A KING

Whitelaw Reid's Residence Preferable to Buckingham Palace.

Has Obtained Finest Private Mansion In the Metropolis.

London, June 22.—Dorchester house, which is now being occupied by Whitelaw Reid, the new American ambassador to the Court of St. James, is acknowledged to be the finest private mansion in London. "As a residence," frankly states the London Chronicle, "most of us would prefer it to Buckingham palace." It does not admit of dispute that externally it is a far handsomer building than the somber, barack-like structure in which the British sovereign is housed. And within its sumptuous apartments will suffer nothing by comparison with the favorite rooms of royalty. For statelliness there is nothing in the palace that equals its grand marble staircase which, it is interesting to note, is said to have cost $150,000. It is built throughout on the same scale of grandeur. It is indeed a place fit for a king to live in, but as all patriotic Americans will maintain what is good enough for a king is none too good for an American citizen when he represents Uncle Sam—and pays for all the style he puts on out of his own pocket.

It is not anticipated that there will be any knotty points of diplomacy to be settled between England and the United States in the near future. The chief function of the American ambassador will be to cement and strengthen the good feeling already existing between the two countries. In that sort of game lavish hospitality counts for much. Dorchester house will give Mr. Reid opportunities for its exercise such as no other embassy in London affords. It contains six magnificent rooms, so arranged that they can be readily converted into what will be practically one apartment, where a thousand couples might dance without being unduly crowded. In addition to these there are twice as many sitting rooms of one kind and another. There are twenty-four bedrooms for the accommodation of guests. At the rear of the house are beautiful Italian sunken gardens provided with tennis courts. The stables will accommodate eighteen horses. Just to run the house in ordinary fashion from day to day will require a staff of fifty servants. When big entertainments are given that number will be largely augmented.

Dorchester house contains one of the finest collection of pictures in England, as may be inferred from the fact that they are insured for $25,000,000. Most of them are old masters. They include fine specimens of Titian, Velasquez, Tintoretto, Vandyke, Heubens, Murillo, Teniers, Paul Veronese, Claude and Wauvermans. Another of the attractions of the house is a superb library containing many rare and curious first editions. It lacks nothing to make it an ideal grand residence. The furniture and interior decorations are in keeping with the architectural scheme of the building—that of the Italian renaissance which lends itself peculiarly to ornate effects. Everywhere is harmony and good taste. Money has been expended lavishly but with that wise restraint which always avoids vulgarity. Everything is rich—but there is nothing gaudy. A visit to Dorchester house is not calculated to impress one with a great yearning for the simple life.

Mr. Reid rents it furnished—all but the silver plate which for some reason English folk are rather chary of relinquishing even temporarily to the care of strangers. It has been stated that he pays for it $25,000 a year—which is $5,000 a year more than his official salary. But most English judges of real estate are of the opinion that he is exceedingly lucky in getting it at that rate. Its owner, Capt. George Lindsay Holford, was not a bit anxious to let it. He is a bachelor of 45 and enormously wealthy, owning some 16,500 acres of land and another magnificent residence—a country one—in Gloucestershire. He seldom lives at Dorchester house himself and then occupies only two rooms there. It has always been a sort of white elephant on his hands, but he can well afford to indulge in that luxury; and being in no need of the money to be obtained by letting it, he has never sought a tenant for it. He would never have had any difficulty in finding one, especially among rich American folk anxious to cut a splurge in English society. He is one of the king's equerries and on intimate terms with his majesty. It was to oblige the king that he once before let the house for a brief period to the duke d'Aosta, and allowed the Shahzada Nasr-ulla to occupy it during his visit to this country in 1895. And it is solely because the king told him that he would like to see the American ambassador fixed up in a bigger house than any other ambassador in London occupies that he agreed to let Whitelaw Reid take his white elephant off his hands.

The king, it is said, took a great liking to Mr. Reid on the two previous occasions when he paid official visits to this country, and on personal as well as on state grounds was glad to be able to lend him a hand in getting settled in London. He can be depended on further to assist in making the American ambassador's entertainments brilliant social successes. Diplomatically they will be each playing the same game—keeping up a sort of love feast between John Bull and Uncle Sam. Nobody knows better than the king how to apply the cement that blends friends together.

Dorchester house is a comparatively modern building. It was erected in 1851 by Capt. Holford's father, Stayner Holford, on the site of another mansion having the same name in Park lane. The latter had been occupied by that famous marquis of Hertford whose literary monument remains in the "Steyne" of Thackeray and the "Monmouth" of Disraeli's "Coningsby."

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Drowning of Barney Gray at Alaska Is Confirmed.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—Barney Gray, a brother of Deputy Sheriff Tom Gray, was drowned in White Horse rapids, 100 miles north of Dawson City, Alaska, a year ago last August. Deputy Sheriff Gray heard of the drowning some time ago, but there was nothing more to it than a rumor, and he started an investigation to confirm the report, which he succeeded in doing through Frank Bartley, a former resident of this city, who now lives in Rolla. Bartley was a passenger on the boat from which Barney Gray fell as it shot through the rapids. Bartley, Gray and Patrick Lynch were in a party going from Circle City to Dawson. The boat started through the rapids at night and Gray lost his balance and fell overboard. His companions made an effort to save him, but were unsuccessful; and the body was not recovered, the theory being among residents of Alaska that the rapids have never given up any of its dead. Barney Gray left here sixteen years ago, having at one time served on the police force. Four years ago he went to Alaska, but his brother and other relatives did not hear from his often after he had reached the land of gold. George McMasters, also a former resident of Grand Forks, was captain of the boat from which Mr. Gray fell and was drowned, and he has been asked to give particulars of the accident.

The first case taken up in the district court was that of James A. Finneal against Joseph Jarvis. The action is brought to recover $5,000 for alleged false imprisonment, Jarvis being a patrolman on the East Grand Forks police department. On Dec. 4 a son of Finneal was arrested by Officer Jarvis on Minnesota Point. He was locked up there for several hours in a sort of detention jail, and was not taken to the police station at the city hall. He asserts that while he was there Officer Jarvis relieved him of what money he had, something like $7, and let him go. James Finneal is a prominent farmer over south river. He told them he would yell if they did, and then they left him in a down-town alley, where he was found. He was convicted at Elk Point, S. D.

Dealers report that farmers who expected to secure binding twine at lower prices this year will be disappointed, for they are already quoting twine at 10 and 10½ cents, and say that if there is anything like a big crop of small grain there will be a substantial advance.

The International Harvester company and the Plymouth Cordage company are already in control of the market. The Kansas and Missouri penitentiaries are making a large amount of coarse binding twine, but their output will be used in those two states.

GUARDED BY SOLDIERS.

Two Canadians Are Wed In Peruvian Village.

Ottawa, Ont., June 22.—After a trip over the mountains of Bolivia, South America, in order to reach Peru, where a civil marriage was allowed, beset by Roman Catholic priests, and finally defended by an escort of soldiers while the marriage ceremony was being performed, two young Canadians, Miss Gile, a graduate of McMaster university, and A. G. Thompson, were married a short time ago. They are spending their honeymoon in this province, near the Rideau lake.

Mr. Thompson and Miss Gile were thrown into one another's society at La Paz, Bolivia, where the former carried on a business. Mr. Thompson was the only merchant in Bolivia who spoke English. Miss Gile was the only unmarried lady who could converse in the same tongue. They concluded that they were intended for one another. But before the wedding bells could ring out for them they foresaw much trouble.

In Bolivia all marriages are solemnized by the Roman Catholic church. To Peru, therefore, they must go. They made a journey covering two days to a village just beyond the border line. Mr. Thompson visited the village ruler, or alcalde, and produced a letter from the president of Peru, giving his sanction to the marriage ceremony being performed in his country. The alcalde feared interference from the priests, but the couple was determined. News of the affair by this time had got noised about in the village, and the populace became frenzied, so that an armed guard of soldiers had to be used for protection, and in the midst of great commotion and much danger to the contracting parties the knot was finally tied and the venturesome couple got back to Bolivia, from whence they came to Canada.

AMERICAN IS CHAIRMAN

Of Relief Fund For India Earthquake Sufferers.

New York, June 22.—Word has just come here that Rev. Dr. J. C. R. Ewing, president of the Forman Christian college, Lahore, India; has been appointed by the British government chairman of the relief fund for the earthquake sufferers. The appointment is looked upon as a remarkable one, as Dr. Ewing is an American, a native of Pennsylvania, and has been for many years a missionary in India for the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions of this country. The office to which he has been appointed is both prominent and responsible, and the appointment is held to emphasize the fact that the British government recognizes not only the worth of the man, but the work that American missionaries are doing for the natives in India. These missionaries occupy a position which is practically one of mediation, as they stand between a government which is trying, amid great difficulties, to do its duty to the people, and a people disunited, distrustful, but willing to be loyal if it dares.

Dr. Ewing, who has been thus honored by the British government, has been a worker in India for twenty-four years. When he first went out he was in charge of a mission at Allahabad, but in 1888 he became professor of theology in the seminary at Saharanpur. That position he held till 1896, when he was made president of the Forman Christian college. This is an important institution and number about 400 students. In a total of 377 last year there were 188 Hindus, 132 Mahommedans, 28 Christians, 26 Sikhs, and three others. In examinations for the university the students of the Forman Christian college stood first in Arabic, Persian, English, pure mathematics, physics, history, political economy and philosophy.

PLOT TO TORTURE.

Conspiracy to Rob a Lonely Old Man.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 22.—In a confession made before a notary public in the Sioux Falls penitentiary, Ed Williams told the story of the plot last September to torture Frank Bertrau of Jefferson, S. D., until he revealed the hiding place of a hoard of money.

Williams confirms the police suspicions by declaring that the plot was formed by Morris Levich, a wealthy second-hand dealer of Sioux City, and Frank Ammerman, Levich's clerk. This confession the police have been trying to secure ever since Williams was discovered nearly dead from a shot wound last September, and he only gave it, he declares, because Levich deserted him after his arrest and allowed him to be sent to the Sioux Falls prison for five years.

Williams says Levich and Ammerman hired a man named Torkelson and himself and the two drove to Bertrau's place. They found Bertrau at home, but were denied admission. They tried to force their way in, when Bertrau fired with a shotgun, the charge being received by Williams. He was brought back to Sioux City, he says, to Levich's home, and while the others thought him in a faint he heard them plotting to throw him into the Missouri river. He told them he would yell if they did, and then they left him in a down-town alley, where he was found. He was convicted at Elk Point, S. D.

INDIAN MURDER.

Joe Jordan, a Pillager, Kills Wife While Drunk.

White Earth, Minn., June 22.—The Indian camp here has been thrown into consternation by the action of Joe Jordan, a half-breed Pillager, from Red Lake, who came to attend the Indian celebration, and who has been quite a prominent speaker at the Chippewa council fires. He shot and instantly killed his wife, Ay-ah-be-quay. The murderer had been under the influence of liquor since he had been here and was more than drunk when he entered the teepee and shot his wife, who was reclining on a pallet. Jordan was immediately arrested by Deputy Sheriff Louzon of Becker county, who is also chief of the agency police, and placed in jail. Agent Michalet immediately closed down all dance halls and prohibited the visiting and local Indians from dancing.

Danderine

GREW THIS HAIR AND WE CAN PROVE IT.

MISS MARMARA HENRY, 5036 Forrestville Ave., CHICAGO.

Miss Henry says: "Before I began using Danderine my hair was falling out in great handsful, and I am pleased to say that Danderine not only stopped it at once, but has made my hair grow more than twice as long as it ever was."

Mrs. Eloise Atherton, Little Rock, Ark., says: "It is surely remarkable the way Danderine improves the hair. It has made my hair grow ten inches longer in five months and it is getting thicker and longer all the time. I believe in giving praise where it is due, and you can use my name as reference if you so desire."

FLORENCE RUSSELL, Age 6 years, 215 Mohawk Street, CHICAGO.

Since it has become generally known that Danderine causes hair to grow just as abundantly on the heads of children as it does on those of matured persons, many truly marvelous cases are coming to our notice. Little Miss Russell, whose photograph appears above, is certainly one of the remarkable ones. Her beautiful hair is over thirty inches long and her mother says that "DANDERINE GREW EVERY BIT OF IT."

MISS SELMA HASSELL, 2728 North 42d Court, CHICAGO.

Miss Hassel says: "My hair would not reach below my waist when I began using your Danderine. It was also faded and splitting at the ends. Now it is over 2½ feet longer than it ever was and it has regained its original rich blond color. I used the tonic about four months all together."

DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, fertilizing and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. IT IS THE NATURAL FOOD OF THE HAIR, SCIENTIFICALLY CHARGED WITH NEW AND GENUINE LIFE-PRODUCING ESSENCES UNHEARD OF BY OTHER MAKERS OF HAIR TONIC. NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle.

American Society Civil Engineers Talks Favorably of Duluth.

F. A. Cokefair Does Missionary Work In City's Behalf.

It is probable that the American Society of Civil Engineers which is now meeting in Cleveland, O., in annual session, may vote this afternoon on the meeting place for the 1906 convention and it is considered as among the strong posibilities that Duluth will be the selection of the engineers.

C. C. Coketair received, today, a letter from his son F. A. Cokefair, who with Major Charles L. Potter, government engineer of this district has been attending the Cleveland session, in which Mr. Cokefair says Major Potter has been compelled to start back to Duluth by the lake route and that previous to leaving he left the matter of urging Duluth's claims for the 1906 convention in Mr. Cokefair's hands. The latter states that he has done some active missionary work and that about every engineer with whom he has conferred has talked favorably of Duluth for the next convention.

Mr. Cokefair said that there are about 500 engineers present at the Cleveland convention and that the vote for the location of the next convention would probably take place Thursday. The American Society of Civil Engineers is comprised of about 1,500 members, among whom are nearly all the prominent members of the engineering profession in the country. The conditions surrounding a membership in the society make an election very desirable and for that reason the organization has always maintained a high name throughout the country and the prominent cities of the country have vied with each other to secure the annual conventions. Attending the meetings are always engineers who have had charge of some of the greatest improvement works in this country.

Mr. Cokefair, in his letter expresses hope of success in his efforts to secure the 1906 convention and he is receiving able support from other prominent engineers of the country, among these being William A. Brackinridge, who for ten years was in charge of the Niagara Falls power plant and who is now one of the commissioners of the Greater Erie canal. Mr. Brackinridge is also on the staff of consulting engineers of the Great Northern Power company. Mr. Cokefair has also met and visited with J. T. Fanning, the wellknown author on hydraulics and water supply engineering, and who had charge of the St. Anthony's falls development besides other large engineering feats in various parts of the country.

One of the pleasant features of the convention was a trip through the park systems of Cleveland, the engineers having forty carriages and being entertained handsomely at a fine club on the lake shore.

Mr. Cokefair says he has met many interesting and celebrated engineers and intends to put up a good talk for Duluth when the opportunity offers and get as many votes as possible before the subject is considered. The weather at Cleveland, he says, has been uncomfortably hot.

A $4,000,000 Gem Found.

The largest diamond ever discovered has been found near Pretoria. It weighs over 3,00 carats and is said to be worth about $4,000,000. There is much excitement as a result of the find. The best medicine ever discovered for the hundred and one ailments of mankind is the famous Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and through it thousands of persons have been able to recover that most priceless gem—health. When you remember that it has been before the public for over fifty years you can get some idea of the wonderful merit it contains, and a fair trial is all that is necessary to add you to its long list of friends who are never without a bottle in their medicine chest. It positively cures Indigestion, dyspepsia, costiveness, cramps, general weakness, billiousness and malaria, fever and ague. Try a bottle today.

FOUND BOY WHO ESCAPED

Steward of Easton Has Exciting Experience In Virginia.

On June 3, an 11-year-old boy named John Santala came in from Canada on the steamer Easton to go to relatives in Virginia. Immigrant Inspector Dean had him examined and found that he was afflicted with tuberculosis and barred from the country for that reason. He was put in charge of H. Weatherdon, steward of the Easton for return to Canada.

Before the boat went out the boy slipped away from the steward and disappeared. Strict search was made for him, but he could not be found and it was up to the steward or the Booth line people to find Santala for the reason that it meant a fine of about $1,000 if they did not.

A few days ago they got wind of the fact that the boy was with relatives in Virginia. Mr. Weatherdon went to Virginia yesterday and after a hard search found the boy and took him by force. The relatives of the lad had Mr. Weatherdon arrested and he was arraigned in municipal court up there. He was under arrest for three hours but was discharged and cambe down here with young Santal last night.

The boy was taken back to Port Arthur thur on the Easton this afternoon.

MAY REACH TWENTY-ONE.

Claim Agent Not Sure of Number of Dead.

Cleveland, June 22.—Claim Agent Whiting of the Lake Shore company said this afternoon that he was not positive whether the number of dead was twenty or twenty-one. He thought that one man among the dead had been counted twice owing to a confusion in names. So far as is known at this hour, there remains but one unidentified body.

General Manager W. H. Marshall of the Lake Shore road expressed the opinion today that the wreck of the Twentieth Century limited train was deliberately planned by some unknown person throwing the switch at Mentor.

Mr. Marshall said that the first train fast or slow to pass the switch, must necessarily have been wrecked, and that there was no possible way to guard against the same. The evidence, he said, showed without doubt that the switch had been thrown against the train and was locked open. According to the report of the operator at Mentor, the switch light showed white at the moment the limited approached, indicating a clear track. The fact that the light showed white, while the switch was against the train Mr. Marshall believed would indicate that the mechanism of the switch was tampered with.

Fireman Gorham, who suffered serious injuries and is in a Cleveland hosaital, declared to Mr. Marshall today that the signal light showed white. The switch was found to be in a perfect condition immediately after the wreck. Mr. Marshall went to Mentor today and will make a rigid personal investigation as to the cause of the disaster.

NORWEGIAN LUTHERANS

Adjourn Sixtieth Annual Session After Transacting Business.

Red Wing, Minn., June 22.—The sixtieth annual session of the Haugen Norweglan Lutheran Synod of America has adjourned. Prof. Edward O. Ringstad, editor of the Little Messenger, tendered his resignation, and Rev. A. O. Mortredt was elected to the vacancy. Trustees I. E. Anderson, S. E. Iverson and O. H. Oace resigned and Rev. S. Sassesson, of Kasson, Minn., and M. S. Stensland of Beresford, S. D., were elected members of the board for two years; L. Schlanbusch of Roland, Iowa, and Edward Berg of Northfield, Minn., were elected for one year.

The following salary schedule was adopted for missionaries Married misionaries, first five years, $750 per annum; five to ten years, $800; ten to fifteen years, $850; fifteen years and over, $900. Unmarried missionaries, first five years, $400; five to ten years, $450; ten to fifteen years, $475; fifteen years and over, $500.

It was decided that an assessing committee composed of two members from each district be appointed to levy a per capita tax upon members of the synod and that the funds thus raised be annually appropriated by the conference to defray current expenses of the various enterprises of the synod. The salaries of the synod's officers were left unchanged. Unless suitable invitations are received in due time the next annual conference will be held in Red Wing. After a committee had been appointed to make arrangements for the next convention the synod adjourned.

WOMAN SHOOTS AT A RURAL MAIL CARRIER.

Wichita, Kas., June 22.—A posse of armed officers headed by Sheriff Scad has gone to Baynesville fifteen miles south of here to capture Mrs. E. Roseberry, an elderly woman who has been keeping an armed watch over the highway in front of her premises. She has disputed the right of Rural Mail Carrier John Gardner to use the road as a mail route and fired at the carrier as he passed the house. Gardner notified the United States authorities and a warrant was issued for the arrest of the woman. She has intrenched herself in her dwelling.

Dies of Drink.

SAVE BABIES LIVES.

English Mayor Pays Premiums to Carful Mothers.

The new mayor of Huddersfield, England, has promised to give to the mother of every child born during his year of of office a promissory note for £1, payable one year after birth, if the child lives so long, says the World Today. His object, briefly stated, is to prevent the wastage of child life by making it worth while for the parents to be careful about their children. After considering the French system of offering a premium to children who have lived a year, he hit upon his present plan, because the "proper time to secure the child's welfare is to have the mother's help from the very first. I could not at first see quite how I could make a premium effective in preventing the child's death, which was what I wished to do. Then there came to me the happy thought of giving to the mother, so soon as the child was born, a properly legal promissory note, payable twelve months after date; and on the note I thought I might get in some good advice."

The promissory note is prepared in due legal form, and is accompanied by "The Golden Rule for Babies," the whole document being printed in clors and the shape of a certificate. The following is a copy of the note and the instructions following it:

FOR THE BABY.

Name of the baby.....Date of birth.....
Name and address of parents.....

THE GOLDEN RULE.

For the Life and Health of the Baby.

"Feed with the Mother's Milk; the Mother's Milk is the natural food and the best."

Twelve months after date I promise to pay to the parents or guardians of the above-named child the sum of one pound on production of proof that the said child has reached the age of twelve months.

Signed.....
Mayor of Huddersfield.

For every baby fed on its mother's milk who dies before the age of three months, fifteen babies die who have been fed by other means.

RULES FOR WELFARE OF BABY.

When the mother can not suckle the child it should be fed on new milk and water mixed in certain proportions according to age.

At first half milk and half water, with a teaspoonful of cream and a little sugar. Then, as the child grows older, less water to be added. When cream can not be obtained a small piece of suet may be shredded into the milk.

WHAT TO DO.

Always feed the baby at regular intervals every three hours.

Always keep the baby very clean.

Always bathe (or sponge all over) the baby once a day in warm water.

Always let the baby sleep in a cradle or cot; a wicker basket makes a good cot (or even an empty packing case).

Always use fuller's earth to powder the baby, not starch or flour.

Always attend to the baby when it cries. The baby cries for one of three reasons:

1. The baby is hungry, or
2. The baby is uncomfortable or something hurts, or
3. The baby is ill.

WHAT NOT TO DO.

Never give the baby soothing syrups, fever powders or anything of that sort.

Never give the baby bread, or sops, or gravy, or any other food except milk, till it is more than seven months old.

Never give the baby skimmed milk or milk that is not perfectly fresh and good.

Never use a feeding bottle with a long tube. Nobody can keep the inside of the tube clean.

Never carry the baby "sitting up" until it is five months old.

Never neglect to send for a doctor if the baby is ill. Babies are soon overcome and easily die.

Local railroad men will hold a meeting next Monday morning to discuss plans for the entertainment of members of the Western Passenger association, which will meet in Duluth, July 10.

The Duluth Yacht club is planning on a series of mid-week races, to be held Wednesday evenings, after 6 o'clock, for the new square-bow type of boats, recently received from St. Paul. These contests will have no connection with the pennant and cup series. There will probably be five of the former, with a pair of field glasses offered as a prize to the winner.

There will be no special observance of the first trip of the steamship North West to Duluth this season when the big boat steams into the local harbor next Tuesday evening, June 27. The canal piers will be brilliantly lighted, as usual, but if the vessel is on time the pretty effect will be lost upon the incoming passengers, for the North West is due to arrive at 8 o'clock.

The case of B. W. Armstrong against the city of Duluth is being heard today in the municipal court. Armstrong claims damages to the amount of $400 for injuries alleged to have been sustained in a fall on the sidewalk on First avenue east, between Sixth and Seventh streets.

Goods to the value of $232 were replevined in the municipal court yesterday, by R. R. Forward, from Gust Olson, John Lindgren and Edward Stirling of Grand Marais. The goods were bought on the installment plan to furnish a hotel, and the money was not paid.

Blanche Gauvin, the 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gauvin of 926 West First street, who was operated on at St. Mary's hospital for intestinal obstruction Tuesday noon, will, it is believed, entirely regain her health, although for a time it was believed she might be unable to withstand the effects of the operation.

The body of the unknown man, which was found in Chester park Sunday, has not yet been identified, although a number of persons have inspected it in Durkan & Crawford's morgue, where it is lying. It will probably be buried tomorrow in Park Hill cemetery.

"Al" Cummings, the Wisconsin university pitcher, will play with the Marshall-Wells baseball team this summer. The team has arranged a game with Lake Nebagamon for July 4. The manager, F. J. Chandler, is looking for other dates with the teams from the range towns, or local mines.

HAS HER TROUBLES.

Manicure Says Women Are Mean and Men Fresh.

The manicure is not willing to admit that her lot is so easy as some of her critics think, says the New York Sun.

"Most of the girls I know of, except those employed in the large establishments," said a manicure, "suffer from indigestion. That is because customers often prevent us from going to lunch at the proper time.

"It is very easy to say that one should make it a rule to go to lunch at a certain time every day, whether customers are waiting or not. I'd like to see a woman who would ever come back again if she were asked to wait for a manicure to go to lunch.

"That would be the end of her. Women can be just as mean to one another in a manicure's place as anywhere else. They come here and complain about the smell of smoke.

"'You shouldnt' let men smoke in here,' they say. 'It's very disagreeable for ladies. Besides, nice girls ought not to want to allow men to smoke in their offices.'

"Now it happens that very few men will sit in a manicure's room and not want to smoke. Perhaps it would be best if they did not. But men are much better customers than women.

"They come more regularly and they are much more liberal in the matter of tips. No woman could make her place pay without taking tips. So we just have to put up with the scolding of the women.

"Nothing gives a woman more pleasure than to come and find a manicure out at lunch. 'You're never here,' they love to say. 'Every time I come I find the door locked and the card that you are out at lunch. You must have a lot of customers to be able to take so much time.'

"That always means that she has been at the office once and found me out.

"Men are just as mean sometimes. The other day one of them used the telephone. It is a pay station, and we have to pay for every call. A customer talked so long I told him that he must have had two calls. He asked the operator.

"'Only one,' he sang out to me. 'Here's 10 cents.'

"As soon as he left the room I called up the operator and asked her how it happened he could talk for so long on one call. It was two calls, and she had told him so. The next time he came into the place he telephoned again.

"'You owe me 10 cents from last week,' I told him. 'You had two calls then.'

"He declared it was impossible and said he would give me 10 cents for the call he had just had to split the difference. Can you think of anything meaner than that? Of course, he got his manicuring just 10 cents cheaper, for I paid for the telephone.

"I'm not afraid of anybody that comes into the office so long as I am not altogether alone. If any man gets fresh I just call the other girl over to the table to help me. That usually lets him see that I intend to crush him.

"Once I was alone and one man did really scare me. I had never seen him before. He had such a horrible stare that he would have frightened anybody. I started in to manicure him, and suddenly stopped when he became annoying and walked out of the room.

"I waited in the hallway with one of the stenographers in the office across the hall for him to come out. It was a long time before I realized that the building would soon close, and that he must be got out.

"I called the janitor, who sent one of his men to tell him that he must go. He pretended for a while that he was waiting for me. But the janitor knew better, and succeeded in getting him out.

"But usually they are not so troublesome as this. They quiet down without a struggle when they once see they cannot be funny."

THE BACHELOR'S FAD.

Chafing dishes are giving place to the gas stove and the casserole in bachelor apartments, says the New York Sun. Many men still single have turned from the bachelor apartment house to the small flat, greatly to the comfort of themselves and their pocketbooks.

The tiny kitchens in the four-room flats can be made very attractive with white paint and cheap oilcloth, and the French cooking utensil has already proved its usefulness. One uptown apartment boasts a complete equipment from the tiny one holding a single egg to be baked with cheese to the three-quart casserole large enough to hold spaghetti for a poker party. The work is as tempting as with the shiny chafing dish, while a wider range of dishes is possible and better results are obtained.

WHEAT IS DULL

Advance Is Made With St. Louis Market In Lead.

News Not Bullish But Cash Demand Is Somewhat Better.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 22.—St. Louis was the strongest market today and there was practically nothing to attribute it to except a firmer cash demand. The weather was very favorable and foreign markets gave very little for either bulls or bears. Liverpool closed unchanged to ½d higher, London and Antwerp unchanged and Berlin ¼c higher. The St. Louis market closed ⅞-1c higher for July and ¾-⅞c higher for September. Chicago gained 1⅛c for July but September was only ¼c higher. Kansas City did not follow St. Louis for both options there were only ⅛-¼c higher. September in Duluth gained ¼c, in Minneapolis ⅛-¼c and in New York ⅛c. The July option in the Northewestern markets was devoid of interest.

Minneapolis yesterday and today was persistently reporting that Duluth had sold 300,000 bus. of wheat yesterday to go East. No confirmation of the sale could be obtained here and shippers report less than 50,000 bus. sold.

Car receipts at Duluth were 9, against 30 last year, and at Minneapolis 140, against 109 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 149, against 118 last year. Chicago received 1, against 14 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 251,000 bus., last year 204,000 bus. Shipments 182,000 bus., last year 188,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 74,000 bus.

In the Liverpool market corn closed unchanged to ¼d higher. In the Chicago market September corn closed a shade higher, September oats closed ⅜-½c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 660,000 bus, last year 331,000 bus. Shipments 671,000 bus, last year 345,000 bus. Clearances were 78,000 bus.

The trading in wheat in the Duluth market was again very dull. The new September option opened ¼c lower at 83⅜c, advanced to 84⅝c at 10:05 and then fell back and closed at 84⅛c. The gain for the day was ¼c. The old September also opened ¼c lower at 88⅝c, advanced to 89½c and closed at 89¼c, an advance of ¼c. The July option closed unchanged at $1.11½.

Flax was very dull. July was unchanged at $1.46, September 1c higher at $1.29⅛ and October ½c higher at $1.26⅝.

Oats advanced ½c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—To arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.11½; on track, No. 1 northern, $1.11½; No. 2 northern, $1.03¼; durum, No. 1, 84c; No. 2, 83c; July, $1.11½; September, new, 84¼c; September, old, 89¼c. Flax—To arrive, $1.48; on track, $1.48; July, $1.46; September, $1.29⅛; October, $1.26⅜. Oats—To arrive, 31⅞c; on track, 31¾c. Rye—On track, 72c; September, 61½c. Barley—Feed, 39½@41c.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 9, last year, 30; oats, 4; barley, 8; flax, 2, last year, 6.

Receipts—Wheat, 12,104; oats, 1,673; barley, 7,648; flax, 3,405.

Shipments—Wheat, 25,000; rye, 1,643.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Considering Weather, Wheat Is Remarkably Bullish.

Chicago, June 22.—Considering the greatly improved weather conditions, sentiment in wheat here today was remarkably bullish. Commission houses were active bidders, and with only moderate offerings prices made a substantial advance. July opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 88⅝c to 89c and sold up to 89¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 150 cars against 179 cars last week and 153 cars a year ago.

Prices continued to advance until July had sold up to 90¾c. Strength of cash wheat at all outside markets was the principal reason for the sharp upturn. A considerable reaction occurred late in the day as a result of profit-taking, but the market closed firm, with July up ⅞c at 90@¼c.

A weak undertone prevailed in the corn market as a result of liberal acceptances. July opened down ⅜c to 54c and held around 54½c. Local receipts were 434 cars, with 118 of contract grade.

Later the market became quite firm in sympathy with the strength of wheat. For July the highest point of the day was reached at 54½@⅝c. The market closed firm, with July unchanged at 54¾c.

Strength of wheat had a steadying effect on the oats market. July opened ⅛c lower at 31¼c and sold at 31⅜c. Local receipts were 122 cars.

September pork was up 2½c at $12.82½. Lard was up 2½c at $7.45. Ribs were 2½@5c higher, at $7.75@7.77½.

Close: Wheat—July, 90@1¼c; September, 88¾c. December, 84c. Corn—July, 54¾c; old, 54¾@⅞c; September, 55c; old, 53¼c; December, 48⅞c, old, 50¾c; May, 48¾c; July, (1906), 49c. Oats—June, 32c; July, 31⅞@32c; September, 30¼c; December, 31¼c; May, 33c. Pork—July $12.47½; September, $12.80; December, $12.87½. Lard—July, $7.22½; September, $7.42½; October, $7.47½. Ribs—July, $7.55; September, $7.75@7.77½; October, $7.80@7.82½. Rye—July, 66c; September, 63½c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.43; southwestern, $1.25. Timothy—June, $3; September, $3.25. Clover—June, $11.75@12.00. Barley—Cash, 42@50c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, $1.03; No. 3 red, 94c@$1.00; No. 2 hard, $1.02¾@1.03; No. 3 hard, 94@99c; No. 1 northern, $1.17; No. 2 northern, $1.06@1.12; No. 3 spring, $1.02@1.08. Oats—No. 2, 30¾@31c; No. 3, 30c. Corn—No. 2, 55½c; No. 3, 55@¾c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Our market opened strong and steadily advanced throughout the session. Cash wheat again sold at $1.02¾. While such sales are but small in volume, the cash business here and at other primary points indicate that wheat is in urgent demand for milling purposes. The situation still looks strong to us. The returns from threshing are not so favorable as were looked for. It is still a market which will be governed by the weather, threshing returns and yield. It is still a good trading market and the situation looks healthy to us and we favor buying wheat on setbacks.

Corn—Considering the smart advance in July wheat and strength in the wheat market, the action of July corn and future months was disappointing. Some little strength developed about noon, but it petered out when the wheat market showed a rencttonary tendency. The cash demand is slow. Shipments today do not represent the present demand, they being sales made some days ago when the demand was more urgent. Receipts are liberal and more than enough for present requirements. This feature of the market was expected to show quite an increase as notwithstanding lower bids being sent out, receiving houses are meeting with liberal response from the country. We still feel we would only buy corn on recessions.

Oats—Trade was not broad and short covering contributed largely to the buying demand. All things considered, the cash situation prospects for the new crop, etc., we doubt if present prices can be permanently maintained.

* * *

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Prices were off a little at the opening, but the market was steadily advanced on a somewhat better cash demand, and on the theory that recent rains in the Southwest would make the July delivery prospects uncertain. Reports from the harvest fields continue mainly favorable. The present condition continues satisfactory on winter wheat. Closing prices today are generally ¼c higher than those of yesterday. A further advance tomorrow is not improbable, and if it comes, believe wheat could be safely sold for a moderate turn.

* * *

Cincinnati Price Current: Favorable week for corn and seasonable progress made. Oats maintaining promise of good yield. Winter wheat unchanged in general indications. Harvesting begun in Ohio valley districts. Spring wheat making good advancement.

* * *

Chicago Inter-Ocean: The corn trade figures that Armour is the largest holder of old July corn and has been accumulating it for some time. There has been many million bushels of old July corn sold by the leading longs the past two days. Bartlett Frazier alone selling over 2,000,000 bus., and other holders have also gone out. The corn has been picked up, according to the talent, by Armour. This is the only explanation they can make for the disappearance of the millions of bushels sold. The theory of the corn bulls is that the run of corn this month will reduce the surplus in the country so that in July receipts will be light, and, with stocks down to bed rock, there is little possibility of getting much here during the harvest time. Comstock is put down as being long 3,000,000 bus. of September corn, but says he sold out his July. His theory is that there will be less corn to come here in September, also light stocks, and the market will be more easily controlled.

Race For Supremacy.

It is interesting to watch the race for supremacy among Minneapolis-St. Paul-Chicago trains. First place is securely held by the Pioneer Limited and the second place by the Fast Mail. Both trains are entirely owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. There are three other fast trains cia this line from the Twin Cities to Chicago every day, and there is no extra fare to ride on them. Address W. B. Dixon, northwestern passenger agent, St. Paul, for further particulars, lowest rates, etc.

STRENGTH SHOWN

By Stocks and the Close Higher In Most Cases.

All Departments of the Market Were Quite Active.

New York, June 22.—Opening dealings were on a large scale, but the price changes were generally small and mixed. Many stocks were unchanged from last night. There was a rise of about a point in Illinois Central and Louisville & Nashville and Union Pacific was down ½ and Southern Pacific ⅝.

An outbreak of bullish activity in the Pennsylvania group dissipated the opening hesitation. The slight losses in the Pacifics were recovered, but the general Western list did not benefit much. Most of the independent metal stocks rose buoyantly despite the sluggishness of the United States Steel stocks which was held in check by large profit-taking sales. Traders took profits and the market eased off and became dull, but rose again before the end of the hour.

Pennsylvania was lifted 2⅛ on large buying orders and Western stocks came into the movement. Union Pacific touched 126, St. Paul and Atchison rose a point or more including Colorado Fuel, Sugar, Smelting preferred and Westinghouse Electric. Realizing in Reading and the United States Steel stocks confused the movement, United States Steel preferred falling below last night. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Several of the railroads and specialties that had lagged were taken up after midday, notably the Rock Island stocks, Canadian Pacific, Wabash preferred and Copper. These became dull in common with the general market after they had been lifted a point.

Late in the day New York Central became the principal feature, and its buige to 146¼ accounted for the hardening of all other favorites, Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Northwestern and Erie were conspicuously bought and rose a point.

There were some belated advances, notably United States Steel, which rose ⅞. New York, C. & St. L., Cleveland, C., C. & St. L., Philadelphia Rapid Transit, Biscuit and Realty advanced 1¼ to 2. Brooklyn Union Gas jumped 7½. Realizing under cover of these advances checked advances elsewhere, and United States Steel preferred fell back to the lowest. Lackawanna lost 1, Pittsburg Coal preferred 3 and Hide and Leather preferred 4. Rock Island rose 2 points in the late dealings and stiffened the market slightly. The close was irregular.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is closing stronger and in most cases sharply higher. All departments of the market were quite active. The feeling seems to be that the market has turned. It has clearly gotten out of its recent dull and weak rut. Special stocks such as Ontario & Western, Steels, Pennsylvania and Southern Pacific look very attractive. The action of the market is strong and seems as if it would do still better.

* * *

T. A. McIntyre to Paine, Webber & Co.: We feel bullish on the stock market and would advise operating on the long side. The situation and outlook is undoubtedly favorable for a creeping bull market.

* * *

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market continued active and strong today. The publication of Hendricks' report on the Equitable Life was regarded as the removal of what has been an important uncertainty and the report itself was not disturbing. The market ignored lower prices and not only opened strong, but continued the advance through the morning. Later there was some irregularity due to profit-taking, but the closing was strong and at about the best prices. Rumors of new Franco-German complications were ignored. All of the usual leaders were strong.

* * *

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was quite active and strong, and there seemed to be a lot of short covering. All the good stocks made gains and many of the specialties were taken hold of. The Steel stocks were active and advanced. The bond market was also more active. The action of the market was good and continued so all day. We rather look for the continuance of this activity with an upward tendency.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, June 22.—Money on call easy, 2@2¼ per cent; closing bid, 2 per cent; offered, 2¼ per cent. Time money slightly firmer; sixty days, 3 per cent; ninety days, 3¼ per cent; six months, 3¾@4 per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 3½@4¼ per cent. Sterling exchange, easy, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.87@4.87.05 for demand, and at $4.85.10@15 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.86 and $4.88; commercial bills, $4.84⅞@4.85. Bar silver, 58½c. Mexican dollars, 45½c. Government bonds, steady; railroad bonds, firm.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 22.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 7@12 points, in response to higher cables and after a few minutes of hesitation continued to advance on short covering and aggressive bull support with prices in the middle of the morning 20 to 22 points net higher.

Spot closed quiet, 20 points higher; middling uplands, 9.20; middling gulf, 9.45; sales, 200 bales. Futures closed steady; June, 8.66; July, 8.73; August, 8.75; September, 8.86; October, 9.82; November, 8.94; December, 9.02; January, 9.06; February, 9.08; March, 9.10; April, 9.13; May, 9.16.

AN OUTFIT FOR $65.

Eight hats trimmed by the wearer.
Eight pairs of shoes (Oxfords).
Eight pairs of high shoes.
Two outer garments for summer.
Two outer garments for winter.
Sixteen cotton shirt waists.
Twenty-four pairs stockings.
Two kimonos.
Four cotton shirt waist suits.
Ten underskirts.
Forty-eight handkerchiefs.
Eight corset covers.
Neckwear.
Eight nightgowns.
Two umbrellas.
Eight pairs cotton gloves.
Six winter undervests.
Eight pairs of kid gloves.
Eight pairs of rubbers.
Sixteen pairs of cotton drawers.
One muff.
Belts, buckles, etc.

A MILLINERY HINT.

New York Sun: "Have you ever noticed that in a first-class millinery shop you are never permitted to try on a hat while you are standing up?" inquired a woman with a shopping list in her gloved hand. "You have probably noted the number of easy chairs scattered around these rooms, one for every pier or cheval glass, and you have thought how comforting they must be to tired shoppers.

"But there is a reason far deeper than the desire merely to make patrons comfortable. A hat is always more becoming to a woman who is seated gracefully in a chair than to one who is standing up. If the hat makes her look too tall or too short, if it brings out her bad points, the rese in the chair minimizes all defects."

ALL THEY NEED.

"Don't ever give a cop a knife if you are looking for a present for him," said an officer on the bridge in Jefferson market court, says the New York Sun. "They are all provided with them. Indeed, they have, as a rule, enough for their friends as well as for themselves. If they happen to need a knife they always have an opportunity to get hold of one. Every time a cop searches a prisoner he comes across at least one knife. Nobody knows what becomes of it, and even if the prisoner misses it he is not likely to say anything about it. Anyhow, cops never need knives."

To lose is often merely not to find—as a business chance or bargain missed, and thus lost, through failure to read the ads.

The woman who never reads store-advertising is about as wise as the merchant who never advertises—but this is too much like "calling names," so we withdraw the comparison, in deference to the woman.

ORDER FOR HEARING APPLICATION FOR APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATOR.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis, ss.—

In Probate Court, Special Term, June 22nd, 1905.

In the Matter of the Estate of Ax Johnson, Deceased:

On receiving and filing the petition of Margaret Johnson of the County of St. Louis, Minnesota, representing, among other things, that Ax Johnson, late of the County of St. Louis in the State of Minnesota, on the 29th day of April, A. D. 1905, at the County of St. Louis, died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this county, and that the said petitioner is the widow of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to Albert L. Johnson granted;

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before said court on Monday, the 17th day of July, A. D. 1905, at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate office, in the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said county.

Dated at Duluth, Minnesota, this 22nd day of June, A. D. 1905.

By the court,
DAVID H. LAWRENCE,
Judge of Probate of Lake County.

ORDER TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS, ETC.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, June 21st, 1906.

In the Matter of the Estate of John Marshall Williams, Deceased:

On reading and filing the petition of Lucian M. Williams, Nathan W. Williams and Parke E. Simmons, executors of the estate of John Marshall Williams, deceased, representing, among other things, that they have fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining, settling and allowing the final account of their administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

It is Ordered, That said account be examined, and petition heard by this Court, on Monday, the 17th day of July, A. D. 1905, at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said County.

And It Is Further Ordered, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this Order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minn., the 21st day of June, A. D. 1905.

By the Court,
DAVID H. LAWRENCE,
Judge of Probate of Lake County, Acting Judge of Probate of St. Louis County, Minn.
(Seal, Probate Court, St. Louis County, Minn.)

MARCONI WIRELESS

The arrival of Geo. H. Munroe, of Munroe & Munroe, New York, brought the announcement that the people of Duluth were to have a series of Free Lectures And Demonstrations On Marconi Wireless!

The instruments with which these demonstrations will be given are the same as on all ocean steamships. The two engineers who will explain the workings have crossed the Atlantic on ships equipped with Marconi wireless many times, and are able to tell of some wonderful experiences and how the savings of many thousands of dollars and lives have been made by the use of wireless.

Mr. Munroe stated that as he only arrived this morning he could not say where these lectures would be given, but the announcement would be made in tomorrow's issue of this paper.

District Attorney Jerome Is to Investigate the Society.

New York, June 22.—District Attorney Jerome of New York county has entered into an investigation of the Equitable Life Assurance society trouble and today telegraphed to State Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks, asking him to forward at once official copies of his report. The district attorney would make no statement as to his intentions in the matter.

MAY AVOID DANGER

Lockjaw, Caused By Holiday Fireworks, May Be Prevented.

Physician Tells How the Wound Should Be Treated.

"All danger of tetanus or lockjaw resulting from a wound received from the explosion of fireworks can be avoided if the person injured is careful to thoroughly cleanse the wound with antiseptics," said a local physician today, in discussing the dangers which may arise on the approaching Fourth of July.

"I have treated a number of wounds received in Fourth of July celebrations, and have never had a case of tetanus yet, as a result of them.

"Not much is known of the disease, except that it comes from a specific germ, and if the wound is thoroughly cleansed and treated with antiseptics, there is not much danger.

"The most dangerous wound is the kind that is received from an explosion occurring close to any part of the body, and where some particles of powder may be blown into the wound. Unless such a wound is treated properly and promptly, there is great danger of tetanus."

The toy pistol is apparently the most deadly of the contrivances invented to aid in celebrating the holiday, and two years ago two or three deaths resulted from tetanus which developed from a wound received while firing the little weapons.

This year the ordinance is more or less of a safeguard against damage caused by too violent explosives, such as the dynamite caps used in the canes which were offered for sale two years ago. All dealers must secure a license from the council, and in this way safeguards can be thrown about the sale of too violent explosives. Tetanus is the other great danger to be feared, and according to the statement of the physician given above there need be no danger of this if proper care is taken of any wounds received in the celebration of the holiday.

"I think it only right that the widest possible publicity be given to this," said the physician in question. "It is just possible that the publication of the method of preventing serious results from such wounds will save some lives."

WRECK OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY EXPRESS

The night was dark, except for the light blazing coach, which was splintered and crushed on top of the engine. Men swarmed on and about it, fighting the fire with the means at hand, groping their way through the blinding, scalding steam that rose above it, hunting for the utterers of the piercing cries that chilled the hearts of those who heard them. There was hardly any water for fighting the flames, but the rescuers worked bravely on as long as there was hopes. Despite all the work the fire burned until midnight, and the last burned and blackened corpse was not removed until 1 o'clock.

Pullman Conductor J. J. O'Neil, with his force of porters, did valiant work in helping care for the wounded as they were taken from the wreck. Bedding, blankets and sheets were stripped from the berths of the four Pullman coaches and used for the relief of the sufferers. Conductor Alexander Hamilton started the work of rescue, and led his fellow trainmen and the less seriously hurt of the passengers in deeds that were truly heroic. It was the belief of men who were at the scene that those whose bodies were burned in the wreck were unconscious after the crash. They felt certain they were able to release and take from the wreck all those who were heard to scream for help, and thus aid the rescuers to locate them.

In the glowing furnace that roared and sputtered with terrific ferocity, it was impossible to get to them until the arrival of the fire department, which was able successfully to combat the flames.

The scene of the wreck as the rescuers redoubled their efforts to reach the bodies after the help of the fire department made their fight with the flames successful, was horrible and weird. A great pall of smoke hung over the wreck on which the firement were pouring streams of water. Rescuers with lanterns groped through the smoke and steam and spared no efforts to reach the bodies. Despite this work the condition of the bodies was such as to make identification impossible. One body was recovered with head missing, the clothing gone and there was only a small chance of successful identification. The bodies were placed on a special train and hurried to Cleveland. One body taken from the wreck, was thought to be that of Colton Walters of Hamburg, N. Y., who was baggagemaster of the train. The identification was not complete. The officials of the road started an investigation at once. They could not understand how the train could be derailed at the switch, which was provided with every known safeguard and which was carefully inspected before the passage of the train.

It was a tragic significance of the wreck that it should happen close by the summer home of Horace Andrews, president of the Cleveland Electric Light company and that one of the fatally injured should be his lifelong friend and bosom companion, C. W. Wellman. Wellman knew that he was near the house of his friend. When he had been carried to a place of safety, his first words were a feeble call for Mr. Andrews. Bystanders learned of the wish of the supposedly dying man and a shout went up for the man he wanted to see. Mr. Andrews had hurried to the scene of the wreck as soon as he learned of it and he hurried to Wellman's side, Andrews spoke a few words of comfort.

"Come nearer," whispered Wellman.

His friend leaned close to the injured man. "I am dying Horace," he whispered. "I know it," he added. "I want you to take a message for me."

After that Mr. Wellman rallied and asked after his friend and partner, Thomas R. Morgan, who was with him on the train. He was told Morgan still lived.

"Thank God for that," he murmured. "Oh, I hope that he will live."

Soon after that the injured were placed aboard the relief train and hurried to Cleveland. Mr. Wellman among the rest.

While there is no reason known why any one should tamper with the switch, the officials do not believe the accident would have happened with the switch properly set and in position.

VALUABLE MAIL

Probably Lost In the Wreck of Train.

Chicago, June 22.—A highly important class of mail was carried by the wrecked Twentieth Century limited. Numerous inquiries were received at the postoffice here today to discover whether any of the mail had been saved. The train carried nothing but first class mail matter usually of an urgent character and the postoffice department made special provision daily to catch the train in order to reach the larger cities east of here in the quickest possible time. Important letters and documents could be mailed up to within fifteen minutes of train time when the last pouch was shot through a pneumatic tube into the Lake Shore station at La Salle and Van Buren streets and then loaded into the baggage and mail end of the buffet car. It was this car which seems to have suffered destruction, not only by wreck but by flame. Great anxiety was manifested in many inquiries which came over the telephone to the postoffice, today, from people who had entrusted important matter to the "Flyer." The train usually carried from fifteen to twenty pouches of this class of matter.

CELEBRATED ATTORNEY

Was a Victim In Twentieth Century Wreck.

New York, June 22.—John R. Bennett, who met death in the Twentieth Century wreck at Mentor, Ohio, was one of the foremost patent lawyers of the country, and appeared in many of the important cases growing out of the infringments on great inventions. His most notable case, perhaps, was his victory for New York city in a celebrated suit over the use of fire hose attachments. The case dragged along more than twenty-five years and involved nearly $27,000,000. A decision in favor of the city was handed down in the United States circuit court of appeals last December.

Mr. Bennett had a fine country home at Danville, Pa., and a city residence in West Thirty-third street. When a reporter called there early today and told the butler who answered his ring that Mr. Bennett had been killed, the attorney's wife overheard the conversation from the landing above. She became hysterical and it was necessary to call a physician. The couple had no children.

SWITCH WAS OPENED

With Malicious Intent, Says Road's Superintendent.

Cleveland, June 22.—According to a statement made at the headquarters of the Lake Shore road here, today, the number of dead as the result of the wreck of the Twentieth Century limited is nineteen. It is believed there will be no further deaths. The body of A. L. Johnson of the firm of Comey & Johnson, military manufacturers of this city was identified today. The remains were badly burned.

Among those who died at hospitals in this city early today were Charles H. Wellman, general manager of the Wellman-Seaver-Morgan company of Cleveland; Allen Tyler, engineer of the wrecked train; J. A. Bradley, a prominent attorney of Akron, Ohio; A. P. Head, representative of the Otis Steel company in London and F. J. Bryant, a trainman, Toledo, Ohio. L. M. Elryck, manager of Keiths' theater, here, who was a passenger on the wreked train is missing and it is feared that he may be among the unidentified dead.

D. C. Moon, assistant general superintendent of the Lake Shore road, after investigating the cause of the wreck, made this statement today:

"I have made a careful and thorough examination. The switch was open. I am satisfied that somebody, having a key, opened the switch with malicious intent. The train did not jump the track."

OFFICIAL REPORT

From Vice President Brown Concerning the Accident.

Chicago, June 22.—The following official report of the wreck was telegraphed today by Vice President W. C. Brown of the New York Central lines to President W. H. Newman at New York: The following is a list of the killed in the accident at Mentor: C. H. Wellman; John R. Bennett, New York; A. L. Rodgers; H. H. Wright, Chicago; A. P. Head, London; S. C. Beckwith, New York; Mr. Bradley, Akron, Ohio, died in hospital; Allen Tyler, engineer, Cleveland; F. Walter, baggageman, Cleveland; F. Franz, barber; J. McKay, porter, New York; T. J. Brandt, brakeman, Toledo, died in hospital. Seven unidentified bodies. Making twelve dead which have been identified and seven unidentified, a total of nineteen.

Train No. 10, eastbound, passed Mentor at 8:35 p. m., at which time the switches were all set for the main line. No. 26 followed No. 10 fifty minutes behind and no trains passed Mentor in either direction between the time No. 10 passed and the arrival of No. 26. The operator was on the platform with two men named James Collins and W. M. Leuders, both of whom live in Mentor, when No. 10 passed, after which the operator went into the office and remained until about the time No. 26 was due, when he again went out on the platform and saw No. 26 coming two or three miles away.

The operator says that he looked at the switch lights and they were white and the switches were properly set for the main track. He then returned to the office.

If this is correct between that time and the time No. 26 came some one threw the switch for the side track and locked it in that position. No. 26 headed in the full length of the train on the house track the engine leaving the rails about four coach lengths from the switch, crashing into the freight house setting it on fire and turning the engine end for end and telescoping the composite car, which took fire from the burning of the house.

The conductor of No. 26 immediately examined the switch and called the attention of General Passenger Agent W. J. Lynch of the Big Four, who was on the train, to the fact that it was set and locked for the side track and light extinguished. The switch is not damaged and worked perfectly after the accident. The composite which was telescoped by the engine was burned. No other cars in No. 26's train turned over.

Every possible effort is being made to locate the party who misplaced the switch.

No. 26 was on time, and as a matter of fact was running at a slower speed than No. 10 when she passed through Mentor, as No. 10 was late.

The result would have been the same had any other of our trains entered this open switch.

W. C. BROWN.

HARD TO BELIEVE

Yet Officials Think Switch Was Maliciously Turned.

Chicago, June 22.—C. F. Daly, general passenger traffic manager of the Lake Shore road, made this statement today:

From the best information that Vice President Brown and myself have been able to secure, we are both of the opinion that the wreck must have resulted from some one tampering with the switch. The evidence seems to point to a deliberate, malicious attempt to derail the train. It seems hard to believe that any person could be guilty of such a fearful crime, but we are forced to this opinion by the evidence.

Train No. 10 passed this switch less than an hour ahead of the Twentieth Century limited. The switch was all right then. There was no train between them. Information leads us to think that some time between these trains the switch was tampered with."

H. H. Wright, whose name appears in the list of casualties, was secretary of the Featherstone Foundry Machine company, here. James H. Gibson, another Chicago victim, was secretary of the American Foundry and Machinery company. Both lost their lives.

ORDER FOR HEARING ON CLAIMS.—State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis. —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, June 19th, 1905.

In the Matter of the Estate of Laura V. Leland, Deceased:

Letters of administration on the estate of Laura V. Leland, deceased, late of the County of Milwaukee, State of Wisconsin, being granted to Charles F. Leland,

It is ordered, that three months be and the same is hereby allowed from and after the date of this order, in which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the Probate Court of said County, for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.

It is further ordered, that Monday, the 25th day of September, 1905, at 10 o'clock a. m., at a special term of said Probate Court, to be held at the Probate Office, in the Court House, in the City of Duluth, in said County, be and the same hereby is appointed as the time and place when and where the said Probate Court will examine and adjust said claims and demands.

And it is further ordered that notice of such hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested in said estate by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minnesota, this 19th day of June, A. D. 1905.

By the Court,
DAVID H. LAWRENCE,
Judge of Probate of Lake County, Acting
Judge of Probate of St. Louis Co., Minn.
(Seal Probate Court, St. Louis Co., Minn.)

JAPANESE CEASE THEIR ADVANCE AFTER DRIVING IN RUSSIAN OUTPOSTS

Some Doubt Whether Offensive Was Precursor of Big Battle.

May Have Been Diplomatic Move to Affect Peace Negotiations.

Illness of Minister Lamsdorff Delays Negotiation Toward Peace.

St. Petersburg, June 23, 4:20 p. m.—According to today's news from the front, the Japanese, after driving in the Russian advance posts, paused, yesterday, and doubt seems to exist at the Russian headquarters as to whether Field Marshal Oyama has yet gotten his columns in position to strike or is assuming a false offensive for effect on the peace negotiations.

Gunshue Pass, June 23.—The Japanese are no longer pressing the Russians and doubt is now entertained as to whether the weak offensive is the precursor of a big battle or a diplomatic maneuver. Belief in the prompt conclusion of peace is weakening. The heat is intolerable. Even the nights afford little relief.

ILLNESS OF LAMSDORFF

Delays Peace Negotiations With Russian Government.

Washington, June 23.—It is learned through official sources that owing to the illness of Count Lamsdorff, the Russian foreign minister, there has been a slight check to the negotiations affecting Russia and Japan. It is specifically stated, however, that this does not imply that there has been any hitch, but simply that the negotiations have been unavoidably delayed for the reason given.

St. Petersburg, June 23.—There is not likely to be any further move in the direction of an armistice until the plenipotentiaries are appointed and the time of their meeting is definitely fixed. Japan seems unwilling to discuss any new issue until two questions are settled. This does not necessarily mean that all hope of arranging a suspension of hostilities before the meeting has disappeared, but as an indication of Japan's mood it increases the doubt as to whether she could be induced to relinquish temporarily the strategic advantages which she evidently believes she enjoys. Indeed it might raise the suspicion of sparring for time until Field Marshal Oyama has developed his offensive and is actually in process of delivering his blow when Japan could easily plead that it was too late. The delay in settling the matter of the plenipotentiaries is therefore all the more deplored by those desiring to avoid further bloodshed. Both countries seem perfectly willing to name negotiators, but each evidently desires the other to show its hand first.

On account of Foreign Minister Lamsdorff's illness, Ambassador Meyer was unable to have a personal interview with him either yesterday or today, but it is believed that communications from Washington are passing in writing. It appears that Count Lamsdorff has had a touch of heart trouble and his physician again today forbade him to leave his room, but promised to allow the minister to go to the chancellory tomorrow.

Count Lamsdorff's illness naturally has created gossip to the effect that he is about to retire and that Muravieff, the Russian ambassador to Rome, and M. D'Iswolsky, minister at Copenhagen, are named as possible successors, but as yet there is no evidence that the rumors have more foundation than those of similar cases which preceded them.

There is also reason for saying that the Russian plenipotentiaries will include a military man of high rank, though, as yet, there is no clue to his identity, except it will not be Gen. Kuropatkin. The downfall of Admiral Alexieff and the suppression of the Far Eastern commission materially increases the likelihood that M. Witte will also represent Russia since he is an inveterate enemy of the "war cabal," which now seems definitely to have fallen under imperial disfavor.

RUSSIAN INFANTRY

Repulsed With Heavy Loss In Small Attack.

Tokio, June 23.—The following official dispatch has been received from the headquarters of the Japanese armies in Manchuria:

"In the vicinity of Yingecheng June 21, a thousand of the enemy's infantry pressing our scouts advanced and when they reached Hsiangyancheu, ten miles southeast of Wankauzkeau, our forces repulsed them with heavy loss and pursued them to the vicinity of Weiyuanpaomen.

"After our force which occupied Yangmulintzu June 19, had completed their mission, they returned.

"The enemy, consisting of three battalions and four squadrons with twelve guns, advanced through the eastern districts of the Kirin road and moved southward June 21. From 11:30 in the morning his infantry gradually appeared on the heights between Chapengan and Lichiatun and his artillery posted on the heights of Lienhuachies shelled the northern heights of Nantchendzy. Our force, after a few hours' engagement, assaulted this offensive and completely repulsed the enemy, captured the heights and pursued him.

"Otherwise the situation is unchanged."

COEQUAL POWER

Will Be Given New Russian Popular Assembly.

St. Petersburg, June 23.—The Novoe Vreyma announces definitely that the powers of the new popular assembly, which will be composed of 500 members elected for five years, will be co-equal with those of the council of the empire and that all legislation to become law must pass both houses and receive the emperor's approval. Other features given agree with the information already cabled to the Associated Press. Representatives of the press will be admitted to the assembly but reports must be censured before publication. In addition there will be a regular official publication of the proceedings like the Congressional Record.

ADMIRAL ALEXIEFF RETIRES DISGRACED

The Czar Abolishes Vice Royalty In the Far East.

Imperial Rescript Has No Praise For Retiring Officer.

ADMIRAL ALEXIEFF.

St. Petersburg, June 23.—The vice-royalty of the Far East having been abolished by the imperial ukase of June 21, Admiral Alexieff has been appointed a member of the council of the empire and will continue to hold his position as aide-de-camp general to the emperor.

The minister of the interior has prohibited the publication of the Russ for a month.

The governor general of the Caucasus has telegraphed to the minister of the interior to the effect that order has been restored at the city of Erivan but excitement still prevails in the villages of the province of that name.

The announcement of Admiral Alexieff's retirement was not accompanied by the usual rescript of praise and it bears all the other marks of imperial disfavor. The retirement of Grand Duke Alexis as high admiral and of Alexieff as viceroy of the Far East and the suppression of the Far Eastern commission in quick succession, is the best evidence Japan could have that the emperor has washed his hands of the whole Manchurian adventure. The liberal press greets the demise of the Far Eastern commission with a howl of exultation as being the final blow to the policy which led to the present war.

The Slav, M. Witte's organ, traces the origin of the war to the late Interior Minister Von Plehve and concludes: "The black page which preceded the bloody pages of the book of our Far Eastern affairs, has at last been torn out by the emperor and all Russia will rejoice."

SITUATION BETWEEN GERMANY AND FRANCE NOT REASSURING

Berlin, June 23.—The French note on the subject of the proposed Moroccan conference was handed to the foreign office this morning. Owing to its great length the note had to be sent by mail to Berlin instead of by telegraph. The foreign office while declining to discuss the points of the note in detail admits that it leaves the situation where it was before. The points of disagreement between Germany and France have not been removed. It is expected that the negotiations will continue for a long time before a positive result is reached. Germany's answer to Premier Rouvier has not yet been considered. It will take much time to meet all the points raised. While the delay might under ordinary circumstances be of advantage in affording time for the excitement to subside German government circles note with some concern that powerful intrigues are going on, having for their object war between Germany and France. Germany's intentions remain thoroughly pacific, but government circles here apprehend the possibility that these intrigues will result in inflaming the French people against Germany and creating a delicate and complicated situation.

Paris, June 23.—An official communication issued after the meeting of the council of ministers, today, says Premier Rouvier acquainted his colleagues with the status of the negotiations with Germany. These follow the normal course with changes since the delivery of the formal note of Prince Radolin, the German ambassador. The note was simultaneously communicated to the French ambassador abroad for the purpose of informing the powers. Uneasiness continues to prevail in parliamentary circles and among the public generally concerning the outcome of the negotiations. The bourse showed renewed depression and prices continued to decline.

EMPEROR WILLIAM PROPOSES THE HEALTH OF THE PRESIDENT

Imperial Yacht Club, Germany, June 23.—Emperor William at the conclusion of the dinner which he gave on board the imperial yacht Hohenzollern last night to the yachtmen who had taken part in the trans-Atlantic race, arose and said that as there were more Americans present than persons of any other nationality he would with the consent of Lord Brassey, who was one of the guests propose the health of the president of the United States.

Privately, the emperor said he was delighted with the success of the race which had attracted more entries and had turned out to be more interesting than he expected. He also added that he felt indebted to Allison V. Armour and C. L. F. Robinson, the American members of the committee, and the Americans had occasion to say that Commander H. G. Hebbinghaus had handled the questions connected with the race with much tact and judgment.

The emperor presented to each of the non-winning owners of yachts which competed in the trans-Atlantic race and who were present at the dinner, his photograph, bearing his autograph, simply framed as a souvenir of the contest. Similar photographs of the emperor will be sent to the owners of competing yachts who were not present on board the Hohenzollern last night.

The cup won by the Atlantic is of massive silver one meter high and was designed by the German emperor himself.

Among those present were Allison V. Armour, owner of the Utowana; George Lauder, Jr., owner of the Endymion; Lord Brassey, owner of the Sunbeam; Ambassador Tower and Admiral Von Tirpitz, secretary of the admiralty.

HEAVY RAINS

May Stop Progress of Great Battle In Manchuria.

London, June 23.—Dispatches to the Daily Telegraph from the seat of war indicate that it is not unlikely the heavy rains will stop the progress of the great battle. The Moji, Japan, correspondent of the paper says that the operations are being greatly impeded by the rains. The Manchurian plains are flooded and the roads are almost impassable to heavy transports, but the conditions are more favorable to the light wagons of the Japanese than to the heavy ones of the Russians. Lieut. Gen. Mistcheno's operations have ceased, the correspondent says, and one of his detachments which was unable to retreat owing to the flooded streams, is completely cut off.

WANTS TO RETIRE.

Washington, June 23.—Commander Harry M. Hodges, in charge of the hydrographic office of the navy has applied to be placed on the retired list.

FRIGHTFUL STORM

Visits New York and Vicinity Doing Great Damage.

Two Men Killed By Lightning and Eight Injured.

New York, June 23.—Two men have been killed by lightning, eight persons were seriously hurt and considerable property damage has resulted from a severe storm which has swept New York and the surrounding country. Following hours of great heat and humidity, the storm broke with intense violence and more than one-half an inch of rain fell in thirteen minutes. The electrical display continued intermittingly over a wide territory for hours.

Those who lost their lives were Mike Burns, a Mont Clair, N. J., plumber, and Arthur Bolton of Newark, N. J., a coachman. Scores of others were more or less injured from the effects of the lightning and from fire and panic resulting from the storm.

Many buildings were wholly or in part demolished, two schoolhouses were struck by lightning, telephone and electric wires were disabled and panics occurred in many buildings hit by lightning.

While the storm swept every section of the city proper, the damage was greatest in New Jersey and in the suburbs along the south shore of Long Island, Coney Island, Rockaway beach and sections of Brooklyn suffered severely.

Among the peculiar freaks was a dynamite explosion in Harlem. A bolt of the fluid plowed its way down the side of a new apartment house to the ground, where it exploded a dynamite cartridge which excavators had left undischarged in the rocks. Serious damage was caused to several other buildings close by. Twenty workmen who had taken refuge in the building were almost frightened to death by the shock and shower of rocks which penetrated to their hiding place.

Confusion and the wildest alarm were created among 50,000 pleasure seekers at Coney Island, where the storm burst with violent fury. The police station was struck by lightning while several cottages and amusement halls were set on fire. Similar scenes were witnessed at Rockaway beach.

Lightning struck the Hudson county electric plant at Snake Hill, N. J., and damaged the machinery so seriously that the arc lights which illuminate the boulevard running the entire length of the county (fourteen miles) were out of commission.

In this city the electric conduits of the surface line were flooded in Lower Broadway and traffic was seriously delayed. Flashes of blue flame shot out from beneath the cars for hours until the workmen had pumped out nearly all the water that collected.

TWO LAKE STEAMERS SENT TO THE BOTTOM OF RIVER BY COLLISION

City of Rome and Linden Collide on the St. Clair.

Cook of the Linden and His Wife Are Drowned.

Linden Rests In Channel an Obstruction to Navigation.

Detroit, Mich., June 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The wooden steamers City of Rome and Linden collided, early today, in the St. Clair river opposite Tashmoo park, and both were sunk. Two members of the crew of the Linden, the cook and his wife, were drowned. The other members of both crews escaped in safety from the sinking boats. The City of Rome was bound down with a cargo of iron ore, and the Linden was up bound. Off Tashmoo park the Linden, it is said, suddenly sheered and rammed the City of Rome, damaging her so that the steamer sank almost instantly in sixty feet off the Tashmoo dock. The Linden, although also badly damaged, limped along until off the head of Russell island where she sank in the channel.

All members of the crew excepting the cook and his wife escaped from the sinking boat. The Linden's cabin and upper works broke away from the hull as the steamer went down and with the captain on it, drifted some distance down stream, where it grounded on a shoal. The City of Rome was built at Cleveland in 1881 and belonged to the J. C. Gilchrist fleet. The Linden was built in 1885 at Port Huron and is owned by the Sandusky Box & Lumber company of Sandusky, O.

The Linden, as the wreck now lies, is an obstruction to navigation.

JEROME ASKS EXTRA SESSION OF COURT

In Case He Wants to Prosecute Officials of Equitable.

Court of General Sessions Will Forego Its Summer Vacation.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY JEROME.

New York, June 23.—The regular summer vacation of the court of general sessions will be suspended this year so that the court may be available if District Attorney Jerome begins prosecution in connection with the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance society. This action was taken on the request of District Attorney Jerome.

District Attorney Jerome, in making his motion to suspend the court's vacation, said he had a letter from Governor Higgins offering to place the evidence obtained by the superinendent of insurance at Mr. Jerome's disposal. Mr. Jerome added:

"It is my desire to have that evidence and it is my intention to go through it very thoroughly.

"The widespread attention called to this matter makes it mandatory on me to make an examination of the affair. I am not in a position to know at this time whether there has been a violation of the law, but it is my duty to find out. Before the governor addressed this letter to me I had the matter under consideration, having sent for a copy of the official report of the investigation. It may be that there is nothing in this affair to call for the action of this court.

"It is unusual for the governor to address such a letter as this to the district attorney and it forcuses public attention on me. I have made arrangements with Justice Davy, of the criminal branch of the supreme court, and he will continue the June term of that court through the summer. The powers of both courts can, if necessary, be invoked. It will take me some time to learn whether I will need the assistance of the courts or not."

Attorney General Julius M. Mayer was at the office in this city today, engaged in going over the proceedings in the investigation of the Equitable society. When asked how soon he would begin action against the Equitable officers scored in the Hendricks report, Mr. Mayer replied:

"Action will be taken as soon as it is physically possible and it will not be a matter of weeks but of days only, before we will be ready. Not only have I got to go over the Hendricks report, but the testimony which preceded and on which the report is based."

He was of the opinion that separate actions would be taken, one for the restitution of funds wrongfully elicited and another for the debarment proceedings against officers of the society. In commenting on this phase of the situation, Mr. Mayer said:

"This is a novel action and it is the first time in the history of the State of New York where debarment proceedings against officials of an insurance company will have been taken. Under the insurance law, the application of which has never yet been put in practice, the attorney general has power to debar officers of an insurance company who have been found derelict in their duty and this debarment not only precludes them from holding positions as officers, but also debars them from acting as directors, not only in the company from which they have been debarred, but from any insurance company doing business within the confines of the state and the attorney general is the one to enforce the action."

MRS. ROGERS NO LONGER IN SOLITARY CONFINEMENT

Windsor, Vt.,—Mrs. Mary H. Rogers, who was to have been hanged today for the murder of her husband, has been released from solitary confinement and permitted to mingle with the other women prisoners at the state prison. This privilege was the result of the action of the United States circuit court yesterday in granting an appeal to the United States supreme court.

CZAR'S PROMISES NOT SO BROAD AS WERE REPORTED

St. Petersburg, June 23.—The official interpretation of the emperor's speech to the delegation of the zemstvoists and mayors at Peterhof, June 19, is given in the following circular sent by the ministry of the interior to all the newspapers:

"The words pronounced by the emperor during the reception of the members of the zemstvos and municipalities have been incorrectly interpreted by a portion of the periodical press and several newspapers have gone so far as to deduce therefrom the arbitrary conclusion that the emperor's words implied an extension of the imperial rescript of March 3 to the minister of the interior, in the sense of a convocation of representatives of the people on the basis of the existing constitutions of the countries of Western Europe whereas, it was clearly shown by the emperor's words that the conditions of such a convocation were to be based on an order of things responding to Russian autocratic principles and his majesty's words contain absolutely not the least indication of the possibility of modifying the fundamental laws of the empire. Consequently the central administration of press affairs by order of the minister of the interior informs all publications appearing without censorship that the emperor's words can be published only in the form in which they were reported in the Official Messenger without additions or abbreviations and in order to prevent distortion of the significance of the imperial words, it is found necessary to prohibit the publication in the press of any kind of deductions or interpretations which do not accord with the direct and clear meaning of the emperor's utterances."

ROBBERS FAIL TO HOLD UP A TRAIN FROM THE TWIN CITIES

Tacoma, June 23.—Train robbers made an unsuccessful attempt to hold up the North Coast Limited from the Twin Cities early today, three miles west of Puyallup. A man boarded the train at Puyallup and when the train was three miles from the station ordered the engineer to stop the train at a fire which was burning near the tracks. Engineer Woods did not stop the train until a half mile beyond the fire. Brakeman Harkins ran up to the engine to see what the trouble was and the bandit shot at him.

Harkins threw his lantern into the ditch and started back for the train. The bandit then ordered the engineer and the conductor to get out of the way while he made an attempt to back the train to the fire where his confederates were stationed. He failed to get the engine started and called for the engineer to come back. The robber then began to realize his position and as the engineer stepped into the cab he fired twice, one bullet flattening on the boiler head. The bandit then jumped to the ground and ran into the brush. The train then pulled into Tacoma leaving the fireman and a brakeman behind, as they were unable to catch the train. An engine was sent out for them and they were brought in this morning.

AMERICANS ARE ROBBED IN RUSSIA

St. Petersburg, June 23.—Theodore S. Darling of New York and several other guests at the Hotel De L'Europe have been robbed of all their valuables. Mr. Darling lost a diamond necklace and quite a sum of money. Subsequently the necklace was discovered in a pawn shop. With the assistance of the American embassy, efforts are now making to recover the stolen property. Considerable mystery surrounds the robbers. Suspicion fell on a Russian countess, but when accused she threatened to sue the proprietors of the hotel, and no attempt has been made to prosecute her.

ADVISES SHERIFF TO RAID BETTING RING.

St. Louis, June 23.—Attorney General Hadley of Missouri, stated today, that he had given instruction to Assistant Attorney General Kennish assigned to assist the prosecuting attorney of St. Louis county in the suppression of alleged violations of the anti-betting law at the Delmar race track, strongly to advise Sheriff Herpel to raid the betting ring at Delmar at once and continue raiding until it closes and remains closed.

"This is a police regulation," said the attorney general, "and it is not necessary to wait for information to be issued. "That is the way to close a pool room and stop race track betting. It can be done very easily. Bookmakers will be put out of business if they are relieved of their cash and paraphernalia persistently."

MAN LIVING A DOUBLE LIFE ARRESTED FOR SWINDLING

Chicago, June 23.—Charged with swindling numerous persons by pretending to be a physician, Henry Wolf has been arrested at his residence here. The police say the man lived a "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" existence. He was known to his friends as a traveling man, while in the country towns he represented himself as "Dr. Hart."

Wolf was arrested on complaint of Mrs. James Huey, wife of a farmer of Abingdon, Iowa. He is said to have secured $310 from the woman's husband by promising to cure her of consumption. He induced Huey to draw the money from the bank, and the he hastily left for Chicago.

The alleged swindler was traced by his railroad ticket. He gave no address to his victim. It was learned from the station agent that he had boarded a Chicago bound train. At the Central Passenger associations' office the name was discovered. Wolf's name does not appear in the city directory, and the police had a difficult task before them before he was found.

Wolf is 50 years old. He has lived in Chicago for many years, and has apartments fixed up luxuriously. His neighbors were not aware that he was anything but a traveling man, as he arepresented himself to be.

It is said that on arriving at a town Wolf, equipped with a physician's satchel, would call at a livery stable and engage the best equipage. He would then ask to be driven around the country. All the prominent farmers in this manner were pointed out to him.

COURT GRANTS INJUNCTION AGAINST ALLEGED BOYCOTTERS

San Francisco, June 23.—United States Circuit Judge Morrow has granted the application of Dietrich E. Loewe & Co. of Danbury, Conn., for a temporary injunction against the California State Federation of Labor and the San Francisco Labor Council, which has been boycotting a local firm of jobbers in the hats manufactured by Loewe. The injunction pendente lite was granted on the ground that the unions had conspired not only to protect themselves, but to destroy the property and ruin the business of the complainants.

The defendants' contention was that they had used neither force, threats nor intimidation, and had only urged on the friends of labor the necessity of using their patronage for the benefit of labor—a constitutional right to do, but can it be truthfully said that this is all that has been done by them in enforcing the boycott?" The court proceeds, and points out that this is the power of "Combined numbers," and that the company is helpless "unless they surrender the management and control of their business to a labor union.

"All employes have the right to quit their employment, but no right to combine to quit in order thereby to compel their employer to withdraw from a mutually profitable relation with a third person for the purpose of injuring the third person, when the relation thus sought to be broken had no effect whatever on the character, or the reward of their services."

ATHLETES PERFORM LIKE MILITIA

Indianapolis, June 23.—With the promptness of a military camp, the athletes participating in the physical contests of the North American Gymnastic union responded to reveille at 6 o'clock today and made preparations for the heaviest day of the festival by eating a breakfast prescribed by the rules, consiting of fried ham, scrambled eggs, ceramed potatoes, fried mush, rolls, bread and coffee. For dinner the men were given roast veal, mashed potaoes, beans and cold slaw with coffee. They were allowed broiled steak at supper. Two thousand eight hundred men were fed. The program today included the hardest work of the festival, the contests including a 100-yard dash, tactics, dumbbell and wand exercises, broad jump, class and individual competition in apparatus work by societies, model work by societies and exercises by the girls of the Indianapolis Gymnastic society. The contests began promptly at 7 o'clock.

GAMES TODAY.

Duluth at Fargo.
St. Cloud-Brainerd at Grand Forks.
Crookston at Winnipeg.

Fargo, N. D., June 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo threw a scare into Duluth in the "lucky seventh" yesterday afternoon and piled up four runs. With one more needed to tie, and Rose struck out.

Duluth got busy right off the reel and got an earned run in the first inning. After Bennett had disturbed the atmosphere in a fruitless effort to reach Berrigan's outs, Weller singled. Meneice couldn't do better than a pop-up foul, but O'Dea landed on a long drive on which Weller just managed to get over the plate.

In the second McShane started the thing with a single and Berrigan struck Summers out, but "Topsy" Alberts dropped the third one and Summers reached the initial corner. McShane and Summers tried the double steal, but the former was caught on the lines. Summers finally reached third on a wild pitch and scored on Potts' single after Mullen had fanned.

In the sixth Duluth got busy with the willow for a trio of runs, two of which were earned. O'Dea led with a safe one and the big catcher pushed him along with a neat sacrifice. McShane hit, scoring the manager. Summers hit and stole second, Mullen went down on bunt strikes and McShane scored on Potts' single, Summers reaching home on Traeger's overthrow.

Fargo did nothing till the "lucky seventh." Warnish led off with a triple and scored on Fitzgerald's single. Alberts drove a long one to Si Bennett in center, and Berrigan struck out for the third time. Mehl hit and Fritz came all the way from first on Meneice's bad heave to third on the return. Summers let Jarvie's little one get away and Mehl scored. Manager Traeger made his fourth safe swat and Jarvie reached third. They worked the double steal and the little Frenchman scored. With two gone, Traeger on second and one score needed to tie, Rose marched to the bat with a do or die expression. With three balls and two strikes, Potts floated a peach right over the pan and waist high. Rose ignored the teaser and Umpire Hanson could do nothing else than call it a strike.

In the ninth inning things looked good for a few minutes. Alberts was hit, French was sent in to bat for Berrigan, when everybody expected Hanson would be put up. French knocked a dinky one to short, on which Alberts was retired at second and in an effort to complete the double Summers made a high heave into the right field bleachers, on which French reached third. With a man on third and only one down, the fans had hopes. Everybody felt sure Mehl would pound out a safe one, but the best he could do was a little grounder to second, on which French was afraid to attempt to score. Jarvie came up and ended the agony with a pop foul to O'Dea.

The Fargo line-up was changed with Corrigan at first instead of French and Warnish at third instead of Donovan. Warnish did not star as a fielder but got two nice clouts, one for three sacks.

None of the official umpires showed up and Pitcher "Pete" Hanson started to arbitrate the decisions. He did well till the end of the seventh, when he became disgusted at Rose's kicking on the called third strike. Finnigan umpired the last two innings. In the ninth he called Benneti out on a third strike and was about to put him out of the game for kicking. Duluth had only nine men and McShane wore a Fargo uniform, his suit having wandered somewhere between here and the Head of the Lakes.

EXTRA INNING GAME.

Grand Forks Takes Long Contest From Twins.

Grand Forks, June 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—About one-third of the fans remained to see the finish of the game at the University Athletic park yesterday afternoon. It was just six o'clock when the ninth inning was begun, and only those remained who thought more of baseball than their supper. The first half of the game was sluggish and disinteresting.

Anderson started the game for the Tigers with a hit. Varco went to first by being hit by the pitcher, and Chandler sacrificed. Varco was caught napping on second, and Anderson scored on Leach's long drive to right field. Hanrahan got a fielder's choice, but Varco's nap ended the inning. In the second inning the visitors got two hits, and an error by Hanrahan tells the tale of two scores. In the third inning the visitors sent another man home. Ripley, the first man up, was caught out in the left garden, and White went to first on balls. Then Harris took a base on an error by Spicer. Nehr then sent a long drive to the left field, and White scored on the put out. Ronesch struck out.

In the fourth inning it looked as if there might be something doing. Spanton started the ball rolling by reaching for a three-bagger, but was caught napping on third. Caldwell went on from second to first, and Bradley drew a base. Houch was issued a pass, and Anderson took his second hit scoring Houch, Bradley having scored on an error by the catcher. Varco ended the inning by sending a little pop up to the shortstop.

Then there was a series of goose eggs until the seventh when the visitors sent another man home tying the score. Wing, the first man to bat went on an error by Hanrahan. Ripley sacrificed, and White was thrown out on first, and while the little sphere was going to first Wing scored. Harris hit to Houch and was thrown out on the initial sack. The Tigers failed to score in their end of the inning.

The eighth inning was the last inning in which the visitors scored although they made a desperate effort to score in each of the succeeding five. Nehr drew a base, and Ronesch went on a fielder's choice. Hansen drew a base, and Howells did likewise. With three men on bases Spicer got a long drive to the left garden, and Ronesch scored on the put out. Wing tried hard to cinch the game, but succeeded in getting the ball only to the second baseman. The Tigers scored in the last half of the inning again making the game a tie. Leach led off with a hit. Hanrahan went out on first. Spanton struck out at the critical moment, but Caldwell went on an error by Ripley, and Leach scored. Bradley got a terrific blow on the right side of the head from the ball while at bat, and was knocked down. Converse was put in to run for him. Houch ended the inning by sending a fly to the center garden.

The ninth, tenth, eleventh, and twelveth innings were a series of goose eggs, but in the thirteenth inning the Tigers sent another man across the home plate. The game was won by "Spike" Anderson, the star center fielder of the Tigers, who sent a fierce liner through the pitcher, and across second base, and before it was stopped, Converse had crossed the home plate bringing in the score which won the game. Spanton and Caldweil, the first two men up, went out, but Converse took a hit, and Houch drew a pass. Then "Spike" Anderson appeared before Spicer, and determined to do or to die. He met the little sphere on the nose, and won the game.

PLAY ELEVEN INNINGS.

Winnipeg Defeats Crookston In an Exciting Game.

Winnipeg, June 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—For seven innings the Maroons gave Green wretched support yesterday in the game with Crookston, and their errors were responsible for three runs. In the sixth they started a batting rally that netted two runs. This was followed up in the seventh with another run which tied the score.

In the eleventh inning with the score tied, Crookston made a desperate effort to win out and succeeded in getting one man across the plate, but Green's two-bagger, Piper's single, a stolen base and an error gave the home team two runs in the last half of the inning, winning the game. The score:

	R	H	E
Crookston	1	0	2
Winnipeg	2	4	1

Batteries—Helder and Sperry; Green and Rogers. Umpire—Anderson.

FAST TRAIN ABANDONED

Twentieth Century Limited Will Take Twenty Hours For Run.

New York, June 23.—President Newman of the New York Central and the Lake Shore railroads, said yesterday that the twenty-hour schedule of the Twentieth Century limited train, on the New York Central-Lake Shore line, would be restored at once in place of the eighteen-hour schedule, on which the train had been running for only a few days. President Newman said:

"Since the sad accident which has happened on the Lake Shore, I have had a consultation with the operating officials, who have explained that the accident was caused by a misplaced switch, and was not due to the speed of the train, and they assure me that the present schedule can be safely and easily maintained. While I agree with the operating officials that there is no physical reason why the schedule should not be maintained, nevertheless, in my judgment the time of the Twentieth Century limited should be restored to twenty hours, and it will be done at once. Until the new schedule can be arranged, the Twentieth Century limited train will leave New York at 3:30 p. m., and Chicago at 2:30 p. m., as at present, but will run on a twenty-hour schedule, arriving at either terminal two hours later than at present."

BOY CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Barnesville, Minn., June 23.—Raymond McGrath, the 3-year-old son of William McGrath, was playing about some railroad ties which were piled up for firewood. In some manner they fell upon him, crushing his head so that he never regained consciousness, and died in a few hours.

RACING EVENTS OF THURSDAY.

Buffalo, June 23.—Dishahille won the Ontario handicap at Kenilworth park yesterday. Three favorites and two second choices, each heavily played, won. Weather good.

Cincinnati, June 23.—The third event, run the reverse way of the track at a mile and a sixteenth, was the feature of the card at Latonia yesterday. Hot Easily won from Swift Wing and Mint Bed. In the last race Van Hope, a rank outsider in the betting, took the lead at the start and won handily from Handmore.

Memphis, Tenn., June 23.—Yesterday's races at Montgomery park were run in a driving rain that converted the track into a sea of slush. Four favorites won.

St. Louis, June 23.—Two favorites were successful on a good track at Delmar Park yesterday. Footlights, the favorite in the feature, got up in time to beat Matador, a head on the wire. Athens, at odds on, won the fifth handily by one length. Kenton, the favorite in the third race, fell while rounding the stretch turn.

Detroit, June 23.—Malcolm M. won the handicap steeplechase, the feature of the fourth day of the Highland Park meeting.

New York, June 23.—While the horses were at the post in the surf stakes for 2-year-olds over the last 5½ furlongs of the Futurity course at Sheepshead bay yesterday, a terrific thunder and lightning storm broke over the track. The occupants of the stand and the betting ring were drenched. The rain came down in torrents and it was impossible to see the field of racers until they were well into the stretch. Inquisitor was an easy winner. No time was taken. The Sheepshead Bay handicap, one mile, was run over a track that was covered with water and Woodsaw, a 6 to 1 chance, was returned an easy winner by five lengths.

LITTLE BUSINESS TALKS.

As "Hold-Fast is the only dog," so "keep trying" is the only success-creed. There's a better job for you, if you could fill it—so keep trying to get it in "The Herald want ad. way."

From the view-point of the man who wants to buy a house the paper is not complete unless it carries the ads. of all houses in the city that are for sale.

You have not really placed that real estate in the market unless you have advertised it adequately in The Herald classified columns. It may be "for sale," but it's not "in the market."

CUPID KNOCKED OUT

Cincinnati, June 23.—While she admits that love is all right in its way, Mrs. Helena Termuhlen, 32, a comely widow of Lockland, adds that she will not marry a certain suitor, for the reason that by doing so she would lose the greater portion of the estate left her by her father, Henry Tegeder, 77, the Lockland pioneer.

Before Henry Tegeder died, May 5, 1905, he attached a codicil to his original will which provided that Mrs. Termuhlen should receive an equal share of his fortune with her two brothers, John and Henry. The remaining one-third was left to her mother.

The codicil provided that in case Mrs. Termuhlen married a certain man, whose attentions were objected to by the father, the daughter would be cut off with only one-fourth of her original share, the remaining three-fourths to go to her four children by the first husband.

After consideration, Mrs. Termuhlen decided that it is better to have a goodly share of this world's goods than to be a victim of Cupid.

TWO BIG SNAKES

Had Feast In a Pennsylvania Chicken House.

Glassport, Pa., June 23.—Before he retired, Eugene Carpenter of this place went to his chicken house to make sure that a brood of 150 little chickens was safe. Then he locked the door of the place and went to bed in peace. When next morning he again visited the chicken house, he found fifty chicks lying on the floor dead, while the others were nowhere in sight.

Greatly puzzled, he searched high and low, but no place was there any indication of a thief having entered during the night. Neither would it have been possible for the chicks to have escaped of their own free will.

Finally, as he was about to give up the search, he discovered two immense blacksnakes coiled up in one corner of the chicken house. The snakes did not put up any fight and were easily killed. Their bodies were almost as thick as a man's leg. Mr. Carpenter cut one of them open. Inside were many of the missing chicks. Each of the snakes measured over seven feet in length.

Grand Opening

OF THE

Olympia Fruit and Confectionery Co.

Cor. Lake Ave. and Superior St. MARS & GEORGE, Props.

After weeks of preparation in remodeling and refitting the entire store, the doors of the new ice cream, fruit and candy parlors, corner Lake avenue and Superior street, will tomorrow be thrown open to the tired and thirsty of Duluth. The store is one of the finest of its kind in the Northwest and no trouble will be spared to make it the most popular place in Duluth. The proprietors, Mars and George, who are also proprietors of the Minnesota Candy Kitchen, 111 West Superior street, which in three years has built up the biggest trade in its line in the city, have had a lifelong experience in this business, and, in addition, have secured the services of an expert to take charge of their handsome new soda fountain—"Queen of Duluth." While everything will be of the very best, popular prices will always be maintained.

Every person visiting "The Olympia" tomorrow will be presented with a beautiful rose or carnation.

The proprietors extend a cordial invitation to the public to make "The Olympia" their resting place at all times, when waiting for a car, or when a rest is desired.. Don't forget the opening day, tomorrow, Saturday, June 24th.

MODERN WOODMEN WOULD MAKE WAR ON OLD LINE INSURANCE

Milwaukee, June 23.—The head camp of the Modern Woodmen of America today endorsed the plan of A. Crozier of Delaware for a fraternal congress to be held soon in New York city for the purpose of bringing to the attention of the public the advantages of fraternal insurance over old line insurance. The congress will be addressed by leading men of the country and it is the intention to develop and exploit the things that will not be to the credit of some of the old line claims, which, it is charged by Mr. Crozier, have taken unfair means to injure the fraternal orders. The by-laws were amended to admit to membership metal miners and railroad men upon payment of special hazardous rates.

The resolution on the liquor question came up again in a modified form in a report fro mthe law committee today and was concurred in by a vote of 320 to 132.

Under the modified law, bookkeepers, mechanics and others employed by breweries and distilleries, who do not in any way handle liquor and proprietors of distilleries who sell liquor in unbroken packages, are not barred from membership. No employe engaged directly in the manufacture or handling of liquor will be admitted. The law remains as heretofore relating to stockholders and proprietors of liquor manufacturing establishments. They are not eligible to membership.

Buffalo appears to have made considerable headway since yesterday in the race for the next convention. It looks now like a hot fight between Peoria and Buffalo. No action had been taken up to recess.

EMIGRATING TO AMERICA.

St. Petersburg, June 23.—A letter from the Caucasus says the Molokons have prepared to follow the example of the Doukhobors and are now beginning to emigrate to America to escape official oppression. Count Tolstoi has been largely instrumental in inducing the Doukhobors to go to Canada.

WILL CALL FOR BIDS

Water Commissioners Receive Specifications of New Reservoir.

Will Provide Storage For 10,000,000 Gallons of Water.

The specifications for the new 10,000,000 gallon reservoir to be constructed in Lloyd's division of Duluth have been completed and were yesterday presented to the board of wahter and light commissioners at their regular meeting. The board directed Manager L. N. Case to advertise for bids for the construction of the reservoir.

The delay in getting out the specifications and securing the bids has been due to a lack of data in making up the various items. When the board of commissioners conducted drilling operations at the new reservoir site, the drills stopped at a hard substance at about twelve feet. Several test pits were dug to a depth of about twenty-seven feet and the hard substance underlying was found to be hardpan instead of rock.

The work will not require a great deal of excavating, although the reservoir is a large one, because of the topography of the location, which permits a reservoir mor on the top of the ground.

The reservoir will be somewhat elongated rather than circular in shape and will have a length of about 344 feet by 280 feet wide. The depth of water will be about 25 feet.

The specifications call for the removal of about 54,600 cubic yards of earth. At one end the reservoir will be excavated, while directly opposite the material taken out will be partly used in filling up to a required level.

The bids are to be called for at once and it is expected that the construction work will be under way in a very short time.

The estimate of the cost of the new reservoir at West Duluth is about $42,-000.

Petitions for water extensions were presented from residents on Vernon street and East Sixth street and the requests were granted by the water board, subject to the approval of the city council.

Manager Case was instructed to advertise for bids for pipe for all work for which pipe has not already been provided. This will include pipe for the north and south sides of the canal and leading to the new reservoir at West Duluth.

The petition for an auxiliary water system on Duluth Heights, which was not quite complete and which was referred back to the petitioners for corrections, was not ready for presentation at the meeting yesterday afternoon.

Bought No Gravel Mine.

The clipping from the Eldorado Republican of Placerville, Cal., has caused County Auditor Halden and Sheriff Bates to receive considerable good-natured joshing from their friends at the courthouse. The article stated that the two St. Louis county officials, with others from Duluth, had taken an interest in a gravel mine at Indian Diggings, near Placerville, and had organized a mining company, etc. Sheriff Bates says that, as a matter of fact, the members of his party looked at the property, and that is as far as any negotiations went. He says the enterprising newspaper men of the place got the names from the hotel register, "filled their pipes and dreamed the rest."

CUTS DOWN LEAD

White Stockings Lose Three Games at One Swoop.

Team Was Short Handed In First Fargo Game.

If the Duluth White Stockings win the Northern league pennant they will have to beat five teams and the league executive.

Three victories in a bunch were wiped off Duluth's standing this morning, by a letter received by Manager Van Praagh from President Kent. Two of these games were won from the St. Cloud-Brainerd aggregation by Pitcher Harris or Smith, and one was taken from Winnipeg by the same gentleman, who, it appears, was playing under protest from a Southern league club. In one of the games won from the Twins, Harris was knocked out of the box, and replaced by another pitcher. The Champs went in and hammered out a victory after Harris had apparently lost the game. It was not thought that this game would be thrown out, but the league president thought differently.

One of the games lost to St. Cloud and one lost to Winnipeg have been counted off in the standing given on another page, but the third game against St. Cloud, which has been thrown out, will take another victory from Duluth's standing and a defeat from the Twins.

There still remains the "yellow pup game" with Grand Forks, which Manager Anderson has protested, and unless Duluth shows a properly humble spirit on the present trip and allows some of the other teams a look in, this will doubtless have to be won over again.

Duluth had only nine men on the field yesterday at Fargo. Neighbors and Erickson missed the train which carried the other players from Duluth, and did not arrive in Fargo until about 5:30 o'clock. Crookston was to pick up McShane on the trip to Winnipeg, but Manager O'Dea refused to let him go until Neighbors and Erickson arrived. Bennett had to play in center field, and Mullen held down the right garden.

The White Sox have three games at Winnipeg during the early part of next week, and if the Maroons can win them or even take two out of the three, Duluth's lead will look pretty small. The Canucks are the only team that has taken a series from Duluth, and they have a long knife already sharpened for the Champs.

It's Ring Day

Tomorrow at Norberg's, 5 West Superior street.

CELEBRATION BY FINLANDERS

At Ely Saturday and Sunday—Governor Johnson to Attend.

Ely, Minn., June 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Finnish residents of Ely are making elaborate preparings for the midsummer Finnish celebration, which will take place here Saturday and Sunday. All places of business will be closed tomorrow, and the people here will join the Finnish residents in making the celebration a success. The streets and buildings are being decorated for the occasion and the city will present a gala appearance.

Large crowds are expected from all points on the Vermilion and Mesaba ranges, the railway companies having made special excursion rates and the mining companies having given permission to all their employes who desire to attend the celebration. It is also expected that many people of the Finnish nationality will come from the upper peninsula of Michigan. There will be seven bands to furnish music for the celebration.

The two days' program will include a singing contest, band contest and numerous athletic events at the picnic grounds at Sandy point, and there will be speeches by prominent men, including Governor John A. Johnson, who will arrive at noon Saturday, Judge W. A. Cant of Duluth, Dr. Jackola of Calumet, Mich., and others.

METEOR BEATS HAMBURG.

Emperor's Yacht Wins Race By a Minute.

Imperial Yacht Club, Kiel, Germany, June 23.—Emperor William today raced his yacht Meteor III against the schooner yacht Hamburg, owned by the Verein Seefahrt, and belonging to the Nord Deutscher regatta verein. The Meteor III beat the Hamburg by a minute. On board the Meteor with the emperor was Ambassador Tower, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Wilson Marshall and George Lauder, Jr.

Prince Henry of Prussia sailed the Orion, which went over the course alone in her class. In the prince's party were Allison V. Armour and Jordan Mott. R. W. Goelet sailed the Swan, the only American entry in the regatta, against the Thyra. Capt. Alexander and Brand Newman were aboard.

TROUBLE IS BREWING.

Missoula, Mont., June 23.—Trouble is brewing in this city as the result of the murder of William Burrig, a well-known rancher, by William Besekov, a notorious character. Threats of lynching are rife and the sheriff has a double guard at the county jail. Burrig bled to death after being shot twice and was found at the foot of a precipice over which he staggered after being wounded.

WOULD RESIGN GOVERNORSHIP

Carter Coming From Honolulu to Effect His Retirement.

Honolulu, June 23.—Governor Carter mailed his resignation to President Roosevelt on Wednesday. He will leave on June 28 for Washington to discuss the matter of his retirement from the governorship. He has been in cable correspondence with the president regarding it and has received permission to go to the capital for a personal interview.

Governor Carter says he had urged President Roosevelt to accept his resignation and appoint a successor. His action, it is declared, was not due to the election of E. M. Brown as high sheriff, but had been under consideration for some time. It was first written on June 6 but was withheld on the advice of friends who asked him not to send it to Washington.

The resignation was the culmination of a long series of events which left Governor Carter to the conclusion that he could be of more service to the territory of Hawaii outside the gubernatorial chair than in that position.

Territorial Secretary Atkinson arrived today from China. He had been regarded as likely to succeed Governor Carter. This has been found to be impossible, as he is only 34 years of age, while the law requires the governor to be at least 35 years old. Among those mentioned as possible appointees to the office are: H. E. Cooper, W. O. Smith, Edward Tonney, H. P. Baldwin and Senator Dowsett.

Race For Supremacy.

It is interesting to watch the race for supremacy among Minneapolis-St. Paul-Chicago trains. First place is securely held by the Pioneer Limited and the second place by the Fast Mail. Both trains are entirely owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. There are three other fast trains via this line from the Twin Cities to Chicago every day, and there is no extra fare to ride on them. Address W. B. Dixon, northwestern passenger agent, St. Paul, for further particulars, lowest rates, etc.

MRS. ROGERS IS REPRIEVED

Saved From the Gallows For the Third Time.

Brattleboro, Vt., June 23.—A reprieve until Dec. 8 for Mrs. Mary M. Rogers, the condemned murderess, was signed yesterday afternoon by Governor Charles J. Bell, and for the third time the woman, who was to have been hanged at Windsor today for killing her husband, has been saved through the operation of the governor's staying the execution. Yesterday's reprieve was granted in order that the case may be carried to the supreme court of the United States, on constitutional questions, which were raised at a hearing before Judge Hoyt H. Wheeler, sitting as a justice of the United States circuit court.

Yesterday afternoon Judge Wheeler received a telegraphic message from Governor Bell, at White River Junction, announcing that Mrs. Rogers had been reprieved. The judge at once signed the paper, which gave to Mrs. Rogers the legal right to have her case heard by the supreme court of the United States.

White River Junction, Vt., June 23.—The scaffold, which has been ready for the execution of Mrs. Mary Rogers, will be taken down.

After signing the reprieve, Governor Bell, in an interviw, said:

"There is nothing more to be said now. You know we all have to change our minds."

THE CLEMENT TRIAL BEGINS

The Aged Banker Must Answer to Twenty-Six Charges.

St. Paul, June 23.—A jury having been secured in the United States district court to try Thomas B. Clement, the former president of the failed First National bank of Faribault, Minn., on twenty-six charges of embezzlement, false entry and misapplication of funds and abstraction of the bank's assets, the taking of testimony was begun yesterday afternoon.

Assistant District Attorney Paul A. Ewert's opening address to the jury was a simple discussion of the twenty-six counts of the indictment which an effort will be made to prove, one having been abandoned by the prosecution.

The first count charges the embezzlement of $1,000 by checking against a deposit slip for $1,000 in April, 1904, which slip was accompanied by no money.

The second count charges a false entry of $3,350 in the assets of the Rarton farm, which was not owned by the bank.

The third count charges the entry of an asset of $2,500 note of the Shaft Pierce Shoe company, which was held by the bank only as collateral.

The fourth and fifth counts charge false entries of $2,000 and $3,000 in reports to the comptroller of the currency to bring the gold reserve up to the legal requirement.

The sixth and seventh counts charge the misapplication of $18,250 in the form of drafts.

The eighth to the twenty-fifth counts involve various similar drafts credited to the Minnesota Lumber company, the concern of which Clement's son was treasurer, amounting in all to $85,000, and the false entries made to cover these misapplications.

The twenty-sixth count is nolled and the twenty-seventh count embraces the taking from the bank of the cash, $98,256, represented by the fruit and lumber deals together.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS

Stimpson Gillett, a wealthy banker of New York with offices in Broad street, is reported missing from his apartments in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel. It was stated that Mr. Gillett was last seen about the hotel June 3.

Mrs. E. Roseberry, the elderly woman, who barricaded herself in her room at Barnesville, Kas., after firing upon a rural mail carrier, surrendered to a posse Thursday, and was arrested on a federal warrant and placed in jail at Wichita. The woman objected to the carrier using the roadway in front of her home in covering his route.

An unknown man called W. R. Scott, a lumber merchant, to the latter's door at Pittsburg, Kas., and threw a pint of carbolic acid into his face. Scott was burned terribly about the face, neck and shoulders. He may live but probably will be blind. The assailant escaped. No motive for the attack is known.

The Dominion government has asked the imperial government to permit Canada to become a party to the trade treaty of 1894, between Great Britain and Japan. Japan is willing to agree to it.

Phil Walker, suspected of running a "speak easy" at Bradley, was shot and killed by Constable Bertram. Walker had been placed under arrest and attempted to escape. Friends of the prisoner attacked the officer and the shooting was done in the melee that ensued. Three other suspects were captured.

UNCLE SAM'S BIG STORE

That Is Run By Pay Director of Navy.

New York, June 23.—Uncle Sam may not set up as a business man, but when he does go into business he is likely to do it in a large way, as he does, for instance, at the New York navy yard, where are located the largest naval storehouses in the United States.

In the general storehouses there is carried a stock of material, merchandise, and supplies of the most varied character, including lumber, cordage and provisions, clothing, shoes, and libraries, including many articles of ship supplies and everything required for the sailors' personal wants, amounting in value to upward of $10,000,000.

The business done in these storehouses during the fiscal year ended in 1904 amounted to over $30,000,000.

Supplies are received here from many sources, and from here they are shipped to all parts of the world. The shipments in the course of the fiscal year 1904 aggregated 21,000 gross tons, and comprised over 450,000 packages.

The official who administers this business, of a volume that would be counted big among the biggest businesses done by private concerns, is known as the general storekeeper, his post being occupied by a pay director of the United States navy.

HALF AN APPLE CROP FOR IOWA

Cold Rains During Blooming Period Have Hurt Fruit.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 23.—"Iowa will have but half a crop of apples this fall," declared Secretary Wesley Greene of the State Horticultural society, who has just completed a summary of the fruit reports to him for the month of June. "The southern part of the state, where the large apple orchards are, has suffered the most," said Secretary Greene. "The cold rains during the blooming period prevented the fertilization of the buds.

"The fruit trees bloomed freely, but did not set a large crop owing to these cold rains. Jonathan and Grimes Golden apples have dropped badly. The percentage on apples in the northern part of the state on June 1 is reported at 83 and the southern half at 55 per cent. The apple percentage for the state is now 69, but I do not expect more than 50 per cent o fa crop.

"The cherry crop is most promising in the eastern part of the state. Cherries are reported at 64 per cent at the north and 36 per cent at the south half of the state. The cherry average of the state for the month is 51 per cent.

The summary of fruit reports for June, as gathered by Secretary Greene also shows the following crop percentages, based on present conditions: Pears, 30 per cent; American plums, 56 per cent; domestic plums, 44 per cent; Japan plums, 31 per cent; currants, 56 per cent; gooseberries, 46 per cent; red raspberries, 76 per cent; blackberries, 74 per cent; grapes, 71 per cent; stawberries, 89 per cent.

According to Secretary Greene's statistics, the percentage of the tree fruits is about 10 per cent lower than at this time last year, while the smaller fruits have a prospect of 10 per cent better crop this year, according to present conditions.

The reports show that the insects are about normal, but fungus is more plentiful than last year among the fruits of the state.

"MITTENED" AT ALTAR.

The Groom Quickly Secured A Younger Bride.

Baltimore, June 23.—Mrs. Iua Gosnell, a widow of 38, was to have married John C. Dorer, nine years her junior, and arrangements had been perfected for a wedding at the home of Mr. Oler, a mutual friend.

The guests attended and, with the minister, awaited the coming of the bridal pair. Mr. Dorer was on time, but the bride-to-be did not come.

Messengers dispatched to her house came back with the information that the widow had changed her mind.

Those present were not to be cheated in this way. The refreshments had arrived, and it was decided to go on with the reception.

So they did, winding up in the morning when Mr. Dorer decided to marry Miss Higgins and proposed before the company dispersed. He was accepted.

This settled, it was up to Mr. Dorer to secure another license. Taking the one he had, he waited at the door of the courthouse until the clerk arrived. He wanted the names changed, but this could not be done, so he got another.

Mr. Dorer and Miss Higgins went to the parsonage of the Starr Methodist church and were married by the pastor, the Rev. G. W. Haddaway.

Upon returning to the home of Mr. Oler the wedding party entered upon another reception, which continued during the next day until the following morning.

Mrs. Dorer is only 18 years of age, and the bridegroom says he is very well satisfied with the change.

CAMPAIGN TO OPEN

On July 4 In Arkansas For United States Senator.

Governor Jeff Davis Going After Senator Berry's Scalp.

Little Rock, Ark., June 23.—Politics in Arkansas is a continuous performance. There is much of farce and vaudeville, a great deal of opera bouffe, considerable straight comedy, and a strain of the semi-tragic running through it that makes it a constant source of entertainment to those whom Governor Jeff Davis in his public addresses has admiringly designated as the "red necks and the hill billies."

Jeff Davis in many respects is the most picturesque governor Arkansas has ever had. He has done many things no other governor ever dared. The most notable of these achievements was his election to a third term as governor, the first time this ever happened in the seventy years' history of Arkansas as a state. He has made more enemies, built up a stronger machine, and cast more precedence to the wind than any other governor of Arkansas; he is more cordially hated and condemned by his enemies and more enthusiastically lauded by his friends than anyone who ever filled the chief executive office. Arrayed against him have been and are the churches, the newspapers and a large and influential political body, and yet he has thus far stood boldly forward and successfully defied them all.

It is upon this record that he is basing his campaign for the United States senate, to displace Senator James H. Berry, the one-legged ex-Confederate who has been a familiar figure about the national capital since March, 1883, when he was elected for the unexpired term of Senator A. H. Garland, who had been elevated to the Cleveland cabinet as attorney general. Traits and deeds that on the ledger of others less fortunate or adroit would have proved embarrassing liabilities were assets to him. It is this fact that makes the approaching contest one of the most important in the Arkansas annals. It will not be lacking in sensational and pyrotechnic features. It has, as a matter of fact, been in progress already for three years.

Jeff Davis has had his covetous eye upon the senatorial toga ever since he first entered the arena of state politics as attorney general in 1899. Before his first term of governor was over he was "mentioned" to succeed Hon. James K. Jones, then Democratic national chairman and party leader. But the conditions were not propitious, and he let it be known that he would wait and give Senator Berry a turn. In accepting the nomination for a second term as governor, in 1902, the same speech was pressed into service to announce that in 1905 he would be a candidate for the United States senate to succeed James H. Berry. And since that time all his efforts have been bent toward that goal. His wildest vagaries and most extravagant acts as governor, which would have ruined others, have only emphasized the wonderful grasp he has of the popular franchise, and strengthened his position with what appears to be the dominant class.

When the legislature of 1903 made an ineffectual effort to impeach him for alleged misconduct and misfeasance in office, he seized upon the effort to become a candidate for a third term on the vindication platform, and at the same time espousing the cause of former Gov. James P. Clarke against Senator James K. Jones, and both were elected. This shattering of precedent served to keep him continuously in the public eye, and to enable him to continue the work of building up a machine that has become, apparently, almost impregnable. He has lost no opportunity to remind the people that he is "after old man Berry's place," and that he proposes to thus crown his political career, and, having been the instrument of Senator Clarke's elevation, he feels confident that his own luck will not desert him. On the other hand, his enemies, and no politician ever had more bitter enemies in high and irreproachable station, are as determined that he shall not win.

The campaign is announced by Gov. Davis to open in earnest on July 4, at Conway. After that date it is probable that he will spend very little of his time in his office, for ever since he began running for higher office during his first and only term as attorney-general he has devoted the greater part of his time to the hustings. He has gone about the state from end to end, successfully arraying the mighty majority, largely of the agricultural and wage-earning classes, against a weaker minority of professional, commercial and industrial citizenship.

Arkansas has accomplished, in effect, the election of United States senators by the people. To be sure, the legislature still elects, but its prerogative has become purely ministerial—it only records the will of the people as expressed at the ballot box. Hitherto the method has been applied to the counties, according to the number of delegates in the state convention, but this is to be reduced to its final analysis in the ensuing election. The last state convention of the party at Hot Springs, in 1904, decided upon a blanket primary—that is, the vote cast for United States senator in the various counties, shall be certified to the state convention, and the totals of the popular vote shall be cast up, irrespective of county lines, and the candidate receiving the majority of the total popular vote shall be declared the nominee of the people for United States senator, to be elected by the legislature, which will convene in January, 1907.

EIGHT PERSONS DROWNED IN THE WISCONSIN RIVER.

Rhinelander, Wis., June 23.—A report comes from Newbold, a small siding six miles north, on the Northwestern line, of the drowning of Mrs. Ezra Craw and Mrs. Edward Craw, and six children, in the Rainbow rapids, Wisconsin river, above here. The families live on opposite sides of the river, the husbands being homesteaders. It is thought that the party was in a boat, which was capsized in the rapids. No details are obtainable.

Bohn Refrigerators

Used by all Great Railroads.

The Pullman Company and all the great railroads use the Bohn System because it maintains lowest temperature, uses least ice, is most sanitary and is most cleanly.

The syphon principle is used only in these refrigerators and we sell them here exclusively.

The construction is fine cabinet work, walls are double-insulated, and the doors are either glass or wood panels. Enamel lining completes a beautiful refrigerator.

If, after ten days' use, a Bohn Refrigerator is not fully satisfactory, we will give you another or refund the purchase price.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Government Wins Suit at Fargo Against Deputy Marshals.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—An important ruling by Judge Amidon on the admissability of the transcript evidence of the treasury department resulted in a victory for the government in the case against United States Marshal Haggart and the bonding companies to recover for overcharges made by United States deputy marshals. The defense objected to the admission of the transcripts showing what the government had paid. This was overruled and a decision for the government made. The bonding companies will appeal.

E. P. Allen, trustee in the bankruptcy proceedings of the Cee Commission company, has started a suit for the officials of the Fargo National bank to show cause why the bank deposit of the defunct company should not be turned over to the trustee. Some months ago Beidler & Robinson Lumber company sued the commission company for money lost by its agent at Casselton in the commission company's office. A $10,000 deposit was made in the bank to cover the judgment pending an appeal, which was decided in favor of Beidler & Robinson. The bank paid the judgment of over $9,000. The trustee says there is still $637 on deposit and he wants it.

Fargo Norsemen will petition President Roosevelt to recognize the independence of Norway as a republic. The petition has been prepared for general circulation over the state.

The board of equalization was astonished at the poverty of some of Fargo's wealthy citizens. Under the head of moneys and credits the assessor could only find $8,000.

Minot—Minot is to have a Masonic temple to cost in the neighborhood of $25,000. A corporation is to be formed this week with a capital stock of $25,000. The name is the Masonic Building association of Minot. Representatives from each of the three lodges have been chosen to act upon a general committee which will have full charge of all preliminaries.

Devils Lake—The annual encampment of the North Dakota national guard will be held at the Devils Lake Soldiers' reserve July 6 to 13. Extensive improvements are under way. A road is being cut through the woods from the camp to the rifle range. The parade grounds are being extended and leveled, tents will be pitched on the west side of the parade grounds for eleven companies of infantry, one of artillery, Company A from Bismarck and the Lisbon band.

Colonel Creel of Devils Lake will be in charge, General Miller being ill. The arrangements will be completed for the best encampment yet held.

The Gollmar Bros.' circus sustained a loss of over $1,000 in a collision. A few box cars crashed into a circus car on a sidetrack and killed three fine horses.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—W. D. Marvin, a painter, was found dead in his room Thursday morning by a mail carrier. Jack Purcell, a gambler, is under arrest. At 2 o'clock Thursday morning Marvin was in a saloon when Purcell threw a spittoon at the bartender. Marvin, acting as a peacemaker, was struck in the head by the spittoon. Physicians dressed his wound and he was taken to his room, where he was found dead. An inquest will be held.

Pierre—Jean A. Krohn, or "Sailor Jean," of Augusta, Me., who is tramping to the capital of every state, pushing a wheelbarrow, came in Wednesday on his visit to Pierre. His longest day's tramp since starting was on Monday, when he came across from Gettysburg, a distance of about sixty miles. The trip took him from early in the morning to about 10 o'clock at night. He met his wife here, who had come on from Minnesota, where she was visiting relatives. He left here for St. Paul, going by way of Huron, and he will follow the Great Northern road from the latter city.

Judge Carland has opened a term of United States court in this city. The only jury case is against the city of Pierre on $4,000 of old bonds.

Miller—The Crow Creek Sioux are coming in carriages this summer to their camping grounds near town. They appear like an assembly of paleface picnickers, the younger squaws chewing gum ferociously, flirting with dainty fans and neat little handkerchiefs at the young braves, who seem quite willing to take such a dare; the older squaws pushing their papooses in gaily trimmed baby cabs and the old braves carrying silk umbrellas.

Albert Wharton and family have returned from Oregon and Fred Callsen and family are on the way back. Others of the colony who went from here are expected back soon. It seems that the fruit business is overdone on the coast. They could get but $6 a ton for prunes, but the price of canned or cured fruits was as high there as here.

Madison — Wentworth saloonkeepers have just contributed $50 each to an indignant Madison father whose minor son returned home in an intoxicated condition from a day's visit at Wentworth. Little, if any, attention is paid to the provisions of the law forbidding the sale of liquor to minors, but a few of these jolts will tend to make the saloonkeeper regard them. The father preferred the cash payment to airing the matter in court, and the saloon men paid the amount ($100) without a quibble.

FESTIVITIES AT HARVARD

Class Day Observed With a Most Elaborate Program.

Cambridge, Mass., June 23.—Class day, the great day of social festivities at Harvard university was observed today with an even more elaborate program than usual. After a downpour of rain which had continued without interruption throughout the week, today opened with the sun shining brightly. The members of the senior class after chapel exercises gathered in the college yard and marched to Sanders theater, where formal literary exercises were held.

The class orator was Harold S. Deming of New York city. The class poem by Swinburn Hale of Chicago, was read and John H. Lathrop of Jackson, Mich., read the class ode. The singing of "Fair Harvard" and benediction closed the exercises.

VICTIMS IMPROVE.

Last Two In Cleveland Hospitals Are Better.

Cleveland, June 23.—A marked improvement was reported today in the condition of Rudolph Cordua of Brooklyn, and Fireman A. A. Gorham, the only victims of the Mentor accident who remain in Cleveland hospitals. It is believed that both men will recover.

Coroner Siegeistein of this county will go to Mentor, probably today, to examine into the cause of the disaster. He will hold an inquest in connection with all of the victims who died in Cleveland. The coroner of Lake county, in which Mentor is located, will take charge of the inquest over those who died at the scene of the disaster. It is expected that both hearings will commence next Monday.

IS NEARLY OVER

Last Shipments of Strawberry Season Are Being Received.

Place Is Filled By California Fruits and Raspberries.

The strawberry season is rapidly drawing to a close.

Carload shipments of Wisconsin berries are being received daily, this week, but after the early part of next week the shipments will fall off greatly, and by next Saturday they will practically cease.

Tomorrow will see the best part of the strawberry season over, and the dealers are warning their customers that if they have not already bought their fruit for preserving, they should do so at once.

The crop of berries about Duluth will not be ripe for two or three weeks yet, but this cuts but a small figure in the market, as the supply is not large.

The price quoted on Wisconsin berries this week is the lowest figure that has been reached this year, although the quality is not up to the Missouri crop which was on the market last week.

• • •

The season for California fruits is well under way. Carload shipments direct from California are being received daily, and the quality of the fruit is excellent for this season of the year.

The quality of each consignment is better than the last, and the dealers say the plums and peaches are running better than they have ever seen them so early in the season.

The season opened exceptionally early this year, and about this time last year the first shipments were coming in.

Cherries are scarce and high this year, the California crop is said to be not more than one-third the usual size, and the season is likely to be short. The price is lower than last week, but the supply is small, and they will not be on the market long.

• • •

Small express shipments of red and black raspberries are being received on the local market. The berries come from Illinois, and while the quality is good, they are somewhat scarce as yet. The Wisconsin raspberries will not be on the market for two or three weeks yet, and until then the price will hold firm. They are now quoted at $2.50 for a twenty-four quart case.

• • •

The lemon market is very firm, and apparently on a steady advance. The demand caused by the warmer weather and the approach of the Fourth of July, is very heavy, and the shipments have been none too heavy.

• • •

The quarantine which has been established at several Central American ports on account of yellow fever, has apparently had little effect on the banana prices as yet. The market is firm, but what advance there has been is very slight.

• • •

Most of the local houses have received car load shipments of Florida watermelons during the last week. The melons are exceptionally large and firm, averaging about thirty pounds each. They are selling for 50 cents each.

Shipments of canteloupes are also becoming heavier, and the price is lower this week.

• • •

The season for pineapples is now at its height, and the dealers say that the fruit now being received, is the finest that has yet come in, and that the price is not likely to go lower, but is apt to be higher after this week.

• • •

The receipts of new potatoes have been very heavy during the last week, and the supply has been fully equal to the demand. The price is still another notch lower, and the new crop is now selling for about 70 cents a bushel.

Indian Territory is the source of supply at the present time, and the crop is said to be a large one.

There is little or no demand for what is left of the old stock, and the dealers are not handling them any longer, to any extent.

• • •

For some unaccountable reason, cheese prices have shown themselves to be firmer during the last week, with a tendency to go higher again, after the recent drop. Some of the dealers say that the reaction is but temporary, and that the low prices will prevail all summer, while others say that the market will advance again to the high point it which it held during the winter months.

• • •

The butter market is holding firm for this season of the year. Good rains throughout the country, insuring fine pasturage, have made the butter receipts heavy, but the surplus supply has been cared for by the cold storage houses, and the market has not fallen as low as is usually the case at this time of the year.

• • •

Eggs continue uncharged in price, at 15½ to 16 cents per dozen. The market conditions are also about the same as last week.

• • •

The poultry market is lower this week, and the stock is moving more freely. Very little dressed poultry is coming in now, practically all of the receipts being live stock. Young broilers are selling at 25 cents a pound, live weight, and hens at 12½.

• • •

The commission men all report a good week's trade. The numerous features in the market, such as strawberries, raspberries, California fruit, and green vegetables, have made a brisk demand from both the city dealers and the range towns, and an excellent volume of business has been the result.

• • •

The branch packing houses also report a good week's business, with prices and market conditions about the same as last week.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Whereabouts of Crystal Falls Man Remains a Mystery.

Crystal Falls—The whereabouts of Edward Carlson who dropped out of sight at Crystal Falls four weeks ago as effectively as if the earth had opened and swallowed him, is still a mystery and his friends are exerting themselves in an effort to solve the mystery. His clothing remains as his former boarding house; his money lies in the mining company office unclaimed. His acquaintances have searched the immediate vicinity of the Columbia mine track from the crossing at Superior avenue out to the mine, with no success. There appears no good reason why Carlson should have taken his departure, and by some people it is feared he has met with foul play. There are circumstances connected with the case that appear suspicious. The employment of a detective has been authorized by the county board, and no stone will be left unturned in the effort to solve the mystery.

Ironwood—The Gogebic range is falling into line with other districts in the exploration of new properties and the reopening and development of old. Reference has been made to the work in the near vicinity of Ironwood, in the Schlesinger betterments at Newport and others. The Jones & Laughlin Steel company is at work at old Hennepin and Pence, as has been stated, and it will be but a short time before ore is coming out of the two shafts now on the former. Diamond drills are working there and an attempt is under way to explore the mine at greater depths than have ever been reached.

There is great hopes thtt deposits of ore at greater depth may give to these old and long idle mines a permanence that has been gained for other Gogebic properties in the same way. East from Bessemer much new work has begun, and some of the old workings that are revived are looking very well. The Colby has been growing into prominence as the result of new finds and is now employing a large force and taking out much ore. It is looking better underground than in years. Ironton and old Jackpot, which was abandoned by Jones & Laughlin a few years ago, are both looking well. At Eureka, two miles east of Bessemer, drilling seems to have disclosed ore and pumps are going in to unwater the old openings and prepare for active mining. At Wakefield old Comet and Joliet are both to be overhauled and revived and both may send out ore this year.

There is to be exploration at the western end of the range over in Wisconsin near Mellen. Some of this work is under way. The progress of mining on the active portion of the Gogebic is more rapid than before and the total tonnage is sure to be large.

Marquette—With the approbation of the Right Rev. Bishop Eis, an apostolate to poor parishes in the diocese of Marquette and Sault Ste. Marie has been formed under the directorate of Rev. Father Barth of Stephenson. Besides Father Barth, Rev. Father Buchholtz of Ironwood and Rev. James Corcoran of Bark River will serve. The object of the apostolate is to give missions in the poor parishes of the diocese. Rev. Father Barth has spent the past three months in missionary work.

Gladstone—A considerable sum of money leaves Gladstone every year for foreign countries. Sometimes as high as $1,000 a day in foreign money orders is issued at the postoffice, and probably $30,000 a year goes that way. The most of it goes to the Scandinavian countries, Finland, Belgium, and Austria; very little to Great Britain, Ireland or France. There has been some sent to Jerusalem. In addition, the banks issue foreign money orders in considerable quantities.

Ribbon day Saturday at Glass Block.

Saturday sale of silk shirt waists!

Our best waist maker in New York had a small lot of silks left over from his spring output, of which he wanted to get rid. We offered him a price for the entire lot, made up into shirt waists, according to our own specifications. He accepted our offer. When made up there were only 175 waists in the lot, but they are beauties, and the price doesn't cover the wholesale value of the silk alone.

The silks are messaline and peau de soie, light weight but strong. The colors are pearl, champagne, lavendar, reseda, light green, maize and cardinal. They are made up with tucked stock collar and tabs, with tucked front and box pleats, button trimmed, and deep tucked and tailored cuff (similar to the waist in cut.)

The regular wholesale price of these waists would have been $4.87½ each. The retail price would have been $6.00.

$2.49 Our shrewd purchase enables us to sell these waists Saturday at $2.49 each, and as there are only 175 waists in the lot we must limit one waist to a customer. $2.49

Sale begins Saturday at 8 o'clock.

Wash dresses for girls and misses.

Two lots for Saturday that will delight the hearts of mothers who want pretty things for their girls. These prices represent big reductions.

98c For one lot of wash dresses, worth up to $1.75—made of ginghams, grass linens and percales—and sizes from 4 to 14.

$1.49 For another and better lot of very pretty wash dresses—all colors and styles you would consider cheap at $2.50.

DEFENSE OF INDIA.

Railways In Afghanistan Are Deemed Indispensable.

London, June 23.—Col. Mark Bell, in an interview says that it is necessary for England to recognize that the defense of Afghanistan is the defense of India; that Afghanistan is India's outpost, of which Afghan Turkistan and the Herat provinces form the glacis, and that it is necessary to recognize that the defense of this glacis is the most important part of the defense of the main work—India. Continuing, Col. Bell says:

"War must be preceded by preparations for war, and from the fact that the government proposes to take no immediate steps to prepare the Afghanistan theater of war to India's advantage, we can only argue that they at least fail to appreciate the gravity of the defense. We know that on her side of the border Russia has, between Sarakha and Osh, massed some 200,000 men with stores (including railway material), and that her depots are fortified. We also know that she has railways sufficient to mass and supply a much larger force on this line. There is nothing whatever to prevent her occupation of the glacis of India. The Afghans are altogether powerless to do so, and before we could come to their aid in any sufficient force Russia would not only be in possession of the glacis of our fortress, with railway communication to her base, but would, as well, have seized the passes leading into it from Afghanistan and have forfeited them, their mouths and their exits; and Russia need not trust solely to pack animal transport as both Afghan Turkistan and the Herat province are favorable to railway construction. Ethnographical considerations also favor Russia. Unfortunately for India, the country that lies between the Indus and the Hindu Kush is not one that would be chosen by the railway engineer.

"In this sorry plight Afghanistan will call upon us to restore to her her lost provinces. Will the task be a possible one, even with half a million of men all told? Before we can attempt to do with any chance of success we must construct railways to Kabul and Bamian, Kandshar and Seistan.

"Instead of waiting until Russia occupies our Indian glacis, it is an imperial duty to construct those lines necessary to its defense. That we should veto the construction by Russia of railways into Afghanstan is comprehensible, but that we should ourselves refrain from constructing those necessary to her safety as well as our own, and to the commercial development of both is incomprehensible. The policy of masterly inactivity, of allowing Afghanistan to stew in her own juice, will not answer in this twentieth century. Civilization cannot be checked by barbarism, and to attempt to stay her progress is to fight against a law of nature and to court failure."

WAS ONLY DETAINED.

Capt. John B. Aulin was employed as a pilot at Port Arthur when the war broke out and the Russians detained him. His wife in Oakland, Cal., who did not hear from him for a year believed he had deserted her and got a divorce. The other day he returned with $25,000 that he had earned piloting during the siege, and now there will be a remarriage.

GIVES ALL AWAY

Missouri Banker Dedicates His Wealth To Methodist College.

Reparation "Because God Spared His Wife In Runaway."

Morrisville, Mo., June 23.—In a burst of gratitude, a flood of religious enthusiasm and a mingling of contortions, Thomas Cunnyngham, a shrewd banker and stock trader in Polk county, dedicated all his wealth as well as his services and experiences as a teacher to the Morrisville college, a Southern Methodist institution of learning.

During the commencement exercises of the college last Wednesday night Mr. Cunnyngham arose, held up his hand and announced to Dr. W. W. Thomas, the college president, that he would like to make a statement. Dr. Thomas invited him to the platform.

An audience of 1,500 persons was present, among it a great many of Mr. Cunnyngham's neighbors. The interruption was not taken with very good grace, because he was not altogether popular.

Mr. Cunnyngham began his address by saying that the Lord had shed upon him a great light, in which he saw a means of grace and a method of doing good to coming generations. He stated that he had been persecuted by his neighbors and held in contempt for alleged offenses of which he was not guilty, and for losses for which he was not responsible. He was tired of the contemptuous behavior of some of his neighbors, and particularly the young.

"I became the Lord's steward.

"I am going to deed to this college everything I own and am going to work for coming generations in a spirit of contrition," he said. "When the Lord saved the life of my wife last Sunday there burst upon me a great light. I saw for the first time His glory and my duty. I have become the Lord's steward—His financial agent.

"I will deed to this college, from which I was graduated in 1872, a 300-acre farm, the live stock on it and its increase forever; my home in town, worth $3,000, and $18,000 worth of negotiable paper, which I guarantee as good as cash.

"I propose to give my services to the college as an agricultural teacher and adviser in domestic science and the primary grades. I have been blamed for many things of which I am not guilty, and the Lord has shown me a way of wiping out my past."

The audience of farmers sat silently under Mr. Cunnyngham's speech. They could not comprehend that "Tom" Cunnyngham, the shrewdest cattle trader in Polk county, would voluntarily give away all that he had struggled years to possess. They looked cynically at him and grinned, wondering what he was about and why he did it.

Mr. Cunnyngham is a member of one of the oldest families in Polk county, and is connected by blood and marriage with the most influential families in this part of the state. He has brothers living in the county, all of whom are wealthy in farms and bankstocks. He was educated at the college to which he gives his money, and was for years a school teacher.

It was when he continued his speech that his neighbors began to understand his generosity.

"I have been blamed for causing the losses which many of you suffered in the failure of the Bank of Commerce in Springfield in 1893."

Many of the farmers nodded acquiescence.

"I swear that I was not responsible. I E7Vawlo8h bm bm bm bm xzhlfffffi vbg and had to borrow money to begin life again."

Some in the audience grinned.

"I have been hooted at by children and called 'bank robber,' and bank wrecker,' but I declare myself innocent of any intent to do wrong. I give to the Lord what I have since earned in contrite desire to show that I am all right.

"In passing along the roads at night I have heard voices calling out of the darkness 'bank robber.' My home has been stoned and my windows broken. I feel this deeply.

lost every cent I had in the failure. lay at her feet all that I have earned in my life and propose to give with it the experiences of my mature manhood in the education of young men to become ministers of the Gospel and girls to become good wives and mothers."

At the conclusion of Mr. Cunnyngham's speech cynicism vanished and the audience cheered him like mad.

At Mr. Cunnyngham's request Dr. Thomas appointed committees to take charge at once of the property he proposed turning over to the college. W. D. Dunnigan, cashier of the Bank of Bolivar; William Sanford, cashier of a Springfield bank, and C. J. Wilkins, cashier of the Bank of Morrisville, were appointed trustees, and a board of appraisers was also appointed, including Dr. R. W. Paris, secretary of the board of college curators, while a board of dignitaries of the M. E. church South consented to receive the property in behalf of the church, of which Presiding Elder Winton is chairman.

After the meeting closed many farmers left the college hall shaking their heads, unable yet to understand it all. They were used to sudden conversions and acts of contritions, but not financial sacrifices to the amount of $40,000.

In 1888, Tom Cunningham was a well-known and respected farmer. He had been a school teacher and was highly respected. His father and mother lived on a rich farm, near Morrisville. He was known as a successful man. As he rode about the county, making trades in cattle, sheep and horses, it is alleged that he advised persons he knew to deposit their funds in the Springfield bank, which many of them did.

It became known that he had $10,000 invested in the bank and was a director. So great was the confidence in his shrewdness that many persons sent their money to the Springfield institution. One day it failed and all, including "Tom" Cunnyngham, lost their money.

In 1896 James Cunnyngham, "Tom's" brother, started a small private bank in Morrisville, but when "Jim" died "Tom" Cunnyngham took charge of it, but later relinquished its management to his nephew, T. M. Cunnyngham. Again the neighboring farmers came to the support of the local bank. It failed and the depositors got only a portion of their funds back. Individual farmers, to whom a few hundred dollars was a fortune, felt their losses keenly. One farmer, a blind man named Uttley, lost in the neighborhood of $700.

In a farming community a bank failure means much more than in the city. There is a closer relationship between depositors and the men who run the bank than is possible in the city. A man suspected of being in the slightest manner implicated in the failure of a bank, or in any way connected with it at the time of its inability to pay depositors is cordialy hated.

This was the fate of "Tom" Cunnyngham, although he always protested that he had nothing to do with the failure of the banks in which his neighbors lost their money. There were threats of assassination, and several times he was shot at in the dark as he was riding home, and several of his former friends refused to speak to him.

Then he became principal of the public school at Morrisville. He had occasion to thrash a bad boy or two, after which the pupils made things very unpleasant for him. Taking their cue from their elders, they hooted and jeered him, and during the night wrote insulting messages on the blackboards for him to find in the morning, with pictures of looted banks and such phrases as "Thomas Cat—Bank Looter." with a picture of a cat with a bundle of bank bills in its claws.

Mr. Cunnyngham ignored these insults as long as he could, then they began to prey on him, and he endured them as long as he could.

Last Sunday afternoon, his wife and her niece, Miss Jewett Lecompte, daughter of J. W. Lecompte, a banker of Cassville, Mo., who was on a visit from Columbia, where she was a university student, were driving home from a baptising. On the way home a farmer had swarmed a hive of bees in the road. He had cast

REMADE THE BABY'S FACE

Curious and Unusual Operation Performed at Sioux City.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 23.—A curious and unusual operation was performed upon the 5-months-old babe of J. Peterson of Storm Lake at the German Lutheran hospital last week, in which an ugly deformity of the face, jaws and palate of the little child was removed.

Fo two long hours the little fellow was under the influence of chloroform, while a local physician was breaking the cartilage-like bones of the jaw, trimming the flesh so it would unite, and wiring together the roof of the mouth, which, by a strange freak of nature, had never united.

In spite of the severity of the operation the little child is doing nicely, and is is believed that the operation will be entirely successful.

The child was born with a cleft in the roof of the mouth, reaching from the right nostril to the throat. The bones of the roof of the mouth, which ordinarily unite before birth, had failed to do so, and the upper jaw bone of the left side extended upward and that of the right side downward. The nose, as a result, was pulled over to the left side.

In order to perform the operation it was necessary to push the bone on the left side downward, and that on the right side upward. After this was done, the bones were fastened with silver wires in the roof of the mouth, and the lips, which had been trimmed with a scalpel so they would unite, were sewed together.

The operation, although a tedious and dangerous one, owing to the age of the child, was completed in about two hours. The child has now ceased to suffer and is apparently in the best of spirits. The mother is constantly watching the little fellow to see that he does not remove the plasters and bandages.

ROADS ARE DAMAGED

Heavy Rains Raise St. Louis County River to Flood Stage.

Highways In Commissioner Ryan's District Suffer the Most.

Reports from the outside commissioner districts of St. Louis county indicate that in many districts, particularly in those crossed by some of the larger streams of the county, the roads have been made practically impassable by reason of so much high water of late from the heavy rains. Not only are the roads damaged, but, in some instances, the bridges and culverts have been washed out, necessitating an additonal amount of repair work aside from the regular improvement that had been planned for the summer season.

In a few localities the conditions are said to be so bad that the commissioners have stopped road work for a time until the water subsides and the ground dries out, acting on the belief that it will be useless to go ahead and spend any more money on the roads until the weather is settled and the men can work to advantage.

So far as the reports have come to the auditor's office, Commissioner Ryan's road district has suffered the worst, particularly the Sturgeon lake and the Bear river roads, where the floods have washed away bridges and even the corduroy laid down and partially covered in some of the low places. The damage because of the loss of the corduroy will be no small item for it is practically impossible to get any more corduroy out of the swamps until the ground freezes next winter. The commissioners usually plan to have all the corduroy needed during a season on new roads or for repair of old roads cut during the winter season and hauled out of the swamps before the ground softens. It is claimed that it costs from twice to four or five times as much to get corduroy out of the swamps in the summer than in the winter.

In another part of Commissioner Ryan's district, not so much affected by the rains, the work has been progressing rapidly, the road camps having been moved from Hobson lake to a point about twelve miles out of Hibbing and the road having been cleared and graded to within a mile of what is known as the Hahn ranch.

The settlers along the route have, it is claimed, been getting in some good work this past spring and the roads, even now were it not for excessive rains, would be in fairly passable condition.

In Commissioner Kauppi's big road district the reports of bad roads on account of heavy rains, which have raised the rivers over their banks, are coming in somewhat more slowly.

Commissioner Kauppi said this morning that while the rivers are higher now, in his district, than they have ever been before at this time of the season, barring the flood of three or four years ago, he does not think the damage to the roads has been generally serious. The Swan Lake road is said to have been slightly washed out in a few places. The new Prairie Lake road in the Floodwood district seems to have suffered the most on account of high water. The road is not yet finished. The corduoy was not covered and the high water has washed some of the corduoy into the woods.

Mr. Kauppi expects to start out next week for another several days trip over the roads of his district when he will make provision for the repairs to be made wherever damage has been done by the floods.

Nearly every little stream in that part of the county included in Mr. Kauppi's district is said to be running full to the top of the banks or over them and some of the swamps and low places have been transformed into large ponds and lakes.

DAMAGING TO MITCHELL

Testimony of Partner Reveals Many Questionable Transactions.

Portland, Or., June 23.—On the day that marked the seventieth milestone of his journey through life, his face blanched until the blue veins stood out across his temples, John H. Mitchell, senior United States senator from Oregon, yesterday listened to the testimony of Judge Tanner, his lifelong friend and law partner.

Judge Tanner was not less white or less agitated, and throughout his testimony his words came hestitatingly and falteringly and so low that the ticking of the court room clock was audible throughout the hour or two that it took to give his testimony.

Tanner identified checks paid by Fred A. Krebbs to Tanner and letters that passed between himself and Senator Mitchell relative to the practices before the land department. Letters showing that Mitchell received each month his share of the firm's earnings, which was one-half of the net receipts and that the money paid by Krebbs to Tanner entered into the funds divided at the end of each month was offered in evidence. A letter from Mitchell to Tanner showing that he received upon request a copy of the firm's books, showing all receipts and how secured during the senator's stay in Washington, was an exhibit offered yesterday.

District Attorney Heney questioned Judge Tanner as to his trip to meet Senator Mitchell in December last, when the senator was returning to Portland a short time prior to his first indictment.

Judge Tanner told of having received a telegram from the senator asking him to come as far as Kalispell, Wash., to meet him. The judge had taken the trip and had met the senator on the train with Binger Hermann and Frank C. Baker, chairman of the Republican state central committee. The senator, he said, was very eager for land fraud news and asked if there was any danger of the government agents having had access to the books of the firm. Mr. Mitchell expressed, said the witness, deep concern about the entries and transactions the firm had had with Krebs, and wanted to see the books. The following day, Judge Tanner testified, the senator went to the office and in company with him (Tanner) looked over the books, page by page. According to the testimony of the judge, Mitchell expressed surprise at the way the entries had been made, and demanded that the old books be destroyed, saying the entries in regard to the Krebs transactions would not only indict, but would convict him if they fell into the hands of the government.

Judge Tanner testified he had told the senator that though it would necessitate perjury and that he had never done such a thing in his life, he would stand by his partner and do what he could to help him. He had agreed to destroy the books if necessary and had called the senators's attention to the clause in the partnership agreements by which the senator was to receive all the fees for work done before the departments. He had changed them and the new agreements had been dated back to March 1, 1901, the same as the original, and had been signed by both. The subsequent letters passong between the two men were also entered in evidence as tending to show still further the knowledge of the defendant that he had been violating the law.

HOBSON'S CHOICE.

Hero of Merrimac Would Go To Congress.

Birmingham, Ala., June 23.—Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson spent a short time here on a trip to deliver a number of addresses at college commencements.

Capt. Hobson said his time would be occupied all summer delivering addresses, chiefly at Chautauqua gatherings in the West. He will not return to Alabama until September.

Concerning his political plans, Capt. Hobson said: "It is rather early for me to make a formal announcement, but it is my intention to be a candidate for congress. There has been some talk about my running for governor, but I will not be in the gubernatorial race. I am especially interested in national questions and feel that I am better equipped for congress than for the governorship.

"When I return to Alabama in September I shall proceed to make a preliminary campaign of the Sixth district. When the time comes for me to open a formal campaign I shall have definite issues, including those of my last campaign. REV. MOONEY IS SELECTED

New Secretary of Duluth Deanery of Episcopal Church.

At a meeting of the Duluth deanery of the Episcopal church, at the residence of Bishop Morrison last evening, Rev. Roderick J. Mooney, rector of St. Luke's and the Holy Apostles churches of this city, was elected secretary of the deanery for the coming year.

It was decided that the next meeting of the deanery be held at Hibbing, during the latter part of August.

On the boatride given the visiting clergymen and lay delegates yesterday by the local members of the Episcopal church there were about forty in the party, which viewed the various docks, the blast furnace and the shipyards.

During the afternoon yesterday an executive session was held by Bishop Morrison, in consultation with his studying committee, at St. Paul's rectory.

Nearly all the visiting delegates remained over to attend the reception tendered last evening at the home of Bishop and Mrs. Morrison, leaving on the morning and afternoon trains today for their homes.

REDSKINS SPEND

Their Money Like Children and Fortunes Disappear.

Annuity Paid For Their Lands Vanishes In Profligacies.

Pawhuska, Okla., June 23.—The improvidence of the American Indian is one of his remarkable characteristics. Among the Osages, who are literally "rolling in wealth," great extravagance prevails, especially when they receive their annuity moneys, which pass through their fingers like water. The halfbreed citizens of the tribe are possibly more reckless than the full-bloods. A number of halfbreed families who lived in poverty before they succeeded in getting their names on the tribal rolls, suddenly found themselves possessed of fortunes, which disappeared like dust in the desert. Afterward a number of these families were shown not to be entitled to citizenship and were dropped from the rolls. A writer in the Pawhuska Journal relates these incidents of Osage extravagance:

"We recall the case of several members of a family admitted, but afterwards stricken from the rolls, who received at one time $25,000 back money. At one time they continued to draw the regular per capita annuity, notwithstanding they were soon reduced to penury. The first expenditure was to pay attorneys and others aiding them to get on the rolls; for this purpose they used much of their money. As the money was fully in their hands, the fact that they probably never had had two suits of clothing each, nor, perhaps, more than a dollar's worth of sugar in the house at one time, every member in the family was soon fully fitted out with clothing enough to satisfy a Fifth avenue swell. Sugar was purchased by the barrel, fruit by the case and everything else in proportion.

"In commenting upon this recently, a white man said that he once passed the home and saw more merchandise going to destruction than he had ever witnessed before. On one corner of the porch sat a case of California canned peaches which the children were eating at will. Out in the yard stood a barrel of sugar, where it had been rolled from the wagon several days before. It had been opened and left uncovered. A passing shower had moistened the contents, which afterward hardened in the sun. A lump as big as a flour sack was lying in the yard, kicked about by the children and jumped over by the dogs. Other things, including a complete bolt of calico, entirely new, were cast about the yard in reckless disregard of value. Since this family has been stricken from the rolls it has been in very reduced circumstances. Truly the fool and his money are soon parted.

"Another family was placed on the rolls and drew nearly $13,000. In less than twelve months the entire amount was squandered, and the past due mortgages on chattels were foreclosed by creditors. Although this family lived in Pawhuska and had no conceivable use for more than one wagon, the father found it necessary to own three. Every child on the place was provided with a pony and saddle and they had guns galore. They had one built by special order at a fancy price by an Eastern firm."

REBUKED DR. OSLER.

Eight Lads, All Over 77, Ran Foot Race.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 23.—Well, it lacked only your Uncle Denham Thompson of Swanzey, N. H.; Cy Prime and a few others from the "Old Homestead" to complete the picture. There were eight as frolicsome octogenarians as were ever gathered together. The start was at Doan street and Euclid avenue, and the finish was at the Public square, just four and one-fourth miles away, according to the busy Mr. McIlrath, who conducted the show.

Who won? Who but the nimble Mr. Humiston. His initials are H. D. and his years number 81. Being a young man, it is not at all remarkable that he won. He covered the distance in an even fifty-nine minutes, which is going some, no matter the age. At that, though, it was four minutes slower than Mr. Humiston had placed for himself.

One minute and forty seconds later than Mr. Humiston, the waving whiskers of Milo Rudd, the infant of the bunch, hove in sight, and following him was the rotund figure of O. S. Crain, also waving a cluster of white whiskers. James Graham, native of the Isle of Man, resident of Cleveland for half a century, and extremely proud of the fact that good habits have enabled him to dwell upon this earth for 92 years, was fourth in the race. He had five minutes start of the other fellows, but at Wilson avenue a corn of some thirty years' standing began to pain him and he was forced to let up his stride.

The contestants and the ages to which they confess were: O. S. Crain, 84 years old; A. M. Johnson, 82 years old; James Graham, 92 years old; James P. Isham, 84 years old; Milo Rudd, 77 years old (the bunch appeared to spurn him on account of his youth; W. C. Hammond, likewise a colt of 77; H. D. Humiston, 81 years old; Lorenz W. Wilhelm, 83 years old.

Their combined ages are something like 650 years, and their combined whiskers would stuff a leaping tick for the Barnum circus.

When Web A. McIlrath, who acted as master of ceremonies, was asked why the foot race was originated, he said it was to refute beyond further cavil the theory of Dr. Osler of Baltimore. Therefore, Dr. Osler will please feel rebuked.

IN CONSTANT FEAR OF DEATH

Baron Rothschild Spent His Time Looking For Cures.

Vienna, June 23.—Baron Nathaniel de Rothschild, the bachelor Croesus of Vienna, who died at his town palace last week, had always surrounded himself with mystery, and the fact that he was dangerously ill only became known when he did not attend the funeral of Baron Alphonse in Paris.

Nathaniel was original, and lived absolutely outside society. His health was weak from early youth, and the incessant care of it was the one aim of his life. He consulted all the famous physicians of all countries, and all the quacks besides. He would undergo the treatments prescribed for him by Charcot, Oppolzer of Skoda and, at the same time, live on Kneipp's premises in his magnificent railway car, and would also take the herbs some old woman advised; anything to get well, from the ascension of a glacier to shating with the help of two commissionaires, adepts in the art.

His only real joys were his collections; he inherited some from his father, and completed them during his lifetime, but he was never sure of his taste. Princess Pauline Matternich was his Egeria; by a few words she could make him think the apartment he had just finished decorating, regardless of expense, was in detestable taste, and everything would be pulled down and the furnishing and decorating work begun afresh.

Count Wilczek was also his friend and advisor, especially when he made purchases for the palaces built for himself in Vienna and in the Faubourg St. Germain in Paris. But the Viennese think the high outer walls, pillars and gates enclosing his noble courtyard and garden were intended for protection in the event of a revolution breaking out, when Rothschild might be one of the best whom the mob might go for.

He was a successful sportsman; with a horse bred in his own stud at Ezsupau, he won the Derby. On a height north of the city, his world-famed hothouses produce every variety of fruits and owners, which are shown to the best advantage in luxuriant conservatories. They are one of the sights of Vienna and may be visited twice a week for 25 cents, which goes to a fund for the families of the poor victims of the Ring theater fire.

He was a donor to all charities under the patronage of Princess Matternich and he founded charitiable institutions on his own account. Thus he sent a million crowns to the medical school when it was in need of funds. He gave the beautiful castle Reichenay, at the foot of the Semmering, as a home for consumptives, but Archduke Charles Lewis, whose villa Wartholz adjoined the castle, protested vehemently against the neighborhood of sick people. So the Baron made the gift into a retreat for invalid officers, and gave half a million to consumptives to build a house where they would not disturb the archduke.

All this the Baron did with the interest on his property, for he was in no way connected with the banking firm. Old Baron Ansel understood him to be such a confined invalid that even if he lived he could not become head of the Vienna firm, and by his will be designated his younger son, Albert, 8 years the junior of Nathanael. Baron Nathanael was 70 years old.

FENCES TO FALL

Uncle Sam at Last Frightens Nebraska Cattle Kings.

Warning That They Must Surrender Tracts They Grabbed.

Omaha, Neb., June 23.—There is consternation among more than 4,000 Nebraska cattle raisers because the Krause brothers of Alliance, Neb., has been found guilty in the United States court of fencing up the public ranges of the state, and will probably be heavily fined as well as imprisoned.

And all of these 4,000 men, who are now feverishly endeavoring to comply with the law which they have defied for twenty years, have large tracts of government land under illegal fences—ranging in amount from a few hundred acres to one large tract of 750,000 acres—altogether something like 4,000,000 acres of good pasture which have been withheld from homesteading and settling purposes by the barbed wire fences which have been placed thereon by the great cattle interests.

After one of the hardest-fought legal battles in the history of the state, a battle in which hundreds of cattle kings lined up with the Krause brothers and helped to fight the common enemy, the government has won a decisive victory and has put to rout the offenders.

And not content with a single victory, District Attorney Baxter, who has had charge of the prosecution for the government, will immediately begin the trials of other cattle kings on similar indictments.

Twenty years ago Grover Cleveland, at that time president, ordered the land department of the government to have the fences removed from the public lands, even if the assistance of the United States army was necessary.

The laws were plain; the evidence was overwhelming. But nothing was done. Different land commissioners came and went, but no effort was made to clear the ranges of the fences, though action was often discussed.

The situation remained the same until three years ago, when Roosevelt reissued the order to the land department to rmove the fences and permit settlers to enter the ranges. Different special agents were sent out and warnings were issued to the cattle kings to take down the fences or prosecutions would follow. The agents were simply laughed at.

Then came the special grand jury of a year ago, and much to the surprise of every one, including the cattle men themselves, several indictments were returned. Among those indictments were those against the Krause brothers, John and Herman, of Alliance. These indictments are the ones upon which the Krauses have just been found guilty.

The evidence brought out in the Krause trial showed the manner in which the cattlemen placed fences on the public lands; how "dummy" homesteaders took up large plats of range and turned them over to the barons; how hundreds of widows of Union soldiers were induced to take up homesteads for the benefit of the magnates; how would-be settlers and homesteaders were intimidated from going onto the range which had been illegally fenced, and how, if the admonitions of the cattle raisers were unheeded, persecutions finally drove the homesteaders to leave the country.

In addition to the 4,000,000 acres of government land in this state which is under illegal fencing, it is charged that millions of acres of the public domain have been practically stolen by fraudulent entry. The means taken by the cattle kings to obtain these immense tracts of land is to be investigated, and wherever fraud can be shown to have been used, the entry will be cancelled, the land returned to the government and again be subject to legitimate entry.

One of the principal methods of the land "grafter" was to obtain the assistance of the widows of Union soldiers, who were entitled to 160 acres of public land without being compelled to live on the land during time elapsed between filing and proving up. Taking advantage of this latter fact, the great cattle raisers scoured Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and other Middle-Western states for these widows, who were brought to Nebraska by the carload.

They were taken to the land offices and there filed on certain lands, making oath at the time of filing that the lands were for their own personal use—and then, in most cases, turning around and giving the cattle raiser a lease for a long term of year, with an agreement that the title should pass to the cattle man as soon as given to the widow. The government prosecutors charge that husbands of widows committed perjury when making their filings and this phase of the question is the one which the government inspectors will look into.

But in making their filings, the cattle men again took advantage of the government. Instead of having the widows file on a compact body of land, the filings were made in a long, narrow strip. Placed end to end, these strips were run for miles before a turn was made at right angles with the first line. Eventually the cattle man would have possession of a narrow strip inclosing a hollow square in which the land belonged to the government, but was inclosed within the fences of the cattel owners, who refused access to bona fide settlers and homesteaders.

And again the laws worked to the good of the cattlemen, when, in 1904, the Kinkaid bill was passed by congress, permitting the holder of 160 acres of grazing land in Nebraska to increase his holdings to 640 acres. The cattlemen were prepared; they knew the bill was to be presented to congress, and their arrangements were all made. They increased their holdings—and those of the widows—to the full amount permitted by the new law.

The "dummy" homesteader was used with telling effect. Any tramp could earn $10 by filing on a homestead, leasing the land to the cattleman, and going on his way. In fact, he could register at the next land office under another name and again sell out. Practically every cowboy in the state has taken up a homestead—and most of the land thus filed on eventually passes to the control of the employers of the cowboy.

As evidence of the persecutions to which any settler was subjected who dared to attempt to secure a home within the illegal fences of the cattle kings, the testimony given by Theodore Osborn and his wife in the case against the Krause brothers, which has just been finished, is striking.

According to Mrs. Osborne's testimony at the trial, their home was visited time after time by employes of the cattle kings; their stock was run off and killed; they themselves were threatened and intimidated; and one night, when her husband was away from home, the house was attacked by several men. With a shotgun in her hands, Mrs. Osborne threw open the door and fired into the approaching party, badly wounding one of them and forcing the others to retire.

I. W. Cardinell of Bridgeport, Neb., a section in which the illegal fences abound, says:

"The lord knows there are thousands of acres in our section under fences which ought to come down. But it's as much as a man's life is worth to make a filing on a piece of free land up there unless you can first make arrangement with the cattle barons. The cattlemen have 'Kinkaided' (the idiom for fencing under the new law) scores and scores of sections within their inclosures, and will pretty near hold the land, too."

Within the past year 2,000,000 acres of land has been homesteaded in Nebraska under the Kinkaid bill, and, of this number it is estimated that fully seventy-five per cent has been fraudulent.

The actual farmers and homesteaders are now looking forward to the time when these great fences will be removed, in order that thousands of settlers may come in from other states and occupy "the short grass country."

AGONY OF SORE HANDS

Cracked and Peeled. Water and Heat Caused Intense Pain. Could Do No Housework.

VERY GRATEFUL TO CUTICURA

"My hands cracked and peeled, and were so sore it was impossible for me to do my housework. If I put them in water, I was in agony for hours; and if I tried to cook, the heat caused intense pain. I consulted two doctors, but their prescriptions were utterly useless. And now after using one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment my hands are entirely well, and I am very grateful. (signed) Mrs. Minnie Drew, 18 Dana St., Roxbury, Mass."

No Knife Needed

Piles can be cured by internal treatment. To get at the cause—that is the secret, and that is why Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is so universally successful in its results. It increases the flow of digestive juices in the stomach—accelerates the action of the liver. With congestion of the liver removed and constipation relieved, the two chief and distinct causes of piles are reached and conquered.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific

The Internal Remedy

For dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, biliousness, catarrh of the stomach and kindred ailments it is the greatest remedy that has ever yet benefited mankind.

Certain in its results, this remedy will cure the most obstinate case of Piles.

SHE WANTS DAMAGES

Famous Toomey Breach of Promise Case Opens at St. Paul.

Fashionable Young Doctor Sued By Mrs. Eleanor M. Toomey.

St. Paul, Minn., June 23.—The famous Toomey breach of promise case opened before Judge Bunn yesterday. Suit for $25,000 damages is brought by Mrs. Eleanor M. Toomey, actress, the divorced wife of James J. Hill's former private secretary, against Dr. J. W. Bettingen, a fashionable young doctor of St. Paul. The following jury was secured: Charles F. Reinecker, Lindeke Warner & Sons; Warren L. Seeley, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road; Martin Bohlig, Pioneer Press; Frank Steiner, Chicago Great Western; John E. Seabury, wholesale grocer; Michael A. Riordan, Chicago Great Western; Thomas Underwood, grocer; Peter Millette, farmer, White Bear; Frank E. Beatty, Omaha road; Martin Bacon, Northern Pacific road; John D. Rowlands, Field, Schlick & Co., and Peter Fischer, farmer, White Bear.

The case was first presented to the jury by Stan J. Donnelly, Mrs. Toomey's attorney. Mrs. Toomey occupied a seat in court directly alongside of the jury, with her friend, Miss Fleming, directly behind her. The staring crowds did not annoy Mrs. Toomey. She rested with one dimpled cheek in her hand and coyly observed the jurymen. In opening the case Attorney Donnelly said this was not a star case, simply a suit for damages on breach of contract. Mrs. Toomey, he said, resided at the Aberdeen and occupied a social position in the city. The defendant had promised to marry her. He had broken the promise and now she sud for $25,000.

"Dr. Bettingen was called to the Toomey home as a professional man," said Mr. Donnelly, "to care for Mrs. Toomey. He came oftener and oftener. He came when she was alone. She visited him at his office. His offices are arranged so that he has a private room. She visited him there. They went driving together."

Then he told of Mrs. Toomey's divorce from William C. Toomey, Oct. 14 last.

"We will show that on Nov. 14 Mrs. Toomey had apartments on Dayton avenue and that Br. Bettingen visited her there; that they were in a room with the door locked. The plaintiff will tell you what took place there. We will prove these things to your satisfaction."

The case Mr. Donnelly said, presented only two questions.

"Did Dr. Bettingen propose to marry Mrs. Toomey subsequent to her divorce, and was he accepted?"

Dr. Bettingen was the first witness called. He lived with his father at 515 Ashland avenue, was 40 years old and unmarried. He had practiced medicine in St. Paul for 12 or 13 years.

"Do you know Mrs. Toomey?" was asked.

"I do."

"How long have you known her?"

"I believe I met Mrs. Toomey three years ago this July."

"Where did you meet her the first time?"

"At my office; she was brought there to be treated by a young lady who introduced her to me?"

"Who was the young lady?"

"Miss McDermott."

The following evening Dr. Bettingen said he received a telephone call to come to the Aberdeen, where Mrs. Toomey lived.

Dr. Bettingen said he called at the Aberdeen about 9 o'clock. He called on Miss McDermott, who was visiting Mrs. Toomey at her apartments. Mrs. Toomey was in the room all the time.

Dr. Bettingen said he next met both women on Robert street shortly afterward, a day or so later.

"Did they stand and talk to you?" he was asked.

"If I remember correctly they did not."

Dr. Bettingen said he called at the Toomey apartments the night after he met Mrs. Toomey and Miss McDermott on Robert street.

"Where did you go that night?" he was asked.

"I stayed there."

"Where?"

"In a room at my disposal."

"In whose apartments?"

"In Mrs. Toomey's."

"Who was there?"

"Mrs. Toomey and the young lady."

"What time did you leave in the morning?"

"About 8:30 o'clock."

"Did you sleep alone?"

Attorney Durment objected.

"You need not answer that if you do not wish to," said Judge Bunn.

Dr. Bettingen seemed wrapped in thought for a minute, but did not answer.

Dr. Bettingen said he frequently met Mrs. Toomey during the next few days.

In September, Dr. Bettingen returned from his vacation and went to supper the day he returned after the theater with Mrs. Toomey and Mr and Mrs. Chauncey Olcott.

Mrs. Toomey, he said, often waited for him on the street as he went downtown to his office. He visited Mrs. Toomey at her home very often. He saw her often on the street, and she visited him at his office once, twice and sometimes three times a week.

Mrs. Toomey, the plaintiff, was the next witness. She related in detail the history of her doings with Dr. Bettingen in the summer of 1902, when she was still the wife of Mr. Toomey. She said that the doctor frequently came to see her and stayed all night at her apartments at the Aberdeen when Mr. Toomey was absent; that the doctor urged her to get a divorce, gave her a locket with a lock of his hair, and that the two frequently went riding, taking with them a bottle of whisky "to keep warm."

"I remember on one occasion when the doctor came to see me at our apartments at the Aberdeen," said Mrs. Toomey. "He said: 'Margaret, you are the only woman in the world that I have ever loved. I want you to get a divorce from Toomey, for he is not treating you right, and then we will marry.'

"The doctor put detectives on the trail of Mr. Toomey to see if he could not find something on which to base a divorce suit. He said my husband was treating me shamefully, and that if I would leave him, he (the doctor) would always protect me.

"I frequently called to see the doctor at his private office in the Lowry arcade. The doctor had a private room right off from the office, and there we used to stay with the doors locked. He told me that every woman that came to his office used to put her arms around him; that he found it impossible to keep them from caressing him.

"We frequently used to go riding together in the winter of 1902-1903. We nearly always took a bottle of whisky along with us in order to keep warm.

"The doctor appeared to love me so that on one occasion he struck another man for paying attentions to me. He was so attentive to me that if I wanted to I could not have gone around with another man.

"He gave me a locket with a lock of his hair on the Christmas preceding my divorce from Mr. Toomey. We talked then of being married after the divorce.

"When we went to the theater we always managed to sit so that we could watch each other, and we always met after the performance.

"After the divorce I called on Dr. Bettingen to remind him of his promise and he slammed the door in my face."

It developed during the trial that the aim of the defense will be to prove that Mrs. Toomey frequented houses of ill-fame, that she was an unfit person to marry anyone and that her relations with the doctor were pruely meretricious. The defense will attempt to prove that Mrs. Toomey during all this time was preparing for a stage career and that her alleged indiscretions were for the purpose of achieving notoriety.

POSTPONED

The picnic to have been held by the Svea Glee club Sunday has been indefinitely postponed by reason of failure to secure a boat.

BANQUET FOR MART ADSON

New G. P. A. of South Shore Dined By His Friends.

The popularity of Mart Adson, the newly appointed general passenger agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, was attested last night at a little dinner which was given by John R. Heino, an attorney of Duluth. The banquet was given at Boyle's.

Those who sat down were: John R. Heino, the host; Mart Adson, the guest of honor; A. J. Perrin, who succeeds Mr. Adson as general agent of the road in Duluth; E. A. Lindgren, W. T. Wilkie, Harry W. Smead, and Mr. Sandberg.

In a way Mr. Perrin, who succeeds Mr. Adson in Duluth, was a guest of honor, too, and was the recipient of many congratulations because of his recognition and the "step" he had received. Some congratulatory speeches were made, in which both Messrs. Adson and Perrin were passed the flowers. Both of them were among the speakers of the evening, and each had things to say that were worth while listening to. John R. Heino, the host, also made an address, in which he said that the dinner was given out of a purely friendly spirit, to show that the Finnish and Swedish people of the community appreciate Mr. Adson's promotion, and to attest the popularity of that gentleman.

The floral decorations were most beautiful, carnations being the flower most profusely in evidence.

STATE AND GUARDS CLASH.

Governor Would Stop Sham Battles on Sunday.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 23.—Sioux City members of the Iowa National Guard received an intimation that Governor Cummins will put a stop to Sunday practice by the Iowa state militia.

The matter was precipitated by the announcement that the Iowa City companies would engage in a sham battle next Sunday. Last summer Governor Cummins stopped a Sunday sham battle between militia of Council Bluffs and Omaha.

It is stated that religious organizations will shortly make a formal appeal to Cummins to stop all Sunday practice. On the other hand, the members of the guard declare Sunday is their only opportunity for practice, and if they do not avail themselves of it it will not be possible for Iowa to maintain a well-trained militia.

USED NAME OF TOGO.

Crook Arrested For Working Swindling Game.

Appleton, Wis., June 23.—After a chase of two blocks, and in which several shots were exchanged, Officer William Baker arrested Edward E. Wochner of Minneapolis, who secured upwards of $200 from kitchen girls and housewives, who paid money in advance on the purchase of Singer sewing machines for $15.

The receipts issued by the crook were signed "Togo." At the hotel he registrede as Charles Dahl of Chicago, but the Minneapolis address was obtained from a slip of paper carried in his watch case.

Wochner is wanted at Green Bay, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Milwaukee and other Wisconsin cities, where he worked the fake sewing machine game. It is estimated he has secured no less than $1,000 in this state in the last few weeks.

WEST END.

HOLD UP THREE

Highway Men Getting Too Bold—Several Robberies Reported.

Woman Is Stopped In Middle of Afternoon But Saves Purse.

Hold-ups are getting to be too frequent at the West end and the business men of that part of the city are anxious that the police should get the offenders.

Only a few days ago a lady of the West end was stopped in the middle of the afternoon, in a populated community, and an attempt made to take away her purse, but she resisted and escaped, saving her money. It will be remembered that during the early part of this week a West Duluth man was held up and robbed of $7, all he had, at Twenty-eighth avenue west and Superior street. That was at night. So, too, was the robbery of a man just a few nights ago at Twenty-fourth avenue west and Second street.

The acme of boldness, however, comes in the case of the lady who was held up in the afternoon. She does not want her name to be made public, although the matter has been reported to the police department, which is making an effort to find the miscreant or miscreants who are doing the work.

This woman was coming up Twenty-seventh avenue west with a purse in her left hand containing $14, with which she intended to settle some bills. When close to Superior street, approaching from the south, she met a man of about 55 years, well dressed and quite respectable looking. He grabbed her purse and attempted to make off with it. She was surprised, but retained her presence of mind enough to hit the would-be thief across the face with her umbrella. She hit him pretty viciously it seems for he let go of the purse and ran. A few moments afterwards, the woman reached R. R. Forward & Co's store in almost a state of collapse.

MAKE HER PRESENT.

Mrs. H. K. Madsen Pleasantly Surprised Thursday Evening

A pleasant surprise party was given Mrs. H. K. Madsen, wife of the pastor of the Norwegian-Danish congregation of the West end. A large number of her friends visited her at her home, No. 14 Twenty-first avenue west, last evening, prior to her departure for Milwaukee, which will be soon. They called to express their friendship and hopes that she would be pleasantly entertained while away, and also to present her with a substantially-sized sum of money with which to aid in bringing about their wishes.

The party was large and the evening was pleasant. Quite a nice musical program was given during the evening.

DEATHS AT WEST END.

Two Occur and Funerals Are on Sunday.

Mrs. Sophie Shaw of 1825 West First street, died yesterday in St. Luke's hospital after a short illness of bowel trouble. She was 27 years of age and was the wife of a fierman at the Sixteenth avenue fire hall. The funeral will be held from the family residence on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Alfred Peterson of 610 Garfield avenue, died yesterday and will be buried Sunday afternoon, the funeral taking place from Nelson's undertaking rooms, Nineteenth avenue west and Michigan street. The A. O. U. W. will have charge of the funeral.

BUILDING EPIDEMIC

Still Holding on and Gaining Ground.

The epidemic of building still goe on at the West end. Frank Johnson has just moved into his new house at Twenty-eighth avenue west and Fourth street, and David Adams is about to build a residence right near Mr. Johnson's location.

John Smedberg is starting to build a store building and two flats above it at Twenty-eighth avenue west and Third street. These will be of frame construction.

West End Shortrails.

Miss Gertrude, Master Lawrence and their father, Edward Shesgren of Minneapolis, are visiting with D. I. Shesgren, Sr., in the Untied States block.

D. Shesgren, Jr., and daughter, will leave this week for an extended visit to Mrs. I. Shesgren's parents at Shell Lake, Wis.

A son has been born unto Mr. and Mrs. Thorson of 2819 Helm street.

D. Deitz, who is working for the Alger-Smith company at Split Rock, is in the city.

B. A. Martin has returned from Eveleth.

The Epworth league convention, the program of which was published in these columns a few days ago, begins at Grace M. E. church today.

TO REFRIGERATE THE SUBWAY.

New York, June 23.—Refrigerating plants and forced air apparatus are to be installed in the subway to cool the air and improve the ventilation. This decision is the outcome of the investigation by the transit company of the present conditon in the underground railway.

GRADUATED IN WORK CLOTHES

Manual Training Students Give Samples of Their Work.

Pittsburg, Kan., June 23.—A class of thirty-one students, thirty young women and one young man, were graduated from the Kansas manual training normal school last week. The class of 1905 is the second class of graduates from this new institution.

The commencement exercises, which were held in the assembly hall of the normal school, were novel, and interesting. For the first time in the history of Kansas, a student graduated in work blouses and jumpers, and the graduates, instead of delivering orations, gave public demonstrations of work in cookery and woodwork, as taught in the institution.

On the platform had been equipped a wood-turning lathe, fitted up with a motor, connected with the power cable. A woodworking bench had also been placed on the platform, with a complete complement of woodworking tools. A cookery table had also been placed on the platform, where the cookery girls could demonstrate. The demonstration in class work was that of joinery, by Miss Grace Evans of Columbus; ice cream making, by Miss Dora Bumann of Litchfield, Ill.; woodturning, by Arthur Myers of Weir City; cake baking, Misses Eleanor Loveall of Fort Scott and Elizabeth Westley of Great Bend.

At the close of the class song, President J. N. Wilkinson of the normal school of Emporia delivered a short address to the class. Judge L. B. Kellogg of Emporia, secretary of the state board of regents, presented the diplomas to the members of the class.

DUKE OF SUTHERLAND

London, June 23.—A story illustrating the well-known kindness of the duke of Sutherland comes from North Staffordshire, where his family seat, Trentham, is situated. Two girls, of humble position, having journeyed from Crewe to partake in some merry-making at Longton, had the misfortune to lose the last train home from Stoke-on-Trent. The railway officials, taking compassion upon their tears, did all they could to make the hapless damsels comfortable in the ladies' waiting room, and bade them await the early morning train. In the small hours of the morning a special rumbled in containing the duke en route for Scotland. Remembering the two girls weeping in the waiting room, the officials approached the duke, who not only welcomed the benighted ones into his train, but on arrival at Crewe personally chartered a cab and told the driver to take them to their respective homes and explain the cause of their late arrival.

GAS FLOW EXHAUSTED.

National Gas Companies Go Out of Business.

Richmond, Ind., June 23.—According to information just made available it is evident that natural gas can no longer be relied upon in the Indiana gas belt for lighting and heating purposes. Many of the companies that have been engaged in furnishing gas to cities have disposed of their holdings and gone out of business, or are sekign franchises that will permit them to furnish fuel gas manufactured. Elwood and Tipton are among the latest points to discontinue the service. Places that still have a gas service, notably Richmond, cannot rely upon it in extremely cold weather, and many other places to which the gas was piped are again liberal patrons of wood and coal dealers. Indiana had an abundance of gas to last her for many years to come, but extravagance in its use and the facth hat Chicago and points in Ohio were allowed to draw heavily on the field have practically exhausted the supply.

REFORESTING PIKE'S PEAK.

Planting Pines to Cover Forest Fire Clearings.

Colorado Springs, Colo., June 23.—James H. Clark, forest supervisor, has announced that the work of reforesting the Pike's Peak reserve will be commenced at once, when 50,000 seedling pines brought from Nebraska will be planted.

The planting of this shipment of seedlings is the first step toward reforesting the entire reserve. The young trees will be planted in sections where fierce forest fires of years ago destroyed all vegetation. The bureau of forestry had the seeds taken to the lower altitude in Nebraska to prepare them for propagation.

Mr. Clark says that it requires two years for the seed to germinate in this region, and that a year from the spring it will be possible to plant trees from the nurseries recently established at the head of Bear creek, near Clyde and Rosemont.

The forest reserve is covered with a large amount of dead timber, and Mr. Clark says that over 2,000,000 feet of this timber will be sold off the south end of the reserve this year.

Buffalo, N. Y., and Return, $25.50.

On sale, July 7, 8 and 9, via "The North - Western Line," excursion tickets to Buffalo and return, at $25.50. Final limit for return, Aug. 4th, 1905. City Ticket office, 302 West Superior street, and Depot, foot Fifth avenue west.

Dyspepsia and Sleeplessness?

WITH THE BLUES AND NERVOUSNESS?

All seem to go together, first the stomach "gets out of kilter"—then you feel restless—can't sleep—bad dreams and wakefulness. It soon follows that loss of sleep—means nerves on edge—lack of appetite—tired all over.

The brook on the mountain side starts from a small spring—wending its way it gathers force and volume until it pours a mighty river into the sea. That is the way with little troubles of the stomach—only a speck of trouble at the beginning until there is a sudden flood of troubles—causing a sea of despond. Headache, coated tongue, lassitude, almost without exception are symptoms that your stomach, liver and blood are flooded with poisonous matter. Sweep out the dead tissue by putting your house in order. Start with the stomach for it's the centre of our vitality—eat less for a few days—and then only what your appetite craves. Take three teaspoonful doses a day of a vegetable extract and alterative called Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This is nature's cure for the stomach, the liver and the blood. Why? because it goes to the source of all life—the earth! It is made from plants, roots and barks that grow in nature's garden. Dr. Pierce is simply the gardener who knows what are most valuable in their medicinal effect. A few of the ingredients were known to the early Indians and their tonic value and medicinal effect were secrets they kept from the white man.

THE SECRET OUT.

Golden Seal root was in this way dug from the ground by the early Indian tribes and used as a medicine. It aids digestion, cures dyspepsia and general debility due to the lack of stomach strength. Then there's Bloodroot, very valuable as a stimulant and tonic, increasing the action of the arteries—and Stone root—which the physicians term "Collinsonia"—a good remedy in indigestion and increases the secretion of the kidneys and skin—all these are contained in this splendid medicine of Dr. Pierce. Queen's root, Wild-cherry-bark and Mandrake are other ingredients of this alterative.

Prof. King, in his American Dispensatory states: "Queen's root is an alterative unsurpassed by few, if any other alterative, most successful in skin and scrofulous affections, aids in blood making and nutrition."

Thus it is that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is one of the best spring tonics—at that season of the year it is natural for most people to feel languid—"spring fever" it's sometimes called. Probably those same people have over-taxed their stomach and their mind during the long winter, they've locked themselves up in air-proof rooms and instead of breathing the health-giving oxygen they take in copious draughts of coal gas.

Some day they feel languid and ill—if they turn to Nature's cure—and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, they soon feel that life is bubbling over with strength, health and happiness. Pure blood has come to them—made them "fit"—vigorous and exuberant.

Dr. Pierce's 1,000-page "Medical Adviser," is the most useful "doctor book" published. A copy in stiff paper covers sent on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay mailing only; in cloth binding 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE SPIRIT BIRD.

Has Intelligence That Is Almost Human.

One of the very few spirit birds that have been brought to the Western world is now in possession of an uptown dealer. He prices it at $2,500. This bird comes from the East Indies, and is about the size of a dove. Its plumage is an iridescent blue-black, with the exception of the wings, on each of which is a white bar. The bird has orange beak, legs and feet and yellow caruncles at the nape of its neck. In different lights its plumage shows violet, purple and blue hues, so that its body seems all aglow. It is a very beautiful specimen.

It's real name is mynah or minor, and it belongs to the starling family. In its East Indian home the mynah is revered somewhat as is the sacred bull, and is kept in the temples. These birds are carried around in their cassocks by the priests and learn to intone the prayers. On the hotter days, when a priest feels inclined to take his ease, the bird sometimes officiates in clear, mellow accents, and the gods answer just as well as for the priest.

Nature has provided the mynah with an extra large bill and unusually developed vocal organs, so that its enunciation is remarkably clear and strong. It sings and whistles easily, learning such pieces as "In the Sweet By and By," and "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town."

Its ability as a student is not surpassed by any other bird. A Yale graduate in this city, who owns a mynah and formerly fitted boys for college, declares he never had so apt a learner as his bird. It will stand on his finger and give the closest attention to any instruction, and be prepared to make a good recitation after prayers the next morning. This bird talks constantly with apparent enjoyment of its powers, and consciously or not, sometimes perpetrates a joke. A few days ago its owner was teaching it to say "Fire! Fire!" "Water! Water!" Some hours later he was astonished to hear the mynah scream "Firewater!"

This bird is put to bed at night by covering the cage with a cloth, only a small opening being left at the top. The mynah will peek through the aperture and call out "Kiss the little boy good night!" Then from the cage will come a sound sometimes heard in the vicinity of engaged couples. In the morning when the cage cover is removed the bird courteously exclaims, "Good morning! How do you do this morning?" Then his early morning appetite prompts the remark, "Mynah wants his grapes." The bird is extremely fond of these and will almost shed tears if they are not forthcoming.

IDENTIFYING DEAD SOLDIERS.

The Russian method of identifying soldiers killed in battle is by means of little ikons—sacred picture images—found on the bodies, says the Kansas City Journal. On the back of each of these ikons is stamped the wearer's name, regiment and commission. Every nation labels its soldiers in one way or another with a view to just such eventualities.

RUSSIA HAS NOT REPLIED

To the Last Note Sent By President Roosevelt.

Washington, June 23.—President Roosevelt so far has not received an answer from Russia to his latest representations regarding peace. It is believed that the illness of Count Lamsdorff may account for this delay. While there is no official announcement on the subject, the general understanding is that these representations concern an armistice. Count Cassini has had a long talk with Secretary Hay, at the latter's residence, but the visit was primarily a personal one, and no decision regarding the negotiations was reached. Secretary Hay expects to leave this afternoon for his summer home in New Hampshire.

St. Petersburg, June 23.—A story is current in the city that the day before Grand Duke Alexis resigned the post of high admiral, he received a formal warning from the Terrorists, informing him that unless he retired within twenty-four hours sentence on him would be passed and executed.

After the labor disturbances of Jan. 22, which resulted in much bloodshed in St. Petersburg, it was reported that Grand Duke Alexis had been condemned to death by the Terrorists. It was further asserted that for a long time after the murder of Grand Duke Sergius, Feb. 17, Alexis did not leave his palace, as he had again been notified that the Terrorists had placed his name on the list of those who were to be executed.

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

New York, June 23.—Thomas Nichol, one of the last survivors of Commodore Perry's expedition to Japan in 1850 is dead at his home in Brooklyn. He was 79 years old and was born in England.

Chicago, June 23.—Peter Kiolbassa, who was the first city treasurer in Chicago to refuse fees in connection with the office, died, today, after a lingering illness of kidney trouble. Mr. Kiolbassa served in the Eighteenth Illinois cavalry during the Civil war; was a member of the Illinois legislature and was widely known among members of Polish societies. For a time he was president of the National Polish Union of America.

SUPREME COURT DISBARS PETER POWER'S ATTORNEY

New York, June 23.—George Alfred Lamb, who as attorney for Peter Power, sued to prevent the turning over of the Northern Pacific railroad stock to the Northern Securities company, was disbarred by an opinion handed down, today, by the appellate division of the supreme court. Proceedings were brought against Lamb after he had lost the suit on the ground that Power was not genuinely a plaintiff, but had been induced to act in that capacity. It was alleged that neither Lamb nor Power was damaged by the proposed transfer and that the suit was brought with an improper object in view.

Y. M. C. A. FOR WEST END.

S. Morterud Subscribes Substantially For Fund.

S. Morterud has given it out that he will subscribe $500 to start a fund for the establishment of the branch Y. M. C. A. at the West end. West Duluth is about to have a branch of the association and Mr. Morterud is of the opinion that the West end is just as badly in need of a place of that kind as any other part of the city.

The young men of the West end have no place to go to spend their idle hours and Mr. Morterud, together with a good many other West end people, feel that they should be given an opportunity to improve such idle time and spend it where it will be at once pleasant and profitable.

It is expected that with $500 as a starter the fund will grow rapidly.

DANCING AT OATKA BEACH
EVERY EVENING.

New Charts Issued.

The new charts of the Duluth-Superior harbor, issued under the direction of Maj. Fisk, United States Engineering corps, are now procurable at the office of Maj. Charles L. Potter, government engineer for this district. The charts are made from the very latest surveys and include the new ore dock of the Missabe company, the aerial bridge, the club house, boulevard drive and other improvements at Billings park on the Wisconsin side of the upper harbor, the new pier work at Superior entry, the government dock and yards on Minnesota Point, besides noting several points where shoals have been removed.

Look For Sub-Contractors.

W. O. Winston of Minneapolis, a member of the big contracting firm of Winston Bros. & Dear, was a business caller in the city yesterday and today. It is understood that the contracting firms which recently secured the awards for the Missabe company's Alborn-Bovey extension are now figuring with the sub-contractors and that as soon as the various pieces of work are placed operations will begin along the route of the extension.

Midsummer Dance.

Don't forget the grand Midsummer dance given by Nortun Lodge No. 16, S. of N., at Lester Park pavilion, tomorrow night, June 24th. Everybody invited.

Engineers Have No Word.

Several of the local engineers, who are members of the American Society of Civil Engineers, now in session at Cleveland, have been anxiously awaiting word from that place as to the 1906 convention which Duluth hopes to land. It was expected that a vote would be taken on the question by the convention yesterday afternoon, but up to this afternoon no news has been received relative to the matter either by private telegram or over the Associated Press wires.

A BUSY PRINCESS.

Princess Louise Augusta of Schleswig-Holstein is a member of the royal family fortunate enough to have a profession—or, rather, art—at her finger-ens in case of need, says London Modern Society. She is an expert worker in enamel, and her home in Queensberry palace is filled with remarkably beautiful specimens of her craft, while many of her relatives and friends own bits of jewelry, frames, or boxes wrought by her. The finest piece of enamelling she ever completed was a memorial cross for the grave of her brother. Prince Christian Victor, which was taken out to South Africa by Princess Christian on herp visit last autumn.

OUTLIVE A CENTURY.

How an Athlete Is Training to Live 140 Years.

There is a physical instructor in England—J. P. Muller—who seriously proposes to live till he is 140. He advises everybody to practice his longevity rules.

All he asks is that fifteen minutes a day shall be given to his system. If you followed out his regime for only 100 out of the 140 years, you would spend about two years of your life at it. Two years in exchange for seventy does not appear a great price.

The man who is prepared to do so much for humanity is still rather a young man to have had much experience of his own system, for he is not 40 yet, but he certainly does not look his age. But he allows a number of severe tests to be carried out on his own person to show that he is in a state of perfect physical condition.

An ordinary man does not care to have a heavily laden harrow wheeled over his body. Mr. Muller seems to rather like it. A heavy stone dropped on his stomach from a height of about four feet does not inconvenience him in the least.

The physical culture which is to make Mr. Mueller live for another 100 years has also produced this physical hardness.

But the chief article of the system is the care of the skin. The daily bath is essential, and so are the rubbing exercises.

This care of the skin not only induces health, but also beauty, by affecting the complexion; and Mr. Muller consequently recommends it to women especially.

The whole system is built up on the English and Japanese ways of life.

Mr. Muller has a great admiration for English athleticism and for Japanese cleanliness, though he does not think the four baths a day in which many Japanese indulge are necessary for health.

The English working man cannot be said to take much care of his skin, and baths are looked upon as a luxury rather than a necessity, but Mr. Muller points out that the English compare very favorably with many continental nations, notably the Danes and Germans. In those two countries there are many people who only think it necessary to wash the body all over on one occasion—when it is being prepared for the grave.

Then, too, physical culture must be systematic. He believes that the Japanese soldiers are the finest in the world because their training is so systematic and extends over four years. They are always fit because they do a lot of running, and, of course, there is the question of bathing.

Running and walking, Mr. Muller says, are two of the best kinds of exercise, and he has introduced what he describes as the English "quick walk" to Danish athletes. It took him two years to master it himself. Now he is the Danish champion.

But in spite of English athletics and outdoor life, he does not believe that as a nation the English have the stamina they ought to have.

Be sure of the daily bath and the friction rubbing to keep the skin in good working order. Do not miss the fifteen minutes' regular daily physical exercising, and you may achieve 140 years, he declares. Great muscular development has little to do with vitality, but his system will also insure muscular strength.

At the afternoon session of the Women's auxiliary yesterday at Trinity Mission, on East Superior street, the annual election of officers was held and the president's address given. The officers who will serve the auxiliary for the coming years are:

President, Mrs. James D. Morrison; secretary-treasurer, Miss Marjorie Quilliard; secretary of junior auxiliary, Mrs. F. C. Berry; secretary of Little Helpers, Mrs. Henry Taylor; box custodian, Mrs. Le Quesne; secretary of Church Periodical club, Miss Mary Statham; vice presidents of Duluth deanery, Mrs. H. V. M. Appleby and Mrs. G. V. Quilliard; vice presidents of Mississippi Valley deanery, Mrs. Parshall of St. Cloud and Mrs. Garland of Sauk Center; vice presidents of Red River Valley deanery, Mrs. H. M. Green of Crookston and Mrs. A. R. Mitchell of Halleck.

Mrs. Morrison read the annual president's address, and instead of dwelling upon and relating the routine details of the executive office, told of the inspiration afforded by attendance at the last triennial meeting at Boston. In her account of the meeting and its influence and help many fine suggestions were made for the work in Minnesota. She said in regard to the furtherance of the work:

"In whatever way we look, 'Responsibility' is the watchword that greets us, responsibility as a church, responsibility as an auxiliary, and responsibility as an individual. The success of our efforts and the good we may accomplish rests upon our responsibility."

A rising vote of thanks was given the president for her address, which brought to members so much of value.

The committee on the choice of a a motto for the auxiliary was continued until next year, when the chairman will again report and a motto for the organization be chosen. The reports of the auxiliaries of the parishes represented were given, and an informal discussion of the methods of improvement held. A vote of thanks was extended the retiring secretary, Miss Carrie E. Redman, for her splendid work in the office during the last two years.

The meeting closed with a short talk by Bishop Morrison, who thanked the women for their assistance in the work of spreading God's kingdom, and telling them of many times when their assistance was a vital help.

* * *

The reception at which Bishop and Mrs. J. D. Morrison were hosts last evening was a delightful social event for the visiting clergy and their wives, who, with the members of the Women's auxiliary, were the guests of honor. The rooms were prettily decorated in flowers. In the dining room American beauties and wild roses were used, and in the drawing rooms buttercups were used. Presiding in the dining room were Mrs. J. L. Barrows, Mrs. R. W. Powell and Mrs. Sterling Smith, and assisting were Miss Quilliard, Miss Glen Murray, Miss Claire Murray and Miss Jessie Leeds. During the evening a program was given. Miss May Wylie read, and songs were given by Miss Grace St. Clair, George Suffel and Jack Blount. About 200 guests were present.

* * *

A musicale will be given this evening by the pupils of Mrs. D. H. Day, assisted by John Milton, dramatic reader. The affair will be given at Steinway Recital hall, and a most interesting program has been arranged.

* * *

This evening the pupils of Mrs. Mary E. Thorburn will appear at a piano recital at the Y. W. C. A. rooms on West Superior street. They will be assisted by Miss Virginia Bean, violinist, and Miss Mabel Culkins, who will give a reading.

* * *

Rev. George Crawford Dunlap and bride of St. Peter, Minn., will be the guests over Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Crawford of 101 West Fifth street. Mr. Dunlap is the rector of Holy Communion church at St. Peter.

* * *

Tomorrow afternoon Miss Adele McClaran will entertain in honor of Miss Beckler, at her home, 22 West Third street. The receiving hours are from 3 to 6 o'clock.

BOOKS OF INTEREST.

Something as to New Ones In Library.

Some of the new books of much interest have recently been added to the public library. A great many persons have been interested and know much about birds and flowers since the increased interest in nature-study of the last few years, but how many know much of butterflies? "How To Know the Butterflies," by John and Anna Comstock is a very comprehensive manual of the butterflies of the Eastern and Northern United States and will be well worth while studying.

"Iconoclasts, a Book of Dramatists," by James Huneker, the well-known dramatic critic, gives brilliant and original characterizations of the symbolistic and revolutionary dramatists, such as Ibsen, Strindberg, Hauptmann, Sudernam Hervieu, Gorky, Duse and d'Annunzio, Maeterlinck and Bernard Shaw.

A book which will interest the musician is "The Orchestra and Orchestral Music," by W. J. Henderson, the musical critic. It is not alone for the musican, for as the author says in his preface, it is an attempt to give the amateur music lover such facts about the modern orchestra as will help him in assuming an intelligent attitude toward the instrumental body and its performances.

"My Mamie Rose," by Owen Kildare, is the life story of a man born and trained in the slums of New York caring and knowing nothing better till grown, and whose regeneration and work among these same people is a shining spot in the annals of philanthropic work. It is truly a human document. Quite different is the memorial of Burne-Jones, written by his wife, beautifully illustrated and giving us a good idea of the man and his work.

Maurice Hewlett's "The Road in Tuscany," is a companion of Tuscan travel, but not a conventional guide-book, for it is written with a fine literary appreciation, and is full of photo-gravures and illustrations.

"Living Rulers of Mankind," by H. N. Hutchinson gives portraits and sketches of all living rulers at the date of publication in 1902, from Abyssinia to Zanzibar, and will be found a convenient reference book.

McCutcheon's "Bird Center Cartoons, is a good book to bring a smile; full of the humor of every day life, with out a touch of malice.

"Our Big Game," by D. W. Huntington, will interest the hunter and sportsman, while Ashley's Progress of the German working classes in the last quarter of a century, will interest the student of economics. "The Eternal Life," by Munsterberg, the author of the widely read "American Traits," is a subtle philosophical view of the possibility and meaning of an eternal life outside mere personal immortality. Dyer's Life of Pabdita Ramabai, is the history of the high-caste Hindoo woman who has done so much for the raising of her sisters in India.

"How to Measure Up Woodwork," by Owen B. Maginnis is a practical work on making estimates; and three books on the air brake, by the Westinghouse Air Brake company gives description and instruction in the use of the same.

THE POLLARDS.

Most Interesting Organization Composed of Children.

It is not all stage life for children who make merry for an audience, if you believe the stories told by the enterprising press agent of the Pollard Lilliputian Opera company. There are studies, and play, and sightseeing, and between them all there is just a little time to rehearse a new play or produce an old one and the round is really a most amusing one, too, if you believe the same authority.

There is not another such organization in the world as these same Pollard Juveniles, for it is old enough to have its history, and to have descended from father and originator to sons, who are present managers, and more than that, to have grown from the juveniles of twenty-five years ago, to adult companies, recruited mainly from the ranks of the little ones of days gone by, with enough of the new older star element to make the company modern. And while the little people of the older days have developed into actors, in general there are many men and women in Australia today who look back to seasons with the Pollard companies as the most enjoyable play days of their lives.

Of the fifty children who are making this tour of the world at least three-fourths are girls. Many of the boy parts are taken by girls, the principals being in large part little women. The reason for this is, in the words of the folks who are charged with the care of these precious little people, that it is easier to control half a dozen girls than one boy, that one boy is more of a disturbing element than half a dozen girls.

The choosing of recruits is a matter of moment. They come from no particular rank of society, some being of good parentage and some of fortune. The standing of the company in Australia is now such that parents bring their children to the school of the management to be tried out. The first thing is the testing of the voices. This is done by the musical director at a piano. Then there is a recitation and some calisthenics to show the vigor of the body, which is as necessary as of mind.

Out of every hundred tried, it is seldom that more than twelve pass the examination, and this number is usually reduced to seven or eight after two weeks' training. In the present company there are eighteen of the children who have been with it for more than two years, during which time they have visited South Africa, India, Java, China Japan, Manila and Honolulu, in addition to all the principal cities of New Zealand and Australia.

She Wants a Few.

All she desires is love, you say?
That shows how much you know.
She wants to see the matinee
And to the circus go;
She wants a handsome diamond ring
She wants a rope of pearls;
She wants a poodle on a string,
She wants some extra curls;
She wants a bonnet twice a year,
She wants an Easter hat;
She wants to read her title clear
Into a stylish flat;
She wants a four-seat motor car,
She wants a real Worth gown;
She wants a trip to Europe, or
At least to Newport town;
She wants a cask of rare colonge,
She wants a diamond pin;
She wants a carriage of her own
To go out calling in;
She wants the earth the milky way,
And half the stars above,
And yet you have the nerve to say
That all she wants is love!

THE BANNER SCHOLAR

By F. H. Lancaster.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Ha! It was not Lavina Crevecour's fault that she loved Donician Nicaise, nor that she was a blond, nor that she was dull of wit. Ha! So dull of wit that had she lived in Louisiana her parents would have said frankly that "she had no head" and kept her at home to help with the washing instead of sending her to school to be a byword for stupidity; but she was born in Mississippi, so she went to school—and suffered.

And fell in love? But yes! Love comes to all things from violets to vultures. Why should it not come to poor Lavina Crevecour, with her baby blue eyes and fair face that looked so comically out of place in that squad of creole children?

And she loved Donician Nicaise. How could she help it? He so happy, so handsome, so full of his merry mischief. It made her glad, glad, just to see him come swinging up the hill. And when he called her white head to tease her, she laughed. She never thought of getting mad with him as the other girls did. But no—those placid blue eyes of hers could not have been coaxed to flash, nor that ever-smiling lip to curl. It was true what her school mates—fiery little beauties—said in scorn: "She had not the spirit." Her teacher with sorrowful irony dubbed Lavina in her heart the banner scholar. Ha! that teacher had taught a long time. Mais oui! she knew a thing or two. But what did surprise—fairly amaze—her was the girl's submissiveness. Instead of sullen rebellion, here was evinced only a pathetic desire to please—patience under reproof, gentleness under provocation. The teacher's psychology stirred within her. Psychology! Like it took anything more than common sense to say that when a girl gets good it's because she's happy, and when she's happy it's because—Ha! But it took all the teacher's common sense to get at the real names behind the nicknames, and to get at the spelling behind the pronunciation. Registering results, approximating ages where reliable data was not forthcoming, divining which scholars had brought old easy books they had studied two years before and which ones had brought new hard books that they would not be prepared to enter for two years to come, getting a new school started and keeping it going, the teacher had enough to do. Hard work? Yes, and plenty of it. Fifty names on the roll. Some studying the big geography, some the alphabet, and all along between; with the roof leaking when it rained and the goats bumping around under the schoolhouse. No wonder teacher had no time to see with her eyes and hear with her ears and never guessed what was in the air when the big girls came in one Monday morning with the request that they might "make speeches" next Friday afternoon after school.

"Why, yes," she said, "I'll be glad to hear them," and thought no more about it until the banner scholar, very watery in eyes and very red in the face, slipped to her desk at recess and asked if she too might "make speech" next Friday. Teacher said kindly that she would be glad indeed to have Lavinia join the speech-makers; but that evening she took a half hour off to think. "Those girls are up to some mischief," was the conclusion reached promptly. "And," after a pause, "my poor banner scholar is to be the victim. And she, poor, patient, sweet-tempered soul, is trying to get even with them at their own game. What nerve! Fade away Thermopylae. But what is it all about?"

Common sense or psychology—which will you have? But it was ten minutes before teacher saw, or seemed to see, a red rose in Lavinia's straw-colored hair. Where had she seen that rose earlier in the day? But, yes! Donician Nicaise had brought it to school, swinging it by the long stem. Donician. Had he given it to—was that why?

Donician! Of course he was a favorite with all the girls. He was the biggest boy in the school and the handsomest. "And he's playing my poor banner scholar against their coquetry. What a shame! Making a lash of her to whip their vanity. The beast!"

But why? In her own world the teacher knew both men and women who had been used as lashes, and like lashes tossed aside when the flagellation was finished. But out here where there was no culture, why should there be refined cruelty? And now the speech-makers also would use the banner scholar as a lash.

"A man will face death sooner than a laugh," trust a creole girl to know that. They were cleverly inducing Lavinia to make a fool of herself that the laugh might be against Donician because of his attentions to her. Ha! they were going to make him so ashamed of his "girl" that he would hate the sight of her. He would be glad enough to take one of them to church in his new sulky next Sunday.

"And the poor thing loves the very air he breathes. The shameful heartlessness of it. It shan't be!"

No! But many had been drowned before the teacher's day trying to save drowning men that didn't wish to be saved. Wednesday afternoon she detained Lavinia Crevecour and gently as she could strove to disuade the girl from speech-making. The blue eyes filled.

"All the other girls are going to make speeches," she pleaded.

"I know. But have you a speech?"

"I've got a nice speech. I'm going to be the last one and I'll speak it quick. I won't take long."

"Oh, there will be plenty of time. But—what are you going to say?"

"The girls say that's a secret. Nobody must tell till the time comes."

"Have you ever made a speech before, Lavinia?"

"No'm. I never wanted to make speech before. It's a nice speech. You'll be sprprised."

"Yes, I expect I will be. Well if you change your mind——"

"I ain't going to change my mind." And she went away smiling her patient, sweet-tempered smile.

The teachers' psychology opened its lips, asking wearily: "Does a fool know that it is a fool?" But her common sense sighed: "To what desperate measures will love not goad a girl!" Ha! The teacher could answer neither. She only hoped that the banner scholar's heart would fail her when the time of trial came.

Friday evening came, with Lavinia smiling and ever anxious to please at the bottom of the bench. Donician was in the audience. His merry eyes mocking the girls, as, curled and beribboned, they moved with little flutters of disdain and creaking shoes to their self-appointed places of honor.

The first girl arose and, with a bow to the teacher and another to the audience, recited without trip or stumble of expression, "Somebody's Darling." She had been making that speech every summer since she was ten years old, and she knew it by heart. Bowing, amid applause she sat down, and two more girls arose to engage in a dialogue about a missing thimble, and then a fourth one stood up to tell the story of the Wind and the Sun. Ha! All fine speeches; but the teacher was watching the banner scholar. She saw the color fade from Lavinia's face and the smile stiffen on her lips as girl after girl got glibly up and talked so long and loud and so fast. Poor Lavinia! It was her first experience of speeches. And as the color went out of the placid, fair face, the teacher's heart lightened. She complimented each "performance," she smiled for every bow. "If the poor child would only get stage fright!"

But no! Colorless, with scared blue eyes, her trembling hands clutching her first reader, the banner scholar arose and walked to the appointed spot. Ha! what will not a woman face for the man she loves. Though she die, Donician should not be ashamed. She, Lavinia, would "make speech" too. In that terrible stillness she bowed to the teacher, bowed to Donician. She spoke her speech:

"Oh, Fanny, what a pretty ball. Throw it to me. I will not let it fall." There was a hush, a titter and a storm of derisive applause burst over the devoted bloud head. But no one was looking at the poor bruised thing cowering, scared and ashamed in the seat where teacher had put her. All eyes were gloating over Donician, who red in the face and hot in the collar, had caught up his books and started toward the door. Ha! They had him on the run now, and the boldest hailed him

"Oh, Donician! What a pretty ball. Throw it to me. I won't let it fall."

Donician stopped. His head went up. His laugh rang out in merry mocking: "You had better get Lavinia teach you how to make that speech!" he shouted. "She didn't say 'Throw it to me.' She the only one make speech right. Madeline say, 'I can't find my timble.' Lavinia's only on didn't make same old speech. Ha! Sidoni, that eight times I hear you say 'Somebody's Darling.' And I don't know how many times Marguerite 's said 'Kitchen Clock.'" Flinging his taunts at them—and there was not one of the band that went scathless of his truth-barbed jeers—Donician backed to where Lavinia sat.

"That's nice speech you make, Lavinia," he said with ringing approval. "You speak it plain, just like teacher." The boyish voice sank and deepened. "Give me your books, chere, I'm going carry them home for you."

In the scornful glare of all those blazing black eyes, Donician made up the pitiful little first reader and primary arithmetic along with his own big geography.

Turning her back on discomfiture and at the window and watched the "two" strolling away through the slanting sunshine.

"She will make him a good wife. She will," she repeated, for a sense of responsibility pressed the question. "She is honest and gentle and industrious and she idolizes him utterly."

After a boy carries a girl's books home for her—is it not the silver betrothal ring? And does not marriage surely follow betrothal—out yonder?

But, yes! The teacher knew. In six months or a year or two years, according to the price of charcoal, her banner scholar would become "Madam Donician."

The Stage

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—All next week, the Pollard Lilliputian Opera company.

THE POLLARDS.

Pollard's Lilliputian Opera company, begins its engagement of six nights, commencing Monday at the Lyceum when the popular success "The Belle of New York" will be presented by this clever aggregation. The Pollards are the most remarkable musical organization in the world. It has toured Australia, South Africa, India, New Zealand, China, Japan, England, the Philippines, Hawaiian Islands, the United States and other countries, a record which no other opera company has ever attained. The organization is composed of clever and talented juveniles who are professional in everything except size. Their performances are among the cleverest operatic offerings presented on the stage. These remarkable youngsters were schooled in Australia in an academy especially equipped to educate them for their operatic careers. From the many candidates for positions in the company, the management carefully selects those displaying the most aptitude and they are so thoroughly trained that their performances are phenomenal. In no respect can the youngsters be improved on in their interpretation of lines and their vocal work.

ECHOES FROM THE COLUMBIA SALE OF THE BURROWS STOCK.

Take the Elevator for Lowered Prices on Boys' Clothing!

Mothers will see in this advertisement the same 48-cent and 98-cent figures, which most advertisers use, because they are more attractive to the bargain-seeking eye than 50 cents or even dollars. But as we wish to accustom our future customers to Columbia methods, we reiterate that it would be easy to catch the unwary by having the printer use the patient type to make the reductions look bigger. Facts and figures in Columbia ads are one and the same thing.

BEMIDJI WINS BANNER PRIZE

Takes Hose Race of Northern Minnesota Firemen's Tournament.

Blackduck, Minn., June 23.—In the Northern Minnesota firemen's tournament, Bemidji yesterday afternoon won the association banner hose race in 24 seconds flat. Red Lake Falls, Warren and Hallock tied for second, the time being 25 seconds. The first prize is the association banner valued at $65, besides $5 in cash.

Hallock took the money in the parade for the most men in line and the best appearing company. The members of the company wore white suits trimmed with black. The number of men in the different teams competing was as follows: Hallock, 27; Red Lake, 23; Warren, 15; Bemidji, 16. Blackduck, Argyle and Kennedy did not compete.

The 100-yard dash was won by Charles Brady of Red Lake Falls. Time, 11 seconds. William McKibbon of Hallock was second. Harry Geil of Bemidji, who intended to compete in the race, did not get a fair start and refused to run.

Ray Dennis of Bemidji won the coupling contest in 4 1-5 seconds. Arthur Narveson of Bemidji, second, 4 2-5; Fred Harris of Crookston, third, 4½.

George Fleming of Bemidji won first money in the ladder climbing contest, reaching the top of the ladder in 8 1-5 seconds. L. F. Parker of Blackduck second, 8½; C. A. Halvorson and John Goodman of Bemidji tied for third money. Time, 8 3-5.

At a meeting of delegates to the tournament, it was decided to hold the next tournament at Warren, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, A. B. Johnson, Warren; vice president, M. A. Convers, Red Lake Falls; secretary, O. H. Taralseth, Warren; treasurer, Thomas R. Johnstone, Crookston. Twenty-one delegates attended the meeting.

The ball game between Blackduck and Red Lake Falls resulted in a victory for the latter, the score being 9 to 2.

The Cass Lake fire department has applied for readmission to the association.

CHANGE OF HEART

Council Is Likely to Again Knuckle Down to Sheehy.

He Apparently Has Nine Aldermen on His Side.

In spite of the manner in which Joseph Sheehy has publicly and privately attacked members of the council, the city legal department, the members of the police force, and almost every person connected with the city government, and after he publicly insulted the city attorney and the assistant city attorney in the council chamber, calling the latter a perjurer and the former a grafter, it looks as if the council would again knuckle down to the ex-pugilist and grant him a license to conduct an employment agency, after once refusing it by a unanimous vote.

Last Monday evening Sheehy again presented his application, and it was backed by eight of the aldermen, while only five opposed it. It is claimed that at least one of those who were absent is Sheehy's supporter, and that next Monday evening he will be granted a license for another year, in spite of the protest of the police department, and the well-known attitude of the legal department.

Sheehy so disgusted the members of the council with his wild talk at the council meeting three weeks ago, that he was turned down, and it was though that his case had finally been disposed of.

But he bobbed up again last Monday night, and through some mysterious influence succeeded in getting eight of the aldermen over to his side. It is hard to say just what that influence is, but it caused a complete change of attitude on the part of some of the members of the council within three weeks. Aldermen Moore and Wilson and some others who refused to allow themselves to be ridden over rough shod, came in for their share of the abuse.

Even should the license be passed by the council Monday evening, there is a good chance of it being vetoed by Mayor Cullum when it comes to him for signature.

For years past Sheehy has been a constant source of trouble to the police department. He claims that he has been persecuted by the police, but Mayor Cullum is thoroughly familiar with the situation, and if the license comes to him for aproval after Monday night's meeting, he will doubtless make known his view of the trouble between the police and Sheehy.

HEIRESS MARRIED.

Is President of Women's Trade Union League.

New York, June 23.—Raymond Robins of Chicago was married Wednesday to Miss Margaret D. Dreier of Brooklyn, heiress to a million and president of the New York branch of the Women's Trade Union League. It was a quiet affair at the home of the bride in the presence of the few relatives and friends, and Rev. Dr. N. D. Hillis officiated. The bride's dress was of white chiffon and lace. She wore the family jewels and a unique buckle consisting of twenty-five gold nuggets presented to the groom by his friends in Alaska as a mark of their esteem. Each nugget repreesnted a friend.

Mrs. Robins' object in allying herself with trade unions was to place her own sex on an economic footing with men. She takes her fondness for philanthropic work from her mother, who was prominent in New York and Brooklyn for years in aiding the downtrodden. The young bride is a busy woman, having six secretaries, whom she keeps employed constantly. She is one of the prime movers of the Woman's Municipal League of Brooklyn, a founder of the Barnard club and a leader in the Household Research Association of Manhattan.

DULUTH'S BEST DRESSERS READ THIS—

This is an opportunity you cannot afford to overlook. All garments made by Mellin & Company are tailored as they should be, right. Remember the sale lasts but twenty days.

DECREES OF ROME

Cannot Be Enforced By the Civil Courts.

Chicago, June 23.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Lincoln, Neb., says: The injunction instituted by Bishop Thomas Bonacum of the Catholic diocese of Lincoln, against the Rev. William Murphy, former parish priest at Seward, as to who shall occupy the parish property at Seward, has been dismissed by the Nebraska supreme court. Father Murphy retains possession, although long ago excomunicated by Bishop Bonacum. In the opinion one paragraph is that the court cannot enforce or register the decrees of Rome.

CONTEST OF WILL.

Leaving Fortune to Young Ziegler Threatened.

New York, June 23.—William Ziegler, the $30,000,000 boy of 14, will have to fight to retain the fortune left him by his foster father. A will contest is threatened by the sister of the decedent, Mrs. Henry K. Shields, and two nieces, Mrs. Arthur Little and Mrs. Russell Price. Mrs. Shields lives at Los Angeles, Mrs. Little at Monrovia, Cal., and Mrs. Price at Duarte, in the same state.

While the sister of Mr. Ziegler feels that she has a stronger claim to the vast fortune than her nieces, she has joined with them to fight the legality of the will through the courts. They declare that they, closest of kin with the exception of Mrs. Zeigler, the widow, were completely cut off, and ask that the law give them a share of the $30,000,000. They have engaged lawyers to push their claim.

SCHOOLHOUSE WRECKED.

Hoodlum Gang Destroys Books, Maps and Seats.

Mason City, Iowa, June 23.—Residents of District 3, Mason township, are much incensed over a species of vandalism. The school building was entered, the seats pulled from the floor, the blackboard torn from the wall, maps torn from fastenings and scattered about the room, a fine $30 chart destroyed, the books of the library thrown in every direction, and the stove overturned and the pipe bent and battered till useless.

The culprits then broke the glass from all the windows. It is thought that someone of the vicinity did the act. The officers of the district are making an investigation.

IRON ORE TRADE.

No Large Amount Being Sold These Days.

Cleveland, June 23.—The Iron Trade Review says: In spite of unusual fogs, which prevailed for several days on the lakes and delayed many vessels, the movement of ore has been heavy and there is no reason for doubting that 5,000,000 tons will be carried this month. There has been some chartering of wild tonnage this week, but owing to the fact that such a large tonnage is under season contracts, there is little interest in the chartering of wild boats. No ore of any large amount is being sold these days.

FIRE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Vancouver, June 23.—A forest fire is raging in a valuable timber tract on Valdes island, on the British Columbia coast, 200 miles north of Vancouver. The fire has been burning for three days.

WEYLER MAY BE MINISTER.

New York, June 23.—Gen. Weyler has again been slated for Spanish minister of war, according to a Herald dispatch from Madrid.

RAILROAD POLICE.

Trunk Lines Mostly Have Their Own Cops.

"Have we our own police? Well, I should rather say we had," said a Pennsylvania railroad official to the New York Sun, in reply to a question. "We are our own Scotland Yard, or Mulberry street, or whatever you call it.

"We have a regular secret service of our own. Between New York and Philadelphia we have something like sixty-eight men in our police force. This includes a chief officer and five sub-officers, and the organization is pretty nearly perfect.

"We don't uniform our men, as some roads do, and that's why I think our force is a little more successful than others. We make a point of getting specialists in the various branches of crime.

"For instance, those of our men who look out for rpickpockets on passenger trains have a wide personal acquaintance with pickpockets. The result is that now we have scarcely any trouble at all of that sort on our trins.

"Then take the yegg men and hoboes who break into freight cars. They are a pretty slick lot. It takes experts to catch them. Set a—an expert—to catch a thief. Oh, yet, some of our men are so familiar with the crooks that they might have been friends of theirs at some time. But we get results. The Pennsylvania railroad, we believe, has less trouble in the way of freight car depredations, car riding and general thieving than any other road in the country.

"The Erie also has a completely organized police department of its own. The Erie policemen wear uniforms, generally. There is a superintendent of police on the Erie, who is stationed in New York.

"Half way along the line there is an inspector, and at a number of points between New York and Chicago are stationed captains with four or five patrolmen. All these officers make daily reports to the superintendent of police.

"Our men are selected with great care," said Supt. Schoeffel of the Erie police. "We don't pick our men from the criminal classes as some roads do. I never did believe much in the reformed crook.

"We look up their antecedents and keep them employed as yard watchmen for a while before recommending them to the governors of the various states through which the road passes for commissions. All railway policemen are commissioned by the state.

"What are the duties of our police? Well, here is a dispatch that the section ment at Cleveland are out on a strike. We send an inspector there with a number of men. His business is to employ new hands, to guard the company's property and generally to restore order.

"Or take the teamsters' strike in Chicago. The duty of our police officers in Chicago is to hire teams, to guard against violence and in every way to see that the road doesn't suffer by the strike.

"When there is nothing else doing the men travel along the line picking up hoboes, coal thieves and car riders. At a moment's notice a man may have to start for some desolate spot in the hills to run down a gang of yegg men. The yeggs are always armed, so that the life of our police is rather exciting.

"We are always tracing car depredations. When the freight claim agent hears that a car has been broken open, we first establish between what two points this happened. This is easy because the seals on the cars are examined at a number of stations along the road.

"Then we send men to watch that part of the road and we are almost sure to find a camp of hoboes in the neighborhood to whom to trace the robbery The hoboes are arrested and brought to trial. Our men have to be patrolmen, detectives, lawyers, all in one.

"Two months ago we arrested and brought to trial some sixty men on charges of coal stealing along the New York & Susquehanna. We had long been troubled by these thefts and we sent an extra force of police to that region. Evidence was colected, a raid made and a lot of well-to-do citizens arrested and convicted.

"The other day we sent a man from Jamestown to the penitentiary for seventee years for stealing. More than $2,000 worth of stolen goods were found in his possession.

"Besides the men are always hunting down pickpockets, three-card monte men, green goods men and other suspicious characters. The habit some people have of taking dining car silver as souvenirs is gradually disappearing, thanks to our police. Then there is some work of so secret a nature that the men themselves don't know what it's for. We have a cipher code for telegrams.

"We've had the force for two years, and it has proved extremely efficient. In 1904 we made 2,920 arrests, 932 of the prisoners paid fines and 741 were sent to jail. Upon 856 sentence was suspended, thirty-seven were sent to the penitentiary, seven to the insane asylum and ninety turned over to the probation officer; fourteen were sent to the reform schools.

"Now, I call that pretty good work, considering that we have no three platoons or anything like that. Our men are on duty twenty-four hours a day."

The New York Central has a system similar to that of the Erie. The Central was one of the first roads in the field with a private police force. Its force dates back to the beginning of the '80s, W. A. Humphrey, the head of it, is called the chief of police and has offices at Albany.

The Baltimore & Ohio is similarly equipped, and so is the New York, New Haven & Hartford. The police of the latter road are under the guidance of Former Detective Sergeant Valiely of Mulberry street, the sworn foe of get-rich-quick concerns.

The type of man that qualifies for a job in one of the railroad police forces is not at all like the ponderous patrolman of Broadway. The railroad men are keen, alert, wiry fellows.

"We could make the city police look like 30 cents," said one of them proudly.

WANTED A RECEIPT.

Thomas W. Lawson tells of a friend who had taken a trip up to the Maine woods for a day's hunting, says the Grand Rapids Press. The hunter's time being limited, he wished to crowd as many hours into a day as was possible, so he ordered the host at the little backwoods hotel to call him at 4:30 in the morning.

Promptly at 4:30 he was waked from a sound sleep by a thump on the door of his room.

"Well," he asked, sleepily, "what's the matter?"

"It's 4:30," came the answer.

"All right, I'll be right down," he said, as he pulled the covers up to his chin for another little nap. There was silence for about five minutes, when he was wakened once more by a terrible clatter on his door.

"What's the matter now?" he asked, thoroughly aroused.

"You just sign this 'receipt.'"

"Sign what 'receipt.'"

"This receipt showing that I called you at 4:30. You don't come down at 8 o'clock and say I didn't call you. Not if I know it."

JAP GENERALS NOT IDLE.

During the winter just passed Japan's generals along the Shakhe spent their time variously, says the Kansas City Journal. "General Nodzu," according to Japanese newspapers, "studied typewriting. General Kuroki kept barnyard fowls. During the Heikautai engagement General Koldama scarcely slept at all for a whole week, but did not seem one whit the worse for his experience." General Oyama was reported as being "the same robust, merry-hearted gentleman as ever."

The woman who never reads store-advertising is about as wise as the merchant who never advertises—but this is too much like "calling names," so we withdraw the comparison, in deference to the woman.

STATE WAS TOO LATE

In Bringing Suit Against Buckman For Triple Damages.

Only Actual Damages Can Be Collected After Three Years.

St. Paul, June 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state supreme court, today, decided the case of the state of Minnesota vs. Congressman C. B. Buckman, of Little Falls, Minn., to recover damages in the neighborhood of $70,000 for illegal cutting of timber on state lands in favor of Mr. Buckman.

The state sued to recover about $70,000 from Congressman Buckman for triple damages for alleged timber trespass on state lands. The court decided that inasmuch as no suit for triple damages had been started within three years after the commission of the alleged offense, the statutes of limitation debarred the state from collecting such damages and that only actual damages could by judgment be collected.

In the case of George C. Bagley, vs. McCarthy Bros., respondent, the St. Louis county district court is reversed by the supreme court. The point at issue was the validity of transcripts of two judgments filed at the same time in the municipal and district courts.

The suit of Mrs. Anna Moehr against Dr. C. Williams, a local specialist, for $25,000 damages, growing out of an improper operation, will have to be tried over again. The supreme court, in an opinion handed down this afternoon, denies the appeal of both from the ruling of the Ramsey county court, and affirms the order calling for a new trial.

The difference between a steam railroad crossing and street railway crossing, and the care to be exercised in crossing each are concisely outlined in an opinion filed by the supreme court today. Incidentally, the Minneapolis Street Railway company loses $1,800, a verdict for that amount being given H. W. Smith against the company. The case was twice before the district court, and in each instance the railway company was the appellant. The supreme court holds against the city of Faribault in its appeal from the order of the Rice county district court, holding for one William Kelly in a suit for damages.

Kelly was en employe of the city and was hurt by the caving in of a trench. He brought suit and the city denied liability because he had not given notice thereof within the thirty-day period. The supreme court holds that the thirty-day period does not apply in the case where an employe or servant asks redress for injuries sustained because of the negligence of a city.

"If a person attempts to cross a track in the face of an approaching train he is clearly guilty of contributory negligence." This is the view of the supreme court and because of it the Rock Island railroad evades a suit for damages. Miss Greenwood was killed while trying to cross in front of an approaching train and her heirs brought suit. The lower court held for the company and the supreme court sustains the finding.

The Lac Qui Parle district court is reversed in the case of Thomas Kivin vs. Iver Gunderson, appellant. The suit was one growing out of a controversy over a government land survey.

FAIR TREATMENT

Must Be Accorded the Chinks, Says President.

Washington, June 23.—Chinese immigration to this country and the execution of the Chinese exclusion laws constituted the principal topic of discussion at today's meeting of the cabinet. The situation which has arisen out of the enforcement of the exclusion law is regarded both by the president and members of his cabinet as serious. As Secretary Taft phrased it, "there seems to be more trouble over the administration of the law than in the law itself. The president made it clear at the meeting that he was determined the Chinese should have fair treatment whenever they applied for admission at any point.

MAN OF WIDE INTERESTS

George H. Munroe Who Is Introducing Wireless Telegraphy.

George H. Munroe of New York, of Munroe & Munroe, managers for the underwriters of the Marconi system of telegraphy, was in the city yesterday and today in connection with the exposition of the system that is to be made in Duluth. Arrangements have been made to present its workings to the people of Duluth at Steinway hall tomorrow and the first three days of next week and with Mr. Munroe came assistants who are to fully explain to the people how it is used and the advantage it can be to them.

Mr. Munroe is an interesting man. The firm is composed of himself and brother, Alexander, the latter now being in London, and in a few years they have become among the most widely known promoters, their names being familiar among financial men in every part of the country. They have been connected with the underwriting of the Marconi system for some time and have made a brilliant success of it. They, today, control the Canadian, American and Australian rights and next year George Munroe will go to Australia to introduce the system.

Mr. Munroe is still under 40 years of age, and has come up from humble circumstances with a rapidity that is remarkable and is a fine example of what energy and confidence can do. He has, for some time, been traveling over this country and Canada, inciting interest in the wireless system and, as he has had ample opportunity to make comparisons, what he says of Duluth will be of interest.

"You have the best town in the West," he said this morning. "I have been around a good deal and know whereof I speak. They tell me your city is in good shape financially, and I can believe that, for it has the look. I have been up to Winnipeg, and while that city is and has been booming for some time, and has more people than yours, you have some things that belong to a live city that it has not. I would advise any man to stick to Duluth."

"Wireless telegraphy is something that is to come into general use, and very quickly," he continued. "Within two years you will see practically every boat on the lakes equipped with it, and it will be found to save expenses in many ways. We will have stations in this section before a great while, at Winnipeg, Duluth and Fort William, and it will be in active use.

"We want your best people to see its workings and learn what it can do. The instances of actual occurrence that we can cite showing what has been done with it are striking and convincing."

Mr. Munroe expected to remain here for a week himself, but this morning received a telegram calling him to New York at once to close up a deal aggregating $1,000,000, in the flotation of which his firm has been interested.

THEY ACTUALLY DO THE WORK.

Food Eaten Is Worthless Unless Digested—Some Stomachs Must Have Help.

Food taken into the stomach which, from the nature of the food or the condition of the stomach, is not digested, is worse than no food at all. This is a true statement as far as it goes and a great many dyspeptics go only this far with their reasoning. They argue with themselves that because their stomachs do not do the work given them, they must be given less work; in other words they must be starved. It would be just as sensible for a business man who is unable to do all his own work to cut down his business to his own capacity as it is for a man to starve himself to relieve his stomach. The sensible business man employs help and goes forward with his business. Likewise the sensible dyspeptic will employ help for his stomach and give his body proper nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets actually do the work assigned to them. They relieve weak and overburdened stomachs of a great portion of digestive action. Their component parts are identical with those of the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they simply take up the grind and carry on the work just the same as a good, strong, healthy stomach would do it.

On this account Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are perfectly natural in their action and effects. They do not cause any unnatural or violent disturbance in the stomach or bowels. They themselves digest the food and supply the system with all the nourishment contained in what is eaten and carry out Nature's plans for the sustenance and maintenance of the body.

How much more sensible is this method than that employed by many sufferers from weak stomachs. By this means body and brain get all the good, nutritious food they need and the man is properly nourished and equipped to carry on his work and perform his duties. He could not possibly be in proper working condition by starving himself or employing some new fangled, insufficient food that does not contain enough nutriment for a-year-old baby. A strong man doing strong work must be properly fed and this applies to the brain as well as the body.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by relieving the stomach of its work, enable it to recuperate and regain its normal health and strength. Nature repairs the worn and wasted tissues just as she heals and knits the bone of a broken limb, which is, of course, not used during the process of repair.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box and they are the one article that the druggist does not try to sell something in the place of that's "just as good." Their unqualified merit and success and the universal demand for them has placed them within the reach of every one.

AUSTRIANS ARRESTED

Eight Woodsmen Claimed to Have Defrauded Employment Agent.

Charged with defrauding an employment agent out of their railroad fare, eight Austrians were arrested and brought into court this afternoon.

The men were John Stilinovich, Steve Lamarch, Nick Pesel, Peter Mudrovich, Dan. Alov, Joe Starinovich, Joe Stilinovich and John Mille.

It is claimed that the men were hired to go to work for the Alger & Smith Lumber company, and were advanced their railroad fare by the employment agent. When they reached the place where they were to work it is alleged that they refused and returned to the city.

Their case is being heard in the municipal court this afternoon before Judge Windom.

ECHOES FROM THE COLUMBIA SALE OF THE BURROWS STOCK.

Stein-Bloch Garments at Bowery Store Prices

These high-class suits, overcoats and cravenettes must feel a little ashamed to have such cheap-looking prices put on them, but we can't help it. All goods with the Burrows label will have to say goodbye to the new Columbia store. We don't expect to sell the thousands of good suits in a few days, but if the customers continue to come as they did the first three days of the sale, it will be swift work to dispose of them.

Besides Stein-Bloch garments, the Great Eastern has elaborate stocks of fine clothes, made by the house of Kuppenheimer, the Washington Co., and the K. N. F. Co.

One stack containing all of Burrows' finest $30 and $35 Suits, but not including Full Dress Suits —at..... $19.85

ONE HUNDRED Per Cent a Year and 120 Extra.

New York, June 23.—Stockholders of the Fifth Avenue Bank among whom Russell Sage is one of the largest, will receive within a few days an extra dividend of 120 per cent, calling for the distribution of $120,000. This extra dividend was declared in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 25 per cent, which is at the rate of 100 per cent a year. This rate the bank has been paying for several years.

In June, 1903, an extra dividend of 100 per cent was declared out of the surplus earnings of the three previous years. The extra dividend of 120 per cent declared this week represents a part of the surplus earnings of the company for the last two years.

The capital stock of the Fifth Avenue Bank is $100,000. It is closely held and on account of the large surplus rolled up by its management the stock sells at about $3,000 a share. It has a book value of $1,000 a share.

The Chemical National Bank pays dividends of 150 per cent a year.

TO ISSUE BONDS

Western Pacific Will Authorize $50,000,000 of Mortgage Bonds.

G. S. Stewart Becomes Superintendent of Minot Division of G. N.

San Francisco, June 23.—Meetings of the directors and stockholders of the Western Pacific Railway company have been held here. Fifty million dollars of mortgage bonds were authorized and a mortgage was directed to be made on all the property of the company to the Bowling Green Trust Company of New York, as trustees. The immediate interest on the bonds is guaranteed by the Rio Grande Western Railway company.

The directors called a meeting of the stockholders for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of the Western Pacific from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000. This increase of capital will be authorized at a stockholders' meeting to be held Aug. 23.

SUCCEEDS J. M. DAVIS.

G. S. Stewart Is Superintendent of Minot Division.

St. Paul, June 23.—George S. Stewart will succeed J. M. Davis as superintendent of the Minot division of the Great Northern road, when Mr. Davis assumes the position of assistant general superintendent to which he was recently appointed. Mr. Stewart has been assistant superintendent of the Breckenridge division of the same company.

Edward Furniss of Spokane has been appointed a traveling passenger agent for the Great Northern road. Mr. Furniss was employed formerly as advertising agent for the Great Northern. Recently he has been engaged in the real estate business.

Burlington Directors.

Chicago, June 23.—At the annual meeting of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad company, held here yesterday, the following directors were elected: Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad company, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker, George C. Clark, William P. Clough, Norman B. Ream, Samuel Thorne, New York; James J. Hill, James N. Hill, St. Paul; John J. Mitchell, George B. Harris, Chicago; Charles E. Perkins, Burlington, Iowa. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway company, which operates the physical property owned by the railroad company: George C. Clark, William P. Clough, A. T. French, George W. Perkins, Samuel Horne, James J. Hill, James N. Hill, John S. Kennedy, New York; George B. Harris, Darius Miller, Chicago; Charles E. Perkins, Burlington, Iowa.

Wilton & Red Lake Road.

Construction work on the new Wilton & Red Lake railway, the survey of which extends from Bemidji northward to Red Lake, is being pushed rapidly ahead, and it is now believed that trains will be running over the line early in October. At Island lake, a town will be platted, and another town will be started between Spalding and Island lake.

Re-Elect Directors.

MIDSUMMER FESTIVAL

To Be Held at Bethel Baptist Church.

Rev. Hjalmar Henrickson will deliver a lecture this evening at the Bethel Baptist church, Ninth avenue east and Third streets, at the midsummer festival arranged by the young ladies' society of the church. His subject will be "A Midsummer Night in Dolarne, Sweden." Mr. Hendrickson's fine ability as a lecturere always makes it a pleasure to listen to him and a treat is anticipated. The musical program arranged for the evening is very elaborate and the society in charge of the affair expects a pleasant evening.

IN COPPER CIRCLES

The Phoenix Mine Has Finally Given Up the Ghost.

The Necessity of Raising Money Depressing the Bisbee Stocks.

Houghton, Mich., June 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Phoenix mine, after six years of effort, has given up the ghost. The mine was closed down this week, and while it will take a month or so to complete the work of dismantling and to close up the odds and ends of business, it may be accepted as a fact that the Phoenix is out of business for keeps. The present company was organized in 1899, and holds title to the Phoenix, St. Clair and Robbins mines. The old Phoenix mine proper is one of the oldest in the district, and paid small dividends, but laid out a far larger sum in development. The present Phoenix Consolidated Copper Co. is the lineal successor of the first mining company organized to operate in the Lake Superior copper district, sixty-odd years ago. The present company did not reopen the old Phoenix mine, which produced a single mass of five hundred short tons weight, many years ago, but devoted attention to the development of the St. Clair and Robbins or Garden City mines. The property has a small mill, and has been a small producer for the past eighteen months.

The downward course of the locally-owned Bisbee stocks continue unchecked. The most palpable reason is the stretching of the buying power of the people who have been speculating in these shares, to a point where time must elapse before recuperation can set in. The last big flotation, the North Butte, called for many millions in cash, and, outside of a few wealthy men connected with the so-called "Bonanza Circle" stocks, the millions raised had to come largely from the Bisbee shares. The wiser investors in North Butte sold Bisbee shares outright, at what proved top prices, and while their North Butte has declined also, from the high market price, those who got in at subscription figures are still far ahead of the game, and even those who bought into North Butte at the top market prices, selling Bisbee stocks to do so, are no worse off than they would have been to have held their Bisbee shares. The people who really got pinched in the deal, and who are leiping to make a bad market worse, are those who borrowed at the banks upon their Bisbee shares to buy North Butte. The Bisbee shares naturally declined, because of the heavy selling and the heavy borrowing thereupon, and, as a decline was due shortly, in the natural course of events, the situation found nobody on the ground with a prop or a peg. As the Bisbee shares declined, bankers begun to ask more collateral, or cash upon account, and this threw more stock upon the market, at a time when the market was suffering from acute indigestion. The first stock to get a black eye was very naturally Junction. Junction was the first to be marked for slaughter because it was the newest of the Calumet & Arizona sisterhood, and showed the largest profits to the majority of its holders. The other shares moved off in sympathy a few points, and a little later were themselves placed under the same sort of selling pressure as Junction, from the same causes, that is, the necessity of raising cash. Eventually the trouble reached Calumet & Arizona itself, a stock that is paying 8 per cent and earning nearly twice that on a market price of $160 per share. The necessity that speculators were under of raising money caused them to sacrifice Calumet & Arizona in the end, grudgingly, to be sure, but none the less certainly.

Work on the grading of the roadbed of the Keweenaw Central line is proceeding rapidly, and a considerable part of the line is graded and will be ready for the rails within a week or two.

The Calumet & Hecla is remodeling seven heads at its north mill, leaving but four to be remodeled next year. The production of fine copper in 1904 was the largest for several years, and, barring accidents, 1905 should show a further increase. No. 16 shaft, the fourth of the shafts on the Osceola amygdaloid, is being unwatered by the Calumet & Hecla, and the Osceola openings, which aggregate nearly twenty miles, with practically no stoping done, will be able to furnish a large rock tonnage within a few months. The conglomerate openings are keeping up their regular output, and can continue to do so, barring accidents, for an indefinite length of time. It is evident that the greatly increased milling capacity of the Calumet & Hecla is to be used in treating amygdaloid rock—first from the shafts on the Osceola lode, and later from the Kearsarge lode as well, when the three shafts sinking on the latter shall have developed a new mine to the point of profitable production.

While estimates necessarily are hazardous, it is evident that the Calumet & Hecla is arranging for the handling of a greatly increased rock tonnage in the near future. Making due allowance for the progressive decrease in copper values carried by the conglomerate at depth, a considerable increase in output of fine copper will result, and an output of 100,000,000 pounds of fine copper in 1997 does not seem an unreasonable prediction.

The Michigan mine has proven a surprise in nearly every particular, almost from the time it was first opened, six years ago. The old openings on the Minnesota contact vein were disappointing, but the branch vein made up for the disappointment. The contact vein, however, is rich at the point of junction with the branch vein, as would be anticipated. The branch vein, while narrow, averaging about four feet only in width, carries twice as much copper per fathom as the best portions of the Calico amygdaloid, on which the shafts are sunk, and averages about thirty-two pounds of copper per ton throughout, from wall to wall, as against sixteen pounds in the Calico stopes that are worked. Fortunately the branch vein dips at such an angle that there is ample head-room for miners without beating away considerable quantities of worthless wall-rock. The Michigan is earning a little money over and above all expenses, including cost of development, and when in a position, a year or two later, to feed two stamps with selected rock, should begin earning handsome profits. The Michigan is a credit, both to the Stanton management in the East, and the Brady management at the mine. Neither could be improved on.

An addition to the Osceola-Tamarack pumphouse, now under way, will house a 40,000,000-gallon pump that will be, in all essential details, a duplicate of the 40,000,000-gallon pump in use for the past five years, giving these mines a joint pumping capacity of upwards of 100,000,00 gallons per diem.

HE ABANDONS HIS FAMILY

Gives Up Business, Home and Wife For Typewriter.

New York, June 22.—James Street, president of a recently organized steamship company of this city, backed by powerful Morgan interests, is at the Polyclinic hospital slowly convalescing after an operation for appendicitis.

This serious attack of illness is but a detail of a suprising tangle of difficulties in which Street is involved, although the secret has been guarded carefully by influential men whose business interests in a great measure are involved. Street has been forced to resign the presidency of the steamship company that bears his name under circumstances almost unparalleled in commercial history.

Street is charged with abandoning his wife and six children and with wrecking a business career of immense success, all through infatuation for a 17-year-old girl typewriter in the employ of the steamship company.

The deserted wife, who alleged she has been left penniless, is a niece of Henry Gassaway Davis, Democratic candidate for vice president in the last campaign. She married Street nineteen years ago and always lived in Englewood, N. J., where she is highly connected and universally respected.

Several days ago Mrs. Street was compelled to vacate her handsome home at Highwood, the aristocratic suburb of Englewood, and seek shelter with a sister. Her last dollar had been expended and she and her six children would have been literally homeless but for her sister's aid.

Even in the bitterness of her sorrow Mrs. Street would say no unkind word of her husband.

"A kinderhearted man never breathed," said the brave woman, forcing back her tears. "He is not responsible for his act of cruelty to me and the little ones. That girl hypnotized him."

The girl, Edna Miller, is a petite blonde, with big, blue eyes and soft lisping voice, who looks younger by two years than the age with which she is credited.

One of the astonishing features of this case is that Mrs. Miller, the girl's mother, is now living with her daughter in Street's luxurious apartments in Gresham court. The lease was signed by Street and the agents were informed that "Mr. Street, his wife, and mother-in-law would occupy them."

Street received a salary of $7,000 a year, and it is said was assured of an income of $20,000 if he had attended to business.

Proctorknott School.

At the closing of the Proctorknott school five children hold a record of perfect attendance. They are Fern Rappold, Millie Brayden, Maud Biers, Ruby Brayden and Katie Rappold. This record is for the school year of ten months closing this week. Millie Brayden and Maud Biers were not absent any day last year in addition to the record of attendance of this year.

BRIDE BALKS

At Altar Over Word "Obey," But Yields.

Chicago, June 23.—When Rev. Simon B. Blunt, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, asked Miss Edna I. Thurston of Detroit, if she would love, honor and obey John Hancock Mitchener, the bride stopped the wedding ceremony and caused consternation in the church by balking on the "obey."

"Will you obey?" asked the minister for the second time.

There was no answer. Looking up from his book, the minister asked:

"Do you refuse to answer?"

"I do not think that 'obey' should be in the ceremony," answered the bride.

Miss Edna May Melchior, 1213 Wrightwood avenue, the bridesmaid, and George Henry Lally, 5700 Monroe avenue, best man, gasped. The minister said calmly:

"I shall refuse to go on with the ceremony if you do not answer."

"And obey," he repeated.

"I will," answered the bride at last, in a low whisper.

The final words were then spoken, and the man and wife turned to receive the congratulations of their friends.

"Buster, you're all right," said the groom, patting his bride in a satisfied way. "I don't want you to obey me."

Mr. and Mrs. Mitchener are spending their honeymoon at the Holland house, Fifty-third street and Lake avenue.

"Any couple who are married in my church must follow the ceremony as it is laid down in the ritual," said Rev. Blunt, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer. "If either balks at any part of the ceremony, I will stop it and refuse to go on. If a bride refuses to promise to obey, she will have to go elsewhere to be married."

THE PERILS OF POPULARITY

Experienced By Newly Wedded Couple In Boston Hotel.

Boston, June 23.—"Telegram for Mr. Abbott!"

"Bundle for Mr. Abbott!"

"Wedding cake for Mr. Abbott!"

A chorus of exiled yells, a helter-skelter dash of grinning messenger and bell boys, a jingling of bells, and then—the appearance of the aforesaid Abbott, a helpless, perspiring figure.

This was the scene at the Hotel Touraine when Stanton M. Abbott, Dartmouth graduate and bridegroom, experienced the perils of popularity and the annoyance to which the newly wedded are occasionally exposed.

Everybody was mad, too, as well as Mr. Abbott. Scowling porters, groaning under their burdens of boxed rice and cumbrous rubber plants, bellboys who raced wildly about with no prospect of a tip, excited clerks who kept ringing for Mr. Abbott, and Mr. Abbott himself, who sat in a corner and looked as though he thought that marriage might, after all, be a failure.

"Oh, Lord," groaned Abbott, as he glanced timidly toward the door. And then came the onslaught of the newspaper men, and advent of sundry lawyers' clerks, who wanted to be listed in Abbott's defense against a theratened breach of promise suit for $20,000.

It all happened just because Mr. Abbott decided to get married, and afterward left New York, intending to enjoy a quiet honeymoon in this city. But his legion of friends decided that the honeymoon should not be a quiet one.

So after Mr. Abbott had quietly wed Miss Maude Earl of Brooklyn in the Church of the Messiah, at that city, Thursday, and started for Boston, his friends began their pranks. Foremost among the conspirators, so Abbott says, was a former Boston newspaper man, now assistant secretary of the treasury, James Reynolds, who happened to be the victim's half brother.

Lawyers in Boston were communicated with, and an alleged actress was persuaded to threaten Abbott by mail. Her contribution to the success of the scheme came yesterday in the shape of the following telegeram from New York:

"To Stanton M. Abbott, Hotel Touraine, Boston:

"Unless you settle with me at once on a $20,000 basis I shall bring suit for breach of promise. FLORENCE."

Lawyers from State street volunteered their services to disentangle Stanton from threatening litigation. While Mr. Abbott persuaded the lawyers that the services would not be needed, fictitious wedding gifts, telegrams and messages of condolence of all kinds were piling up, awaiting Abbott's frenzied consideration.

"I assure you that there's nothing to it." Mr. Abbott frantically advised the reporter. "You see it was this way: Mr. Reynolds would have his little joke. But I assure you that I have had nothing to do with actresses. And Mrs. Abbott knows it; honestly, she does. It's all a fake.

"O, yes, the rush is over now. I'm really beginning to see the joke myself. Ha! Ha!

"What's that you said, boy? Another telegram? And three more gentlemen waiting to see me? This is too much. I shall have to put a stop to this at once.

"No! No! No! That rice is not for me. Mr. Stanton Abbott has left the Touranie! He has gone to parts unknown."

With a wild bound the enraged bridegroom shot through the group hovering about the Touraine entrance and made his escape skyward in the waiting elevator.

NEW JERSEY COURT

Rules That Twelve Movings Edual One Divorce.

New York, June 23.—Recommending a divorce decree in favor of Sidney Phillips of the Bergen district of Jersey City against Mrs. Mabel Phillips of Bridgeport, Conn., Albert H. Wall, as a master in chancery, filed a report with Vice Chancellor Garrison in Jersey City. The evidence disclosed that the couple were maried in Brooklyn in 1900 and that during the first year of their married life they moved twelve times.

A year after their marriage they met in a Brooklyn street. Mrs. Phillips said she was "going for a walk." When Phillips got home that evening his wife and her personal effects were missing. He has not seen her since. Shortly afterward he moved to Jersey City and a few months ago started the divorce suit on the ground of desertion. Mrs. Phillips did not contest it. The papers were served on her at Bridgeport by Constable Corydon of Jersey City, who went to her house in the role of an expressman.

Corydon showed detective ability in finding his quarry. He had been told Mrs. Phillips went to market every morning, and he took his stand where he could get a view at every woman that appeared at the city market. Mrs Phillips may have expected trouble, but at any rate Corydon did not get the chance to serve her with the papers. He proved to be resourceful, and an express wagon rattling down the street gave him an idea. For a bribe the driver exchanged uniforms and Corydon drove to the house in which Mrs. Phillips was living in Bridgeport. Taking a box from the wagon he rang the bell, and when told Mrs. Phillips was not in he refused to leave the box. That brought Mrs. Phillips to the door and Corydon served her with the papers in her husband's suit for divorce.

The testimony of Phillips, who is wealthy, was that his wife turned out to be a chronic fault finder. In the years they lived together their twelve removals were due to Mrs. Phillips finding fault with minor things about each house. For the first six months of their marriage they lived in Brooklyn and moved six times. From there they moved to Boston, and the fever to keep the household in motion was still controlling in Mrs. Phillips, but she managed to stay in one house for three months. She wished to return to Brooklyn and for the next three months the household goods were transferred three times. Mrs. Phillips developed a passion for moving things about the house. Philips had to explore the house at night to make sure where the bed was. Then came the day when Mrs. Phillips moved away from Phillips altogether and he brought suit for divorce on the ground of desertion.

THE DOOM OF LONG SKIRTS

Will Be Sounded By Action of Sioux City Council.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 23.—If an ordinance now under consideration is finally passed by the city council, the women of Sioux City who are led by the fashion books to wear sweeping trains on their skirts will find themselves under arrest and confronted by a fine or imprisonment.

For the city council is about to put the seal of its disapproval upon the lovely skirt and forbid the public appearance of woman except in short skirts or knickerbockers.

A delegation of citizens waited on Alderman W. J. Radcliff and submitted an ordinance prohibiting long skirts on the streets.

The spokesman was W. E. Powell, a pioneer resident. He declared that the long skirt is the vehicle of all sorts of disease germs and filth, picked up on the streets and carried into the house. It was argued that the ordinance would be a fitting sequel to the recent legislation of the council forbidding spitting on the streets or in public buildings.

"I simply won't take too many chances with the women of Sioux City," Alderman Radcliff replied. "As far as I am personally concerned, the women may wear skirts ten feet long, and I won't deny them the privilege of advertising the fashion catalogue.

"If they want to wear knickerbockers, that's their sweet privilege, and I'm for that. In fact, I might say I favor knickerbockers. If the ordinance is changed so that women may wear either knickerbockers or short skirts, I'll undertake to present it to the council."

City Health Officer C. J. Ross declared that the ordinance will meet the approval of every physician in Sioux City.

"The wearing of any skirt by man or woman, either on the street car or in the drawing room, is an utterly silly practice," Dr. Ross said. "From every standpoint of common sense, health and sanitation, the long skirt should be relegated to oblivion, and I hope the day will come when the women are freed from their bondage of fashion and stop wearing skirts altogether. Skirts are one of the favorite means of transportation of disease germs."

Those backing the ordinance declare that it will have sufficient votes before the close of the campaign to pass the council.

BOOM FOR WEAVER

Movement to Nominate Mayor For Governor of Pennsylvania.

If Machine Beats Plan, Fusion Is to Be Made.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 23.—John Weaver, mayor of Philadelphia, will be a formidable candidate for the Republican nomination for governor next year, is the information that comes to Capitol Hill. A well defined program of action is already under way, as a result of which the managers of the mayor's political fortunes expect to come to the next Harrisburg convention with the big Philadelphia delegation lined up solidly for Weaver.

Failing in this, they are counting on accepting the invitation of the recent Democratic state convention for a fusion agreement by which the Independent Republicans and Democrats could work together in behalf of a ticket with John Weaver at its head.

Although the new fight will not cleave to the lines of former factional controversies, it is curiously significant that what has come to be known as the "Weaver movement" is being engineered, so far as its political phases are concerned, by men who furnished the brains for the five years in which such a fight was waged as nothing but the perfect machinery of the Quay organization could have withstood.

State officials here profess to be experiencing little difficulty in discerning in the Weaver movement the adept political hand of E. A. Van Valkenburg, who, as manager of the John Wanamaker campaigns for United States senator, and as the leading spirit in the anti-Quay strategy board during the entire five years of the "insurgent" movement, gained a reputation as one of the shrewdest and most forceful politicians in the state. Former Judge James Gay Gordon, who, with Elihu Root, is Mayor Weaver's legal adviser in the present fight, is closely associated with Mr. Van Valkenburg personally.

To return to Van Valkonburg, his personal friend and close confidant, Thomas L. Hicks, has been appointed assistant director of the department of public works. Hicks has been an "insurgent" of the most pronounced type. He was city chariman of the Union party and has personally led numerous anti-machine local contests. But the thing which makes his appointment to the public works department of especial significance in the present instance is that he has been devoting much of his time in recent months to collecting a mass of detailed information concerning the vast contracts for filtration, street improvements, etc., out of which the Durham machine leaders are supposed to have been making large sums. Hicks was peculiarly adapted to this work because of having served for many years as chief of the highway bureau. No less significant is the appointment of ex-Magistrate Thomas W. South as assistant director of public safety. He, too, was conspicuous in the "insurgent" fights, making himself so obnoxious to the "organization" as to be denied a renomination for magistrate. With Hicks and South in the saddle, the "organization" is deprived of direct connection with two of its greatest sources of power—contracts and police.

Philadelphia, in the hands of the reformers, would, of course, put an end to the state leadership of Senator Penrose. The new Quaker City organization, no doubt, would insist on naming Penrose's successor, thus putting itself in position to control the state convention in 1906 and turn the gubernatorial nomination to John Weaver or any one else it might choose.

Unless the Weaver movement should be successful, it is the prevalent belief here that John P. Elkin will be the next Republican nominee for governor. It can be stated on the authority of a very close personal friend of Elkin, that, notwithstanding the camforts and the honors of the supreme beach, he would accept the nomination if it were to come his way. It may even be said that he would be willing, under certain conditions, to retire from the bench in advance of the convention and make a fight for the nomination.

Elkin, it is believed, would not do this for a mere four years as governor, but if the breaking up of the Durham machine were to open the way for him to succeed Penrose as the leader of the Republican party in Pennsylvania, the best-equipped politician in the state would not hesitate to bid adieu to further judicial distinction and accept the governorship as an assured steppingstone to the United States senate.

FAMILY LOVE MIX-UP

Involving Two Elopements And Only One Woman.

Spokane, Wash., June 23.—John Aschenbrenner, who secured a divorce from his wife, after her sensational elopement with his brother David two months ago at Colfax, has added a new chapter to the Aschenbrenner family drama by himself eloping with his former wife.

Mrs. Aschenbrenner and the brother David were caught at the passenger dpot at Colfax two months ago just as they were about to leave the town. The father of the Aschenbrenner boys upset the plans for elopement by causing the arrest of the couple, not, however, until David had given his father a thorough beating.

The would-be elopers were sent to jail for unlawful cohabitation, but the woman was released on parole and allowed to go to her uncle's home on her promise to be good.

Meanwhile John secured a divorce, and since then has found his love has returned for his wife; hence the present elopement. David Aschenbrenner is still doing time on the chain gang.

BOSS COX LAUDED.

Praised For His Honesty By a Minister.

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 23.—In his baccalaureate sermon to the Newport high school graduates the Rev. B. Nelson, rector of St. Paul's P. E. church, Newport, taking his subject, "Business, Politics and Religion," paid a ringing tribute to George B. Cox, and stamped the Cincinnati leader as the champion of the "square deal" in political life. He said in part:

Across the river in Cincinnati there is a boss—a powerful boss—but he is honest and fair. Everyone who knows anything about the situation knows that his power lies in the fact that he is honest. When he promises a man a job, that man gets it. He is "on the square."

Continuing Dr. Nelson said:

"Why should we put dishonest people in office? A man does not take another man to be dishonest. Churches don't put men in pulpits whom they know to be crooked.

"Young men and young women, when I passed my last examination, I said: 'Thank heavens!' There is only one thing I hate worse than an examination and that is the result. I had not been in the ministry three months, though, before I realized that I was being examined every day."

"My first church was in a little town in Ohio. Because I had played on the baseball team in the University of Virginia, local ballplayers made me captain. We played the Adamstown team and beat them. Then they beat us, and finally in the third game I was making a run for second, but the ball got there before I did, so down I went and slid for it. Two old women, members of my congregation, stopped their carriage at the grounds just at that time. One of them said: 'Goodness gracious, is that the Rev. Mr. Nelson rolling around in the dirt. I will never go to hear him preach again.' You see I was being examined."

"There is a moral wave sweeping over the country and the people are demanding honesty in public places. Note Philadelphia, for instance.

"The minister who is ashamed to pureach politics is as much of a coward as the politician who is ashamed to be moral."

GOT SPECIAL TRAIN

By Representing He Was Son of Official.

Philadelphia, June 23.—Officials and detectives of the Pennsylvania Railroad company are trying to discover the identity of a well-dressed and suave young man who cleverly bunkoed the company into providing him with a special train. The young man, fashionably attired in silk hat, Prince Albert coat and gray trousers, rushed into the Camden office in great distress. He had missed his train for Edgewater Park, where, at 2:30 sharp, he was to be an usher at a wedding. He must have a special train. Duly impressed, the clerks asked his name, and when he said he was the son of one of the vice-presidents of the company there was a scurry to prepare the special. It was ready in a few minutes and the young man was whirled to Edgewater Park at a mile-a-minute clip, with everything else on the road held up to give him a clear track.

Reaching his destination the young man thanked the crew profusely and disappeared. Then word went along the line that there was something wrong, that the particular vice-president he mentioned had no son, and that the fellow was an imposter. Detectives were at once placed upon the case, but the young man had disappeared. There was a wedding in Edgewater Park that day, but no man answering his description could be found as either an usher or a guest.

ECZEMA

ITCHES AND BURNS

The return of warm weather means a return of torture to Eczema sufferers. The blood is charged with burning acids and acrid matter which is forced to the surface through the pores and glands, forming pustules which discharge a sticky fluid, and the itching is intense.

The doctors said I had pustular Eczema; it would break out in small white pustules, mostly on my face and hands, discharging a sticky fluid; crusts would form and drop off, leaving the skin red and inflamed. I was tormented with the itching and burning characteristic of the disease for five years, and during the time used various medicated soaps, ointments and washes, but these applications seemed to make me worse. After taking S. S. S. a short time I began to improve; the itching did not worry me so much. I continued the medicine, and soon all the ugly eruptions disappeared and my skin is now as clear as anybody's. I have not been troubled with any breaking out since.
Urbana, O. E. E. KELLY.

Sometimes the disease is in the dry form, and bran-like scales form on the skin, but the cause is the same—humors in the blood. Salves, cooling washes, powders and the like can do nothing more than relieve the itching, because they do not reach the acid-laden blood, the seat of the trouble. S. S. S. cures Eczema and all skin diseases by neutralizing the acids and carrying them off through the proper channels. When S. S. S. has done this the symptoms pass away, the blood is cooled and the disease is cured permanently. Nothing acts so promptly or surely in skin diseases as S. S. S., and it at the same time acts as a tonic to the entire system. Book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice without charge.

The Dynamo of the American People

We are a race of workers.

Work requires brain, nerve, energy.

We glory in achievement.

To work and work with might and main, good food is absolutely essential.

Although nearly every one eats soda crackers sometime, yet there are a few people who do not consider their true value as an article of daily food. But it is now a recognized and established fact that the soda cracker contains the most tissue, fat and muscle forming elements of any article of food made from flour.

Great as is the value of the common soda cracker, yet it is small in comparison to Uneeda Biscuit—the most wonderful soda cracker ever baked, and of which nearly 400,000,000 packages have been sold.

Uneeda Biscuit, the food of power, transmitting as they do the elements so vital to our well-being, may in very truth be called "The Dynamo of the American People."

KILLED IN FALL ON EL CAPITAN

Mountain Climber Met His Death In the Yosemite.

Yosemite, Cal., June 23.—Charles A. Bailey of Oakland, mountain climber, is no more. All that remained of his poor broken body, battered and cut by the sharp granite of the ledges of the upper wall between the Ribbon fall and westerly side of El Capitan as it leaped to destruction, remained all night and until noon next day in the narrow gorge five hundred or more feet below the point where he said: "We will be there in a moment," meaning the top of the wall, the place of safety.

No human being could reach his remains in the darkness of the Yosemite night. Trickling down nearby was the Ribbon Fall, while across the way were the beautiful cathedral spires, emblem of the eternity to which he was so suddenly ushered. Up from the south wall came echoes of the Bridal Veil, beautifully impressive, but at times suggestive of the spirit mind, its poetic indian name. Mr. Bailey had arrived here on his fifteenth trip to the valley. He told his companion at Camp Curry that he desired to climb to some place where others had not been. He would like company. J. C. E. Staats agreed to go with him. They left the camp intending to ascend the sides of one of the spires, but he changed his mind and told his friend that the gorge to the west of El Capitan had never been climbed. They would do it.

So they crossed to the north side of the valley and began the ascent, his last one. Up the side of the wall and gorge they carefully made their way, climbing from ledge to ledge, rock to rock, crevice to crevice. At times they had to push each other up, one standing upon the shoulders of the other, thus reaching some friendly rock or branch. About noon it was not only getting more dangerous, but they were hungry.

"Let us go back," said Staats, "for we are now passing points that we cannot go back over, and we do not know what is above." With the spirit of the mountaineer, Bailey said:

"Never say die. We will eat when we reach the top."

Still they were a thousand or more feet from the top at 1:30 p. m. They were still far from the end, so they ate their lunch. It was a dizzy point. A careless, a forgetful moment, meant death for either.

"If either of us should fall from here it would mean death," said Bailey. Even the Matterhorn, which he climbed last year, did not appear more dangerous. They were climbing to the walls first trod by human feet, the scene of the first fatal accident seen here in forty years. At a few moments before 3 o'clock they were nearing the top, almost above all dangerous places. Bailey was a few feet above, upon a ledge.

"Hand me my staff," said he.

"I was just in the act of doing so," said Mr. Staats, "when he seemed to turn his left side and in a second he had shot off into space to my right, striking upon three successive ledges about 500 feet apart, and then into the gorge."

Staats tried to view the remains, and, failing to see them, he climbed to the top in a few moments, going up through the bottom of the gorge with safety. He had advised Bailey to do this before the accident, but the latter took the more dangerous way. In three hours he had reached the village and reported. Next morning a rescuing party, headed by Guardian Harlow, ascended to the top of the wall by way of the trail, taking along 700 feet of rope. And this was even a few feet too short. The remains were recovered and brought here. Death must have been instantanous, the skull being all broken. The remains had to be carried four miles on a mule. The body will be shipped to his Oakland home.

CLEVELAND IS DEFENDED

Woman's Club at Des Moines Says Grover Is Right.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 23.—At last poor Grover has found a protector! As he unfurls his fishing tackle this summer he can at least know that amid the storm of criticism which has been rained down upon his head by women's clubs all over the country there is, way out in the wild and woolly West of Iowa, a little club of women who, while they think he has displayed ignorance of the subject in the main, yet frankly concede that he has presented at least some sensible views of the club in general. For frank speaking the able discussion of live topics it would be hard to find the superior of the Chauncey Depew club of Des Moines.

At its last meeting a brief discussion of the articles by Grover Cleveland was the order of the day after lunoheon. Mrs. Ogilvie was called upon to open the discussion, and said that she believed the article was at least half truth. She said that while Mr. Cleveland evidently spoke in ignorance, he had at least stated truth when he said that a woman's first duty is to herself and her home, and that the club should be a side issue.

"It is a patent fact," said Mrs. Ogilvie, "that too many women are daft on the club question." She closed with a little true story, as follows: A prominent club woman found herself too nearly ill at the last moment to go to her favorite club. She took off her wraps and lay down on the library couch. Her two little children soon discovered her, and one whispered: "O, there's mamma! Hush! Don't make any noise, for she's asleep, and if we waken her she'll get right up and go off to a club."

Mrs. Still said she thought the pendulum had swung to the limit, and the day of extremes in club going is passing. She said that while Grover Cleveland had said some true things, that he evidently spoke from a point of narrow view. Mrs. Strauss said that she felt sorry to hear Mr. Cleveland so berated, because she believed that there was a probability that he did not write the article at all. But that if he did write it, he only half understood what he was saying for it was very evident he had never attended a woman's club in his life. Mrs. Marsh thought that perhaps the article, while unjustified by facts, would be productive of much good, because of the discussion it had aroused. She believed that women should know all the truth about themselves, and that no woman could do her duty by her family without giving it most of her time and strength.

Mrs. DeVore, Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Wyman, Mrs. Quint and Mrs. Prouty agreed in the main with the other speakers, and the consensus of opinion was that Mr. Cleveland presented at least some sensible views of the club in general, while in the main he displayed his ignorance of the subject. The club will not meet again until the middle of September.

IOWAN SUES

Telegraph Company For the Expenses of Trip.

Des Moines, June 23.—Because the Western Union delivered a telegram addressed to "E. E. Bauyer" to E. G. Bowyer at Algona, the latter has filed a petition of appeal in the supreme court of suit for $500 damages, which he lost in the lower court. The message was from Balfour, N. D., and stated, "Your brother is sick. Come at once. (Signed) Pioneer Hotel." Bowyer claims that he thought his name had been misspelled and concluded the message was for him, as he had a brother-in-law in North Dakota at the time. He acordingly took the first train to Balfour, but on arriving there found the sick man, who had just died, to be an entire stranger to him.

Bowyer claims that he spent $47.50 in making this trip, besides having had to sleep in a depot chair one night. He sued for $500 damages, but the district court declared he had not taken proper precautions to verify the message, and was not entitled to any damages. Now the supreme court will have to solve the problem.

SCOTTISH TROUBLE

Free Church-United Church Squabble Continues to Grow.

Advisory Committee's Report Adds Fuel to the Flames.

Edinburgh, June 23.—The Free church-United Free church controversy continues to cause unlimited trouble in Scotland, and the settlement of this ecclesiastical difficulty appears no nearer a conclusion than when the trouble first broke out. The report of the law and advisory committee to the general assembly of the Free church of Scotland has only added fuel to the flames. It deals principally with the report of the royal commission. The report says:

"It humbly appears to us that the commissioners have not so much kept in view the purpose of the inquiry expressed in the preamble, 'to ascertain what is or may be the capacity of the Free church to carry out the trusts,' as that they have sought for grounds whereon, while formally respecting the judgment of the house of lords, they might place the United Free church in possession of property forfeited by the majority of the Free church who entered the union in 1900. The report in particular contests the right of the Free church to the New college. The ostensible basis for the suggestion that the Free church should be deprived of its most vitally important possession, no doubt is that the Free church aimed originally at supplying ordinances to the whole country.

"The commissioners are wrong in supposing that the church in 1843, or at any time, attained that end, and in thinking that the Free church has since 1900 changed its aim, although the attainment is necessarily, in the circumstances, now more remote. Moreover, it is not a condition of the trusts that the aim be continually realized. Would it be a fulfillment of the trust to convey the property to a voluntary body whose most distinctive principle is the abolition of a national church? The answer has already been given, in the judgment of the house of lords, and on that we stand. We admit 'the right of the crown to annex the church property no longer useful for the purposes of the trust, but deny that the event has yet happened in connection with the New college, and we claim as a constitutional right that we should be deprived of that property, of which we have undisputed legal possession, only by the finding of a competent tribunal made on due inquiry after, and not before, the church has had its opportunity to carry out the trust.

"For such a case the ordinary machinery of the law provides. We protest against, and shall in every legitimate way resist, deprivation by any other means. It humbly appears to us that the main recommendations of the report raise grave constitutional questions and suggest departure from well-settled principles of law and order which have been in times past the basis of the security of property and popular confidence in the law. Would it be wise to unsettle these in order to allay the political clamor of disappointed litigants?"

Even more interesting, if not so important, is the document issued in this connection by Attorneys Simpson and Warwick. In part the document says:

"The first act on the morning of the union was the locking of the minority ministers out of their own assembly hall, from which they were wholly excluded by the United Free church, even after the judgment of the house of lords expressly declared that this original Free church property belonged to the Free church alone, and until a process of interdict in the court of session was brought to compel recognition of the judgment.

"Again, the United Free church captured the whole congregational property, some 1,100 churches and manses, excepting thirty, without, in most cases, consulting the congregations concerned. While dissatisfied minorities existed and still exist in many cases, there were only about 100 instances in which stern opposition revealed itself in separate congregations standing out for the free church. These had to worship as and where they could find shelter. We might tell anew of many hard experiences, but refrain. Any reasonable use of the churches was denied to Free Church people. It is true that a committee of the United Free church issued to congregations a recommendation of the subject. Observe its terms: They were to offer 'the use of their church to the anti-unionists at such times as they (the Free church party) might not require it for themselves.' These terms, perfectly useless to the Free church, were offered by persons who had no title but possession to those who had every right but possession.

"The thirty Free church congregations above referred to retained their churches and their manses because their ministers were with them, and they were practically unanimous. Great credit has been taken because the ministers were left in undisturbed possession of their manses and the congregations of their churches. The whole truth is that actions of interdict were raised in five cases, which are typical of and were understood to rule all, until the United Free church had lost those so-called 'test cases.' The ministers and congregations were not disturbed because they avoided disturbance by appealing from court to court until they at last secured protection from the house of lords.

"The Free church has been found by the supreme court of law to be solely entitled to administer the trust property, and the United Free church to have no right, title or interest therein—to be legally incapable of administering. There are over 1,100 churches and manses, of the value of about £5,000,000, and there are various properties and funds worth probably about $2,000,000. The Free church, with about 200 existing congregations, seeks to restrain that number of churches and manses, with appropriate endowments and provision for a further limited right to expand or recuperate from its recent and existing hardships; or, in other words, the church seeks to restrain about one-third the whole property, while surrendering the balance to the government. Is the proposition unreasonable?

"The Free church declines to treat with the United Free church for a division of the property, because that church holds doctrines which are, and which the house of lords has declared to be, inconsistent with the trusts for the maintenance of which the Free church survives.

"The case against the Free church is that it is unable to administer all the trusts. The answer is that any judgment as to the capacity of the Free church based on existing conditions and before the church has had a chance to recuperate, must be unfair. The leaders of the church have, however, always expressed a willingness to waive their right to time in consideration of the evils of delay, providing a liberal margin was allowed when estimating capacity on the present basis, and occasion was not taken to assail the constitutional right of the church to retain such portions of the property as are essential for resuscitation and identified with the existence of the church. Of such property the New college, Edinburgh, is the outstanding example. Nor can it be shown that it will fail of its purposes in the hands of the Free church. Already there are thirty students enrolled for next winter session."

TRIBAL TAX COLLECTIBLE.

South McAlester, I. T., June 23.—The United States circuit court of appeals has just decided that the Choctaw tribal tax is collectible. Appeal has been taken to the United States supreme court. This leaves the Choctaw nation in identically the same position as the Creek nation, where resistance was made recently

DALY REMOVED FOR CRIBBING

Yale 'Varsity Oarsman Cannot Row In Annual Regatta.

New Haven, Conn., June 23.—Cornelius E. Daly, the Yale 'varsity oarsman who was charged with "cribbing," in an examination in psychology, was taken out of the boat today and Ostmayer of the 'varsity four, given his place.

The announcement of Daly's removal was made by Julian W. Curtiss, graduate coach, who said the action was taken in accordance with a resolution of the faculty. Continuing, Mr. Curtiss said:

"The examination under discussion was held last Saturday, at Gales Ferry. At that time I investigated the matter fully, and to put it mildly, there was an honest doubt in my mind in regard to the same. The course under Prof. Ladd, the psychology teacher, is a peculiar one, and the students are given latitude unheard of, under the course. The questions they are to be asked on examination are given them nearly a month before hand, and special privileges are conceded, including liberty to bring in papers. I am convinced that Daly thought he was acting well within his rights. Had I believed otherwise I most certainly would have taken him out of the boat instantly, as I would far rather lose the race than have any man in the boat who had done any cribbing in the examination room. I feel that this sort of cheating is one of the worst evils in college life today. I regret more than I can express that this should have happened. Mr. Daly has worked his way through college, and my admiration for this kind of a man is always unbounded."

NAME CHANGED.

Eastern Timber Company Now Publishers Paper Company.

New York, June 23.—Stockholders of the Eastern Timber company met here, today, and in conformity with a recent decision of the supreme court of Maine, changed the name of the corporation to that of the Publishers Paper company. An issue of $2,500,000 in bonds secured by a trust mortgage to the Trust Company of America, was approved. These directors were elected: Victor F. Lawson; Frank B. Noyes and Augustus S. Peabody, of Chicago; Robert Vancourtlandt, Oakleigh Thorne, H. Hollins, B. F. Yoakum, J. Burnett, H. B. Parsons and J. F. Ackerman of New York, and George B. James of Boston.

DETECTIVES WORK HARD

Trying to Find Party Responsible For Lake Shore Wreck.

Cleveland, June 23.—The belief that the misplaced switch, which was responsible for the Mentor wreck, was thrown purposely by some man, prompted by feelings of revenge, is gaining ground among the railroad officials, according to a statement made today by an official in authority. A man under suspicion is being shadowed, and a close watch is kept on his every movement. The secret service men of the Lake Shore expect to be able to show that he was in the neighborhood of the switch which was said to have been tampered with.

Other detectives are following up all the clues which they can find, working on the theory of the switch having been misplaced intentionally.

A bag containing jewels, valued at $32,000, the property of S. C. Beckwith of New York, supposed to have been stolen from the wrecked train at Mentor, was found today.

State Railroad Commissioner J. C. Morris, who, today, started an investigation of the wreck is quoted as saying that the switch was undoubtedly open, and that some one set it that way just a short time before the flyer struck it. He also stated that the engine did not leave the rails until it had traveled fifty feet on the siding.

WISCONSIN CREWS OUT FOR PRACTICE.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 23.—The Wisconsin eight and four oar rowing crews and the Georgetown crew were on the river today for their first practice. These representatives of the university oarsmen who are to take in the coming races having arrived last night. The Wisconsin men were coached by Andrew O'Dea, from the Cornell launch, which was placed at his disposal by Coach Courtenay, as Wisconsin has no boat for this purpose. The Georgetown crew came out shortly before noon.

WILL NOT ABDICATE.

No Truth In Rumor Concerning King Oscar.

Stockholm, June 23.—There is no foundation for the rumors circulating at Copenhagen and elsewhere of the probability of King Oscar abdicating in favor of the Crown Prince in consequence of the dissatisfaction of some factions with the government's pacific attitude. No developments of importance are expected before June 27, when the debate will take place in the riksdag and the special joint committees of the chamber will be appointed to report on the government proposal for a settlement of the questions growing out of the disruption of the union.

ALFONSO APPROVES HIS NEW CABINET.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF ST. LOUIS, ss.—
In Probate Court.
In the Matter of the Estates of George W. Perry and Delia Horton Perry, deceased.

The petition of Samuel Nesbitt having been duly made and filed in this court, representing among other things that George W. Perry, who resided last prior to his death at Madison, state of Wisconsin, died at Madison, in said state, on the 17th day of February, 1883, and that Delia Horton Perry, who resided last prior to her death at Superior, in the state of Wisconsin, died at Superior in said state in the year 1893, and that each of said persons was seized of an estate of inheritance in certain lands in the county of St. Louis, State of Minnesota, described in said petition, and that five years have elapsed since the death of each of said deceased persons, and that no will has been probated, and administration has not been granted or had of said estates in this state, and praying that the descent of said lands and of the interest of said petitioner therein be by this court determined and said lands assigned to such persons as may be entitled thereto by law.

Now, therefore, it is ordered that the said petition be heard at a term of this court to be held at the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said County of St. Louis, State of Minnesota, on the 10th day of July, 1905, at ten o'clock a. m.

It is further ordered, that notice of said hearing of said petition be given by the publication of this order once in each week for three successive weeks in the Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published in said St. Louis County, Minnesota.

Dated, Duluth, Minn., June 15th, 1905.

BEFORE THE FOURTH.

This year's Fourth in Duluth will be conducted under the auspices of the new ordinance designed to eliminate some of the more objectionable explosive features, and the experiment will be watched with interest. In order to give the city control of the matter an ordinance was passed requiring all dealers in fireworks in Duluth to take out a license, and under this license the dynamite canes and certain of the more violent explosives are prohibited.

This is a good regulation, and it is hoped that the ordinance will do all that it purports to do. Of course a quiet, "sane" Fourth is hardly to be hoped for. Really, perhaps a completely quiet Fourth would not be desirable. If the youth of the country must expend its patriotism and enthusiasm in noise, and cannot be patriotic in any other way, it is perhaps enough to limit the size of the noise and reduce the danger from the noise-implements. Those who wish absolute quiet may go out into the country for the day, where they will find it—perhaps.

But one great objection to the celebration of the Fourth is that it lasts so long. It is not unreasonable to ask that noisy celebrations of the Fourth be confined to July 4, and to require that there be no celebrations of the 29th of June and every day up to and including July 4. Every year the purchase and explosion of fireworks begins a couple of weeks ahead of the Fourth. Even now nervous people are bracing themselves to stand the shock of the first explosions, and when they come pretty nearly a constant fusillade will be kept up until long after midnight of July 4.

It is no infringement upon a proper exhibition of patriotism to ask that its demonstrations be put off until the proper time comes. Without any ordinance further than those now on the books, the police will have ample power to stop premature celebrations. Nobody can take exceptions to such a move, either, because there is no more reason why firecrackers should be exploded in the latter part of June than there is why they should be set off in November. Let them celebrate the Fourth with a proper and reasonable amount of noise, but shut it off until the Fourth comes.

This is surely a reasonable suggestion, and one that can easily be followed. It will confine the horrors of the racket and the dangers of fire and damage to life and limb to one day, and even if it is impossible to keep them within reasonable limits on that day, it should be possible to stop them before the day comes.

If we cannot have a sane Fourth of July, by all means let the police insure a sane 1st of July, 29th of June, etc.

WHAT ONE MAN DID.

The Hinckley Enterprise is pursuing a policy that will do more good for its county and for Minnesota than any number of general statements about the productiveness of Minnesota's soil and the advantages she offers to settlers. The Enterprise is publishing a weekly series of articles showing what farmers in its neighborhood have accomplished. Here is the example in the current issue of the paper:

Five years ago Charles Lewellin came to Pine county and bought eighty acres of land about three miles east of Brookpark. He had no stock and in fact was possessed of little capital except a clear head and a pair of strong arms, together with the necessary qualities of industry and frugality. Two years ago he bought 120 acres more of land. In his clearing and other farm work he has employed little help, and what he has done is the result of his own labor. About fifty acres of his 200 are now cleared and are covered with promising crops. He has an orchard of fifty fruit trees which are beginning to bear. The home eighty is all fenced in. He has ten cows, with pigs, chickens and farm machinery, including a cream separator. He has a good house, a hay barn with a shingle roof, a chicken house and other out-buildings. The lumber for all of these buildings he has cut from his own land, and besides he has piled in his yard lumber enough to build a large addition to one end of his barn for a machine shed and a larger one at the other end for the accommodation of his stock. These additions he will build this summer.

"Can any other county or Canada show better results for five years' work?" asks the Enterprise.

This is the kind of advertising that pays. It will do Hinckley and Pine county and Minnesota great good. There is not a community in Northern Minnesota that could not furnish a host of similar instances, and the feature is one that the country press would do well to imitate.

The Enterprise is showing that it is truly enterprising in publishing this series. There is no excuse for permitting Americans to go to Canada or Minnesota people to go to other states. Opportunity is as ripe in Minnesota as it is in any other portion of the world, and such examples as this will go a long way toward convincing the public of the fact and turning the tide of settlement to Northern Minnesota.

PRIDE OF PROFESSION.

"Pride of profession" is a term that means a good deal. It is what makes the labor of man worth while, what gives incentive to endeavor and what lifts men above the rut and leads them on to higher things.

Andrew Carnegie has given expression to the term in his book on "The Life of James Watt," in which he illustrates how far it is carried by a story of the street sweepers of Pittsburg. During their nooning a group of street sweepers were expressing their opinions of one of their number, named McCarthy, who had lately died. One of the men went so far as to say that he was "the best man that ever scraped a hoe on Liberty street." To this another replied: "Mac was a good enough man on plain work, but around the gas posts he wasn't worth a cent."

This was pride in their profession. Their work was lowly, though important, and though it seems beneath the notice of most people, there were levels in it as in any other work. The man that was "good around the gas posts," who cleaned as closely where it was difficult to clean as he did where it was easy, was at the summit of his occupation. The man that slurred over his work, and left dirt standing where it was hard to reach, represented a class in every occupation on earth, from highest to lowest.

In any trade, profession or following it is the man that is "good around the gas posts" that wins. He takes pride in his profession, and seeks to do his work well and thoroughly. He will be noticed by his employers, and given opportunities to do higher work well when he has shown an ability to do well that which has been committed to his care. Many a man who is slovenly in his work because he does not think it important is turning opportunity away from his door every day. No work is unimportant. In any line of endeavor the best results are attained when each worker, from top to bottom of the scale, does his best work. It is from those in the lower ranks that do their best that those who labor on the higher levels are called.

Take pride in your profession, whatever it may be. Do your work well, no matter how lowly it may seem. In every line of work there is plenty of room at the top, and it is those who are thorough and workmanlike that are drawn from level to level until they reach the top.

AMERICAN PRIDE.

A Porto Rican, according to a newspaper report, rendered a personal service to a stranger, and when a gratuity was offered him he refused it and replied proudly:

"I am an American."

In discussing this incident the Philadelphia Telegraph points out that it is safe in England, according to tourist traditions, to offer a shilling on the slightest provocation to anyone not in the ranks of the nobility. "In America," says the Telegraph, "it is the servant only who accepts a tip. The Porto Rican was right in his estimate of the American character, and it is gratifying as well as encouraging to find our island protege developing such a sturdy sense of what it means to be a free, independent citizen."

All very fine. Of course it is gratifying and encouraging and everything else. Anybody with a full appreciation of how fine it is will hope that that Porto Rican will stay in his own country, and never come over to little old New York and have his fine ideals shattered.

There was a time when all he thinks of us was true, when an American would be insulted at the offer of a tip, whether he was servant or not; when the offer of payment in return for brief hospitality was repulsed with indignation. Is it so now? Has not the curse of the tip penetrated the social fabric so that it is pretty nearly as bad here as it is anywhere? The American servant who once would proudly refuse a tip will accept it now, without too much gratitude, and make it mighty unpleasant for the man that does not give it.

Of course the mass of the American people will still refuse a tip. We have no nobility except a self-constituted one so thoroughly based on money that its members are more likely to accept a tip than most any other set of people. But it would hardly be safe to offer a tip to a merchant or tradesman, for instance.

There is no denying the fact that thousands that would have spurned tips as insults not long ago now accept them and even demand them. It is to be feared that this Porto Rican would be grievously disappointed if he made a visit to one of the large cities.

Hotel Gossip.

"In the great Chicago strike the sympathy of the people in general rests entirely on the side of the employers," said D. F. Garrison of Chicago at the St. Louis. "The public feels that the teamsters are unreasonable, and only disgust is expressed at their methods in trying to win a victory. The employers are thought to be right in taking the stand they have, and it is believed, as indicated in newspaper reports, that the big fight is dying out, and that the strikers have lost at every point.

"As a matter of fact, the Chicago people are getting heartily sick of unions. When I say the people I do not mean members of the unions themselves, of course, who are very numerous, but doubtless many of the more intelligent of this class would be glad enough if the labor organizations would agree to work along different lines than they have been working during the past few years. The great mass of working men has been too much in the control of a few leaders, men like Shea, and the present trouble is bringing the little fellows to a full realization of just how badly they have been duped by those higher up in labor circles. With most of the leaders it appears to have been a clear case of graft all the way through. I guess there have been more strikes in Chicago than in any other town in the country, and probably the majority of them if traced back would be found to have been caused by the unreasonable hogglishness of the two or three men in the lead. Organized labor is all right in its way, but when it places too much confidence in its captains, and blindly obeys all the orders given by the captains, unions are bound to become unpopular, and their methods are pretty apt to disgust all decent people."

"In spite of what the professional weather makers in the employ of the government say to the contrary, it stands to reason that there is some knowledge to be gained of future weather conditions by a close and proper observance of the habits and conditions of animals and birds and the appearance of plants," said George Bagley of St. Paul at the Spalding, while contrasting the weather at the Head of the Lakes with that to be found in the Twin Cities.

"I do not say that we should place faith in all these long-range forecasts which lay claim to having as a foundation the appearance of animals and plants at certain seasons of the year, for a lot of them are made by amateurs, so to speak, and are made in a sort of second-handed fashion, perhaps by some space writer who has run short of material in his work for the newspapers. But I don't see why atmospheric conditions should not to a certain degree influence animal organizations, particularly wild animals and birds. For example, why should not animals such as the ground hog or woodchuck, and the bear, that make winter a season of hibernation, by the character of their preparations and the time of their retirement, indicate to a certain degree what sort of a winter we may expect? These creatures, with musk rats, play an important part, as the cold season approaches each year, in the unprofessional weather forecasts. As far as I am personally concerned, I know a good deal more about the city than I do about the country, and I couldn't tell what sort of a winter to expect by observing the animals, unless a bear should stand on his hind legs and tell me in plain English just what to expect, but if, like a lot of these old woodsmen, I had made my home in the forests for the greater part of my life, I believe I should be able to make weather predictions with a certainty of striking it very nearly right in a general way, with as much accuracy, at least, as some of the professionals in making short-range forecasts."

The Long-Winded Orator.

Boston Post: Capt. E. A. Horton of the senate made quite a hit the other night with a hit at one of the long-winded members of the legislature.

The member was delivering a political address in a town not far from Boston, and the village folk gathered in the town hall to hear it.

"He had been speaking quite a while," said Dr. Horton, "when finally an old Scotchman arose and walked out of the hall.

"At the door one of his countrymen was waiting with his hack to drive the orator to the station.

"'Is he done yet, Sandy?' asked the Scot on the box.

"The old man turned about.

"'Aye,' said he, 'he's done lang ago, but he will na stop.'"

Thinks It's a Mistake.

Fargo Call: What's the matter? Stop the deal; let's look at the cards. Twenty-four hours have passed and no one has discovered rust in the wheat. Someone isn't earning his salary.

The First Minnesota.

Grand Forks Herald: The death of Col. Colville recalls the famous stand of the First Minnesota on the bloody field of Gettysburg. Orators and poets do well to celebrate the gallant deeds of the brave days of old, but history contains the record of no nobler deed of arms than the one performed by the men of the North Star state who walked into the very jaws of death and stood there, steadfast, while the Southern charge spent itself against them.

Buy At Home.

Calumet News: To buy at home, to patronize home enterprise, constitutes an aid to the upbuilding of local prosperity that every citizen can expend if he will. To put money in your neighbor's pocket is in a measure to keep it in your own. Keep the money in circulation in the community and benefits both direct and indirect will ensue.

The Weather.

No, it was not quite so joyous this morning, but it was still a long way from unbearable. In fact it was decidedly superior to the brands of weather that are being furnished in some of the eastern and southern sections, where everybody is gasping for breath and seeking with almost entire disregard of the duties of the day's routine for some place where it is cool enough to live. The wind this morning was from the northeast, and it blew freshly. Therefore it was cool, cool enough to send the pedestrian on a little more rapidity than he would move on a hot day, and cool enough to make the air bracing instead of enervating. One can always find a way to get warm, even if he cannot manage to cool off in hot weather.

It was clear early this morning, but as the day wore on clouds, not very threatening but still heavy enough to contain possibilities of the showers the weather man talked about yesterday, drew over the sky, coming from the northwest, apparently, though the wind was from the northeast.

When conditions were least promising, along came the weather man with cheerful predictions. It will be warmer tonight and probably Saturday too, he says, though there will be showers tonight and Saturday. But the best part of his prediction is that the winds will shift to westerly tomorrow.

The barometer is low over North Dakota, Utah and off the North Atlantic coast and high over the upper lake region and Alberta. It is cooler over the Lower Mississippi valley, far Northwest and near Lake Erie, and warmer over New England, Kansas, Nebraska and South Dakota. Light to heavy showers fell over the Central valleys, North Atlantic and Gulf states and the Northwest. In the lake region the winds are fresh and mostly easterly.

United States Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, June 23.—Forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Saturday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity—Showers tonight and Saturday; warmer tonight and probably Saturday; fresh and brisk easterly winds, shifting to westerly Saturday.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, June 23.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Saturday: Wisconsin—Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday, with probably showers in west and central portions; slowly rising temperature.

Minnesota—Showers tonight and Saturday; warmer in east portion tonight.

The Dakotas—Probably showers tonight and Saturday; cooler in east portion tonight.

Upper Lakes—Light to fresh easterly winds tonight and Saturday; fair tonight; Saturday partly cloudy, with probably showers on Western Superior.

The Dear Old Days.

Gimme back the dear old days—all the boys in line—
"Boy stood on the burnin' deck" an' "Bingen on the Rhine!"
"'Twas midnight in his guarded tent"—we spoke it high and low,
While Mary trotted out that lamb "whose fleece was white as snow!"

Gimme back the dear old days that Mem'ry loves to keep,
With "Pilot, 'tis a fearful night—there's danger on the deep!"
The old-time, awkward gestures—the jerk, meant fer a bow—
We said that "Curfew should not ring," but, Lord! it's ringin' now!

Gimme me back the dear old days—the pathway through the dells
To the schoolhouse in the blossoms; the sound of far-off bells
Tinklin' crost the meadows; the song of the bird an' brook;
The old-time dictionary, an' the blue-back spellin' book!

Gone, like a dream, forever!—A city's hid the place
Where stood the old log schoolhouse; an' no familiar face
Is smilin' there in welcome beneath a mornin' sky
There's a bridge across the river; an' we've crossed, an' said "Good-by!"
—F. L. STANTON in Atlanta Constitution.

Are We Proud Of It.

Boston Post: The latest engagement between the United States troops and the irreconcilables in Samar was in the nature of a surprise of the enemy. So complete was it that the chief of the insurgents and forty of his men were killed. On our side, two men were wounded, who we are glad to learn are now "doing well."

When the fighting is just, may the victory always be as sweeping! But is not the result of this night surprise of the insurgent Filipino camp too much like a massacre? Six prisoners were taken; forty-one, or practically the entire force, were killed.

It is a long and bloody record that has been made in the Philippines since the late President McKinley's proclamation of benevolent assimilation or extermination. If these little brown men cannot fight effectively against the superior arms of the United States troops, they can at least die, and this they are doing.

It is worth all that it costs in human life, this attempt to force an unwilling people of the Orient to accept the civilization and the rule of the Occident?

At the congregational meeting of the First Presbyterian church, held on Thursday night, J. D. Ray was elected a trustee; S. C. McCormick and R. McGregor to the office of deacons; J. C. Hunter and John Inglis to the office of ruling elder. It was voted to hereafter rent the pews, and a committee was appointed consisting of J. D. Ray, George Spencer and J. H. Upham to appraise the pews, preparatory to the sale.

Hon. W. W. Billson got as far away from home as Chicago this week, being registered at the Grand Pacific on Wednesday.

Mrs. J. B. Ringland, mother of Rev. A. W. Ringland, will arrive in Duluth next Wednesday morning to spend some weeks with her son.

President Rhinelander, with a number of directors of the Milwaukee, Lake Shore & Western railroad, were in Duluth this week and took in the situation of the town. The impression is that they were looking around to see what business connections they could make with the great grain market of the Northwest. The directors of this road are almost all New York men, and it is reported that the Astor family are heavily interested in the new line. If so, Duluth will have another outlet to the East before long, for no road coming from the East to Ashland will be content to rest long without a connection with Duluth. Among the party accompanying President Rhinelander were G. W. Peck, the funny man of Peck's Sun, and Lieutenant Governor Fifield of Wisconsin, better known as Sam Fifield of the Asland Press.

Miss Starkey and Miss Gray will leave by boat next Tuesday for their homes in the East, the former to remain, the latter to return at the close of the summer vacation.

Thomas Hicks, the Opera market butcher, is recovering from a three weeks' fever. He is fortunate in being a member of the Royal Adelphia, and receives $15 a week for the three weeks.

A Prayer.

The day returns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to play the man, help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces; let cheerfulness abound with industry.

Give us to go blithely on our business all this day, bring us to our resting beds weary and content and undishonored, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep. Amen.
—ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

When Depew Hurried.

Pittsburg Dispatch: Senator Chauncey M. Depew of New York tells this one at his own expense. He was stumping the state of New York in the campaign of 1900 having big audiences and kindly receptions at all points. In one town the Republican managers had arranged to have a cannon near the stand of the speaker and to have it fired off every time the people gave vent to applause. Senator Depew kept the people hurrahing almost all of the time. At last, stopping to take breath, he distinctly heard the inquiry come across the field:

"'Cap, when is the old galoot going to quit? I've only got four cartridges left."

Depew said he finished his speech in four minutes.

A Song of Summer Rain.

When the big, roun' summer raindrops are a-comin' dancin' down,
The wagons rattle lively on the dusty road to town;
You hear the drivers singin' o'er the valley an' the plain,
An' the cattle-bells are ringin' of a welcome to the rain!

Dancin' on the hilltops,
Patterin' on the plain,
What a breezy blessin'
In the fall o' summer rain!

How the corn blades rustle!—all the famished crops
Listen for its coming—drink the beady drops!
An' the roses in the garden—they all take heart again,
An' the wild-flowers all seem thankful, with a silver rim o' rain!

Dancin' o'er the meadows,
Patterin' on the plain,
What a breezy blessin'
In the fall o' summer rain!
—FRANK L. STANTON in Atlanta Constitution.

An Ungrammatical Protest.

"The grammar used in American newspapers is something appalling."—Extract from address delivered by Henry James to the girls of Bryn Mawr college.

Now, Henry James, it ain't no use
To go and knock we men which write
For papers, for when we cut loose
We ain't got time to be polite.
When scooping everything in sight
Us writers for the daily press
Must keep things humming day and night—
Grammar don't buy no meals, I guess.

If you was honest, Henry James,
And wanted for to treat us square,
You wouldn't tell no college dames
No things like that—it ain't no fair
To make such speeches as that there
In which you knocked us more or less;
If you was me you'd soon declare:
"Grammar don't buy no meals, I guess."

Don't use no hammer after this—
It made the book reviewer cry,
And when you slur so sweet a miss
It's pretty hard for she and I.
Remember, Hank, how time does fly
When scribbling for the daily press,
And pass our little blunders by—
Grammar don't buy no meals, I guess.
—W. F. KIRK in New York American.

The Stage Kind.

Philadelphia Press: "Them three men?" Farmer Border replied to a question. "Them's our farm hands."

"But," asked the city girl, "where's the other one?"

"W'at other one?"

"Why, there's always a quartet of them to sing the 'Old Oaken Bucket,' isn't there?"

Some Good Advice.

Maryland Baptist: Drink less, breathe more.
Talk less, think more.
Ride less, walk more.
Clothe less, bathe more.
Worry less, work more.
Waste less, give more.
Preach less, practise more.

Be a Philosopher.

When everything goes crooked,
And seems inclined to rile,
Don't kick nor fuss nor fidget;
Just—you—smile!

It's hard to learn the lesson,
But learn it if you'd win;
When people tease and pester,
Just—you—grin!

When some one tries to "do" you
By taking more than half,
Be patient, firm and pleasant;
Just—you—laugh!

But if you find your stuffy
(Somotimes, of course, you will!)
And carmot smile nor grin nor laugh,
Just—keep—still!

Union Station Sparrows.

Houghton Mining Gazette: School children in Duluth are being organized into societies for the prevention of cruelty to birds, all kinds, even sparrows. We haven't heard about a branch being started among the employes of the union passenger depot of that town.

Cannot Be Abnormal.

Springfield Republican: In crediting Governor Pennypacker of Pennsylvania with "abnormal common sense," one of his admirers overdoes the art of compliment. There could not possibly be anything abnormal about common sense. Common sense is the quintessence of normality, and when it ceases to be normal it ceases to be common sense.

IT'S THE TRUTH TO TELL

And the history of the past has shown that the old reliable Big Duluth has never been much of a believer in making every little happening the pretext for a so-called sale. We have been content to have our customers and friends, day in and day out, ever and always, get the best possible values in everything we sell—not sticking up a big price one day, only to mark it down another. But—

When the Necessity Arises and Conditions Confront Us

the Big Duluth is quicker than the quickest, livelier than the liveliest to meet events as they come and give the people the benefit. You know the story. Briefly told it is that on the night of June 13th our boys' department was flooded with water—no dirt, no fire, no smoke—just water. At once we put on the selling all our new and late 1905 Boys' and Children's Suits, in Buster Browns, Sailors, Norfolks, Two-piece, Three-piece and Young Men's styles, Boys' Overcoats, Knee Pants, Shirt Waists, Shirts, Neckwear, Hats and Caps, at such sacrifices as were meant to and have been moving them. The Suits were not damaged in value, style, worth or wear a single farthing. Indeed, some of them were never even touched by the water, but all are in the sale, deep cut in prices.

The Sale Is Still On for Tomorrow!

Parents, mothers, boys—occasions come but seldom when you can get such bargains as are to be had now.

To make the sale DOUBLY INTERESTING and set things going at a merry pace all over the store we include Men's Suits, Men's Overcoats and Men's Cravenettes—and the prices made on these are well worth your while to take advantage of. Remember that the BIG DULUTH GREAT WATER SALE IS ON FOR TOMORROW AND ALL OF NEXT WEEK.

SHOT TWO GIRLS

Who Rejected Him, and One Was Instantly Killed.

Followed Posse That Hunted Him For Six Days.

Plattsmouth, Neb., June 23.—That it is possible for a man to elude a posse six days and yet never go beyond a radius of three miles was demonstrated in the case of Max Ploehn, captured Thursday for the murder of Alma Goos and the wounding of her sister Emma.

He not only did this, but also actually followed the posse part of the time, keeping out of sight, however. At the very moment the posse took the trail from the Goos home Ploehn was in the bushes near the men watching them. It was only when a farmer accidentally saw him in his barn and notified the sheriff, who was near, that he was captured. He declared then that he was tired of running and preferred to trust himself to the mercies of the law.

Jealousy was the indirect cause of the crime.

Ploehn left the Goos farm at 8:30 Saturday morning in a buggy on his daily trip to town to deliver milk. He was in good spirits. However, as he did not return at the usual hour, the two girls walked into town in the afternoon. There they met him. He had been drinking. He told the girls that he was not ready to go home, but that they should take the buggy and he would follow later. This they did, arriving at the farm about 6 p. m.

Ploehn did not reach home until about 7:30, having ridden out from town with a neighbor. He entered the house and, although supper was ready, went upstairs at once. The rest of the family had supper while he was in his room. In about an hour he descended the stairs, walked out on the porch and stood for some time with his back to the girls, who were in the kitchen washing the dishes.

Suddenly he turned, walked to the door and said:

"Ain't we going to have any supper tonight?"

Emma told him that supper was over, to which he replied in a surly voice:

"Well, I had supper, but I want some again."

He then went in, seated himself at the table and repeated his demand for supper. By this time his voice was raised in anger, his eyes glinted with an evil look and his hands worked convulsively. The girls were becoming alarmed and Alma said to her sister: "Don't do anything; you don't know what he might do."

The man sat at the table for some time looking fixedly at the girls in the kitchen, who were trying to go quietly on with their work. Suddenly he pushed back his chair, arose from the table, walked into the kitchen, and, going close to the now terified girls, said in a strange, unfamiliar voice that trembled with nervousness:

"I want some supper, and I want it right away."

"All right, Max, I'll get it for you if you really want it," replied Emma, and started at once for the pantry.

Scarcely had she turned when a shot was fired. She felt a pain in her arm and ran screaming from the house. Alma immediately followed her sister, and on her the frenzied man fired repeatedly. She fell just as she reached the porch, her head striking on the bricks of the sidewalk. Ploehn at once leaped over the body and climbed a fence in the rear of the house. There he stood gazing stupidly at the girl's body, when Mrs. Goos, who had hurried in from the barn at the first noise of firing, arrived on the scene.

"O, Max, what are you doing to the girls?" she cried as she took the form of her daughter in her arms. The murderer was fumbling with his revolver, and the old lady, seeing this and fearing that he would continue his deadly work, released the body of the girl and ran sobbing after Emma. At the same time Ploehn turned and disappeared in the direction of the river.

Meanwhile Emma had reached the home of a neighbor, to whom she told the awful news. A telephone message was sent to town, and in a short time Sheriff McBride arrived. A posse was quickly organized.

Ploehn had repeatedly asked and urged each of the girls to keep company with him. But, as he is their full cousin, they did not consider it would be right. This seemed to anger him. He knew that Alma was engaged to be married, and had frequently boasted that she would never wed.

LOANING TO ARMY OFFICERS

At Five Per Cent a Month Is Profitable Business.

San Francisco, June 23.—A scheme is on foot to reorganize the American Bank of Manila for the purpose of getting hold of promissory notes issued by the army and navy officers to the amount of $100,000, with interest at 10 per cent a month.

Certain officers in the army and the navy have long been easy prey for loan sharks and usurers. When, about two months ago, it was discovered that the American Bank of Manila was conducting a business in violation of its charter, Governor Wright of the Philippines closed it up summarily, and $100,000 worth of "I O U's" bearing the signatures of Uncle Sam's military representatives were found among the bank's assets.

And these evidences of debt called for monthly interest of 10 per cent.

In the city of San Francisco the United Loan and Trust company has been doing a thriving business with the army and navy men. Harry Lichtenstein and his brother and Sam Bresslauer are its leading spirits. They say that they had to pay dearly for their experience.

"It cost us thousands of dollars," said Bresslauer, "to become acquainted with the methods of our customers. We make many loans to army and navy people. The interest all depends on the security."

The Lichtensteins will soon send to Manila a representative "to look the field over." Incidentally they will vise the assets of the defunct Manila bank, and if their plans do not miscarry, they may become the possessors of those army and navy notes. Again, they are likely to be behind the proposed new "banking" organization that will succeed the American bank in the Philippines.

The Lichtensteins make a business of loaning money to army officers, taking unsecured notes at an interest of 5 per cent a month. It is stated that the firm has about $50,000 of this army and navy paper constantly on hand, and that since the Spanish-American war broke out it made about $500,000 in this way.

There is an army regulation that if an officer does not pay his bills, if he is found a chronic borrower, the loss of his army commission is the result. This is the hold that the usurers have when the time for collection of interest comes.

ARMY TRUMPETER

Broke the World's Record at Pie Eating.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 23.—Trumpeter Gordon, Troop E, at Fort Des Moines, broke the world's pie-eating record so far as known by eating a life-sized, well-filled apple pie in just 55 seconds. He was declared the winner of the contest. The trumpeter felt no ill effects from the gorging of pie, but on the contrary declared he could eat another.

The record was made at the athletic entertainment given in the gymnasium at Fort Des Moines under direction of Chaplain Waring.

DIGGING IN CAVES

To Find the Remains of First Men.

Washington, June 23.—Ethnologists are almost continually making excavations in caves in various parts of the United States in the hope of discovering evidences of a race of men that is supposed to have inhabited North America in prehistoric times. One of the most recent investigations has been completed by Dr. Charles Peabody of Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. A large cave at Cavetown, Md., was the scene of the exploration, and Dr. Peabody, together with Warren K. Moorehead and ten men, was digging for more than a month.

No fossil bones were found in the cave, but in a quarry 300 feet from the mouth of the cave fossil bones of animals were unearthed. Some were of the early cave bear and the elk.

The cave is about 100 feet wide by 100 feet long. The upper stratum of the floor consists largely of camp ashes, etc., and excavations by Mr. McGuire revealed large quantities of broken pottery, arrow heads, bone and stone tools, which had been left by the early Indians, who evidently had made the cave their habitation.

Underlying the stratum of camp ashes there is a layer of stalagmite, varying from six inches to several feet in thickness, and underneath this is found the red cave earth similar to the formation found in the caves of Europe in which fossil bones of animals and of ancient man have been found.

It is expected that remains of ancient man are found they will be likely to be found in caves, and for that reason the caves of the country are usually the scenes of the excavations.

SLANDER SUIT IN INDIANA

For $10,000 Grows Out of Shafer Murder Case.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 23.—Not since the crime itself has there been such a stir in connection with the Shafer murder case as the slander suit, growing out of the murder trial, brought by Simpson B. Lowe against Col. A. C. Voris, president of the Citizens' National bank, and one of the wealthiest men of Bedford, asking $10,000 damages.

Mr. Lowe was chairman of the committee appointed by the city council to investigate the murder of Miss Sarah Shafer, the young Bedford school teacher, and he took a prominent part in the inquiry which was exhaustive and far reaching. He also assisted in the prosecution of James McDonald, the first man acquitted of the crime.

After bringing the suit, Mr. Lowe declined to make any further statement than to say that its purpose was simply vindication. The alleged slanderous language was used, it is alleged, recently in a conversation between Col. Voris and George Dodd, relative to the election of a member of the school board by the city council. Mr. Dodd is a member of the council and Mr. Lowe, who had been a member of the board for three years, was in the race for re-election, being Mr. Dodd's choice for the place. For reasons not given, however, Mr. Lowe withdrew from the race a week ago.

Coming at this time, the suit has revived the interest in the murder case, and it is predicted by some that the trial may bring out some startling testimony never heretofore touched upon, which may throw new light on the murder mystery.

Mr. Lowe avers the statements upon which he bases his slander action put him in an absolutely false light with respect to the tragedy in that they attributed to him secret knowledge of certain details.

JACK LONDON TO MARRY.

Buys Estate In California to Get Ready.

Sonoma, Cal., June 23.—There have been persistent rumors of late that Jack London, the well known writer who is spending the summer at Glen Ellen, will soon be married to Miss Charmion Kittredge. The rumors have been strengthened by London's purchase recently of the Greenlaw place, a mountain ranch of 122 acres above Glen Ellen and by his declaration that he would build a splendid home on the place.

Miss Kittredge took great interest in the transaction. She is a young woman of prepossessing appearance and comes from a literary family, her uncle being a former publisher of the "Overland Monthly." Miss Kittredge resides with her aunt, Mrs. Eames, above Glen Ellen, and, in company with Jack London, she then rides horseback over the county roads.

London has a bungalow near Glen Ellen where he does much of his writing. At present he is at work on a serial story for Harpers. The new property he has acquired was held at a high figure, but London took it at the price asked. He gave the owner, Robert P. Hill, to understand that he wanted the place for a fine house.

ONLY FOLK SONGS

Will Be Sung By Calve Next Fall.

Paris, June 23.—Calve will break new ground in her American tour next fall, taking with her nothing but nursery songs and folk chants. She has made up a repertoire from twelve countries, and will sing every piece in its own tongue. It is a point of pride with her not to betray the slightest foreign accent. She is now spending studious days mastering the phonetic difficulties of Russian, Chinese and Gaelic.

She will wear the national costume of every country from which she borrows and will in every case sing to the national instrument—the cornemuse of Britany, the pipes of Ireland, the mandolin of Italy. She will travel the whole American continent in Melba's special saloon car and hopes to get as far north as the Klondike and return to France richer by half a million.

The national temperament in music has long attracted her; quite recently she has been treating Paris at receptions to specimens of the characteristic music of various countries.

WILL WORK HIS WAY

To Europe On Cattleship, His Father Consenting.

Baltimore, Md., June 23.—Eugene H. Timanus, the oldest son of Mayor Timanus, will work his way to Europe this summer as a "cow puncher" on a cattle ship, and will defray the expenses of his stay by laboring at anything that comes his way while there.

He is 18 years old and a sturdily-built youth, who could probably hold his own among the toughest of the cow punchers, if it came to a test of muscle and brawn. He is going to make the trip with the approval and consent of his father, who thinks that the vigorous toil and hradship will develop the virile qualities of the young man and give him a vivid picture of what real hard manual toil is.

Mayor Timanus knows well what a trip on the cattle ship means. He has been told of the way the cattlemen live, the sort of food they get to eat and the kind of beds they lie in at night—if their work is done and they are allowed time to sleep. Some of the men with whom young Timanus will come in contact are rough specimens indeed, but on nearly every voyage there are a few ambitious youths of good parentage who are seeking the "experience." It is principally to give his son an opportunity to meet and know all classes of men that the mayor has consented to the trip.

CAPIAS ORDERED

For Cleveland Man Who Had Killed Himself.

Cleveland, June 23.—George Kansarski had been arrested on a charge of assault. He had hurled a lamp at his wife, and their little home at 321 Hope street was wrecked. Officers were called and Kansarski was placed in a cell at the Swiss street police station.

Fearing a heavy sentence, he took his life before the night was over, and his dead body was taken to his home for preparation for burial. The charge was canceled at the Swiss street station, and as far as the officers there were concerned, the case was finished.

The court officers, not knowing of his death, placed the man's name upon the docket. It happened that all the other cases were tried before his name was called, and when the court officer called out: "Is George Kansarski in court?" the courtroom was nearly empty.

"Is George Kansarski in court?" repeated the court officer, failing to get a reply.

There was a brief silence. Then, taking his pen in hand, the judge said: "Capias issued."

Hardly had the words fallen from his lips when a patrolman from the Swiss street station entered the courtroom and approached the judge.

"Your honor, Kansarski committed suicide early this morning," said the patrolman.

"A higher court will pass judgment," said the judge.

HUGE TASK.

It was a huge task to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease, as that of C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Ia., but Electric Bitters did it. He writes: "My kidneys were so far gone, I could not sit on a chair without a cushion; and suffered from dreadful backache, headache and depression. In Electric Bitters, however, I found a cure, and by them was restored to perfect health. I recommend this great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver or stomach." WANTED TO BE KEPT IN JAIL

Old Vagrant, When Term Expired, Begged to Remain.

Denver, Col., June 23.—Frank M. Schaefer, an old man who has just finished serving a sentence of sixty days in the county jail for vagrancy, is begging the warden to allow him to remain a prisoner. Not that he likes being subjected to the disgrace accompanying imprisonment, but for the real want of food and shelter the man is making the plea. He has no home, no friends, no support, only a son who makes a big salary as a machinist in the Denver & Rio Grande shops, but who will not care for his father, the latter says. Schaefer begged the warden with tears in his eyes to let him do errands around the jail or anything that he could to earn a living, and even wanted the judge who sentenced him to double the sentence, but the law will not allow a prisoner to be held after the sentence expires.

The old man claims that he was turned out of his son's home near the Denver & Rio Grande shops about three months ago. He attempted to earn enough to live on, but was physically unable to do so.

This morning when he left the jail he said that he was tempted to go back on Sixteenth street and stand in one place until arrested again and placed behind the bars for vagrancy. He believes that this is the only way he can keep from starving. The son's excuse, it is said, is that when he was a small boy his father required him to make his own living and now that he is a strong man and his father weak and old there is no reason why the rule of "do or you will be done" should not be carried out.

Deputy Warden William Pique will report the matter to the Humane society and have an information filed against the son for failing to support the father. In the meantime the deputies at the jail will furnish enough money for the payment of the man's expenses.

CONSTIPATION is caused primarily by lack of certain elements in the food which tend to more or less imperfect digestion, and to make the liver sluggish and torpid.

The bowels carry away and discharge the fecal matter—that is the refuse matter of the system. If the bowels are constipated, the fecal matter clogs and congests the natural passages, the poisonous excretions are retained in the body. They set back like a stream dammed up, and are absorbed into the system and carried all over the body in the blood.

That's the reason your head aches, your tongue is coated, your mouth tastes like a garbage can, black specks float before your eyes, and you are generally unhappy. It's constipation poisoning.

BEREFT OF REASON.

He Forgot Bank Deposit He Now Demands.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 23.—In a suit filed in the superior court recently is told a weird story of the scramble for fortune in the early days of California, of the wreck of the ill-fated steamship Golden Gate with her load of treasure and human freight, of an insane man's wandering for almost half a century and his final discovery that a deposit which he made in San Francisco before the Civil war has now grown from $2,500 to $35,000.

It is to recover this money that the legal action is begun and the case promises to be a most interesting one. Alexander Smith, aged 83 years, is the plaintiff and the Savings and Loan society of San Francisco is the defendant. It is probable that the case will be transferred to the San Francisco courts.

Smith came to California in 1850 and amassed a fortune of $20,000 in the mines near Nevada City. During a visit to San Francisco he deposited $2,500 with the savings society and left it there. Three friends accompanied him there. When he decided to return to New York for a year he took passage on the steamship Golden Gate for Panama, taking some $15,000 in gold with him.

The Golden Gate started from San Francisco loaded down with the wealth of miners returning to their former homes. It is supposed that she had between 600 and 700 passengers and she carried wealth to the amount of $5,000,000. Off the coast of Nicaragua the steamship caught fire. All the gold went to the bottom of the ocean and only forty of the passengers were saved.

Smith was among them, but when he reached land he was insane. He finally reached New York and recovered his reason, but he had forgotten the deposit in San Francisco. Some time ago he met one of the men who had been with him when he made the deposit and was reminded of it. Then the memory of it came back to him.

SEEKS DIVORCE

Because She Is Tired of Following Plow.

Omaha, Neb., June 23.—That she is tired of working the farm and then having her husband run off with the proceeds in the fall, Jane Cobb gives as the reason she wants a divorce from Almond W. She says he has treated her cruelly and been a poor provider.

The twain were married in 1898, and ever since, she says, it has been her province to plow the corn and do the haying while he sat under a tree and smoked a corncob pipe. That was bad enough, but the last straw came, she alleges in her petition, when he pocketed the cash after the crops were sold, spent all the money on himself, and left her to get through the winter as best she could.

Last Thanksgiving, she says, he choked and kicked her and knocked her down, and again in January of this year, according to her petition, he brandished a pitchfork before her and swore awful things. He finished up, she avers, by packing the farm tools, grain and stock and moving away. Wherefore she wants an absolute separation and the name of her first husband, Gaallspey.

CHILD RUN OVER BY CAR

Thinks First of Sorrow of Her Mother.

Detroit, June 23.—Running in childish glee upon an errand for her cousin, 9-year-old Elsie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Winters, was struck by a car. The child was pushed along the pavement by the fender, her body finally rolling under the wheels. When pulled from under the car, the right arm and right leg hung limp and helpless, the limb crushed and mangled in terrible manner.

"I'll die," wailed the child. "I'll never live, but don't tell mamma."

Her leg was amputated, but she will recover.

MAY LOSE HER FEET.

Wearing of Tight Shoes Causes Blood Poison.

Elizabeth, N. J., June 23.—As the result of crowding her naturally small feet into shoes which were too small for her, Miss Mary Ludwig was recently taken to the General hospital, where it was announced that she might have to have both feet amputated, as symptoms of blood poisoning have set in.

Miss Ludwig has remarkably pretty feet and she wore shoes to display them to the best advantage. Her duties compelled her to stand a good deal, but the shoes cramped her feet and abscesses formed on the soles. Her physician, Dr. Stern, ordered her sent to the local hospital for the operation, but her father refused to allow it to be performed.

WHEAT HAS BULGE

Fall Options In All Markets Have Good Advance.

Bullish Winter Wheat Crop Report Made By Jones.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 23.—The wheat market opened sharply higher and made a further advance. Wet weather in the Northwest and Southwest and forecasts for more and a bullish winter wheat crop report by H. V. Jones were the causes. Mr. Jones says that the winter wheat crop is disappointing and predicts that 370,000,000 bus. is the maximum that can be expected with a chance that it may drop to 340,000,000 bus. Final figures cannot be given out until he has completed his inspection of the Ohio valley next week, but he expects the estimated yield to be between the two figures named.

Foreign markets were generally higher, Liverpool was up ¼@⅜c, Paris 1½c, London unchanged to ¼d higher, and Berlin, Budapest and Antwerp were unchanged.

In the Duluth market July closed 1c higher, in Chicago 1⅛c higher, in Minneapolis ⅞c higher, in St. Louis ⅞-1c higher, Kansas City 1⅛-⅝c higher, and New York 1½c higher. The September option closed 1¼c higher in Duluth, Chicago and New York, 1⅛-½c higher in Minneapolis, ¾c higher in St. Louis and 1¼-⅜c higher in Kansas City.

Stocks of wheat in Duluth are expected to decrease 335,000 bus this week.

The Modern Miller says of winter wheat conditions: "In response to inquiry in regard to the prospects of the yield and quality of winter wheat, and also the probable movement if the weather is favorable for the harvest, reports from milling correspondents show that in the southern part of the belt the outlook for yield and quality is generally below an average, being poorest in Texas, Tennessee and the territories. In Illinois and Southern Missouri the yield and quality varies, generally being below an average, but in Central Oklahoma and Northern Missouri prospects are good. Fair to excellent yields are promised in Kansas, with the quality good. Prospects in Nebraska are for a good yield, excepting in some of the southwestern counties, where the crop has been damaged by fly. There are some uneven yields in Southern Indiana, but the average for yield and quality is good. In Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky prospects are excellent for larger yields than last year and for the quality of the grain. With favorable weather the crop will move late in June and early in August, according to the latitude. The crop has begun to move in Texas and Oklahoma, but the harvest has been interrupted in many states by rain."

Snow has this to say: "Weather conditions of the past week were generally favorable and all crop prospects were maintained or improved. Drought is becoming acute in Southeast Missouri and Southern Illinois, but the moisture supply elsewhere is generally sufficient. The harvest is making good progress under at least normal conditions and harvest advices are in line with previous expectations. The corn situation is moderately improved except in districts where need of rain is noted. Fields generally are well worked and clean. The condition of crop on July 1, 1905, will be little short of normal for a series of years.

"Spring wheat conditions continue very high and the crop is developing rapidly. Reports of rust are based more largely upon apprehension engendered by last year's experience than by any current developments. Red rust shows on all the blades every year, but serious damage follows only when weather conditions and characteristics of plant growth combine to favor the growth of spores. There is as yet no indication that such conditions prevail this year."

Car receipts at Duluth were 20, against 86 last year, and at Minneapolis 147 against 145 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 167 against 235 last year. Chicago received 1, against 6 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 223,000 bus., last year 232,000 bus. Shipments 178,216 bus., last year 139,939 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 78,332 bus.

Argentine shipments this week have amounted to 2,836,000 bus., against 2,712,000 bus. last week and 1,792,000 bus. last year. Clearances from America this week aggregate 976,822 bus.

In the Liverpool market corn closed ½d higher. In the Chicago market September corn closed ⅝c lower. September oats closed ⅛-¼c higher. Primary receipts of corn was 581,00 bus, last year 422,700 bus. Shipments 356,085 bus, last year 416,280 bus. Clearances were 69,372 bus. Argentine shipments this week aggregate 2,136,000 bus, against 1,186,000 bus last week and 2,626,000 bus last year. American clearances for the week aggregate 1,110,356 bus.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was a little more active, but still not very brisk. The new September option opened ⅜c higher at 85c, sold up to 85⅞c at 10:45, fell back to 85¼-⅝c at 11:05, and rallied to 85⅝c at 12:10. It held at about that point until just before the close when it dropped off and closed at 85⅝c a gain for the day of 1⅛c. The old September option opened ⅜c higher at 90c, sold up to 90⅝c, and closed 1¼c higher than yesterday at 90½c. The July option advanced 1½c to $1.13 and closed at $1.12½.

Cash offerings were very light. Durum wheat advanced 3c.

Flax was dead, the market being deserted and not a trade made. The closing prices were all unchanged from yesterday. Stocks of flax at Duluth are expected to increase 20,000 bus this week. Argentine shipments of flax this week amount to 256,000 bus, against 464,000 bus last week and 484,000 bus last year.

Oats advanced ¼c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—To arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.12½; No. 2 northern, $1.04½. Durum, No. 1, 87c; No. 2, 84c; July, $1.12½; September, new, 85¾c; September, old, 90½c. Flax, to arrive, $1.48; on track, $1.48; July, $1.46; September, $1.29½; October, $1.26⅝. Oats, to arrive, 32c; on track, 32c. Rye, on track, 72c; September, 61½c. Barley—Feed, 39½@41c.

Receipts: Wheat, 14,122; oats, 3,423; barley, 11,550; flax, 3,700.

Shipments: Oats, 30,000; rye, 1,175.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Rains In Kansas Cause Advance In Wheat.

Chicago, June 23.—Delay to harvesting by rains throughoutKansas created bullish sentiment in the wheat pit here today resulting in an advance of over a cent a bushel in the price of both the July and September deliveries. July opened ⅛@¼c to ⅜@⅝c higher at 90⅝c to 91c and advanced to 91¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 168 cars, against 205 cars last week and 241 cars a year ago.

As trading progressed buying by shorts became more aggressive, numerous reports of damage being instrumental in bringing out the demand. At 91⅝c the July option reached the highest point of the day. Late in the session some reaction occurred on profit taking, but the market closed strong with July up 1⅜c at 91⅜@¾c.

A firm tone prevailed in corn mainly as a result of the strength of wheat. July opened ⅛c to ¼c higher at 54½c to 54⅝c, sold at 54¾c and then rallied to 54½c. Local receipts were 591 cars, with 166 of contract grade.

During the last half of the session the market became decidedly weak as a result of liberal profit taking by a prominent long. On the decline July sold off to 53¾c. The market closed weak, with July down ⅞c at 53½c.

Oats were firm on active demand from pit traders. July opened a shade to ¼@⅜c higher at 32c to 32¼c and for a time held within the opening range. Local receipts were 110 cars.

September pork was up 2½c at $12.82½. Lard was unchanged at $7.42½. Ribs were up 2½c at $7.80.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—In addition to the weather being unfavorable, the cash demand is strong, as noted by sales in this market and the price of June wheat, showing an advance over yesterday. Cash handlers are disappointed at the apparent reluctance on the part of farmers to hurry new wheat to market. What little has been received has brought an exceedingly higher price and quite a substantial premium over the July option in St. Louis and Kansas. This reflects an urgent milling demand. The market seems to gather new strength each day and until the weather improves and the cash demand flattens out, we can feel but bullish on the market. We still favor buying wheat on recessions.

Corn—Trade was fairly active in this market, but at the expense of values, Old July suffering the most at a cent net loss for the day. Receipts are large and of good quality. It is expected the visible will show an increase on Monday. Only small, to be sure, but nevertheless it will show the demand is hardly equal to the supply at the moment. The weather is somewhat unfavorable, but the plant is supposed to be getting too much moisture. The action of the market, considering the pronounced strength in the wheat pit was decidedly disappointing, and seems to give evidence that some one had corn for sale in large quantities. The market looks as if it would drag some lower.

Oats—This market showed quite a little snap early, but strength petered out, largely in sympathy with corn. Cash prices are well maintained. The weather man will be a factor in making prices.

* * *

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—A wet weather map contributed to an advance of one cent at the opening and another cent was added after the announcement of a showery forecast. It is true, as we have pointed out from time to time, that the statistical situation is very bullish, but the buying of wheat today indicated an almost rapacious demand and one would think the bins that are so empty at present were for ever to remain so, and that wheat would be as scarce as diamonds in a street sweeper's pocket. As we have stated repeatedly, the underlying conditions are very strong and anything should happen to materially reduce the enormous yield that has been predicted for this year, which is not improbable, and a further advance in prices might be expected. Should previous expectations be realized, prices at this level may seem high, and a reaction from present values would probably follow.

* * *

Pringle, Fitch & Rankin, Chicago: John Marfield of Minneapolis, who was here yesterday talked very bullish on wheat, as he has a big load of September and was circulating reports of rust, having fifteen reports showing rust out of thirty received. Shields of Kansas City, who was here talked the opposite and predicts an early movement of good proportions, and says wheat will be consigned freely. Active buying of calls and a stronger curb in Minneapolis last night were based on the tip that Jones is to be out with a bullish report on winter wheat today. Watson was the big buyer of wheat there yesterday, presumably on the same tip.

* * *

Chicago Inter-Ocean: Cash wheat continues to be picked up in good-sized lots by millers, and the Wrenn house announces that it has sold all of its No. 2 hard, the latter being taken on May delivery, and are credited with selling 400,000 bus this week.

"I am bearish on wheat and corn," said A. I. Valentine. "Reports that we are going to run a deal in July wheat are rot. One might get loaded with cash wheat if they put the price up high."

* * *

Ben Bryan, Chicago: With all the bearish talk about Southwest offerings of new wheat, I get it from a reliable cash grain house that they are bidding for delivery the first half of July, 1906, 6c over Kansas City July and getting no wheat. This speaks for itself.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

No Halt In Gains Until Late In the Day.

Hesitation In Last Hour and the Closing Was Heavy.

New York, June 23.—Free offerings of stocks caused opening declines with the exception of a few of the less important specialties. Losses ran generally to a moderate fraction, but in Hide and Leather preferred there was a break of 3⅛. Canadian Pacific fell 1½ and Southern Pacific ⅝.

Only a few stocks continued on their downward course after the opening dealings. The execution of large buying orders for the Pennsylvania group facilitated a recovery. Reading and Pennsylvania were taken in large blocks and sold at 98 and 140 respectively. Other Pennsylvania stocks recovered only slightly and the general list did little more to make up the ground lost. Hide and Leather preferred rallied 2½. Pittsburg, C. C. & St. Louis Smelting, Consolidated Gas and Federal Mining preferred advanced 1 and Federal Mining 7¼. Pittsburg Coal preferred yielded 2 points.

Buying diminished for a time and a few stocks sagged to the lowest. Demand revived and Reading, Union Pacific, St. Paul and some others rose to the best prices. There was a rise in Chicago Great Western preferred "A" of 3½, the preferred "B" 1⅝, Kansas City Southern 1¼ and Manhattan 1. Chicago Union Traction preferred fell 4. Bonds were steady at noon.

Strength developed in some new quarters in the early afternoon simultaneously with realizing in some of the earlier strong stocks. United States Steel stocks were heavily bought, especially the preferred, which sold above 98. Standard railroad stocks were in more general demand. Union Pacific moved up 1⅜ and Southern Pacific, Northwestern, T. C., Amalgamated Copper and Locomotive and Westinghouse Electric a point.

Professional operators resorted to the familiar device of bidding up selected stocks to distract attention from the selling of others. The Pennsylvania group were realized on, while the transcontinental stocks were pushed vigorously upwards. St. Paul was unusually dominant for a while and reached 177⅝. Other gains were Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha and Northwestern 2½, and Missouri Pacific, Northern Pacific and Brooklyn Transit 1. The market at 2 o'clock was quite dull and running off.

The market was dull and heavy during the final hour, members of the Pennsylvania and Southern groups receding to below last night under the pressure to realize on previous advances. The closing was easy and showed mixed changes, mostly fractional.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is closing strong and on the whole somewhat higher than yesterday. The volume of business again shows an increase. It is confidently predicted that Southern Pacific will shortly declare a dividend on its common stock. As we pointed out several days ago, this stock for some time has been aggressively bought. The general stock market situation seems to show improvement each day. The trade is broadening out and the market acts well. It seems as if prices would do still better.

* * *

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market continued active and buoyant today. The unsatisfactory foreign situation and unfavorable crop advices had very little effect and until late in the day there was no halt in the advance. In the last hour, however, there was hesitation and the general list reacted, closing heavy in tone, in the early bulge particularly, everything went to the highest prices seen in some time. The Pennsylvania group was again quite strong. Weakness was shown by some of the specialties like Hide and Leather preferred, and Pittsburg Coal. The strong feature was Union Pacific.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: London came weak this morning, but New York refused to follow its lead and the market began climbing after the opening. Most of the active stocks showed good gains for the day. Strong bull talk was heard on Amalgamated Copper and a good deal of stocks changed hands around 82, but later reacted to 81½, where it closed. Copper Range sold up to 71⅛ and continued buying of Allouez put that stock to 24⅜. We still believe on reactions, good stocks should be bought, particularly coppers.

BEES IN PARLOR.

London Woman's Latest Fad, If You Please.

Bees in a London drawing room! One does not at first believe in the possibility of it. Yet to Miss Baden-Powell, sister of the general of South African fame, belongs the credit or having introduced at Prince's Gate their culture under conditions which to the outsider appear abnormal.

This enterprising lady beekeeper was yesterday kind enough to show her wonderful hive, designed by herself, to a representative of the London Daily News, and a remarkable invention it is.

It is not strange that its ingenuity should have won the clever inventor a prize, but most strange is it that the bees should live in this unaccustomed milieu.

Through a little aperture contrived in the wall the bees find their way outside and go for honey, Miss Baden-Powell thinks, very far out; some that she had purposely marked for recognition were seen as far afield as Hempstead. Moreover, these intelligent roamers, it is said, take their bearings so accurately they have been known to fly round in circles before quitting Prince's Gate, as if thoroughly to familiarize themselves with their surroundings.

"They always know their way home and return at sunset," said Miss Baden-Powell. "What do they live on? do you ask. Oh, largely on fruit tree blossoms just now, I think. I provide a store of honey for them through the winter. This one hive produced sixty pounds last year."

And she showed me the booklike formation of the comb compartments. Their clever owner also traces comb shapes, which the bees fill up, following her outline of red paint, as in a honey comb bicycle shape she had designed—now full of honey.

"You see they prefer this dark corner," pursued the owner; "the first swarm I had were sent up from the country and had only been hatched a week. However, they soon became acclimated, and now one can watch the queen laying her eggs and the rearing of the young bees. I have, moreover, had them now for years and find no difficulty whatever in managing them."

But Miss Baden-Powell evidently has a genius for "managing" winged creatures, for presently she led the way to a sight more strange than the bees—a large fir on the staircase, where a large and happy family or perfectly tame canaries were nesting, the mother bird still brooding over her eggs and fully fledged youngsters flitting about.

"So tame hey are," said the mistress whose winning voice and manner well qualify her to deal with these shy songsters, "they seem to know all I say to them and though they have the range of the house they never want to leave it, and immediately fly out of the room on my telling them they are not wanted."

One would only cordially wish the owners of caged birds could see this ideal aviary, with the tit-bits spread for the canaries, as well as a miniature bath under the tree.

WEBSTER'S SHAY.

Denizens of Jefferson City, Mo., little know that a historic old carriage, once the property of Daniel Webster, orator and United States senator from Massachuestts, is now in use in that town. But such is the case, and the carriage in question is that owned by William Holt, says the Republican. It is drawn by one horse and presents an appearance far from prepossessing, but it can be readily seen that in the '60s it was a carriage such as even a senator might be glad to ride in.

Mr. Holt purchased the carriage at an auction sale in St. Louis, after the World's fair, where the carriage was on exhibition. Attorney General Crow of St. Louis, recognizing the historic value of a ride in this carriage, was among Mr. Holt's first passengers.

It is not unlikely that Webster rode in this venerable carriage while going from his rooms to the senate chamber upon the day when he made his memorably reply to Senator Haynes of South Carolina, in which he gave voice to the expression, "Union and liberty, now and forever, one and inseparable."

A CLUMSY FORGERY

Woodsman Attempts to Pass Check on Defunct Bank.

Charged with perpetrating one of the clumsiest forgeries that has come to the notice of the police in some time, a man named Oscar Anderson was arrested by the police this afternoon.

The check, which he is claimed to have forged, was drawn on the old Merchants' bank of Duluth, which has been out of existence for a number of years. It was signed by J. Anderson and made out to the order of Erick Nelson, being endorsed on the back.

The writing was in a very crude hand and would immediately arouse suspicions. The amount called for in the check was $62.

Anderson is claimed to have attempted to pass it in several of the local clothing stores, but was refused in each case, and the police were notified.

FAMOUS FORGERIES.

Crimes Proved By Work of Handwriting Experts.

"Forgery," said Chabot, the great handwriting expert, "is one of the most unsatisfactory crimes a man can commit nowadays. It can be so easily discovered."

That was not always the case says London Answers. There was once nothing easier than imitating handwriting so successfully that the fraud could not be discovered, and the skilful forger was one of the least often detected and most successful scoundrels in the criminal world. How common and how successful he was experts who have had ancient documents put before them will know. It is wonderful how many of these the genuineness of which has never been suspected, the expert is able, by the aid of modern science, unhesitatingly to pronounce forgeries.

"By nature and habit individuals contract a system of forging letters which gives a character to their writing as distinct as that of the human face," declared Nethercift, the first recognized handwriting expert. It seems perhaps, a startling saying, but it is true, as thousands of criminals have found to their cost.

Neil Cream, the mysterious poisoner of women in the south of London in 1892, found a certain peculiarity in his handwriting of material assistance to the police in dragging him to the fate on the scaffold he so well deserved. It was Cream's practise to poison a woman and then to send a blackmailing letter, generally to a doctor—Neil was himself an American M. D.—demanding money, under a threat of the recipient being charged with the deed. These letters were, of course, in a disguised handwriting, and Neil had devised an ingenious method of baffling detection. It was not good enough, however, and when the letters were collected and compared with others admittedly written by Neil there were remarkable similarities in each which made it clear that they were all the production of the same man.

Recognized specialists in the examining and comparison of handwriting appear to have been unknown in England till a lithographer, Joseph Nethercift, came before the public as an expert. A Mr. James Wood, a draper and banker of Gloucester, died, leaving a fortune of £1,000,000. Wood was an eccentric character, with a partiality to making wills and hiding them in the most absurd places in his house, where he lived a solitary existence.

After his decease will after will and codicil after codicil were discovered hidden in ceilings, under floors, in chimneys and in secret drawers. The relative who rejoiced today, under a codicil making him rich, was in a few days' time thrown into despair by the discovery of some dirty piece of paper, perhaps found projecting from a rat hole in an attic, which proved to be a later document executed by James Wood, leaving him nothing. Were these wills and codicils true or false? It was a question in which a handwriting expert was decidedly necessary. Nethercift, the lithographer, was called in, and from the assistance he was able to render the puzzled investigators in the case he became famous. From that time he was kept busy.

In not one case out of ten in which he is consulted does the expert in handwriting appear in court. The others are compromised or hushed up. The most common occasions on which he is consulted are matrimonial matters, libelous letters, abusive and threatening epistles, suspected signatures to wills, erasures in documents, valentines. The valentine crop has, however, been enormously reduced of late years. Not many years ago the offensive and anonymous valentine that found its way to the handwriting expert's table was very common.

The forger of signatures works either by copying the real signature by simply writing an imitation of it as it lies before him, by tracing it, placing the original signature with the document to which the forgery is to be attached on, say, a window pane, going over the signature in pencil, and then covering the mark with ink, or by tracing it straight off with ink. All these methods are easily distinguishable by the expert.

One of the most sensational pieces of expert work performed by a handwriting specialist was in connection with the trial of Christiana Edmunds of Brighton for poisoning a child. Having bought some sweets, Edmunds impregnated them with strychnine, and then, walking out, distributed them to various children she met. One child died and others had narrow escapes.

At the inquest on the victim it came out in evidence that a certain lady, who had not been identified, had bought strychnine at a local chemist's and had signed the name "Wood" in his register of sales of poisons. Christiana Edmunds, learning that importance was attached to this signature, actually wrote a letter to the chemist, which she signed with the coroner's name, and despatched it to the shop by a boy, requesting him to hand the bearer the register book for examination.

The book was unsuspectingly handed to the boy, who carried it to Edmunds, who tore out what she believed was the entry, and then returned the volume by her messenger.

At the trial it appeared that Edmunds had, in her terror and confusion, abstracted an entry signed by another customer named Wood.

The signature, the letter forged in the coroner's name and letters avowedly written by Edmunds were all undoubtedly written by the same person, and the trick was discovered. Edmunds was sentenced to death, but the capital punishment was afterward commuted to penal servitude for life, upon the suspicion that the wretched woman was insane.

In the famous Great Matlock will case the crossing of the "t" in the word "to" settled the question whether the codicils of a will were genuine or false. In the will, which was in the dead man's handwriting, the "t" was uncrossed fifty-one times, wholly crossed five times, but half crossed never. In fifty of the dead man's letters the "t" in "to" was uncrossed 131 times, wholly crossed fourteen times, but never half crossed. In the disputed codicils the "t" was always crossed.

The jury decided that the codicils were not genuine.

The number of anoymous letters submitted to the expert in a year is very large. Sometimes these letters are written by the recipients themselves for certain purposes. An American expert tells an amusing story of such a case. The minister of a certain church one day produced a letter he had, he alleged, received from another congregation, offering him a larger salary if he would transfer his ministrations to them. To retain him the congregation raised his stipend, and he refused the call.

When other "calls" arrived the deacons became suspicious. The letters and a sermon in the pastor's handwriting were submitted to an expert, and were emphatically declared by him to have been written by the same man. The minister went—but not to the congregation he represented as being so desirous to secure him.

Some excellent handwriting comparison was done in what is known as the Whalley will case. A man named James Whalley, a retired ironmaster, died in the cottage of a railway porter at Leominster, where he rented rooms for nine shillings a week. When he was dead it was discovered that he had left property worth £70,000.

Whalley had a son who lived in Derby, and who, being his sole relative, naturally expected to inherit his wealth. Upon his arrival at the cottage, and searching for a will, he found a closed envelope among the dead man's papers containing the precious document. When the envelope was opened and the will read the son was astounded to find that his father had willed more than half his fortune away from him—to his landlord and a third person. The step was extraordinary, as the old man had frequently told his son that he would inherit all that he possessed, and the young fellow immediately denounced the document as a fraud. But how to prove it?

Underneath the writing of the will the expert discovered the traces of pencil written words. These words, under the miscroscope, became sentences—the words of a dying man to his son—a letter to young Whalley from his father on his deathbed! But this writing was not that of the dead man, but of the landlord of his lodgings! Only the signature—James Whalley—was in ink, and in the dying man's hand!

The fraud was out. Upon his death bed Whalley had dictated a letter to his son, which the landlord had written in pencil, Whalley signing it in ink. When the old man was dead the landlord had rubbed out the pencil writing with crumbs of bread, had written the will above Whalley's signature, had opened the envelope in which the real will lay by steaming it, and, having destroyed the real document, and inserted his forgery in its place, had closed the envelope again, and put it among the dead man's papers. The landlord and one of his accomplices went to penal servitude, another accomplice saved himself by making a full confession and turning Queen's evidence.

ESSENCE OF THRILLS.

A curious individual has recently taken trouble to dissect the works of an author of sensational dramas, says the Toronto Mail and Empire, and he finds that he requires the co-operation of 18 widows, 16 sons and 2 daughters of persons executed, 80 orphans of the male and 112 of the female sex, 60 blind persons and 10 feigning blindness, 22 fratricides, 8 parricides, 145 foundlings, 102 lost and 116 kidnaped, 212 false wills, 216 stolen pocketbooks, 198 duels with swords, 168 with pistols, 2 with sabers, 8 with knives and 10 with axes; 43 fires, 123 murders with weapons and 136 with poison, 45 drownings, 26 guilty and 62 innocent galley convicts, 80 freed and 36 escaped prisoners, 118 burglaries, 206 distraints, 79 lunatics, 28 feigning lunatics, 113 false marriages and 41 bigamies. Who will say after this that the drama is deteriorating?

A select expedition of ten English sportsmen is to sail for the Arctic regions in July to shoot polar bears, walruses and any other big game that may come within range, says the Kansas City Journal. Each member of the party is to pay $1,275 to cover the expenses of the trip. The steam yacht Bore, a first-class passenger vessel of 737 tons, has been specially chartered for the trip.

SCANDALOUS CHARGES INVOLVING MANY RICH MEN IN THE EQUITABLE

Millions Said to Have Been Made By Several.

Money Belonging to the Society Must Be Refunded.

Morton Explains Why Some Men Are on the Payroll.

New York, June 24.—Definite statements are made by the Herald today that (in addition to the proceedings which are expected to be inaugurated by Attorney General Mayer and District Attorney William Travis Jerome) Paul Morton, chairman of the Equitable Life Assurance society, with the full knowledge and approval of the new owner, Thomas F. Ryan, will, by his own investigation of affairs, delve deeper than either the Frick committee or State Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks.

Most scandalous charges against certain very rich men are hinted at in connection with this development. They have not heretofore figured prominently. One of them, says the Herald, is currently reported to have accumulated $8,000,000 in a few years, while another, an appraiser, amassed more than $1,000,000 in two years. While some of these matters were only indirectly connected with the society's affairs, it is intimated that various documents are being certified, while accounts and occurrences will be used as a basis for affidavits in court proceedings. Wherever, the Herald declares, money is found to have been obtained by individuals, on syndicate operations, on bonuses to secure loans and the like, it is asserted that action will be begun to collect the amounts to which the society is lawfully entitled, had nothing been diverted from its treasury.

New York, June 24.—Paul Morton returned from Washington today and resumed his work as chairman of the Equitable society. He was in conference during the morning with representatives of the expert accountants who are investigating the Equitable affairs under his direction. Mr. Morton said through his secretary that he had not accepted any further resignations, nor would he intimate when he intends to take such action. From this time until the end of the month, when he returns to Washington formally to sever his connection with the navy department, Mr. Morton will remain in town. He has indicated that he proposes to stay here all through the heated term, allowing himself only brief week-end vacations.

Concerning the men whose names were said to be in the salary list of the Equitable society though no longer in the service of the company, Chairman Morton today made public the following statement:

"Dr. E. M. Lambert was the first medical director of the Equitable. He died July 17, 1904, having served for forty-five years as chief medical director. His salary was $25,000 per annum, and it was continued and paid to his widow up to and including December, 1904, since which time nothing has been paid.

"Dr. Edward Curtis was elected medical director in September, 1876, and was retired February, 1904, on account of a stroke of paralysis, but with the understanding that the society could avail itself of his services as consulting medical director. As medical director he received a salary of $15,000 a year, which was continued until Jan. 1, 1905, at which time, owing to his inability to perform active service it was reduced to $10,000 per annum. This sum is still being paid to him.

"J. B. Loring, registrar, was the first clerk employed by the Equitable in 1859. He served the society forty-five years in positions of trust, and for more than twenty-five years was chief of the society's security department, in charge of its vaults. His salary was $3,500 per annum, and on April 3, 1903, he left the service of the society on account of ill health, and his salary was continued as a pension.

"George H. Squire came with the society in September, 1899. His salary in 1904 was $20,000. During August of that year he lost a leg, and temporarily was incapacitated for work. The executive committee granted him six months' leave of absence with pay, which expired on March 1, 1905, since which time he had been on the payroll at $1,000 per month, but by whose authority I have not yet been able to find out."

BALTIMORE GIRL MARRIES PARISIAN.

Paris, June 24.—The marriage of Prince Henry Galard De Bearn Et De Chalais to Miss Beatrice Winans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Winans of Baltimore, was celebrated at noon today in the church of St. Clothilde. There was a large and fashionable attendance including Ambassador McCormick and Mrs. McCormick and many members of the old French aristocracy. The groom is the head of the ancient family of Bern-Brissac. A wedding breakfast followed. The prince and princess received many beautiful presents.

NOW CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Richmond, Ind., June 24.—Mrs. George Keever, in jail here for shooting her husband, was today charged with murder, Keever having died this morning. The Keever home is at Pennville.

CHINESE BOYCOTT BECOMING SERIOUS

Business Men of Pacific Coast Appeal to the President.

Washington, June 24.—That the threats of the commercial guilds of China to boycott American made goods has raised a serious question in the minds of this country's business men is indicated by a telegram received by President Roosevelt from the Portland, Or., chamber of commerce. The president authorized the publication of the telegram which follows:

"Portland, Or., June 23, 1905.—The President, Washington: The Portland chamber of commerce respectfully urges immediate action on your part with respect to this country's relations with China, the first consideration being a regard for the nation's honor, which demands faithful and fair performance of its treaty obligations. Secondly, our commercial interests are seriously threatened by the severe manner in which our present laws regulating the admission of Chinese into this country are executed, which seem in their practical working to contravene treaty obligations. We earnestly recommend that a more liberal interpretation of the laws be enjoined on the immigration authorities and meantime the announcement of the appointment by your excellency of a commission to inquire into the present exclusion laws and the method of their enforcement with instructions to recommend to congress such legislation as shall promote increased harmony between the two nations would have a beneficial effect. We are advised today by cable from Hongkong that immediate action is necessary by our government or a boycott of American uproducts will follow.

"Portland chamber of commerce.
"By WILLIAM D. WHEELWRIGHT."
"President."

The subject is already under consideration by President Roosevelt and members of his cabinet and a solution of the problem, it is regarded as certain, will be worked out. Secretary Metcalf had a conference about the matter today with the president.

TEAMSTERS TO VOTE ON THE QUESTION OF ENDING STRIKE

Chicago, June 24.—The "rank and file" of the striking teamsters were today given an opportunity to say whether the strike will continue or whether it will be called off and the men take their chances of getting employment.

At a meeting of the teamsters' joint council it has been decided to submit to the men on strike the latest peace terms received from the employers.

The three principal clauses in the proposition which the strikers will vote on are as follows:

The elimination of the express drivers from the strike settlement.

The maintaining of police and armed guards on the wagons after the strike is called off.

The right to wear a union button concealed.

It is said that the employers are inclined to take back a big percentage of their old teamsters, but it must be on terms dictated by them, and unless the teamsters surrender unconditionally the fight will go on. Special meetings of the different locals involved will be called for the purpose of taking a referendum vote.

UNCOMPROMISING SWEDES FAVOR MOBILIZING TROOPS

Stockholm, June 24.—The uncompromising element in the riksdag is actively prosecuting a campaign in favor of presenting to Norway demands representing Sweden's irreducible minimum and obtaining guarantees from Norway before passing the bill conferring on the government powers to negotiate terms for the formal separation of Norway and Sweden. This faction considers that the government ought to bea uthorized to contract an emergency loan of $25,000,000, and mobilize troops to support Sweden's demands. The government, however, has still the strong, united backing of the moderate party, which is prepared to entrust the king and the ministry with the powers demanded for untrameled negotiations in regard to the necessary guarantees to be given before agreeing to a dissolution of the union.

New Haven, June 24.—Announcement of honors in the divinity school in Yale was made today and includes the following:

Fogg scholarships from the class of 1906, Marion L. Burton, Minneapolis; Donald J. Cowling or Scottdale, Pa.; Lucius C. Potter of Beloit, Wis.; Allis scholarships from class of 1906, Oscar E. Maurer of Beloit, Wis.; Wilfrid M. Rowell of Hillsboro, Wis. From class of 1907, Ernest H. Haig, of Devils Lake, N. D.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Man Accused of Killing "Eat 'Em Up Jack."

New York, June 24.—Charging him with being concerned in the murder of "Eat 'Em Up Jack" McManus in the Bowery on May 2, the police have arrested a man who says he is W. A. Wilke, a chauffeur of Richmond, Ind. Wilke says he came to New York a week ago in search of work after working in several automobile manufactories in Ohio and Indiana. He stopped at a Bowery hotel and said he had just found work when he was arrested. Wilke declared that he never knew McManus and has asked the police to inquire of his friends in Richmond, Ind. He was carrying a revolver when arrested. McManus, who was a notorious East side character, was found unconscious in the street with his head crushed in and died a few hours later.

AUTOIST GOING SOME.

New York, June 24.—Guy Vaughn who started yesterday at the Empire City race track at Yonkers in a second attempt to break the 1,000-mile automobile record had covered 850 miles at 9:40 a. m. This is two hours four minutes and fifty seconds ahead of the record established last April by Charles G. Wridgeway at the Brighton Beach track.

STRIKE STOPS BRIDGE WORK.

New York, June 24.—A general strike of the structural iron workers has stopped progress on the Blackwell's island bridge across the East river. According to President Buchanan, of the international association of structural iron workers, the strike is in sympathy with one now at the contracting company's main plant at Harrisburg. Several band men are involved.

OPENED INTENTIONALLY

Was Switch at Mentor, Says State Inspector.

Springfield, Ohio, June 24.—W. O. Jackson of this city, chief inspector of railroads and telegraphs of Ohio, returned today from Mentor, where he investigated the Lake Shore wreck.

"That the switch was opened intentionally we know," he said. "Whether or not it was locked open we cannot tell, for all reports are meager. The perpetrator may never be known, though both the company and our department are working on the case.

"I do not think the speed of the train had anything to do with the wreck, or the number of people killed. The number killed was due to the fact that dinner was just over and the men had gone forward to the smoker. Fast trains are no more liable to accident than others, for they make fewer stops and many accommodation trains run as fast between stations as the Twentieth Century."

MRS. MYERS MUST HANG ON AUG. 11.

Kansas City, June 24.—Mrs. Aggie Myers, who was found guilty at Liberty, Mo., recently of murder in the first degree, was today refused a new trial and was sentenced to be hanged Aug. 11. An appeal will be taken to the state supreme court. Mrs. Myers was convicted with Frank Heitman, who was infatuated with her, of killing the woman's husband, Clarence Myers, a printer, at their home in this city in May, 1904.

THE DNIEPER AT JIBUTIL.

Jibutil, French Somaliland, June 24.—The Russian auxiliary cruiser Dnieper, which June 5 sank the British steamer St. Kilda in the China sea, arrived here today.

GUILTY OF BRIBERY.

Pottsville, Pa., June 24.—Joseph and Pius Berstein, David Feist, Jacob Nolt and George Holvey, school directors of Shenandoah, were today sentenced to serve one year in jail for bribery and conspiracy. The men pleaded guilty of accepting bribes for their influence in the appointment of school teachers.

NEW TRIALS FOR ALDERMEN.

Madison, Wis., June 24.—The Wisconsin supreme court today granted new trials in the cases of Former Alderman Charles Havenor and Former Supervisor Schutz of Milwaukee, charged with bribery. The decisions for the trials are based principally on the irregularity of the court in admitting certain evidence and instructing the juries after they had been sent to the jury room.

OKU'S ARMY QUIET

Nothing Important Occurring on the Manchuria Fields.

Japs Raise the Russian Cruiser Bayan at Port Arthur.

Gen. Oku's Headquarters in the Field, June 22, 10 a. m.—(Delayed.)—Nothing important has recently occurred, except daily skirmishes between the outposts of both armies. Gen. Oku's army has been newly clothed in khaki.

Tokio, June 24, 11 a. m.—The Japanese commander at Port Arthur reports that the Russian armored cruiser Bayan has been successfully floated.

Headquarters of the Russian Army, Godzyadani, Manchuria, June 24.—The Russians on June 21 made a reconnaissance in force against the Japanese right, in the region of Oanchez. The Japanese advance post retired to Tsaepinga, where they have built strong fortifications, and held them in force. Behind this line of positions are two other lines of fortifications, strengthened by bomb proofs and entanglements. The Russian attack, which forced the Japanese to summon three divisions of infantry from Kaiyuan, ceased with darkness, and the Russian detachment retired.

MEETING OF REPUBLICANS

To Discuss Gubernatorial Situation To Be Called Soon.

St. Paul, June 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—A big meeting of Representative Republicans, to be held in St. Paul soon, is on the tapis. According to the program, Senator Nelson will issue the call. Representative Cole of Walker is behind the movement, and he is understood to be traveling over the state securing signers to a petition for the conference. The scheme, so Representative Cole outlined it to a local politician, is to have a gathering of about thirty or more representative Republicans of the state and discuss the 1906 campaign with a view of harmonizing all interests. The gubernatorial situation will also be considered and known candidates requested to be present.

ANSWER WILL BE DELAYED

On Account of Unusual Length of the French Note.

Berlin, June 24.—The foreign office officials are busily engaged in studying the French note on Morocco, the unusual length of which will necessarily delay answering it. Emperor William's absence at Kiel, the foreign office says, will cause no delay in the negotiations, inasmuch as he is daily informed on all points, and his decisions are promptly given.

As the study of Premier Rouvier's answer progresses the fact becomes evident that he has left many points open for discussion, and from which further negotiations can continue. The greatest difference now seems to be in agreeing on whether Germany and France shall seek to reach a separate agreement before the meeting of the conference, thus eliminating many matters from international action. Germany apparently holds the view that it would be an act of discourtesy to the powers which have already agreed to attend the conference if she arranged any matters berore hand with France.

Official circles here continue to follow the affair with keen interest, but without anything like excitement, much less bellicose inclinations. They watch closely the movements of public opinion in France, and while it is recognized that the French people at large have grown much less chauvinistic toward Germany in the last few years, corresponding with the waning influence of the nationalist-clerical-military combination in French politics, some anxiety still prevails in Berlin lest the leaders of the opposition to the French government again succeed in inflaming the passions of the people and arouse a storm which the republican leaders would be unable to with stand.

PLAGUE AT PANAMA.

Panama, June 24.—A fatal case of bubonic plague was discovered at La Boca yesterday. The constant arrival of steamers from infected ports, which are received at La Boca without any extra precautions being taken as a source of contagion. The dead man had been working on board the steamer Chile, which the authorities of Guayaquil would not allow to enter that port.

THIRTY PERSONS DROWNED.

Vigo, Spain, June 24.—Advices received here today from the Minho river, which empties into the Atlantic near Caminha, say that thirty persons were drowned recently through the capsizing of a bark which had arrived in the river from Portugal.

TWO THOUSAND PEOPLE KILLED AND WOUNDED IN FIERCE RIOTS AT LODZ

Horrors of "Red Sunday" Surpassed By "Black Friday."

Cossacks and Infantry Fire Repeatedly Into Struggling Masses.

Bloodshed Begins Again Saturday, Many More Being Killed.

Lodz, Russian Poland, June 24.—Yesterday, "Black Friday" in Lodz, surpassed all the horrors of "Red Sunday" in St. Petersburg. While it is not yet possible to ascertain the exact number of the victims, estimates place the killed and wounded as high as 2,000.

The troubles here were initiated by the Social Democrats and Jewish bund, who determined to avenge their comrades killed in the rioting on Wednesday.

Thursday, the feast of Corpus Christi passed off quietly, but during the night workmen attacked the patrols. In this fighting two officers and seven Cossacks were killed. One of the latter was shot by a girl of 13 years.

At dawn Friday commenced a day of terror. The city was given up to bloodshed. Anarchy and fierce street fighting prevailed all day. Barricades were hurriedly constructed in the Jewish quarter at dawn. Men climbed to the roofs of houses, cutting telephone and telegraph wires to use for entanglements in the streets, while others cut dogn telegraph poles and used them in strengthening their barricades which already had been constructed and in building others.

Early in the day, two bombs were thrown from the crowd into the barracks, killing and wounding twenty soldiers. This started the shedding of blood which continued until after night fall.

At 11 o'clock, all the factory hands struck and flockd into the streets. Cossacks, dragoons and infantry charged the dense surging mobs time after time, firing volley after volley into the serried mass. The rioters later replied with revolvers while their comrades on roofs and in windows, joined in the fusilade. Some dashed vitriol from points of vantage on the troopers in the streets below. The burning fluid drove its victims into a frenzy and led to scenes of a terrible character. Fighting continued throughout the day, only diminished in its intensity at nightfall when the city was plunged into utter darkness as practically all street lamps had been destroyed. Even then, occasional volleys and isolated rifle shots were heard in different quarters, the troops having received orders to shoot any person appearing in the streets.

The dead were carted off to the cemeteries in military wagons, the troopers acting as undertakers, but this morning many dead and wounded were still lying in the streets and court yards.

Terrible, indeed, is the plight of the wounded, for medical aid is unobtainable and many are dying for the lack thereof.

There was a renewal of the bloodshed this morning. A regiment of dragoons and one of infantry have been ordered here from Warsaw.

The casualties up to noon today add eighteen killed or wounded to yesterday's appalling total. So far as yet ascertainable 130 persons were killed outright during the fighting of Friday and forty-one more died in the hospitals during the night. Of the wounded 320 sustained only slight injuries, which were attended to on the spot by the ambulance surgeons. All the hospitals of the city are filled to overflowing and owing to the insufficient number of beds, many of the wounded persons are lying on the floors.

All the shops, stores and factories are closed and business is at a complete deadlock.

The rioters this morning attempted to set fire to the government offices, but were scattered by a strong force of troops. Streets are heavily patrolled by Cossacks and infantry.

A workman was murdered in the streets during the night for refusing to strike.

THINKING HE KILLED FRIEND, ENDS LIFE.

Chicago, June 24.—Frank R. McCamyon, a waiter, believing that he had shot and fatally wounded a friend and was liable to arrest, committed suicide today. McCamyon had been quarreling with his wife and when two friends interfered he fired at one of them named Marshall. Marshall was unhurt, but McCamyon, believing otherwise, turned the revolver on himself, dying instantly.

VICTORIA CHINESE AID THE BOYCOTT.

Victoria, B. C., June 24.—Victoria's 6,000 Chinese are working energetically to aid the boycott declared by their nation against United States goods. A fund is being subscribed to aid in reimbursing coolies who lose wages at Chinese ports by their refusal to unload steamers carrying United States goods. The Chinese moreover will boycott United States goods and refuse to work for any one who is a United States citizen.

ROBBER GETS ONE YEAR.

Philippsburg, Mont., June 24.—George Hammond, the Bearmouth tram robber, has been convicted on his second trial in connection with the famous hold-up on the Northern Pacific railroad. The jury fixed his sentence at one year.

LOOMIS IS SENT ON A SECRET MISSION

Sails For Southampton By Orders of the President.

Will First Receive the Body of Paul Jones.

New York, June 24.—On a secret mission for the state department for which he was commissioned by President Roosevelt, Francis B. Loomis, assistant secretary of state, sailed for Southampton, today, on the steamer Philadelphia.

Concerning the mission, Mr. Loomis would only say: "I am not only going as a special ambassador to receive Paul Jones' body, but also have been commissiond by the president to perform a secret mission for the state department while abroad. I must decline positively to state what my mission is."

"Has it anything to do with peace?" was asked.

"I can say nothing," was the reply.

Mr. Loomis said he expected that his secret mission would prevent him from returning with the warship squadron which will bring the body of Admiral Paul Jones, as he had expected to do, but that he hoped to return in about a month. Mr. Loomis added that the exercises attending the departure of the body of Admiral Jones from France would probably be held on July 7 or 8 in the American church at Paris. Gen. Horace Porter, the retiring ambassador to France, Mr. Loomis said, has spent a large amount of his own funds in the search for and identification of the body and has not been reimbursed by the United States government.

SPECTACULAR MASS FEATURES MARK ATHLETES' CLOSING DAY

Indianapolis, June 24.—Notwithstanding the two days of hard work in marching and field contests, there has not been a serious case of illness among the 2,854 athletes assembled on the fair grounds for the North American Gymnastic union festival. Not a serious accident has occurred.

The program for this the closing day of the contests included the spectacular mass features, and the crowd of visitors in the city today is estimated at 25,000 people. While the grand stand near athletic field held 6,000, its capacity was exhausted several times.

The work began at 8 o'clock with group work in field sports and athletic events, including fencing, wrestling, pole vaulting, putting the shot, jumping and rope climbing. There was also a swimming contest at Broad Ripple park.

Following this work came mass exercises by the seniors', young women's and active turners' classes, 220-yard run, 120-yard hurdles, 400-yard relay race, teams contesting with four men each; model exercises by visiting teams, and Gilbert dancing by young women's classes.

The program brought on the field the St. Louis district in mass pyramids, the New York district of eight parallel bars, the Cleveland gymnastic societies in groupings, the German team on side and long horse work, and the North Cincinnati turnverein ladies' team, forty-eight in number, in Gilbert dancing.

The program will conclude late today with a massing of the 2,800 athletes in wand, dumb-bell and other exercises, under the direction of Hugo Fischer, the festival directer. There will also be a mass drill of all the young women in bar bell exercises and club swinging. Exhibitions will also be given by the team from Germany.

The festival is following the rule of other years by not awarding money prizes to winners. The prizes consist of laurel wreaths, carrying out an idea of the Greek gymnasts of old, and diplomas are awarded to turnvereins. There has always been a sentiment in the turnvereins strongly against the award of money for prizes, or any article of financial value.

Tonight there will be a general entertainment of the athletes and other visitors at the several turnvereins in the city. A business session will be held at the German house and also a meeting of the teachers of physical training. Tomorrow there will be a general all-day entertainment at Germania park. A number of special trains from Louisville, Milwaukee, Chicago, St. Louis and other cities are scheduled to bring large additions to the festival visitors. The festivities will close Monday.

DEATH AND DESTRUCTION IN AUTOMOBILE CASUALTIES

New York, June 24.—One man dead, three seriously injured and three others cut and bruised is the result of last night's automobile accident in Jerome avenue near Two Hundred and Twentieth street. The wreck occurred before the gates of Woodlawn cemetery. Paul Foster, whose skull was fractured and who died soon after reaching the hospital is said to have been a native of Boston.

Like many other serious motor accidents in and about New York recently, this one is said to have followed the use of the car without its owners knowledge or permission. The chauffeur had one leg fractured and his right ear was almost torn off. Three other ly cut. Seven persons were in the machine. They had visited the Empire City track to witness a 1,000 mile race against time. On starting home the car sped away into the avenue, but the driver miscalculated a turn and dashed headon into an iron trolley pole. So hard was the impact that the pole was broken in two, the machine was wrecked and the gasoline tank exploded.

The passengers were hurled in all directions. They were picked up by other motorists and hurried to a hospital.

About the same hour a collision occurred on Ocean parkway, Brooklyn, between a motor car and a mounted policeman. The latter sustained some broken ribs and possibly a fracture of the skull. The chaffeur was arrested. men had broken limbs and were severe-

NORWEGIAN SKIPPER ERASES SWEDEN FROM SHIP'S PAPERS

New York, June 24.—Capt. Nilsen, commander of the Norwegian ship Tjomo, has demonstrated his patriotism and recorded his good ship as the first to clear this port with papers from which all reference to Sweden had been eliminated. The biggest Norwegian flag Nilsen could find was flying from the masthead when the Tjomo passed down the bay.

Capt. Nilsen reached port Monday last, and showed his patriotism by ignoring the Swedish consulate until the custom house officials made him go there and enter his ship. Then he went through the formality of presenting his papers to the consul and allowing the ship to pass under the consuls' control.

The captain decided to make another effort at recognition when he visited the consulate to get his papers back and obtain his clearance papers. He sought Vice Consul Hansen and the latter filled out the papers, but the captain and before signing, carefully erased the word "Sweden" and the consul, himself a Norwegian, did not argue the question. He allowed the erasures to stand, signed the papers as many times as was necessary and then shook hands with the skipper.

BIRTH EVERY FIVE MINUTES IN N. Y.

New York, June 24.—Births in this city at the rate of one every five minutes are recorded by the health department for the past week, during which period 2,011 were reported. It was announced at the department that the birth rate of New York has now risen to about 31 per 1,000 and is higher than any other city in the United States. Five or six years ago, when there was so much talk about race suicide, the birth rate here was only 26 per 1,000. Last year the rate was 30 per 1,000. The prospect is now that in 1906 it will be 32.

DEFY THE LAW.

Women Teachers Decline to Give Their Ages.

Somerville, Mass., June 24.—Defying a city government, the school teacher of Somerville has refused to give her age, and she has won her point.

Alderman Laighton's ordinance providing for the publication of a pamphlet disclosing, among other things, the age of every city employe, is waste paper, so far as the school teachers are concerned.

Every other department has turned in its schedule in full, but when the school returns are made the column showing age will be left blank.

"We have about 400 women teachers and to each of these we sent a card to be filled in giving the different particulars asked for by Alderman Laighton's ordinance. On examining these on their return, I found that about half of the teachers had omitted to reply to the age question. Under the circumstances I shall turn in my list to the mayor, but I will not give the age of a teacher in any instance. It would be unfair to give the age in one case if not in all. Frankly I cant see how th city of Somerville would be benefited by knowing the exact age of its teachers. Some of those who refused are young, and others are middle-aged, but in no case did they give reasons for their refusal."

Mayor Chandler's first knowledge of this state of affairs came to him when he was asked what he intended to do about it. He was a little surprised, but on being assured how matters stood, said at once:

"There is no penalty, and certainly it should be all or none. If the superintendent sends me his list of teachers with the age column blank it won't worry me a bit."

GIRLS UNDER FOURTEEN

Farmed Out Into Chicago Households as Servants.

Chicago, June 24.—A system of virtual child slavery, in which children under 14 are "farmed out" into households in an attempt to solve the "servant girl problem," is a state of affairs that has been brought to the attention of compulsory education, following startling revelations in various justice courts of the city in the last few weeks. That such a system exists to an alarming degree is the declaration of Supt. Bodine, who Thursday secured the conviction of Mrs. Ottilie Krosnick on the charge of violating the compulsory education law.

"This is the tenth case of its kind that I have had in the last three weeks," said Mr. Bodine, "Judging from the testimony of various witnesses at the trials of these cases, I am convinced there are hundreds of children from institutions who are drudging as servants in many households of the city without being sent to school."

Warrants have been secured for several persons, many of whom are said to have taken children from institutions and forced them to work far beyond their strength. One case cited by Mr. Bodine involved a wealthy society woman, who admittedly is training a 13-year-old girl as a servant.

FIGHTING WHITE PLAGUE.

Electrical Treatment From Europe Will Be Tried.

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 24.—If the hopes of European savants and of Prof. Leopold Freund of the Allgemeinen Krankenhaus of Vienna, in the invention of a new electric machine are realized, the great "white plague" will soon be eradicated. The first machine of this kind that has crossed the ocean reached this city yesterday and is installed at the Cincinnati post graduate school of physiological therapeutics.

In Berlin, the sent of bacteriological research, in St. Petersburg, where Prof. Nikolsky of the Royal university, has tested it, its praises have been sung. Nikola Tesla, the great electrical genius, attempted to cure consumption by means of electricity, but failed. The new machine contains some of the ideas of Tesla. It is a ponderous arrangement of cylinders, coils and disks.

The patient under treatment is stripped to the waist, placed on a chair with one of the disks in front and another in the back of him about ten inches from the body. When the current is turned on a million or more volts are sent into the lungs without pain or discomfort. In addition the patient is kept on pure, substantial food, and given all the sunshine and fresh air he can get.

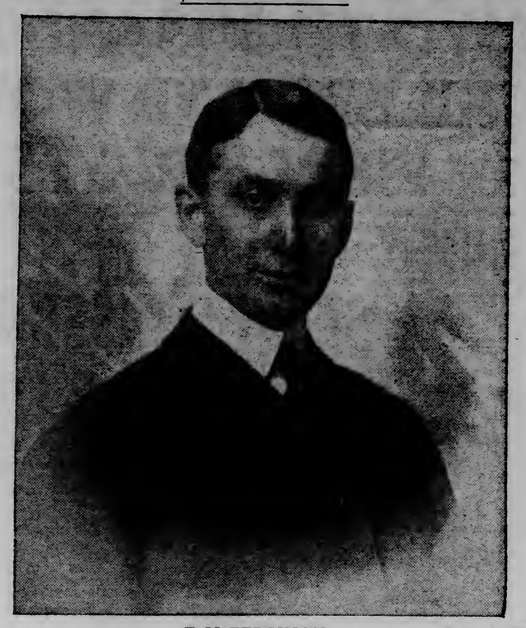
E. M. FERGUSON TO BE TENDERED BANQUET



E. M. FERGUSON. —Photo by Ely.

In recognition of the very efficient and valuable service E. M. Ferguson, president of the Commercial club, has rendered the city, state and nation in the attempt to do away with the private car line evil, Duluth business men will give a banquet in his honor in the club dining hall next Thursday evening, June 29.

It will be a notable occasion. Leading business and professional men of the city, with, it is expected, several men from outside points, will be in attendance. Probably 100 plates will be laid. The details of the banquet, with subjects of toasts, have not yet been arranged, but committees are now at work on the matter, and the program will be prepared within the next two or three days.

Mr. Ferguson, who, besides being an officer of the Duluth Commercial club, is president of the Western Fruit Jobbers' association, was the man who really started the fight against the private car line companies, and since the first move of the opposition was started, in the shape of a suit against the Michigan Central railroad for an alleged overcharge in the refrigeration of a carload of fruit sent to the Knudson-Ferguson Fruit company of Duluth from Michigan, he has energetically devoted himself to looking out for the people's side of the fight, and has been untiring in his efforts along this line, making several visits to Chicago and Washington to testify before the senate and interstate commerce commissions.

He only recently returned from the last of these trips to the nation's capital, where, with the assistance of R. S. Powell, the association's attorney, he put up such able arguments that it is believed members of the senate committee were convinced that all of the most important of his allegations were proven to be true. The matter of a final decision now rests with the senate, and it will probably be some little time yet before a decision a sto what steps shall be taken to remedy the evil will be rendered, but present indications are all against the private car line companies, and in favor of those who have been fighting them. It is generally believed the evil will be entirely done away with, and this condition of affairs is due almost entirely to the individual efforts of Mr. Ferguson. This being the case, Duluth business men believe that some special recognition of his work should be given and next week's banquet is the result.

BY CLEMENT'S ORDERS

Aged Cashier Changed Figures In Bank's Statement.

St. Paul, June 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—During the trial today of T. B. Clement, former president of the failed Faribault First National bank in the United States district court, where he is charged with having caused the failure of the bank, Charles N. Whitney, the aged cashier of the bank, testified that he had changed the figures in the bank statement to the comptroller at Mr. Clement's orders, to make the gold reserve of the bank show $2,000 more than it really was.

CROWLEY OFFERED

Sum of $150,000 For Ontario Iron Properties.

Fort Frances, Ont., June 24.—The capitalists and prospectors, headed by T. M. Crowley of the Soo, who passed through here some weeks ago on a trip of inspection of Mr. Crowley's iron properties thirty-five miles north, near Pipestone lake, have returned. They exhibit some samples of ore which assay sixty-five per cent. There are several million tons of the ore in sight, the lead in one place being 1,000 feet long and 200 feet wide.

Although Mr. Crowley has been offered $150,000 in cash for the properties as they are, he prefers to wait until they have been thoroughly tested before making a deal, and with that end in view, will leave for Toronto in a few days and return with experts, who will sink a shaft and do other development work. A member of the party discovered an immense deposit of nickel while on the trip.

RICH LAND

In Iowa May Be Opened to Settlement.

St. Paul, June 24.—A special to the Dispatch from Sioux City, Iowa, says: Proceedings, which will likely throw open to settlement $1,000,000 worth of Iowa's richest land, have been started in O'Brien county by the government. Of the 322,000 acres in Iowa included in the old land grant to the Sioux City & St. Paul railroad, about 12,000 acres are still in the hands of those who purchased from the railroad. Though these farmers have been in possession of the land for the past fifteen or twenty years, they are threatened with loss of their homes and all their improvements by proceedings citing them to show cause, within sixty days, why their patents purchased from the railroad should not be revoked and the land thrown open to homesteaders. The land is worth $75 to $100 an acre. The balance of this land has been fought for through every court, until decisions have deprived the purchasers from the railroads of their lands and given them to the "squatters." The land at issue now is that which was never contested for by squatting homesteaders.

BOODLERS

In Milwaukee County Board Will Be Exposed.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 24.—According to an interview with Register of Deeds Otto Seidel, Jr., he will tell the grand jury about every boodle deal in which members of the county board have participated in six years.

"Deals," involving between $14,000 and $20,000, he says, will be laid bare.

The principal cases in which money was used, Seidel states, are in the purchase of a site for a morgue and furniture for the county hospital.

Just what names will appear on indictments is not known yet, but it is evident that State's Attorney McGovern expects to reap a rich harvest from the confessions that Seidel is said to have made and is expected to make.

One of the witnesses before the grand jury yesterday was James L. Gates, a wealthy lumberman of Milwaukee. His appearance before the committee lends color to the belief that the grand jury will also investigate certain actions of the legislature.

The surprise of the day was when Francis Ferari and Frank L. Alberts, owner and manager of the Ferrari street shows, appeared as witnesses. They were asked concerning certain gambling devices which had been permitted in connection with their show here, and it was reported that they were given these privileges for a consideration by certain city officials. The gambling which took place on the first day of the Woodman convention was stopped by the police.

In special term of court this morning Judge Dibell made an order in the divorce case of Caroline Howenstein against William Howenstein, permitting Mr. Howenstein to amend his answer on payment of $50 attorney's fees before Sept. 1 next. He is given ten days within which to make his election whether he will pay the fees required.

James Rogers and Jennie Odell, both of this city, were united in marriage this morning by Court Commissioner C. E. Adams, in the office of the judge of probate.

An information of insanity has been filed in probate court against Victor Hermanson, from the range. His examination will be conducted this afternoon.

Judge Ensign held a term of juvenile court this morning to meet and listen to the reports of various juveniles who are under parole and who come within jurisdiction of the court.

The fire department had a spectacular run just at the noon hour today, to the corner of Lake avenue and Superior street, but the blaze did little or no damage.

If you need floor wax, varnish or paint, you will find a good stock at Northern Harware Co.

In the personal damage suit of Peter Johnson against the Itasca Paper company of Grand Rapids, Minn., the defendants filed an answer yesterday in United States court. The plaintiff claims that he was injured through being put at work for which he was not engaged. The defendant claims that Johnson was hired to pick wood and if he went at anything else but wood picking he did so without orders.

Julian S. Eaton has lost his contest case against Joseph Turcott, the contest involving title to the south half of the southwest quarter and the south half of the southeast quarter of 27-6-23. The contest case went against Eaton in the local land office and he appealed to the department of the interior. Secretary Hitchcock has now ruled against him and the decision has just been received at the local land office.

Miss Bessie Gordon of Twenty-first avenue east entertained today at a charming luncheon and handkerchief shower, in honor of Miss Gertrude Butchert, whose wedding will take place in July. The table decorations were of pink and white with streamers of feathery ferns from the chandelier. The favors were tiny silver slippers filled with rice. Covers were laid for the guest of honor, Miss Butchart, Mrs. J. T. Melvin and Misses Myrtle Butchert, Glenn Gauld, Clara Murray, Glen Murray, Lillian Brown, Ruth Lathrop, Barbara Haug, Emma Williams, Bazle McIntyre.

Action for a divorce from Michael J. Glenny has been instituted in district court by Nellie Glenny of Eveleth, Minn. In her complaint Mrs. Glenny alleges that she is 30 and her husband is 50 years old and that they were married at Eveleth, Jan. 22, 1903. Desertion is charged from April 29, 1903. They have no children.

E. F. Barto, formerly manager of the Hotel Lenox, is now manager of the Rogers' hotel of Minneapolis, and not of St. Paul, as The Herald announced Thursday.

Charles Nordeen, agent at Hibbing for the Duluth Brewing & Malting company, who has been arrested on the charge of misappropriating $593 of the firm's money, appeared in district court this morning and his bail was fixed at $1,500. Mr. Nordeen has not yet furnished bonds. His hearing has been set in municipal court for next Tuesday.

John Glode of Ely, Minn., has filed an application to be adjudged a bankrupt. Mr. Glade ran the Vail hotel at Ely. He places his debts at $1,987.15 and his assets at $400, all of which is exempt.

The Duluth Yacht club is now making arrangements for a motor boat race to be held on the bay July Fourth, in addition to the free-for-all sail boat contest.

CHILD HUSBAND

Would Secure Divorce From His Child Wife.

New York, June 24.—Asserting that his marriage on June 14 of last year to Miss Lola Marie Brokaw, 15 years old, is illegal because he is an infant, Percy Ellsworth Williams, 17 years old, of Livingston, Essex county, N. J., has instituted suit for divorce. The boy and girl were classmates at the high school in Roseland. Williams' father is wealthy and Miss Brokaw's parents are in moderate circumstances. The boy's father learned of his infatuation and forbade him to talk to his little sweetheart. Determined to have a wife of his own choosing, the boy and girl called upon a justice of the peace. Williams said he was 21 years old and that Miss Brokaw was 18. The justice performed the ceremony. The child wife has engaged counsel and will contest the attempt to divorce her.

SMITH WOULD INTERVENE

Judge Dibell Hears Arguments In Mineral Lease Case.

In Judge Dibell's room, in special term of court, this morning there was quite an array of legal talent when arguments were made for and against the motion of Pearl H. Smith of Superior to become an intervenor in the action brought by the state of Minnesota against Mabel Evans and others, a suit instituted by the state over a mineral lease obtained by Mabel Evans and over which litigation has also been started in United States court.

T. D. O'Brien of St. Paul appeared for Mr. Smith; J. L. Washburn of Duluth appeared for Mabel Evans, B. E. Baker and Coryate Wilson; D. G. Cash for George A. Flinn and I. C. Patterson and Judge Douglas for the state of Minnesota.

The intervention was opposed by both the state and the defendants, the latter arguing that they did not want any entanglements in the action for trial.

Mr. Smith claims that the action was brought to have declared void and cancelled a certain mineral lease issued by the state to Mabel Evans. One of the grounds on which the cancellation is sought is that the contract was issued as the result of fraud and a conspiracy on the part of certain defendants and that there was no authority for its issuance.

It is also charged that Mr. Smith made application for the mineral lease on the same land covered by the lease issued to Mabel Evans and that the applications were pending at the same time and that it was the duty of the state to have refused both applications and required competitive bids for the lease.

Judge Dibell heard the arguments and took the matter under advisement.

The trial of the cause at issue has been set for July 6 next.

ENGLISH LUTHERANS.

Synod to Meet Next Week In Racine, Wis.

The Church of the Holy Communion, Racine, Wis., will entertain the "English Evangelical Synod of the Northwest," at its fifteenth meeting, beginning June 27. Besides congregations in Milwaukee, Racine, Kenosha, Cedarburg, Beloit and Plattville, the synod embraces work in Winnipeg, Fargo and Sioux Falls, having its central and oldest churches in the Twin Cities of Minnesota. The growth has been most rapid in recent years in Wisconsin. Seven years ago there was but one church with 250 members, now there are ten, with fifteen hundred members, and Superior and Madison opened up.

The opening sermon will be delivered on Tuesday evening by Rev. A. J. D. Haaff of St. Paul, president of the synod. Wednesday evening, Rev. G. H. Trabert, D. D., of Minneapolis and the general secretary for foreign missions; Rev. George Drash of Philadelphia, will discuss "Our Work in Other Lands." The work "At Our Doors" will be treated on Thursday by Rev. John Keehley of Minneapolis, presenting "The Lord's Work, by the Lord's People, in the Lord's Way," and Rev. Frank S. Beistel of St. Paul speaking on "Inner Missions," deaconess, hospital and orphanage work. Prof. Alfred Ramsey and General Secretary G. F. Gehr will plead the cause of an enlarged ministry and increased support of the Chicago Theological seminary on Friday. The day sessions will be devoted to business.

Saturday will be given to the Sunday school convention, to which each school may send five delegates.

Sunday morning's sermon in Racine will be delivered by Rev. A. J. Reichert of Red Wing, while other clerical delegates fill neighboring pulpits. "Our Work at Home" will be discussed on Sunday evening by the General Council's Superintendent Rev. J. C. Kunzman of Philadelphia, and Field Secretary for Minnesota and the Dakotas Rev. F. E. Jenson.

Rev. J. L. Murphy of Duluth, is to discuss the topic "The Sunday School Today as an Important Factor in the Preservation of National Life and Liberty," at the Sunday school meeting Saturday.

CHANGE IN VENUE

May Be Taken In the Koch Case.

New Ulm, Minn., June 24.—Gen. H. W. Childs, chief counsel of the state in the Dr. G. R. Koch murder case which will come up for trial for the third time at Mankato July 6, was in the city yesterday, consulting with his associate, Attorney Albert Pfaender, in relation to new evidence which is in the possession of the state. Electric light wires are being strung into the former offices occupied by Dr. Koch in the Strickler block, and tests will be made by the state as to whether a person standing on the porch of a near-by building can look into the office under the glare of the electric light.

It will be remembered that a witness for the state at the last trial testified that she saw Dr. Koch put some article in the pocket of his cravenette overcoat which was supposed to have been the hammer with which Dr. L. A. Gebhardt was killed.

The defense denied that such movements could be seen from the porch mentioned. It has been intimated that in case a jury cannot be secured within a reasonable time the state will ask for a change of venue to have the case transferred to either St. James or New Ulm. It is proposed to have the subpoenas for jurymen served on men living in the rural districts, as anyone living in the city has generally expressed an opinion. When questioned whether the state would ask for a change of venue Gen. Childs neither affirmed nor denied that such was the case.

"SACRED JEWEL"

Given to Mrs. Conger By Empress Dowager.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 24.—Mrs. E. H. Conger, wife of the ambassador to Mexico and recent minister to China, arrived in Des Moines yesterday. Secreted about her neck she wore the sacred and charmed jewel which has been constantly in the possession of China's rulers for thousands of years.

The empress dowager, in her sorrow at the departure of Mrs. Conger from Pekin, took the jewel from her basom and fastened it about Mrs. Conger's neck. No tribute with more meaning could have been bestowed.

"I scarcely knew what to do" said the wife of the minister yesterday. "At first I feared that I had no right to accept the jewels. But I rallied that it would be taken as an insult for me to refuse it."

"The empress dowager is a grand woman," said Mrs. Conger. "No, it is not true that I have converted her to Christian Science. I am a Scientist, and the empress dowager and I have many beliefs in common. I have had the honor to teach her much that she believes about the Bible."

The jewel given Mrs. Conger is a large amber stone hung to a heavy cord and adorned with no end of silk tassels.

PORTLAND AS A SUMMER RESORT

Men Going There Should Carry Topcoats and Ladies Should Not Wear Network Waists—Ideal Ocean Resorts a Few Hours Away—The Absence of Sizzling Summer Heat Makes Some Easterners Homesick.

Portland, Or., June 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—If I were living in the East this year and had friends who contemplated attending the Portland fair I should give them one little piece of advice: For men—take a vest along; don't expect to be comfortable all day and evening in a two-piece suit. For women—carry a wrap, and don't wear network waists.

Now this advice is not at all impertinent; it is a simple piece of fatherly admonition. If you imagine that the Portland climate is a hot one you are sadly mistaken. The only thing that makes an Easterner homesick when in Portland is the summer weather. He sometimes longs for the sweltering heat of New York, or St. Louis, or New Orleans—such as he has been accustomed to all his life in summer time—just to remind him of home. He wants to take off his coat and vest, remove his collar, open the neckband of his shirt, and sit out where he can sweat like a stoker in a gas-plant furnace, and feel at home. When in Portland these June days he finds the weather so cool that he usually wears a light topcoat, if he goes out early in the morning, or stays out late at night; he sleeps under double blankets every night during the summer, and never gets any real sweltering, even in the middle of the day—unless he chooses to go down into the stoke-hole of some ocean vessel lying in Portland's splendid harbor.

Of course this makes the native and life-long resident of a hot climate very homesick. A man I met the other day had just received a letter from his folks, who were living in an upstairs flat in the fashionable West end of St. Louis. They wrote that the weather was so stifling that they found it necessary to remove to a downstairs flat. For more than two weeks the Portland temperature, at the warmest part of the day, had not exceeded 84 deg., and most of the time it had been from 15 to 30 deg. below that figure. The St. Louis man wrote for his folks to come out to Portland, the peerless summer resort.

People to the eastward, who are looking around for some watering place where they can cool off, or a mountain resort, where enlivening breezes are the rule, should consider Portland's claims this season. Portland is both a watering place and a mountain resort, with a big exposition thrown in for good count. It is only 100 miles from the Pacific ocean, by boat on the Columbia, or by rail along the banks of that mighty and picturesque stream. Several seashore resorts near to the mouth of the Columbia, where surf bathing as fine as any in the world may be had, draw many citizens and tourists from Portland. It is a ride of but four or five hours from this city to the ocean, passing en route some of the most wonderful scenery to be found on the map. When you get to the Pacific you are but a few miles from the site of old Fort Clatsop, where Lewis and Clark spent the memorable winter of 1805-6, and you pass through Astoria, the oldest town on the North Pacific coast, founded by John Jacob Astor, the New York fur trader, whose descendants still own more or less of the real estate in New York city. Washington Irving wrote one of his most interesting books about Astoria and the Astor fur-trading expeditions.

But if it is summer resorting rather than ancient history that you seek, the seaside places along the Oregon and Washington beaches will satisfy your soul. One of the favorite coast resorts for Portland people is Seaside, where there are many cosy little cottages. The rental of these cottages, completely furnished, is surprisingly low—much lower than the rates charged for similar accommodations at Long Branch, Asbury Park, Atlantic City and other Atlantic coast resorts. Many families from afar have taken advantage of this opportunity and have rented cottages at Seaside for the exposition season; they run up to Portland every now and then, see the exposition and participate in its social functions, then go back to the shore and resume their ocean dips. Long Beach, on the Washington shore, is another nearby resort which is highly popular. Here also are cottages for rent. Summer hotels abound at both these seashore resorts, with the usual round of "hops" and other diversions.

But it is not necessary for the tourist to go to the seashore to cool off at any time during the summer, Portland being cold enough for all practical purposes. There is no really hot month here. Ever since the exposition opened the days and evenings have been delightfully cool. People who go cut to the fair to spend the evening always carry light wraps. Whether they sit on the slope of Lakeview terrace, listened to the music by the Innes band, or stroll through the Trail, taking in a show here and there, they find no places where it is too hot to be comfortable. In some respects the Trail is said to be a "warm" place, but the adjective applies only to the amusement attractions.

One of the most delightful of these attractions for a summer evening, by the way, is Bolossy Kiralfy's "Carnival of Venice," which opened last week. This is altogether an outdoor affair. People sit on seats, arranged in the form of an amphitheater, open to the sky. Between the spectators and the stage is a wide sheet of real water, from Guild's lake, upon which floats various Venetian craft that are used during the course of the spectacle. The Trail has several outdoor attractions, but the indoor ones are not marred by excessive summer heat, as has been the case at former expositions.

Just to show by actual figures how cool Portland is during June, it may be stated that the records of the weather bureau in Portland, covering a period of thirty-three years, show a mean normal temperature of 62 deg.

The warmest June known in Portland has an average temperature of 66 deg. This was in 1889. The coldest June was in 1893, when the average temperature was 58. In thirty-three years there have been but two days in June when the temperature reached 99. These dates were June 17, 1876, and June 29, 1904. In the same period there were two June days when the temperature went as low as 39 deg.—June 4, 1875, and June 6, 1889.

For thirty-three years the average rain in June in Portland has been 1.70 inches, and there was an average of ten days, with a precipitation of .01 inch or more. The greatest June precipitation was 5.38 inches, in 1888, and the least, .08 inch, in 1883. These figures clear Portland of the suspicion of being a city of heavy rains.

For July and August the average temperatures are but little higher than that of June. Just now Portland is a perfect bower of roses. It has been estimated that at the present moment no less than 10,000,000 of roses are blooming in this city. Roses are so cheap here, on account of their abundance, that anybody may have an armful merely for the asking. People carry away bouquets of roses, presented by the generous householders, which would cost $5 anywhere east of the Cascade mountain range. Roses that would bring $3 a dozen in New York are given away here by the bushel.

Many families are camping out in tents on the glorious hills surrounding Portland. In a park south of the city is a large G. A. R. encampment, open all the season, for the use of Grand Army men and their families. The veterans are expected to furnish their own sleeping tents, but they have the use of the dining tent and the rest of the camping outfit, and are warmly welcomed by their comrades of the Orogen G. A. R. department.

But it is not necessary for a family to camp out; that is simply a free choice for those who like camp life. Portland is full of hotels and boarding houses, lodging houses and private residences, most of which are on the outlook for guests at very reasonable rates. Although the fair attendance has exceeded expectations during the first two weeks of the exposition period, averaging more than 10,000 daily admissions, the city is by no means full of people, and there are rooms to spare. A remarkable feature of this exposition, as it appears to one who has been the round of big fairs, is the fact that within a stone's throw of the main entrance there are tiptop square meals to be had, cleanly and neatly served, for 25 cents, while for 15 cents a regular dinner, without the finishing trimmings, may be had. All of which goes to show that Portland is not a bad place for a person of rigid economy to spend the summer in; while for the tourist who cares to stop at a high-class hotel, there are several hostelries where the exclusiveness and comfort of a private bath may be enjoyed at rates not exceeding those charged today for the same class of accommodations in St. Louis, Chicago or New York.

Important events follow each other thick and fast at the fair. The fifth annual convention of the National Good Roads' association began its sessions here June 21, running four days, with thousands of delegates present. The Innes band plays daily during June. A notable musical event was the rendition of "Parsifal" by this band on Sunday, June 18, from the exposition band stand on the shore of Gild lake.

Motion Filed In Case In U. S. Court.

A motion in the McCutcheon-Powers case was filed today in United States court by the defendant's attorney, C. O. Baldwin. The motion is to have the plaintiff put up security for the costs of the defendant to the amount of $2,500. The motion will be argued before Judge Morris on or before July 1.

Affidavits were filed along with the motion to show that Mr. Powers' costs for witnesses and $40 clerk's fees for the last trial of the case amounted to $863, and that he expects to have still more witnesses during the coming trial.

We Beg To Acknowledge

with sincerest thanks, the most extraordinary and generous response the people of Duluth are giving our first invitation to a Columbia sale. Be sure, we appreciate it.

You must have noticed that we did not use any of the time-worn means of the professional sale-makers. We did not bombard you with flaring dodgers, no brass band heralded our opening, and no hideous canvas signs hide the beautiful front of the Burrows building. In advertising prices we used no coal-black figures, four inches in height; nor words from Barnum's bombastic vocabulary, ten inches in length; nor added aught to the real values to make the bargains look bigger.

Yet, during all his long Duluth career, our predecessor never had cash receipts in any four days, which in any way approached our showing. It is truly wonderful, and we feel like yelling Rah-Rah, in the most approved college-boy style, but the Boss scolded us for that gentle "cry of triumph," which escaped us after we saw the first day's result, so we'll have to muffle our drum.

The Burrows Sale Is To Continue

indefinitely, and in ridding the store of all garments and articles with the Burrows label, we have to dispose of such an enormous stock that no one need be in any particular hurry. We hope that everyone was waited on properly since the store re-opened; but, if any man, woman or child bought anything during the rush that was not just what they wanted after they looked it over at home, or did not fit just right, please do us the favor to return or exchange it, have it altered, or get your money back.

HE BOOSTS DULUTH

Maj. Charles L. Potter Tells Interesting Things About City.

Invites American Society Civil Engineers To Convene Here.

In Maj. Charles L. Potter and F. A. Cokefair, local members of the American Society of Civil Engineers, Duluth had two ardent advocates for the 1906 convention to be held in this city. Both of these engineers gave all the time they could possibly spare to a personal canvass of the 500 members attending the Cleveland convention and. Maj. Potter, when he had finally to cut his visit short and return to Duluth by reason of the expiration of his furlough, turned over to Mr. Cokefair, who was to continue the campaign, all the data that he had gathered, in addition to such suggestions that Mr. Cokefair might have prepared himself.

In getting this data before the members of the society in view of the fact he could not remain to address the convention, Maj Potter addressed a letter to be read to each member, which gives a comprehensive idea of the things Duluth and this vicinity has to offer in the way of attractions not only to civil engineers, but to all classes of tourists. In this letter he said:

"I come here to represent a small city in the Great Northwest—Duluth, the city that made Proctor Knott famous. We want the American Society of Civil Engineers to hold its next annual convention with us.

"At Duluth you will have one of the greates lessons to be found anywhere in the expeditious handling of freight from land to water and from water to land. Duluth-Superior harbor ranks fourth among the ports of the United States in receipts and shipments of freight and, when you remember that this tonnage is handled in an open season of from seven to eight months, you can get some idea of the rate at which the work is carried on.

"Duluth-Superior harbor is one of the finest natural harbors in the country, having forty-nine miles of available water front. We have the largest ore docks in the world, the largest elevator in the world; sawmills that turn out from four to five hundred millions of feet of lumber each year; a modern blast furnace with coke ovens attached; the largest draw-bridge in the word and the aerial ferry, the only one in the United States and the third in the world.

"But, I think the invitations and circulars sent out by the Commercial club give you all of these attractions and statistics.

"Whenever the word Duluth is mentioned it generally brings forth a shiver and a request for information as to how many weeks it takes to get there and back. But Duluth is not inaccessible; it can be reached in about twelve hours from Chicago by one of the best equipped trains in the Northwest, and from Minneapolis and St. Paul by at least nine first class trains every twenty-four hours, and it can be reached from Buffalo by boat in four days, making one of the most beautiful trips in the world.

"Three large steamers, the Juniata and Tionesta of the Anchor line, and the North West of the Northern Steamship company — three floating palaces—cover this route. They leave Buffalo, and make their first stop at the beautiful city of Cleveland, then at Detroit, Mackinac Island, the Sault, Marquette, Houghton, and finally at Duluth. They pass in daylight through the Detroit river, St. Clair river, St. Mary's river and the Portage Lake Ship canals, in all of which the government has done extensive works of improvement. They stop at Mackinac long enough for a drive around the beautiful island. Undoubtedly the stop at the Soo can be made long enough to visit the power plant of the Lake Superior company, and at Houghton long enough to visit the great Calumet and Hecla copper mine, its stamp mills and smelters.

"As trips of interest, we have first the Minnesota iron mines. To a majority of you this probably means simply holes, dark holes in the ground; but most of our mines are different from anything else in the country. There are no shaft houses and hoisting rigs, but plain, open pits, some of them covering hundreds of acres, where the iron is mined with steam shovels on railroad tracks, dumped into cars and started directly on its long journey by land and water to Pennsylvania, which only a few years ago was practically the only iron-producing state. When once started it never stops until its journey is finished. The time of transfer from rail to steamer is so slight that it cannot be considered as a stop, but merely a slowing down for a few minutes. Several of these mines reach their million tons per annum, and the cost of mining, loading and starting on its long journey is only a few cents per ton.

"Free transportation by special trains will be furnished members to these mines, which lie seventy to one hundred miles north of Duluth.

"The second trip of interest will be the harbor of Duluth-Superior, with its many plants for handling ore, coal, grain and lumber. Boat transportation will be furnished free and an opportunity given to see the many interesting features, including plants just mentioned, the blast furnace with its coke ovens, and the government works of improvement.

"At Superior entrance to the harbor, the government will be doing a work which has attracted engineers from all over the country and Europe and even far-off but mighty little Japan. The work consists of putting concrete successfully in mass at a depth of twenty-two feet under water in two canal piers over a mile in combined length, and containing nearly 100,000 cubic yards of concrete, eighty per cent of which will be under water when completed. An inspecting engineer, now a member of the Panama Canal commission stated that he believed there was no better place in the world to see the successful handling of concrete under peculiar conditions.

"As a third point of interest the Great Northern Power company is developing electrically the St. Louis river above Duluth, and free transportation will be furnished to their works. As to what they are doing, my colleague, Mr. Cokefair, will tell you something after I have finished.

"As a last but no means least attraction, the members and the ladies (of course the ladies are included in all of the trips) will be taken over the quite famous boulevard drive, along the hill several hundred feet above Lake Superior, and overlooking the cities, the harbor and the lake.

"We have only a few members in Duluth, but we will try to make you, if you so favor us, remember your visit to the Zenith City of the Unsalted Sea."

Maj. and Mrs. Potter left Cleveland on the steamer Wolvin for Duluth a few days ago and are soon expected home. Mr. Cokefair is expected back by rail some time today, and when he arrives the Duluth engineers will probably learn whether Duluth is to be favored next year or whether some other city had stronger attractions to offer.

HER LIFE STORY

Told Without Reserve By Mrs. Eleanor Toomey at St. Paul.

Startling and Surprising Facts Are Revealed By Handsome Plaintiff.

St. Paul, June 24.—The sensations promised in the Toomey-Bettingen $25,000 breach of promise suit came yesterday.

Mrs. Toomey was on the stand all day under a fire of cross-examination.

Mrs. Toomey admitted that she had been "slumming" and told with whom she had visited disreputable places.

She also told freely of her indiscretions with Dr. Bettingen.

Often she hesitated in answering the pointed questions put by Attorney E. S. Durment.

But she answered, sometimes in a voice so low she could hardly be heard, sometimes as clear and defiant.

The searching questions outlined in part the defense. Mrs. Toomey must explain her behavior since the time she met Dr. Bettingen.

Point blank she was asked whether she had lived in a resort on South Washington street.

But Mrs. Toomey stood the ordeal with nerves of steel.

"No," came the clear answer.

A curious crowd of spectators thronged the courtroom, pressing eagerly forward as the questions indicated that the answers might involve some of St. Paul's gay business men and clubmen.

Mrs. Toomey took the stand as soon as court convened, having been left in Attorney Durment's hands for cross-examination when court adjourned Thursday. Mr. Durment plunged at once into the important points, his first question to Mrs. Toomey being:

"Was there any agreement for you to stay away until the divorce was granted?"

"Yes, there was an agreement for alimony."

"For a money consideration? What was the amount?"

"It was $4,000."

"How much money was paid you?"

"One thousand, three hundred and fifty dollars."

"Is that all you got?"

"No; that is all I got then. I was paid all."

"You got the $1,350 then and was to get the other if you stayed away until the divorce was granted?"

"Yes."

"Who is taking care of you?"

"My people look after me."

"Did you go to see a lawyer in New York about reopening the divorce case?"

"Yes; he was a lawyer by profession; a friend of my father's."

"He did it as a personal favor; sent the telegram denying the charges made in the suit."

"Did you go to see George C. Squires in New York?"

"Yes."

"About opening the divorce case?"

"No; about this suit."

"What names have you gone by?" asked Mr. Durment.

"I was on the stage as Margaret Busby."

"What name were you married under?"

"My grandfather's name, Eleanor McKinney Gilman. He adopted me."

"What is your maiden name?"

"Eleanor Margaret McKinney."

"When were you known as Margaret Ferguson?"

"I never went under that name."

"When were you adopted by your grandfather?"

"I lived with him several years in England."

"What was his name?"

"James N. Gilman."

"Is he living?"

"No; he died three years ago."

Then Attorney Durment read from the complaint about trips to San Francisco and Chicago, to which Mrs. Toomey objected.

"I never went unless Mr. Toomey went with me."

"Are these charges false?" And Mr. Durment read of acquaintanceships with unknown men.

"I only had two, and they were friends of Mr. Toomey as well as myself."

Then Mrs. Toomey was asked about visiting Dr. Bettingen at the chief of police's house.

"I asked him (Dr. Bettingen) to go up on the car with me. He said, 'I won't go up on the car. Toomey will kill me.' He had been drinking."

"Was he drunk?"

"No, not drunk. It was his usual state."

Then Mr. Durment read the charge that Mrs. Toomey broke up a Thanksgiving dinner and went to visit Dr. Bettingen at his office.

"That is untrue. We didn't have dinner that day."

"It is charged that you received a receipted bill from one Ward. Is that true?"

Mr. Donnelly objected to this question, which was withdrawn.

"Did you know Ward?"

"Yes."

"Did he pay your hotel bill?"

"Yes. I was in a hurry to catch a train. I said, 'Will you pay this and send the bill to me?'"

"Was there a letter signed 'Charles' containing four $100-bills?"

"Yes. It was from a relative of mine, Charles McKinney.

"Is he living?"

"He is in Denver."

"What is he doing?"

"I don't know. He is interested in mines."

"Does he live in Ohio?"

"That is another man."

"Then you know the Ohio man?"

"Yes."

"Did he pay Mr. Toomey $5,000 on that account?"

"I don't know a thing about that."

"Did you see him about it?"

"Yes."

"Where?"

"In New York, at the Waldorf. I told him what I had heard and asked him about it."

Then she told of letters from the man in question aswing her to dine.

"I said, 'Did you put up any money?'"

"He said, 'No.'"

Mr. McKinney had often written to her asking her to dine with him when in New York.

"How many letters?" she was asked.

"I don't know, I gave them all to Mr. Toomey when I came back."

"When did Dr. Bettingen visit you at your apartments on Dayton avenue?"

"I don't just remember. I think you were out of the city," looking at Mr. Durment.

"That wouldn't make any difference, I was not wanted there," said the attorney, amid a laugh.

Dr. Bettingen's visit of Nov. 14 was the only time he called on her at her Dayton avenue home except once, when he went there and took her mail.

"What evidence did Mr. Toomey have against Dr. Bettingen?"

"The locket. Mr. Toomey found it in my room while I was out. I heard he had a photograph made of it. Dr. Bettingen told me to give him the locket so they would not find it. I said, 'That's all over, they have a photograph of it.' He said, 'For God's sake protect me or I will jump over the high bridge.'"

Next the cross-examination referred to Dr. Bettingen's visits to the Aberdeen when he stayed all night.

Mrs. Toomey said Miss McDermott left the third day, but that her guest was aware of what had been going on.

"How do you know?"

"I don't want to answer," was the response.

After a long pause Mrs. Toomey said: "Well, she saw us in bed together. She saw Dr. Bettingen shave in the morning."

"That was why she left."

"Yes."

"Did you and Mr. Toomey have trouble when you were in Florida?"

Then Mrs. Toomey told of their visit to the Palm Beach hotel. She went to the clubhouse one evening. The house detective came to her and told her to go to a certain room. She went.

"I broke in the door. Mr. Toomey was in bed with this woman, Mrs. Hogan.

"I went over to a stand and picked up a necklace as amomento. I brought it home and gave it to my maid, Elizn, who sold it. It was worth about $100.

"Mr. Toomey brought Mrs. Hogan to our home. I never spoke to the woman. Mr. Toomey and Mrs. Hogan started for the theater one evening, but it appeared afterward that Mrs. Hogan hid in a closet.

"Dr. Bettingen came, undressed, and came into bed. He got up and left before it was time for Mr. Toomey to return. Mrs. Hogan saw all this."

Mr. Durment read from the St. Paul Daily News of Oct. 15 a report of the Toomey divorce case.

Mrs. Toomey said the testimony that she had stolen the necklace was absolutely false.

"That is one of the things I came back to right," said Mrs. Toomey. "I knew Mr. Toomey told that story to protect himself and hurt me."

"You didn't sell the jewels?"

"No. I had Mrs. Hogan put out of my house."

"When did you first come to St. Paul?"

"It was eleven or twelve years ago. I visited Mrs. Knauff at the Ryan. I stayed two or three days. I had known her in Seattle."

"I visited St. Paul frequently and met Mr. Toomey in 1898 or 1899."

"When were you here again?"

"When I was sent for by Mr. Toomey. He was in the hospital. It was in February of the same year I first met him.

"I met Mr. Toomey at the Windsor hotel. Miss Johnson, the stenographer, introduced us."

"Did you ever board with Nina Clifford?"

"I did not."

"Were you ever there?"

"I never lived at that place?"

"Were you ever at 147 South Washington street, an evil resort?"

"Well, I was there one evening. I went out with a crowd of people, if that is what you mean."

"I went, too, with Dr. Bettingen."

"Before or after you were married to Mr. Toomey?"

"After, when I went with Dr. Bettingen."

"We went about 10 o'clock one night. I waited until Dr. Bettingen made a professional call at the place. I never went again.

"Did you meet Nina Clifford there?"

"Yes."

"Do you know a woman that goes by the name of Mrs. O. C. Rice?"

"No, sir."

"You were never at 147 East Sixth street?"

"No, sir."

"Did you know the character of the place?"

"Dr. Bettingen said she was a good patient and he tried to be nice to her. I told him I thought it was not proper."

"Didn't you take a hack and go to Nina Clifford's with a man last February or March and stay two hours?"

"No."

"Where does Miss Fleming live?"

"New York city."

"Where?"

"On Twenty-ninth street."

"Why did she register as 'Mrs.' Fleming at one of the hotels when she first came here?"

"I don't know. I suppose it was by mistake."

Attorney E. S. Durment's cross-examination then followed in detail Mrs. Toomey's whereabouts since the suit against Dr. Bettingen was begun. Closely he questioned her as to her father, who, she said, had been supporting her since she left Mr. Toomey. His full name was James A. McKinney. He is now in Honolulu, sailing a week ago. Before that time he lived at Young's hotel, Boston. Her father had lived at Portland, Or., for twenty years. Mrs. Toomey lived with him until she went to school.

"You lived at home?" Mr. Durment asked.

"Yes, with my father, my grandfather, my grandmother and my brother and my sister," was the prompt answer.

Dr. Bettingen's counsel decided that no further cross-examination was necessary, and Mr. Donnelly began the redirect questioning.

Mrs. Toomey was shown an article in the St. Paul Daily News of Oct. 15, 1904, containing testimony in connection with the Toomey divorce case.

"That is the article that inspired my telegram from New York to the St. Paul papers to deny everything in connection with the divorce case. I wanted the truth known."

Attorney Donnelly showed Mrs. Toomey an affidavit.

"Is that the affidavit referring to Mrs. Hogan's necklace?"

"Yes," answered Mrs. Toomey.

The affidavit was offered in evidence. It is sworn to by the detective at the Palm Beach (Fla.) hotel. It deals with happenings involving Mr. and Mrs. Toomey and Mrs. Hogan at Palm Beach.

Attorney Durment objected to the affidavit being admitted and Judge Bunn ruled it out.

Mr. Donnelly then showed an interview in the St. Paul Daily News of Nov. 15, 1904, in which Mrs. Toomey said she was engaged to Arthur C. Reade of London.

"I said that just to keep people off the track," said Mrs. Toomey.

"I intended to marry Dr. Bettingen then, but he asked me to keep it quiet."

"Do you know this man Reade?" asked Mr. Durment.

"I know no man of that name," answered Mrs. Toomey, adding, however, "except in a business way."

CONSUMPTION CURED

Pierce Clobessy, of El Paso, Texas Declares Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey Healed His Lungs, Repaired His Digestive Organs and Restored Him to Vigorous Health.

"I began to improve at once and in three weeks gained fifteen pounds in weight." He writes:

"From personal experience I can testify to the remarkable curative properties possessed by Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I commenced using this splendid medicine the first week of last December, and although suffering greatly from tuberculosis I improved from the start, and in less than three weeks I gained fifteen pounds in weight. It is the only medicine I use, and I take it in small doses five times a day. It has restored my appetite, healed my lungs, and my digestive organs are in most excellent condition." PIERCE CLOBESSY, El Paso, Texas.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

It cures consumption by going to the source of the disease, killing the poisonous disease germs and driving them from the system. It is a perfect tonic-stimulant, invigorator and blood purifier, and the only positive preventive and cure for consumption, pneumonia, bronchitis, grip, coughs, colds, malaria and low fevers, dyspepsia, diseases of the throat and lungs, and every form of stomach trouble.

For over fifty years Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has been prescribed by doctors, recommended and used by ministers of the Gospel, temperance advocates, nurses and people prominent in every walk of life. It is the only whiskey recognized by the Government as a medicine. Free from fusel oil. This is a guarantee.

CAUTION. When you ask for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. Unscrupulous dealers, mindful of the excellence of this preparation, will try to sell you cheap imitations and malt whiskey substitutes which are put on the market for profit only and which, far from relieving the sick, are positively harmful. Demand "Duffy's" and be sure you get it. It is the only absolutely pure Malt Whiskey. Sold in sealed bottles only; never in bulk. Look for the trademark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and be certain the seal over the cork is unbroken. Beware of refilled bottles.

ABSOLUTELY PURE & UNADULTERATED — TRADE MARK

All druggists and grocers, or direct, $1.00 a bottle. Interesting medical booklet free to anyone. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

SERVICES FOR SUNDAY IN DULUTH CHURCHES

Rev. A. F. Elmquist, Ph. D., to Preach Farewell Sermon In Evening at Bethany Swedish Luthern Church.

Visiting Clergymen to Be Heard In Many of the City's Pulpits.

Rev. A. F. Elmquist, Ph. D., who has accepted a call from St. John's English Lutheran church, Minneapolis, after having been pastor of the Swedish Bethany Lutheran church for the past six years, will preach his farewell sermon before his old congregation Sunday evening. Monday evening, the popular pastor will be tendered a farewell reception at the church, and all of his many friends, from all parts of the city, and of whatever denomination, are cordially invited to attend. A program suitable to the occasion will be given at 8 o'clock, and there will be refreshments.

In his six years of faithful and effective service in the city, Dr. Elmquist has so grown in the affection and esteem of his congregation, brother pastors and friends of different denominations, that it is with keen regret they will see him leave, although at the same time they express their pleasure that his ability as preacher and scholar should be thus recognized. St. John's is the oldest English Lutheran congregation in the Northwest, and the position as pastor of it is a very desirable

REV. J. B. HINGELEY
Of Minneapolis,
Who Will Preach in Two Duluth M. E. Churches.

one. Dr. Elmquist is a good organizer and a hard worker. His friends are confident that he will meet with as great success in Minneapolis as he has in Duluth.

He took charge of the local church, July 1, 1899, and during the period of his pastorship here he has baptised 669 children, married 236 couples, confirmed 194 children, delivered 155 funeral sermons and 1,089 pulpit sermons and addresses. The number of communicants is 550, and the full membership is now 1,100.

Besides the regular work in the Bethany church, Dr. Elmquist has for the past three summers made regular monthly visits to Grand Marais, Minn., where he preached in both English and Swedish. He helped in building a church on Maple Hill, and the local church was built largely through his earnest efforts. He has also been making regular monthly visits to Alborn, St. Louis county, where he was instrumental in building a handsome church, which was used for the first time, June 4. Together with Rev. Hanson of Virginia, he procured from the Boston & Duluth Land company, a grant of forty acres of land for church use.

The West Duluth church is a substantial building, constructed of brick and stone. It is always well filled whenever this popular pastor preaches there, for all his sermons are scholarly efforts. It is with a considerable degree of regret that he leaves Duluth, and it is only because a wider field is found in Minneapolis, that he leaves his friends in this city. His first sermon as pastor of St. John's will be preached on the second Sunday in July.

Dr. Elmquist was born in Minnesota, at Scandia, in Washington county, Feb. 18, 1871. He progressed rapidly in his youthful studies and when 15 years old entered Gustavus Adolphus college, at St. Peter. He graduated from there with honors in 1894. The following year was spent in studying Assyrian and Hebrew with Dr. H. V. Hilprecht of Pennsylvania. His preparation for the ministry was completed the next year at Augustana seminary, Rock Island, and he was ordained in 1896.

In spite of all the work he did for the church, he found time to continue his studies and won the degree of master of arts at the University of Minnesota. One year was spent in Europe, mostly in Berlin, in study. In 1900, after coming to Duluth, by a continuance of his studies he won two more degrees, doctor of philosophy from the University of Minnesota, and master of letters from Bethany college, Kansas, of which the late Dr. C. A. Swenson was president.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

NORTH DAKOTA.

Williston—Frank Egan and a man named McDowell became engaged in a quarrel in front of Heddrich Bros.' general store. During the quarrel McDowell asked Egan to settle a debt which he said Egan had contracted while McDowell was the proprietor of a lunch counter. Egan denied the debt and swore he would not settle.

McDowell pulled his gun and fired, the bullet entering Egan's right cheek and lodging in the back of his head.

The bullet has not yet been removed, but his physicians say he will recover.

McDowell was placed under arrest, and is now awaiting his preliminary hearing, which will be soon.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Elk Point—James Cunningham was arrested at Beresford last spring on the charge of maintaining a gambling resort. On the pretext of changing his clothes before going to the county jail, the officer allowed him out of his sight. He slipped out of a back window and disappeared, and his whereabouts have been unknown until a few days ago, when he returned secretly with the expectation of being married, it is said. Two officers called for him, and Cunningham tried the old trick. An officer caught him at the back window and he is in jail here, and the wedding is indefinitely postponed.

Rapid City—The program has been arranged for the farmers' institute, to be held in the Black Hills, beginning at Spearfish, July 8, and continuing several days in the different cities. M. F. Greeley, one of the state board of regents, will tell how to raise poultry and sheep successfully, and will also deliver his lecture on "The Landed Home." Prof. Cole of the Brookings experimental station will talk on drought grain and grasses, and will bring with him a large collection of samples. Prof. F. L. Cook of the Spearfish normal school will relate the result of twenty years' experience in the Black Hills in the raising of small fruits. Mrs. Bertha Laws of Minnesota will give daily lectures on subjects of interest to farmers' wives.

Pierre—Governor Elrod, on recommendation of the board of pardons, has granted pardons to Joseph Russell, sentenced from Butte county on a charge of forgery in the second degree, and to William T. Rowan, sentenced from Minnehaha county on a charge of criminal assault. These pardons were based on petitions signed by the trial judges and jurors and many citizens.

Two more telephone systems for the state are provided for in articles of incorporation which were filed with the secretary of state. One is the Rock & Minnehaha company at Booge, Minnehaha county, with a capital of $2,500, and Thomas Thompson, Ole Julson and Daniel Eihern, incorporators. The other is the Centerville Rural Telephone company at Centerville, capitalized at $25,000, its purpose being the construction of rural routes in that portion of the state. The incorporators are W. E. Ege, Marvin Carlson, G. A. Anderson, F. A. Shoberg and C. J. Peterson.

The supreme court yesterday admitted Joseph Salmer, Gustav Reimer and Peter Oleson of Vermillion, and George W. Moody of DeSmet, graduates at the state university.

The case of George Coates vs. the Northwestern railway, a personal damage suit, went over the term.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it Is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much-improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

GREAT BIBLE CONFERENCE

For Northwest to Be Held at Midway.

St. Paul, June 24.—For some years it has been the dream of a number of Christian workers in the Twin Cities that a great bible conference might be held in the Northwest and now the plans are well under way for the realization of this dream. The place will be the state fair grounds, that beautiful spot midway between the two cities, lying hard against the ever attractive Como Park. The building will be machinery hall, splendidly seated, with room for an attendance of 5,000, within range of one speaker.

Already correspondence and conference has been had with the following speakers: Dr. H. Grattan Guinness of London, the famous preacher and author, and the world's mightiest missionary; Dr. John Urquhart of England, so noted as an author, and now attracting so much attention in this country; Dr. C. I. Scoville of Dallas, Texas, the noted pastor, and originator and author of the Bible Correspondence course, published by Charles C. Cook; Dr. A. C. Gaebelein, the editor of "Our Hope"; Dr. J. R. Pratt of Albany, N. Y., widely known both East and West as an evangelist and Bible teacher; Dr. George W. Truett of Dallas, Texas, the most notable young orator of the Baptist denomination in the South; Dr. Frank W. Sneed, pastor of the large Presbyterian church at Pittsburg; and other brethren from abroad, together with a number from the Twin Cities and the Northwest will participate in this program. It will be a program not exceeded by any conference in the country, the older conferences not excepted.

"The Holy Spirit," and "The Deepening of the Spiritual Life" will be discussed by Dr. Scoville; "Prophecy and Dispensational Truth" by Dr. Gaebelein; "World-wide Missions and Bible Exposition," Dr. Guinness; "Evangelism," Dr. Truett; "The Whole Subject of the Inspiration of the Scriptures," Dr. Urquhart; "Satan and His Kingdom," Dr. Pratt; and equally interesting and helpful topics by other speakers.

Accommodations for visitors will be provided at the most moderate rates. Buildings on the grounds will be secured, and furnished with cots at a low rental; meals will be served at a cost not to exceed 25 cents each, and in case one remains a week, or more, cheaper still.

In addition to the above suggested program there will be special features emphasizing all phases of religious work, including city mission work, Sunday School work, Young People's work, etc. The dates are July 30th to August 20th. For information address: On program, Dr. Stanley Roberts, care Bethlehem Presbyterian church, Minneapolis. On

THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Growth of Schools Throughout the Country.

New York, June 24.—The Protestant church membership of this country is about 19,250,000; the total Sunday school membership about 14,000,000. Thus it is seen that the Sunday school has about 73 per cent as many as the church membership.

The great effort of today is to so increase this that soon the columns will be parallel.

In the Methodist Episcopal church there are 3,150,520 persons in the Sunday schools and 3,064,725 members of the church. This makes the proportion of the Sunday school members as compared with the church members 101 per cent. This denomination has nearly one-fourth of the total Sunday school enrollment, while they have less than one-sixth of the Protestant church membership in the United States.

While there are encouraging features in this growth of a great church, it needs to be remembered that only about 18 per cent of the population of this country is connected with the Sunday school. Some entire states have reached nearly 25 per cent, some counties 60 per cent, and some towns as high as even 90 per cent; yet there are many places where this great department of church work is sadly neglected.

With the Sunday school enthusiasm that is now being aroused, there ought to be 2,000,000 added to the membership in the next twelve months. In some places schools are putting forth special efforts for enlargement, and the results are encouraging. In one place, where there were 115 in attendance two years ago, there were 297 a few days since.

There are now 55 schools in the Methodist church that have each over 1,000 members. The largest has 3,300. Of these, two are in New England, six west of the Mississippi and forty-seven between the Mississippi and the Hudson rivers. Six have over 2,000 each. Two are colored—one in Philadelphia and one in Baltimore.

The great international Sunday school convention will give a fresh impulse to this great work.

Business University Happenings.

Summer term will begin at the College on Wednesday, July 5th. A large class will be enrolled. School will continue in session all summer—no vacation.

Among those who enrolled during the past week are: Miss Winnifred Ames, Columbus, Ohio; Miss Grace Hickey, Toronto, Ont.; Mr. E. McCarthy, Bowdle, S. D.

The following young people left the College during the past week to accept the following positions: Margaret Hessness, stenographer for Marshall-Wells Hardware Co.; May Whitney, stenographer for John A. Stevenson & Co.; Fanny Levine, stenographer for J. D. Zion Liquor Co.; C. J. Grogan and T. Lightfoot, assistant bookkeepers for Stone-Ordean-Wells Co.; A. O. Rabideau, bookkeeper for the Mesaba & Northern Railway Co.; Laurette Reitz, stenographer for Schultze Bros.

During the past week several good positions were offered for young men and women stenographers and bookkeepers for which we had no students to recommend; also five applications were received at this office for our graduates who have had a normal school training. These applications came from business colleges and high schools for teachers to teach commercial branches, and, although the salaries offered ran from $700 to $1,200 per annum, we had no such graduates to recommend.

Some Thoughts

Pathway of pain.

Men who intend to be good tomorrow always die today.

Nowhere do souls sour quicker than in an ice box church.

The fragrance of a life depends on the fullness of its love.

Life is all song when one lives in harmony with the infinite.

Many a man wastes enough perspiration praying for dimes to earn ten times as many dollars.

DULUTH BUSINESS UNIVERSITY

COLLEGE OF SHORTHAND, TYPEWRITING, PENMANSHIP AND ENGLISH.

105-107 WEST SUPERIOR STREET.

SUMMER TERM TO BEGIN ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 5th, 1905.

Special Rates.

All Eighth grade students, High School students or teachers who enroll during the month of July for special studies, will be allowed a liberal discount from regular rates. Those who feel the need of preparation in special branches or wish to give the work a trial for a few weeks, will have an opportunity to do so at a very small outlay.

Demand Almost Double the Supply.

Our diary record which is open for inspection shows that in response to 148 calls received at the College office for clerical help from April 1 to June 21, 86 young people were recommended to positions and 62 good-paying positions were offered for which there were no young people in evidence to recommend.

As a result of the prosperous times, many new enterprises are locating in Duluth and vicinity and old ones are expanding and there is not likely to be any decrease in the demand for properly-trained clerical help. There is every reason to believe, therefore, that during the next year the demand for Duluth Business University graduates will be even greater in proportion to the supply than it has ever been in the past, and those who shall have had the advantages of the thorough training afforded at this school will find their services in great demand.

W. C. McCARTER, Principal.

MISS EMMA KOTZ, First Teacher Shorthand Department.

W. J. GRAY, First Teacher Commercial Department.

The Cheap School a Dear School.

You will probably attend a business college but once, and your future success will depend largely on the character and quality of the school you attend. The school that can give you the best possible preparation for business is none too good, and unless a school has the facilities and equipment for so doing, it is not worthy of your consideration, no matter how low its rates may be. Those who are launched from the cheap, so-called business college, and find themselves unable to do what the business world requires of them, realize that they have paid dearly, indeed, for the training received, no matter what the price may have been.

College Office.

Will be open from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. each week day until the opening. Those who wish to enter at the opening are requested to call and make final arrangements.

Why Don't Young Men Study Stenography?

This question is asked us every day by business men who apply to us for young men stenographers. As a rule we have not more than one young man for every three positions that are offered. The other two are usually filled by persons from outside the city. Duluth young men could have these positions if they would prepare for them. There is no more promising field for the ambitious young man today than that opened him through the medium of shorthand. There is no way that a young man can in so short a time, grasp the details of the inside workings of a business and thus make himself valuable to his employer as through being its stenographer. The ambitious young man often finds his way up the ladder and achieves success which, without the aid of shorthand, would have been impossible. We also ask, "Why don't more young men study stenography?"

Wanted.

Board and room in private families at reasonable rates for a number of young men and women who will enroll on Wednesday, July 5th.

Important To Teachers.

The management of the Duluth Business University is connected with leading business colleges in St. Louis, Mo.; Columbus, Ohio; Detroit, Mich., and Indianapolis, Ind. An employment bureau is maintained by these schools for the purpose of procuring for public school teachers who complete a commercial course, positions as teachers in commercial schools.

During the past week the Duluth Business University received the following applications: Commercial teacher for the Clinton Business College, Clinton, Mo.; good salary. Commercial teacher for the Plymouth High School, Plymouth, Mass.; salary $700 per annum to begin. Teacher of shorthand, typewriting and penmanship for the Riverside Business College, Riverside, Cal.; salary $1,200 per annum. Lady teacher of commercial branches for the Tomahawk High School, Tomahawk, Wis.; salary $65 a month to begin. Teacher of commercial branches for the Atchison County High School, Effingham, Kan.; salary $65 a month to begin.

This bureau has been in operation but a few months and is now receiving applications from all over the United States. There is every assurance given to competent public school teachers who complete a course at this college of their being able to get lucrative positions as teachers in business colleges if they so desire.

In addition to this, applications are received at this school every day for stenographers and bookkeepers who have had a teacher's fundamental education and, although these positions offer excellent salaries, we are unable to fill them as we enroll very few public school teachers.

PEORIA IS SELECTED

As Place of Next Meeting of the Modern Woodmen.

Milwaukee, June 24.—After a hot fight, during which there was much switching of the votes, Peoria, Ill., was selected as the place for holding the next meeting of the head camp, Modern Woodmen of America. The vote, as announced officially after being verified, was: Peoria, 239; Buffalo, 225; Detroit, 7; necessary for choice, 236.

The convention voted that the per capita tax to meet the general expenses remain unchanged at $1 per year. The convention also decided to make no change in salaries of officials.

Considerable time was taken up in passing upon claims.

At last night's session the committee on head officers reports reported that the society could not with safety postpone for more than a few years another readjustment of rates.

A resolution was adopted providing that federal and state banks only be used as depositories by the head banker, thus shutting out private banks.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Seasonable Weather Does Much to Stimulate Lagging Trade.

New York, June 24.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Seasonable weather in most sections of the country has done much to stimulate lagging retail trade in lightweight apparel and greatly improved the entire business situation by accelerating the maturity of agricultural products. A few more weeks of favorable climatic conditions will put the large quantities of grain beyond danger, while late-planted corn and cotton are rapidly recovering lost ground. These are the most important commercial influences at this season of the year, jobbers' advance orders being largely dependent on local conditions at the interior and manufacturers guaging their activity by the outlook for fall and winter distribution. It is noticeable that moderate midsummer transactions are not productive of price concessions to stimulate forward business, owing to a general sentiment of confidence in the future. In the leading manufacturing industries there is less idle machinery than is customary at this time of inventories, especially at plants making textile fabrics, despite the fact that prices of raw materials are somewhat inflated. Labor controversies are not disturbing, several more agreements having been signed and less than the usual number of struggles are threatened for July 1. Building operations are more numerous and involve a greater amount of capital than at this time in recent preceding years; railway earnings for June thus far exceed last year's by 8.1 per cent, and foreign commerce at this port for the last week is fairly well maintained, exports gaining $858,270 in comparison with last year, while imports decreased $1,172,707.

Normal midsummer quiet in the iron and steel industry is occasioning no anxiety, conditions being much better than they were at this time last year.

Irregularity is still noted in the hide market. Foreign dry hides continue dull at the recent decline. Although less active than last week, leather is still moving freely.

New England footwear manufacturers are receiving a fair amount of supplementary fall orders from the Western territory, and there is a good demand for spring samples.

Failures this week numbered 195 in the United States against 227 last year, and 29 in Canada compared with 32 a year ago.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS

James Mason, a contractor, living in Helena, denies the New York dispatch that Thomas Nichol, who died there, was the last survivor of the famous Perry expedition. Mason has papers to show he was a member of the expedition, headed by the noted admiral, which visited Japan fifty-five years ago.

Prof. C. C. Rice of Lincoln, Neb., a former associate professor at Leland Stanford university, who has been confined in St. Francis hospital, Pittsburg, under guard as a demented victim of the heat, left that city Friday night for his home at Lincoln, in charge of his father. The condition of Prof. Rice is still serious.

T. B. Gerow, state employment agent of Kansas, issued a call Friday for 2,000 more harvest hands. The need is very pressing, as the wheat is ripe and cannot be harvested on account of lack of help.

W. E. Monbeck of Ottawa university, Kas., whose subject was "American Altruism and the American Saloon," was awarded first prize at the central interstate prohibition oratorical contest, held at Lincoln, Neb., Friday. Frank Bean of Simpson college, Iowa, was given second prize, and Gerald J. Janssen, Central Weslyan, Warrentown, Mo., third.

The Illinois supreme court sustained the position that a court may, without a trial by jury, inflict punishment for contempt in civil proceedings, such as the issuing of injunctions in strike cases. The opinion is said to be one of the most important of the eighty-six decisions handed down by the supreme court prior to final adjournment of the June term of court.

Former Capt. George W. Kirkman, Twenty-fifth infantry, U. S. A., was brought to the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Friday, to serve a three-year sentence at hard labor. Kirkman had two telescopes and two large trunks filled with clothing. He will be detained in a large room with about 100 new arrivals, Indians, Mexicans, negroes and whites, for a few days.

Capt. John Pearson, an Englishman, representing himself as a member of the King's Horse Guards, London, who was arrested Wednesday on a charge of having obtained money under false pretenses, was given a hearing at St. Louis and discharged. He said he would quit the city.

Paul Foster, whose skull was fractured in an automobile, died in the Fordham hospital without recovering consciousness. He and four others were riding in an automobile, when it collided with a pole on Jerome avenue, New York. All the persons in the car were seriously hurt and removed to Fordham hospital.

The Muskegon, Mich., county poor house burned Friday night as the result of an explosion of a gasolene tank. Most of the 100 inmates were rescued without injury. Loss on the building, $75,000; insurance, $48,000.

Three girls, Alma Kurcher, Edna Van Ambrey and Gladys Howe, were drowned in Pine lake, near Petoskey, Mich., Friday. They were members of a picnic party and had gone out with two men in a boat, which sprung a leak. The men were rescued.

The New York 18-Hour Train

Runs every day from Chicago over the Pennsylvania Short Line. Originally "The Pennsylvania Special" was a twenty-hour train from Chicago to New York, but the completion of "double tracks of steel all the way" from New York to Chicago, and other extensive and costly improvements, has justified the cutting of two hours from the original schedule. This has been done and the running of "The Pennsylvania Special" over the Pennsylvania System has been resumed with an 18-hour time table, leaving Chicago every day at 2:45 p. m., Chicago time, reaching New York the next morning at 8:45 o'clock, Chicago time, but 9:45 o'clock New York time—opportunely for the 10 o'clock business hour. Breakfast in the dining car, between North Philadelphia and New York, while rolling smoothly but rapidly over the New York end of the Pennsylvania railroad—the best piece of four-track railroad in the world.

Returning, the Pennsylvania Special leaves Twenty-third street station at 3:55 p. m., arriving at Chicago the next morning at 8:55 o'clock. Breakfast on the dining car from 7 o'clock a. m.

Reservations for this or any other Pennsylvania Short Line train from Chicago can be made in advance through your home agent, or by addressing G. L. Thomson, T. P. A., Pioneer Press Bldg., St. Paul.

WOMAN TURNS CATHOLIC.

New York, June 24.—Mrs. Winthrop Rutherford, fourth daughter of Levi P. Morton, former vice president of the United States, was, last Saturday noon, received into the Roman Catholic church. She had been considering the step for the last two years and had been giving much attention to reading on religious subjects. Mrs. Rutherford was, and her parents are, members of the Protestant Episcopal church, as is also her husband.

The picnic to have been held by the Svea Glee club Sunday has been indefinitely postponed by reason of failure to secure a boat.

PROBABLY MURDERED

Body of Homesteader Carl Bakken Found In Sand Lake.

Bena, Minn., June 24.—Brutally murdered for his money and then thrown into Sand lake is the probable fate of Carl Bakken, a homesteader, who located on a claim at the head of Sand lake, in township 146, range 26, last September.

Chiefs Awascekeyskiy, Winnibigoshish and Moshimo of the Bowstring Indians came to Bena yesterday and reported to the authorities that their Indians had discovered a body on the north shore of Sand lake.

The body was that of a man about 30 years old and was dressed in a dark suit. The description fits Bakken.

He was last seen sometime in May, when he purchased supplies at Gibb's store at Bowstring and placing them in a sailboat started for home. Some time later the boat was found drifting near the shore of the lake and Bakken's gun was tied with a wire to the bow of the craft.

Bakken had a large sum of money when last seen and the authorities believe that he has been a victim of foul play. He was an expert sailor and swimmer and there is slight belief that the man met with an accident while sailing.

The body was found by the Indians twelve days ago and was left by them until the authorities were notified yesterday by the chiefs.

Bakken boarded with Mrs. Payne in Bena last August and September and left some of his effects there when he went to his claim. His cousin operates a general store at Cambridge, Minn. The authorities will make a thorough investigation although handicapped by the late discovery of the body.

SANDSTONE BOY IS LOST

Hundreds of Men Scour Country Trying to Find Him.

Sandstone, Minn., June 24.—Almost every able-bodied man in Sandstone and the surrounding country is participating in the search for the two-and-a-half year old son of Martin Benson, a farmer, living six miles from Sandstone. The tot wandered away from home Thursday afternoon and late last night the searching parties were still scouring the countryside. Business has been practically suspended in Sandstone. The mayor has sent to Superior for the bloodhounds owned by the police department there.

There are many theories regarding the disappearance of the child. Some believe that he may have been devoured by wolves or bears, which are numerous east of here, while others scout this theory and believe firmly that the child has been kidnaped.

So positive are some in this belief that posses have been organized and determined men marched to the houses of farmers who are reported to have expressed their enmity for the father. These men, it is said, have refusd to join in the search for the child and the posses have demanded that they furnish any straightforward information in their possession.

Mayor Heisler and Chief of Police James Regan are directing the search for the child and have succeeded in following his tracks to a swamp road where all trace of the little one was lost.

At the close of business last night 300 men provided themselves with lanterns and the search will continue until the boy is found.

CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT.

New Ore Bodies Opened at the Elkton.

Colorado Springs, Colo., June 24.—The management of the Elkton mine, on Raven Hill, is elated over the opening of a large body of ore 400 feet north of the shaft, and another one 600 feet south of the shaft on the ninth level. The ore shoots are from three to seven feet in width and return values of from two to four ounces to the ton. The Elkton company is now employing 150 men, and the monthly production reaches in the neighborhood of 1,800 tons, with an average value of $30 per ton.

Lessee Gilbert and associates, operating two blocks of the Longfellow claim on Bull Hill, are beraking ore at a depth of 350 feet that runs $30 in gol dto the ton. The ore shoot is measuring from three to six feet in width and has been proven to be the same one that was struck above.

Lessees operating on the Mariposa on Gold hill today sent out a carload shipment of ore that is expected to return values of $35 to the ton. The ore was mined between the 100 and 200-foot levels.

Lessee Walsh, working the Forest Queen property, today made a carload shipment of $40 ore. The ore is being mined from a forty-foot vein, which was recently opened a short distance east of the shaft at a depth of 500 feet.

Lessee James Walden, operating a block of the Hull City property on Bull Hill, is sending out regular shipments and his profits are running close to $200 a day. Some two months ago this lessee was operating at a loss. The ore shoot is measuring from three to four feet in width and carries a 12-inch streak from which screenings are obtained that run as high as eight ounces to the ton.

It is officially announced that the Granite Gold Mining company will enter the list of Cripple Creek dividend payers in July. The dividend will be declared on July 1 and paid on July 15 at the rate of 1 cent per share, or $12,500 per month.

The Golden Cycle territory in general is looking remarkably well at this time, as in the last sixty days five different ore shots have been struck and operations are now going on in every level down to the 800-foot point. Crosscuts have been driven from the ninth and tenth levels to the ore shoots worked above. The company is making a monthly production in the neighborhood of 5,000 tons, the ore averaging $25 to the ton.

CARELESS AUTOIST KILLED.

Marblehead, Mass., June 24.—Charles T. Estabrook, a bookkeeper, was killed and three others were injured in an automobile accident here last night. The car was accidentally backed over the edge of the dock at the Boston Yacht club house, and fell to the beach, fifteen feet below. Estabrook was caught under the steering wheel and was badly crushed. He died half an hour after the accident.

WHY THIS MAD HURRY?

The horrible accident of Wednesday night seems to have put an end to the strife to see which road can make the deepest cut in its running time between New York and Chicago, and it is well. If all the warnings that are being thrown out every day were heeded as quickly it would be well, too.

The mad rush of modern life is causing its tragedies every day, only most of them are not so conspicuous as this one. Some of the tragedies come through a disregard of danger signals, and in this case train men say that the Twentieth Century limited was going so fast that the engineer must have confused a white light further on with the red one that should have shown from the open switch.

The report recently published showing the terrible increase in deaths from heart disease in New York is a summing up of many tragedies due to the insane race after wealth. It belongs in the class of the story of the wreck of the Twentieth Century limited. Danger signals are thrown out in the pathway of the man who is racing his system to the verge of sudden collapse. He may be going too rapidly to see them, but they are usually there, just the same. Again, he may see them, and be too intent upon his race to obey their commands.

The warning of Wednesday night has been heeded, and the railroad has abandoned its 18-hour schedule. Perhaps here and there men may profit from the warning that sudden deaths from heart disease have given. But the vast mass of hurrying, racing business men will be too busy to heed the warning, or their eyes will be too intently fixed upon their unworthy goal. Even the preliminary warnings that the over-wrought system may give, the signs of an inevitable break-up, will go unheeded. Speeding toward their goal, intent only upon getting to it as quickly as may be, they give no thought to white lights or red until they reach the open switch and plunge through it into eternity.

The pace is too fast. Railroads, in cutting their running time, are simply catering to the demands of modern business hurry. It is the pace that kills. It killed nineteen men through this railroad accident. It is killing its thousands through heart disease, nervous breakdowns and other manifestations of worn-out systems. It is bringing tragedy into life every day.

It is not worth while. It never brings happiness. The wealth that awaits the winners in the race is bought at fearful sacrifice of everything that makes life worth living. We live but once, and it is a mad waste of opportunity to cast out everything worth while and strain every energy to the breaking point to reach out after apples of Sodom, that turn to ashes when they are grasped.

Let's slow up and take our time and look about us a little to see whether life is not offering better things that we have overlooked.

A DAYLIGHT HOLDUP.

It is impossible to withhold some measure of appreciation of the nerve of a holdup man who will attempt his work in daylight, no matter how much we may condemn his occupation and desire his punishment. There is interest, therefore, in the story of a daylight holdup in the West end told in The Herald last night.

It is needless, on the other hand, to apologize for applauding the performance of his victim, who right valiantly belabored him over the face with her umbrella when he grasped her purse. The amazed and dismayed thief took to his heels and for all the story tells may be still going. Let us hope so. That the lady promptly collapsed after she had performed her deed of unthinking courage was entirely feminine and proper.

All of which leads to the further conclusion that there have been an uncomfortable number of holdups lately. Two others have taken place in the West end, and one man was "slugged" out in the East end also. Duluth has always been remarkably free from crime of this nature, burglary and holdups being very uncommon, and it is evident that the perpetrators of these recent crimes are cheap outside hands who have lately struck town and who have not been informed that it is not customary here to permit their callings to be carried on. The police, who have always done so well to keep the city free from depredations, will undoubtedly call around and look these gentlemen up, informing them firmly though politely that they have struck the wrong town.

THE MODERN PIONEER.

Wednesday evening The Herald published an interview with W. F. McKay, assessor in unorganized townships in this county, in which he told of his surprise at finding settlers in such unexpected places in the farther reaches of the county. No doubt many who read his interview were also surprised, having had no idea of the amount of increase in the agricultural settlements of this county in the past two or three years.

The census will further open the eyes of such people. The Herald ventures the prediction that an astonishing proportion of the increase in the population of St. Louis county shown by the census will be found outside of the ranges and Duluth. This county is an immense empire, approximating 6,000 square miles in area. It is the third largest county outside of the great desert counties of the West, where no attempt has been made to divide up large areas that are absolutely barren. The only larger counties are Aroostook county in Maine and Dade county in Florida. Aroostook county is a wilderness of hills, barrens and rocks. Dade county includes the famous Everglade swamps.

There are in St. Louis county in the neighborhood of sixty postoffices. A scant dozen of these are in the city and iron range territory; the balance are in farming communities. There are postoffices, with established mail routes, in localities that many Duluth people believe to be untrod wildernesses. Each of these postoffices has about it from 20 to 100 families that have settled on lands which they are clearing and cultivating. Their task is formidable, they are exposed to many hardships and some peril, perhaps, and yet they are building up St. Louis county and adding to its wealth while thousands who imagine themselves more fortunately situated are engaged in reducing that wealth.

Many of these settlers are former laborers in the city and in the mines, who are much better off with their independent ownership of a piece of fertile earth than they ever were before. Living in wholesome, healthy surroundings, with no fear of hunger and with property that each day's work makes more valuable, they have something ahead, something to work for, and the quick returns of a rich and generous soil yield them prosperity and comfort.

HONORARY DEGREES.

This is the season of the year when the colleges are handing out degrees, to those that have earned them and to those who have not. So many indiscriminate gifts of degrees are being made that considerable criticism of the practice has arisen, and it is justified.

When a person works the prescribed period through an educational institution, faithfully and well, and manages to win a degree by his industry and intelligence, it is something worth while. When he sees those same degrees handed out lavishly among men who have done nothing to earn them, it has a tendency to cheapen his own laurels.

It is a nice thing for the colleges to give the president of the United States all the degrees they want to. It will cheapen nobody's victory to share it with the occupant of such an exalted position. But when the faculty gives out a degree to pretty nearly everybody that is handy, whether they have accomplished anything in the way of educating themselves or not, it begins to get tiresome. A degree ought to be worth working for, but if they are to be given out indiscriminately it will not be long before the man for whom degrees were intended will turn up his nose at them and demand something that is really worth while.

Too many of the degrees appear to be given out to people simply because they are wealthy. It may be proper to disregard a wealthy patron's educational deficiencies and award him a degree in return for his contributions, but it may be awkward for an illiterate man to try to live up to a degree of doctor of laws, for instance.

Tufts college, a small Massachusetts concern, will give out fifty-four honorary degrees this year, including one for the Japanese minister.

THE "LAZY WORM."

News of the greatest importance comes from Washington in the form of an Associated Press dispatch saying that the army medical men are curing a disease very prevalent in Porto Rico known as "lazy worm." It is stated that according to a report to the surgeon-general of the army by Capt. B. K. Ashford, assistant surgeon, 95 per cent of the 100,000 Porto Ricans living in the vicinity of Aibonito are afflicted with the "lazy worm.' Headquarters and a field hospital have been established, and $15,000 will be expended in the eradication of the disease. Last year Capt. Ashford treated 4,500 cases at a cost of $5,000, and nearly every case resulted in a cure. The Porto Ricans have never understood the disease and believe it to be incurable.

If "lazy worm" is what it sounds like, there are a lot of people in this country that need treatment, and the expenditure of public funds in caring for them will undoubtedly prove a paying investment. "Lazy worm" certainly must be that "germ of laziness" scientists were talking about not long ago. It seems to fit, someway, into the statement that the Porto Ricans are afflicted with the disease, because there is an impression from somewhere that laziness is a difficulty that bothers these people very much.

Under this hypothesis, Dr. Ashford's discovery is not treated with sufficient emphasis by the Associated Press. A man who can take 4,500 lazy people and cure them of their laziness for $5,000, or a little over $1 apiece, is little short of a wonder.

Of course there is a chance that "lazy worm" is not exactly what is sounds like, but it is difficult to believe that it is not, especially when it is stated that 90 per cent of the natives of a semi-tropical island are afflicted with it. Travelers are quite positive in their statements that at least 90 per cent of the natives of tropical climes are lazy, and it requires no Sherlock Holmes to figure out that "lazy worm" must be just what is the matter with them. It is delightful to think that a cure has been discovered, and it is to be hoped that the government will not delay introducing it into this country any longer than is absolutely necessary.

A SILLY QUIBBLE.

The Chicago employers, as an organization, have abandoned the stand taken a couple of days ago against the wearing of union buttons by the striking teamsters, and the great Chicago strike seems in a fair way of settlement.

This is good news, because the stand of the employers was little short of silly. The Chicago strike has been a complicated, unlovely affair that has gone on until everybody in it or out of it has become utterly sick of it. The public has given little heed to its merits, and only knows that it has a vague impression that there has been wrong on both sides, that it has led men to unjustifiable lengths, and that it is more or less of a nuisance generally. The report that the employers stood firmly against a settlement of the strike that would permit the union men to wear union buttons did not tend to lead anybody to believe that the employers were particularly fair-minded or generous. Perhaps they had some reason for the stand, but the fact that they have abandoned it indicates that their reason could not have been very sound.

What difference could it make whether the strikers wore buttons in their lapels, and if they did wear buttons what possible figure could it cut what kind of buttons they were? If the men wanted to wear something showing that they belonged to an organization of their own, and offered peace as the price for permission to wear them, surely the price was cheap, and one that the employers should have paid without a second thought. Instead it took them a couple of days to agree to it, and now it is left to the individual employers, who can still stand out against it if they wish.

An outsider might be pardoned for thinking, after all the trouble and expense and human lives the strike has cost, that both sides should be willing to concede anything that looked like a trifling technicality standing in the way of peace. To find the employers standing out, firmly determined not to let the men wear a particular kind of button in their coat lapels, looked incredibly childish.

It is well that they have abandoned their foolish stand, and are now ready to pay this small price for peace.

BEWARE OF PANAMA.

Those inclined to take a pessimistic view of things are hardly to be blamed for sometimes believing that man is an irrational animal. There is almost justification for such a belief in the reports from Panama that in spite of a multitude of warnings, Americans still appear to be going to the trouble and expense of making a trip to Panama in the hope of finding employment on the canal.

In the first place, it is difficult to see why any inhabitant of a temperate, wholesome climate should want to get employment in a hot, fever-infested zone anyway. The desire for a change, for excitement, for the possible openings of a new territory, are partly responsible, no doubt, as well as the vain hopes of extravagant rates of pay. But while these voyagers into the unknown find the change all right, and perhaps plenty of excitement, the openings and the fancy wages do not appear to materialize.

All of the higher positions are filled at Washington, not on the isthmus. It is a bit discomforting to a man who has traveled all the way from Ypsilanti, Mich., to Panama, to be told that if he wants a job he will have to go back to Washington and see the folks there, but that is what happens. The result is that many of these unfortunates are left stranded, without money enough to keep going, much less to pay their way back home. White laborers are entirely unfit for the common labor of the canal. Though there is plenty of work, there is also plenty of danger and but little pay. The American minister at Panama City reports that one ship brought laborers from Maine, New York, Tennessee, Illinois, Colorado and California. They came on their own account, and in ignorance or defiance of the repeated warnings against such a course. They either had to return—which few of them could do—or accept employment in competition with colored labor at work of such a character that they soon became broken in health.

Unless armed with a commission from Washington including a provision for much pay, the American will find that Panama is a mighty fine place to stay away from, and even then, in spite of his high pay which will not compensate for broken health, he may conclude that he would prefer no pay at all in the United States to an enormous salary in the fever-belt.

Hotel Gossip.

"Contractors who are superintending railroad work in Northern Minnesota are meeting with difficulty in keeping men steadily employed on the jobs," said O. J. Hien of Saginaw, Minn., at the St. Louis. Saginaw is a small station on the Missabe, where the long stretch of double track is now being laid. "The workmen appear to be discontented," continued Mr. Hien, and very few of them remain at work for more than a month or two at a time. They get the notion into their heads that better wages are to be had elsewhere, with less work, and off they go. It is then up to the contractors to scurry around for more men, and this is why new faces are seen in the crews nearly every day.

"A number of the laborers work in the woods during the winter, and turn their attention to the railroads in the summer time. This class is usually not satisfied to stay on any one job for any length of time, even though fair wages are paid. In spite of the changes in the workmen, the several railroad jobs through the northern part of the state appear to be getting along in good shape. The double track work on the Missabe is about completed, and this contract will be declared completed within the next week or so. Part of the double track is already being used by the trains. The whole equipment of the road is being worked to the full capacity in handling the ore. A big crew of men has started work on the new Alborn branch, the contract for the construction of which was recently let."

"The reclamation of big tracts of wild marsh land in the state of California is coming to be quite a feature," said T. A. Selne of Minneapolis, interested in California real estate, at the Lenox. "An Eastern syndicate has just purchased 500 acres of this land in Solano county, having paid $120,000 for the piece. For some time the reclamation of marsh land in this county has attracted considerable attention, and several successful experiments made on a small scale will undoubtedly mean an extensive system of such work from now on.

"While pretty low now, and well soaked with water, the soil through these marshes is capable of producing a great variety of crops, when properly drained and put under cultivation. Experiments are being tried with asparagus culture, and it is believed they will turn out successfully. The raising of asparagus is a profitable industry, when natural conditions are suitable. Heretofore the 5,000 acre tract just purchased has been leased by different shooting clubs. The marshes have been especially noted for the duck shooting they offered at certain seasons of the year. It will not be a great many years before the marsh lands through Northern Minnesota will have a recognized value, and before a system of drainage is adopted to reclaim the swamps."

"I see that a Duluth man reports the discovery of a coal deposit west of Duluth, along the line of the Northern Pacific road, and in Minnesota," said A. S. Cummins of Bemidji, at the St. Louis. "The find has exploded the popular belief that the state would give a $50,000 bounty to anyone discovering a body of coal in this state. For a long time the report that the lucky finder would be thus rewarded has been given quite general credence, and so it was not at all strange that the man in this instance should write down to the authorities in St. Paul and ask what amount was due him as a bounty. He was probably very much disappointed when he learned that no such reward had ever been offered by the state. How the report to the contrary first got started no one appears to know.

"The announcement of the existence of a coal deposit in Northern Minnesota does not come as a surprise, for it has been believed for a number of years that there was such a deposit somewhere in this section of the country, and a good deal of time has been devoted in searching for it, but with no apparent success, up to the present time. It remains to be seen how valuable is the find of the Duluthian. As I understand it, he does not himself know, as yet, just how extensive the deposit is. On different occasions chunks of coal have been found along certain of the Northern Minnesota river beds, which naturally led to the belief that somewhere in this region a considerable amount of the commodity might lie hidden in the earth. Men have set out to follow these traces in the past, hoping that, with the aid of friendly Indians they might find the mother bed. Most of these explorers, after an unsuccessful search, have reached the conclusion that such coal traces as were found were the result of the glacial period, and that no large body of the fuel really existed. They will watch the outcome of the local man's discovery with interest."

"It is about time for reports that deer will be plentiful this fall, to begin coming in," said Arthur Rogers of Two Harbors, at the McKay. "Every summer, as regular as the clock, men coming out of the north woods assert that venison will be quite the common thing the following fall, judging by indications as they found them.

There would certainly be sufficient grounds for such a report this year, for up along the Iron Range road, and also west of Two Harbors, the animals appear to be quite numerous. Every summer they seem plentiful, more so than in the fall. It is easy to see how the reports get started. When deer are not hunted they are not at all wild, and do not seem to fear human beings to any extent, only taking the trouble to keep a little more than out of harm's reach. From late in November until the following fall, almost a year, they are not hunted at all, except only occasionally by the settlers, and during this time they become quite tame, and are frequently seen along railroad tracks and wagon roads, where, later in the year, although they may be just as numerous, they are scarcely ever seen. Fishermen also see a lot of them in the lakes, where they are driven to escape flies, and sportsmen then bring home reports of how many deer there are in the woods. It is easier to see ten deer now than it is to see two or three in the fall."

Twenty Years Ago.

Taken From the Columns of Duluth Papers of This Date 1885.

W. W. Spalding injured his lame leg the night that the burglars entered his house and has been suffering greatly since that time. He is confined to the house.

Omaha and St. Paul & Duluth officials were in town on Thursday, endeavoring to arrange a plan for passenger business of the Omaha, after the opening of the bridge. The rumor that there will be a union ticket office for the three roads here is not yet verified, though that plan may be adopted. In that case F. V. Doty will be in charge of the office.

S. D. Allen, the attorney, left the city on Friday morning on business.

Rev. C. C. Salter writes from Tampa, Fla., where he has been with his family for the past two months, that the climate there does not agree with him and his physicians have ordered him north.

R. W. Petre and M. H. Alworth got back on Monday from a two-weeks' trip to the mineral regions of the north shore.

Next Monday Mrs. Capt. Miller, Miss Noyes and Miss Sargent start in company for New York. Mrs. Miller's destination is New Jersey, where she will spend several months with her daughter, Mrs. Carr. The other two ladies visit at their homes during the summer vacation, after which they will return to Duluth.

Mrs. Rowe will be home next Wednesday morning from White Sulphur Springs, Hamilton, Ill., where she has been stopping since April. She writes that her health is decidedly improved.

The commencement exercises of the high school, at the Methodist church last night filled the church with an appreciative audience. The program included recitations by Victor Stearns, Iona Geggie, Miss Helen Olmsted and Rev. Levi Gilbert, essay by Miss White, representation of a few scenes from "Oldtown Folks," with a preliminary sketch by Miss Ella Griesser, piano solo by Mrs. Moore, and a duet by the Misses Peck and Marvin. The single graduate, Miss Della Palmer, acquitted herself well in her Latin salutatory and in her essay upon "The Character of Peter the Great and of George III Contrasted." The reading of an autograph letter from Mrs. Harriett Beecher Stowe, the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," was one of the most interesting features of the evening.

The Weather.

It is easy to point out where today's weather might have been improved upon, but what is the use? Of curse it is not pleasant, but it ought not to be necessary to remark that every day cannot be pleasant, and that everybody would probably be just as grumpy about the monotony of it if things were that way. If it keeps up until tomorrow—which it is likely to do—people who hate to get out of bed early on cold, rainy mornings will have the satisfaction of turning over and going to sleep again, anyway, something lots of them would have been glad to do this morning if the call of the day's duties had not forbidden it.

It will be well to remember the sign said to have been displayed in a Western dance hall: "Don't shoot the pianist; he's doing the best he can." In reading the weather man's forecast for tomorrow. Of course it is difficult to be patient with him when he talks in such a discouraging way, but the government pays him to do it, and he is only doing his duty when he sends out intelligence like this: "Showers with fog and cool weather tonight and Sunday. Fresh to brisk northeast winds." That means more northeaster tonight and tomorrow.

The barometer continues rather low over Utah. It is warmer over the Lower Missouri and Upper Mississippi valleys and the lake region except on western Lake Superior. Cool weather prevails in the Northwest, the Central valleys and the Atlantic and Gulf states.

Following were the maximum temperatures recorded during the twenty-four hours ending at 8 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

United States Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, June 24.—Forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Sunday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity—Showers with fog and cool weather tonight and Sunday. Fresh to brisk northeast winds.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecast.

Chicago, June 24.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Sunday: Wisconsin—Probably showers tonight and Sunday except generally fair weather in southeast portion. Warmer tonight.

Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota—Probably showers tonight and Sunday.

Upper Lakes—Light to fresh southeast except probably easterly winds on Superior. Generally fair weather tonight and Sunday, except showers on Superior and Northern Michigan.

From One Who Knows.

Anoka Union: That ere town of Duluth has got two mighty good daily newspapers, I want to tell you; the morning News Tribune and The Evening Herald and the citizens up that way don't depend on the Windy City papers for their news either. Coming down on the train recently, I was surprised to see these Duluth papers in the hands of nearly every passenger and nary another paper from other places. Both these papers are well edited, well printed and full of news. They are filling the field in the northern part of the state, but they had to work for it, but gaining it, it's as easy as falling off a log holding it. Hope they keep right on doing it.

DOMESTIC PLEASANTRIES.

Cleveland Leader: Louise—I could never bear flirting in the daytime. Twilight is the ideal time for lovemaking.

Cecile—I knew you'd think so.

Louise—Why?

Cecile—Your face can't be seen so distinctly then, of course.

Philadelphia Press: "I was looking about in Bargen's millinery department today," began the scheming wife, "and I saw the sweetest thing—"

"Yes," interrupted her foxy husband, "that's a great idea of Bargen's to put mirrors all around where you women congregate."

Washington Star: "Remember," said the earnest citizen, "that the eyes of the public are upon you."

"That condition is provided for," answered Senator Sorghum. "In political prestidigitation the handout must always be quicker than the eyesight."

Chicago Tribune: "I sometimes think," said Deacon Ironside, "we shall have to summon Brother Hardesty before the church board."

"What is the matter with Brother Hardesty?" asked Elder Keepalong.

"He is finding fault with the plan of creation. He says there are too many carp and dogfish and too few black bass."

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

A Home Maker.

When she passed the other evening into the larger life, at the ripe age of 70, the big world hardly noted her going, but the little world of which she was the center seemed suddenly smaller and lonelier and because her life-story is that of a great multitude of God-fearing, self-sacrificing women whose virtues seldom are publicly recorded but whose quiet efficiency helps to keep the universe stable does it seem worth while to tell it.

A home maker she was more than anything else from the hour she went as a fair young bride to a New England city even to the end of her days. The outward habitation was transferred from time to time, but in the numerous migrations East and West the home life had under her moulding touch a quality and a beauty all its own. Amid the privations of the frontier the light from her lamp of faith and love shone as brightly as when she pitched her tent amid the refinements of an older civilization.

She had her full share of human vicissitudes, but you know that whenever or wherever you rang her doorbell she would greet you with a smile and a warm hand-clasp. More than once she quaffed the peepest cup of sorrow which a mother can put to her lips, but from the heart she could say of the baby boys who had passed from her sight:

"Mine in God's gardens run to and fro,
And that is best."

As the children who remained grew to manhood and womanhood and as new little homes began to be made not far away and as birdlings came to those new nests her heart expanded, too, and the home making instinct found fresh fields for exercise. The brides came back to her for counsel with reference to their maids and their menus and the bridegrooms found in her a ready though never an intermeddling confidant. As Thanksgiving and Christmas recurred, children and grandchildren, aunts and cousins gravitated naturally to the familiar hearthstone where her serene and gracious presence dominated and directed every joyous reunion.

But the outgo of her sympathies was not limited to the family circle. She served her own home all the better because she ministered directly or indirectly to many another home in the community. Her church was not only a place where she worshiped her God and found nourishment for her best life, but it opened to her a door of opportunity and thorough organizations like the King's Daughters she developed the latent powers of others, fostered their charitable impulses and set in motion definite agencies which are still multiplying and perpetuating her influence.

A modest home was hers with comforts enough, but with few tokens of affluence. She knew how to make a little go a long way. She respected learning and letters and had a keen desire to keep pace with the best thoughts of the world. She coveted for her children the opportunities of college and of travel. She imposed no fetters upon their own broadening ideas, though they knew what "Mother's Bible" meant to her and at what fountains she daily fed her own strength. There was, too, an ample place in that home for the element of fun. She had herself the merry spirit that doeth good like medicine. Only that and the grace of God would have enabled her to bear the hardships and disappointments that were her portion.

She was not a perfect woman and as I have already intimated she was not an exceptional woman. Had she been the latter, you would have read about her in The Social Settlement Tidings or in the Club Women's Weekly, or in the Daily Tell-It-All. She was just a plain, ordinary home-maker—nothing more, nothing less. She knew how to make a home to perfection. That was a large enough sphere for her. It offered as big a fulcrum as she wanted for helping to lift the world. Nor was her life all outgo. Great as is her reward today in the heavenly existence, she received while here no meager returns for what she gave. The experiences of wifehood and motherhood, a half century of home building, an abounding good will to others reaching from her nearest neighbors to the ends of the earth—all these yielding their rich fruitage in character. And what career is there that offers to consecrated womanhood today larger opportunities and rewards than the good old-fashioned vocation of wife, mother and home-maker.

THE PARSON.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It makes a lot of difference whose stocks are gored.

When a man doesn't smoke, generally his wife has a good reason for it.

A man acts as proud over holding the last trump as if he had invented cards.

Girls would never wear low shoes if it weren't for the ribbons or buckles on them.

It takes a good deal of sense not to make people say you think you have more than you have.

Highways and Byways of The Town.

The day coach was pretty well filled up when the girl got on. She was young and rather attractive and everyone looked at her. She had in tow an old man. He was very old, and appeared to be weak. His steps were feeble and he walked with difficulty. His long beard and long hair were gray, and his simple but kindly face was badly wrinkled. He was blind. His clothes were frayed and worn, and of the style of years ago.

Two men near the door rose and offered to help the girl. With their assistance she piloted her charge to a seat half way up the car, and then sat down across the aisle from him, beside a well-dressed man of middle age, or maybe he was a little past middle age. He had a daughter of his own, perhaps, for he looked at the young woman with a smile of approval, and seemed inclined to place himself upon a friendly footing with her at once. She was probably 19 or 20 years old.

"Your grandfather?" he inquired.

"No," she said, smiling brightly, "he is my granduncle."

"Getting kind of far along to take a railroad journey, is he not?"

"That's what I told mother, but she would have me go after him. You see he has been at the Soldiers' Home for the past fourteen years, with no one in particular to care for him. Mamma has been worrying about it for a long time, but it was only lately that we felt able to care for him at home. There was no place else he could go. We thought it would be much nicer for him in a private house, with friends who would care for him properly. The journey is wearing on him, though, and he is frightened. I can hardly get him to move sometimes. You see we had to change trains this morning. We have been riding since 11 o'clock last night, and it will be four hours yet before we get home. I am afraid he will be rather tired."

"Fourteen years, you say, he has been at the Soldiers' Home?"

"Yes."

"How old is he?"

"I think he was 86 last month," and the girl looked across the aisle, ostensibly to see if the grand-uncle was comfortable.

The eyes of her new-found friend followed her gaze, and there was a thoughtful expression about them. "It almost seems a pity to move him," he said. "I should have thought he would dislike leaving after having been there so long. He must have grown to know the place and the people, and I understand the occupants there get the best of care. A change at his age will not come easy."

"Oh, he did hate to go away from the place, but it was just a notion. I am sure he will like it much better with us."

"But still the man looked doubtful. It was a hot day and the old veteran wore a heavy winter overcoat. The girl noticed that he was rather warm and stood up to help him take the coat off. The middle-aged man helped her, and soon the charge was made more comfortable. The girl showered other little attentions upon the soldier before resuming her seat, and the faces of the other passengers plainly showed the pelasure her actions gave them.

Several spoke of her kindness to the old man. Those of them who had daughters or sisters doubtless wondered if the daughters or sisters would act the same under similar circumstances, and many were the words of praise that were spoken.

"It's just fine the way the people have been treating us," said the girl, again picking up the conversation. "I don't know what I would have done, I am sure, if they had not taken such an interest in us. I can hardly manage him alone. He is nothing but a big child, and is even more helpless than a child would be. They all do all they can to aid me. I wish I could find some way to better show my appreciation. I didn't suppose everybody could be so decent."

The man and girl rode together during the remainder of the afternoon. The conversation turned into pleasant channels, and he learned her name and something about her home life. He bought fruit of the train boy for the old soldier, who was very fond of it, according to the girl. When the time came for her to get off he helped the veteran on with his coat again, and then led him to the door, helped him down the steps, across the platform and to the street. The young woman expressed much surprise that no one was there to meet her, but said this was probably due to the fact that her letter home was delayed in transmission. The street car line was a block away. The train only stopped at the station eight or ten minutes, and the man hardily knew what to do. He did not want to leave the two there alone, for it was evident that without assistance the girl could not easily get to the street car line with her charge, and even if she could it was no trip for the veteran, in the condition he was.

"Carriage, carriage, have a carriage, sir?"

The voice at his elbow gave him an idea. The girl and her grand uncle were quickly bundled into a cab, directions were given, the driver paid, and then the middle-aged man was at liberty to run for his train, which he barely caught.

A few days later, in a distant city, he accidentally ran across a brief bit of news, written as coming from the town where he had last seen the train acquaintance. He recognized the names. The paragraph read as follows:

"Capt. ———, who was brought here last week from the Soldiers' home to reside with his niece, Mrs. ———, No. 129 Tenth street, died last night at the age of 86 years. Capt. ——— will be remembered as the man at the Soldiers' home, who came into the possession of $10,000, something over a week ago by the accidental death of a younger brother in the West. The excitement and fatigue attendant upon his recent journey is supposed to have hastened his end."

A young man signing himself Constant Reader has written The Herald for advice in a love affair. He says he proposed to a girl one night recently, and that she accepted him, but now he is afraid she said yes because he is possessed of a considerable amount of money. He wants to be married for himself, and not for his money.

He asks how he is to tell whether she is going to be his wife because he is rich or because she really likes him.

As there is no record of anyone ever having thought of accusing a girl of marrying a man in any way connected with a newspaper for his money, it is an obvious fact that there is no person about the office who is qualified to give an expert answer to the question However, that Constant Reader may better judge for himself, a few samples showing how present-day proposals are made, and how she feels and how he feels, according to recent magazines which are supposed to have their largest circulation among society folk, are given herewith.

If the woman acted like any of these he may know she does not care a hang for his money, for a guarantee of pure love goes with every story from which the clippings are made. Perhaps she was a trifle cold because she had been reading these same magazines and knew from them that she did not go at it in the right way. He can also judge of this fact from the samples.

If things were like this with Constant Reader and his love it is all O. K.:

"Her loveliness, her innocence, the beautiful, direct gaze, the childlike fuliness of mouth and contour of cheek and throat, left him spellbound. The very air around them seemed suffused with the vital glow of her youth and beauty; each breath they drew increased their wonder, till the whole rosy universe seemed thrilling and singing at their feet, and they two, love-crowned, alone, saw Time and Eternity flowing like a golden tide under the spell of Paradise."

• • •

If she loves like this the coal bill will be small:

"She was laughing, a trifle excited, as she turned to face him where he had risen. But, at the touch of his hand on hers, the laughter died at a breath, and she stood, her limp hand clasped in his, silent, expressionless, save for the tremor of her mouth.

"'I must go,' she said, shrinking from him.

"He did not understand, thrilled, stunned as he was by the contact, but he let her soft hand fall away from his.

"Then with a half sob she caught her own fingers to her lips and kissed them where the pressure of his hand burned her white flesh—kissed them, looking at him.

"'You—you find a child—you leave a woman,' she said unsteadily. 'Do you understand how I love you—for that?'

"He caught her in his arms.

"'No—not yet—not my mouth!, she pleaded, holding him back; 'I love you too much—already too much. Wait! Oh, will you wait? • • • And let me wait—make me wait? • • • I—I begin to understand • • • some things • • • I did not know an hour ago.'

"In the dusk he could scarcely see her as she swayed, yielding, her arms tightening about his neck in the first kiss she had ever given or forgiven in all her life.

"And through the swimming tumult of their senses the thrush's song rang like a cry. The moon had risen."

• • •

Here is another nice one:

"And then—neither of them knew how it happened—her arm was around his shoulder, and his head was lying upon her tender breast. The dry agony that shook him passed; and tears that fell like balm rolled down his cheeks.

"Baby, carried quite out of herself in this astounding whirl of events, began to weep, too, quite softly, to herself. And, as he lifted his face to hers and drew her down to him, their lips met upon the bitter of their tears, and yet in sweetness undreamed of. At the touch of that child-mouth and at her voiceless surrender, Bethune knelt before her in his heart and consecrated himself to her forever."

• • •

"He drew bridle, forcing a laugh. 'I cut a sorry figure in your life; be patient; I am going out of it now.' And he swung his horse. At the same moment she did the same, making a demi-tour and meeting him half-way, confronting him.

"'Do you—you mean to ride out of life without a word? she asked unsteadily.

"'Good-by.' He offered his hand, stirring his horse forward; she leaned lightly over and laid both hands in his. Then her face surging in color, she lifted her beautiful dark eyes to his as the horses approached, nearer, nearer, until, as they passed, flank brushing flank her eyes fell then closed as she swayed toward him, and clung, her young lips crushed to his.

"There was nobody to witness it except the birds and squirrels, nobody but a distant mounted policeman, who almost fainted away in his saddle.

"Oh it was awful, awful! Apparently she had been kissed speechless, for she said nothing. The man-fool did all the talking, incoherently enough, but evidently satisfactory to her, judging from the way she looked at him, and blushed, and touched her eyes with a bit of cambric at intervals."

• • •

This is brief and to the point:

"There was that in Mr. Maclin's voice that brought a faint flush to Miss Celementina's cheek.

"'I suppose,' went on the gentleman, 'when he's digging in your geranium bed he thinks he's your dog, and when he's chewing my doormat he's probably laboring under the delusion that he's my dog. Mis Clementina, it would be so easy to make him our dog. Don't you think we'd better?'

"'I—I don't know,' faltered Miss Clementina.

But the words were muffled against Mr. Maclin's coat, and he took the liberty of assuming that she did know.

• • •

Another short and sweet one:

"He caught her hands and drew her to her feet, drew her toward him, her shining, fascinated eyes on his demanding, compelling ones, her lips apart, the color burning to her temples. 'Do you know?' he cried.

"'Oh,' she cried breathlessly, thrilled and dominated by him. 'Tell me, tell me! I want to stay!'

"The world was blotted out for a whirling, golden instant. Then:

"'Mr. and Mrs. Brainerd and Mr. Wilson,' announced the automaton at the doorway.

• • •

"Her white lids drooped over her tawny eyes, and just for an instant the red lips that were level with his met his.

"'Judith!'

"That was all he said, and it seemed to the girl that he drew back, away from her. And possibly he did, for he knew that he must not draw her close, not yet, oh, not yet, anyway.

"And after he had spoken that one word, after he had said her name, he seemed to find no words to offer her, and she looked for none. He still held her hands, however, and she still looked straight and deep into his eyes.

"Once the red line of her mouth widened into a smile, once it twisted into a mutinous knot. But she would not speak, nor would she help him to find words.

"'And it's all gone from me now,' she said, gone from me for ever, every bit of it. And, Cecil, it's love, love for you, that's exorcised it. Even the devil himself can be exorcised by love. Even the Black Devil himself can be exorcised by the kind of love I have for you.'

"It was not only her words that pleaded. Love itself pleaded in the tawny eyes, on the tender lips, with the clinging hands, and in very truth it is doubtful if the devil himself could have found place between her lips that clung to his, within his arms that clasped her close."

• • •

Probably Constant Reader's case was not like this:

"She raised her eyes to his. Given the chance he so seldom got from her, he gazed eagerly down into their depths, revealed to him in the half light, half shadow, of the strange place they were in. She met the look steadily at first, then falteringly. At length the lashes fell.

"In silence he waited, motionless. She tried to laugh lightly. 'You're so tragic,' she murmured.

"She raised her eyes little by little till they had reached his shoulders, broad and firm and motionless.

"'Good-by, Mr. Jarvis,' she said, very low, and in a voice which trembled a little. 'But please don't mind very much. I'm not—worth it. I —'

"She lifted her eyes once more from his shoulder to his face, to find the same look, intensified, meeting her with its steady fire. She paled slowly, dropped her eyes and turned as if to go, when a great breath, like a sob, shook her. She stood for an instant, faltering, then turned again and took one uncertain step toward him.

"'Oh—I can't—I can't—' she breathed. 'You're the stronger—and I—I—want you to be.'

With one quick stride he reached her.

"'Of course you do,' he said, his voice exultant in its joy."

• • •

This couldn't have been a case of money love:

"They looked steadfastly into each other's eyes. What they saw filled his face with triumphant happiness and hers with the soft flood of her unexpected confusion.

"'I think I will be going now,' she suggested.

"He did not attempt to stay her. But he turned away for his hat and followed her to her carriage.

"'You don't seem so anxious to keep me this time,' she flashed out at him, her foot on the step.

"'No, because this time I'm going with you.'

"She did not demur, and he seated himself at her side. Under the billowy parasol that lay in her lap his fingers clasped hers."

• • •

There may be some doubt about the following case:

"'Peter' she said softly, 'you're a gibbering idiot, an inje-rubber idiot on a spree. Why, when you have surprised me in this cul de sac, don't you do something to help me out?' Then with rising indignation: 'You're as useless as a—as a—as an antimacassar.'

"'That doesn't sound at all a nice thing to be,' said Peter despondently.

1, 1905. President Dix's report, while brief, was timely and full of interest. Secretary-Treasurer McEwen's report was a complete statement of the finances. It showed that $2,200 was received during the year and $1,800 was expended.

"Resolutions were adopted pledging the support of the State Fedcration of Labor to the American Fedcration of Labor and repudiating the proposed new industrial movement.

"The special resolutions reported favorably by the committee on resolutions were mostly of limited application. They included every variety of subject. The following enumcration will give a fair idea of them: Endorsing custom tailors' union label; urging the purchase of crackers bearing the union label; discouraging the purchase of bakery goods without the union label; advising the purchase of bread, crackers and candy bearing the label of the Bakers' and Confectioners' union; refusing to recognize fair and cigar which does not bear the label of the Cigarmakers' International union; that labor commissioners take such action as will prevent railroad companies from looking up personal records of applicants for positions, such proceedings being a violation of the state law; requesting that stationary engineers, pressmen, elevator operators, millwrights and other crafts demand that machinists employed in making repairs within their jurisdiction show the due book of the Machinists' union; that incoming officers be directed to organize Womens' Label leagues throughout the state; asking the American Federation of Labor to place a paid organizer in the field in Minnesota for the balance of the year 1905, one-half of the expense thus incurred to be borne by the State Federation of Labor; directing the federation council to carry out the spirit of the A. F. of L. resolution requiring factory inspectors in different states to wear a uniform or visible badge when on duty, also requiring the passage of a law providing for a rigid factory inspector service examination; admitting women's union label leagues on the same basis as central labor bodies; opposing the extension of competition by convicts with free labor, and that the demand be renewed that 'all prison-made products bear a conspicuous stamp or label showing that they are prison-made; urging labor papers of the state to advocate restriction of immigration, and that affiliated unions appoint committees to ask the support of senators and congressmen to favor a restriction law at the next session of congress; declaring that preference be given union-made goods manufactured in Minnesota; prohibiting the officers of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor from using their positions for furthering their political interests; amending the Chinese exclusion law so as to include Japanese and Koreans; asking the legislature to establish a home for consumptives; that the delegates use their utmost influence to prevent fraud and deception in the sale of meats and meat products; recommending to all affiliated unions that they make special mention from time to time at their meetings of the necessity of calling for the blue label of the Tobacco Workers' International Union of America; reaffirming the boycott on the products of the Washburn-Crosby Milling company, Minneapolis, and wiring President Gompers to that effect; pledging moral assistance to officers of free employment bureaus in making that department of the state labor bureau a success; giving moral support to the Chicago garment workers and teamsters now on strike; naming forty-eight hours as a week's work for females employed in mercantile establishments and retail stores.

A proposition to increase the per capita tax from 1 to 2 cents was referred to a referendum vote. If adopted, 50 per cent of the revenue will be devoted to the work of organization solely, 25 per cent to be in a general fund to cover the contingent work of organization, to be expended as the federation council or convention may direct, and the remaining 25 per cent to be used in paying the salary of the secretary-treasurer and for office supplies and stationery.

By resolution the building trades were urged to demand the union card of the teamsters delivering material to buildings in course of construction.

The proposed amendment offered by the Duluth delegation for the distribution of the officers to the several cities in the state failed to pass by eight votes. It requires a two-thirds vote to pass a constitutional amendment, and the Twin City delegates prevented this. Every delegate outside of the Twin Cities voted in favor of the amendment.

The following officers were elected: President, William Templeman, St. Paul (after seventeen ballots had been taken); first vice president, R. C. Kutz, Brainerd; second vice president, William E. Stacy, St. Cloud; third vice president, Edith Kissinger, Minneapolis; secretary-treasurer, W. E. McEwen, Duluth; federation council, John J. Henry, C. E. James, J. P. Walsh, St. Paul; G. W. Deacon, A. W. Turner, S. J. Spencer, Minneapolis, and Garfield E. Morrison, Mankato. The Minnesota Union Advocate was declared the official organ. Stillwater was chosen as the next convention city.

"When the resolution advocating the entrance of labor unions into politics to accomplish certain things came up, there was no end of oratory. The resolution was recommended for adoption. It advocates wherever possible, trade unionists secure nomination and election of men who are members of organized labor, and are friendly to the cause of unionism, regardless of party affiliation, and where possible to secure the election of known friends on Republican and Democratic or Socialist tickets to support independent candidates, when it is reasonably certain they are favorable to labor unions. Local unions are recommended to change their constitutions so as to permit the discussion of the merits and demerits of political candidates, or form clubs for that purpose, without giving the right to indorse any particular candidate for political office.

"From now on, questions of interest, which it is necessary for the membership at large to decide may be submitted to a referendum vote upon the request of ten (10) unions."

IN LABOR CIRCLES

Trades Assembly Hears Report From the Brainerd Convention.

Local Grievances Reported and Attended to With Dispatch.

Schedule of union meetings:

Monday—Retail clerks, Labor World hall.

Tuesday—Carpenters, Rowley building, West First street; Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, Labor World hall; Sheet Metal workers, Labor World hall; Machinists, Axa building.

Wednesday—Freight handlers, Kalamazoo block; Plasters, Labor World hall; Meat Cutters, Labor World hall.

Thursday—Steam Engineers, Lyceum building; Electrical workers, Labor World hall.

• • •

The trades assembly met last night at Labor World hall, and held the shortest meeting that has been held for a number of months. Business was dispatched quickly and everything ran along smoothly. A number of grievances were reported and attended to quickly, committees being appointed to look after the affairs.

• • •

The trades assembly appointed a committee to have charge of the Labor day program and all arrangements. Labor day comes on Sept. 4, so the committee will begin work at once. It consists of James Walsh, chairman; H. De Roche, Paul Boilleau, Leslie Copeland and Hal Boreen.

• • •

The delegates from the tailors' union reported that Millen & Co., of 310 West First street, refuse to employ union journeymen. The matter was referred to a committee consisting of James Walsh, H. De Roche and Vice President Thoma to call upon the recalciterants and see what can be done. They will report to the next meeting of the assembly, two weeks hence.

• • •

It was reported that there is a boycott on the goods of H. B. Wiggins, Son & Co., of Bloomfield, N. J., manufacturers of burlap and wall coverings, as they have been declared unfair to union labor.

• • •

The delegates from the cooks and waiters union repuested that all union men be asked to boycott Chinese restaurants, declaring that a good many union men are eating in these places. The assembly instructed all delegates to report this back to their unions and request union men to call for the union card in restaurants they patronize.

The following delegates were obligated: Leslie Copeland and Christ Jensen of the cooks and waiters, and S. S. McDonald of the machinists.

The assembly's delegates to the Brainerd convention of the state federation of labor reported to the assembly in part, as follows:

"As your delegate to the twenty-third convention of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, held at Brainerd, Minn., June 12, 13 and 14, 1905, I have the honor to report that we had a very successful and enthusiastic meeting. The Duluth delegation, composed entirely of earnest and sincere men, were very much in evidence during the convention.

There were 178 delegates present from all parts of the state, and from the very opening of the convention until the motion to adjourn to meet in Stillwater in June, 1906, there was no lack of interest in the meeting.

"After the speeches President Dix appointed the standing committees for the meeting. The Duluth delegates fared well in committee appointments and all seemed thoroughly satisfied.

"The reports of officers were then read. All were interesting, strong and of an educational nature. These will be printed in full in the official proceedings, which will be out before July

CELEBRITIES OF THE CIRCUS

Foreign Artists Predominate In Great Forepaugh-Sells Show.

It is unqualifiedly claimed that never before have so many of the greatest riders in the world been brought together for a single performance, as in the program of The Great Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers Combined Shows this season. The most expert artists from the four corners of the earth have been successfully induced to unite in the enormous bill of these supreme shows. The three rings of the huge circus are filled with equestrian acts of novelty, peril and exclusiveness from the time the arenic program begins until the ending, two hours later. All the nerve-quickening deeds of familiar circus history are recracted with superior grace and deftness, and much more of dextrous bounding, picturesque poising, thrilling tumbling and subtle daring are rendered with astounding ease and precision. These renowned riders appear to upset all natural laws and are proclaimed to have reached the limit of human possibility. There are whole companies in some acts, while other startling features are evolved by groups or individuals. It is a common sight to see four superb riders moving as a unit, jumping from the ground as one person and landing on the back of a galloping horse at the same instant. Saddle riders in beautiful menage numbers, daring horsemen of the plains, ruthless cavalrymen, savage warriors, reckless huntsmen, proud militiamen, fashionable esquires, madly riding jockeys, savage duelists and other equestrians of imposing ability and historic fame are to be seen in the hurried movement of the tremendous program. Foremost among these masterful equestrians may be mentioned the seven O'Briens, who appear in America for the first time. Oscar Lowande, conceded in professional circles to be the greatest rider in the world. Then there are such splendid riders as Harry Lamkin, Martine Lowande, Mme. Correa and Miss Mamie Kline. There are too many to mention in a brief newspaper notice. There are two hundred performers in all, and fully one-half of these are equestrians of world-wide fame.

The wonderful Forepaugh and Sells Brothers Shows exhibit here Monday, July 3, and give two performances, the afternoon at 2 o'clock and the evening at 8 o'clock. Admission tickets and reserved chair seats for the exhibitions of The Great Forepaugh and Sells Frothers Shows in this city will be sold circus day at the downtown office of Forepaugh and Sells Brothers for exactly the same prices charged in the wagon on the show grounds.

DULUTH'S BEST DRESSERS READ THIS—

Mellin & Company, the First street tailors, opposite the Board of Trade building, have something in store for you for the next twenty days. Beginning June 23. They will sell 500 suits of fancy, imported cheviots, worsteds and tweeds, in grays, brown, blue and mixtures. All the newest foreign creations in this great sale sold at cost. They will not carry any patterns over from season to season. You see only new goods—no dead ones—any woolens left after this sale will be shipped to Kaufer & Smith, Milwaukee. This is an opportunity you cannot afford to overlook. All garments made by Mellin & Company are tailored as they should be, right. Remember the sale lasts but twenty days.

THE INDEPENDENT OIL COMPANIES SCORE ONE.

St. Paul, June 24.—The independent oil companies scored against the railway companies of Minnesota, in a decision yesterday by the state railroad and warehouse commission.

The case was the Barties Oil company and others against the Minnesota railway companies.

The plaintiff sought to have the rates on oil and gasoline, in less than car load lots, reduced from third to fourth class.

The railroad and warehouse commission granted the request, and the order will go into effect July 15.

The petitioners contend that they were paying third class rates for less than car load shipments, while shippers of tank cars were accorded fifth class rates.

The commission saw the justice of the plea and after Aug. 1, the independent dealers will enjoy fourth class rates for less than car load shipments.

LEAGUERS MEET

First Annual Epworth League Convention at Grace Church.

Will End With Rally Sunday Evening—Interesting Speeches.

The first annual convention of the Epworth league of the Duluth district, which began yesterday afternoon, will wind up Sunday night with a rally at the Grace Methodist church, which will be addressed by a number of men prominent in church and league work throughout the state. The Asbury and Merritt Memorial Methodist churches will suspend services for the benefit of the rally, which it is believed will be largely attended.

It is likely that among the speakers will be C. E. Southwick of Albert Lea, who is president of the league for the state and who is also city attorney for Albert Lea. Miss Mabel Little, a recent graduate of Hamline university, and who will go to China on Sept. 20 to serve there as missionary, will also speak. Watson S. Moore of Duluth will be among the speakers. The general subject for discussion will be "Christian Activity." It is not likely that Rev. S. G. Briggs of Merritt Memorial church will speak on this subject from the clergyman's point of view.

Tomorrow morning Rev. J. B. Hingeley of Minneapolis will preach the convention sermon, and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon a meeting for boys, to be addressed by Norman McLeod, secretary of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., and a meeting of girls, to be addressed by Mrs. John Callahan of the Star of Hope Mission, will be held at Grace church.

The first meeting of the convention opened with a prayer by Rev. E. J. Gatz of Two Harbors. After a hymn had been sung, Rev. E. C. Clemans took the chair, and Miss May Shook of Grand Rapids was elected secretary pro tem. Chairman Clemans then appointed the following committee on organization: Rev. J. W. Robinson, Miss E. Blood, Rev. J. E. Lewis, F. R. Ellsworth, B. N. Wheeler, V. E. Robinson, and Rev. C. W. Ramshaw.

Dr. Clemans made an address on "The Sixteenth Milestone," referring to the fact that the league is sixteen years old. He spoke of the development and growth of the organization since its birth. Rev. R. Swinnerton spoke on "The Town League; the Things for Which It Stands," and this paper was followed by a discussion of it. Dr. Bridgman of Hamline spoke of religious societies at Hamline university, and Rev. C. H. Blake of Hibbing made an address on "The Duty of the League."

Arthur Brown of Lester Park opened the evening session with prayer, and this was followed by a song service. In behalf of the city, R. D. Haven, president of the city council, welcomed the delegates to Duluth, and Dr. Clemans welcomed them on behalf of Grace church. Rev. Rupert Swinnerton replied. Rev. George H. Bridgemon delivered a sermon on "The Blessedness of Religion."

He spoke on the restfullness the soul feels where its possessor knows of his peace with God. Yesterday afternoon Dr. Bridgeman spoke on "Christian Education," holding up the desirability of the advantages and the work of Christian colleges.

This morning's session proved very interesting. It was opened by devotional service conducted by Rev. F. M. Scott of Mountain Iron and an interesting address was given by Mrs. Piper of Pine City on "Our Junior Societies." This paper provoked a great deal of discussion and it was voted to have it published in the Epworth League Herald. Rev. C. H. Hown of Grand Rapids, Minn., gave a most interesting chalk talk. He is a cartoonist of recognized ability. Leslie Benson of Duluth spoke interestingly on "What are the requisites of a devotional meeting?"

This afternoon the permanent organization will be formed and among the interesting things on the program will be a talk by Rev. J. B. Hingeley on the Asbury hospital. Rev. Charles Fox Davis of Duluth will speak on "The Place of the Epworth League in America's National Development" which will be followed by "Young People and World Evangelization" by W. G. Burton of Duluth. "The Business Meeting" will be the subject of an address by Ralph Pickering of Superior and the business session of the convention will close the afternoon program.

This evening the program will be opened with a song service and this will be followed by an address by Rev. F. W. Straw of Superior. Rev. J. B. Hingeley of Minneapolis, will then speak on "How To Be Of Use."

A $4,000,000 Gem Found.

The largest diamond ever discovered has been found near Pretoria. It weighs over 3,00 carats and is said to be worth about $4,000,000. There is much excitement as a result of the find. The best medicine ever discovered for the hundred and one ailments of mankind is the famous Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and through it thousands of persons have been able to recover that most priceless gem—health. When you remember that it has been before the public for over fifty years you can get some idea of the wonderful merit it contains, and a fair trial is all that is necessary to add you to its long list of friends who are never without a bottle in their medicine chest. It positively cures indigestion, dyspepsia, costiveness, cramps, general weakness, billiousness and malaria, fever and ague. Try a bottle today.

DOUBLE GUARD AT JAIL.

"Coyote Bill" Threatened With Lynching In Montana.

Missoula, Mont., June 24.—Trouble is brewing in this city as the result of the murder of William Burrig, a wellknown rancher, by William Beeskove, a notorious character commonly known as "Coyote Bill," and the uncrowned king of the rattlesnakes on Rattlesnake creek, several miles from this city. Threats of lynching are rife and the sheriff has a double guard at the county jail.

Burrig left a wife and three children practically penniless, and a subscription was taken last night, resulting in $300 being collected for the dead man's family.

Beeskove has figured in many gun plays, and was generally feared by his neighbors. A bitter feud of three years' standing has been on between him and Burrig, arising over a dispute as to property rights. Beeskove asserts that Burrig and two other neighbors systematically persecuted him and he proposed to protect himself, notifying the authorities to that effect.

Burrig bled to death after being shot twice, and was found at the foot of a precipice over which he staggered after being wounded.

Beeskove has been divorced five times, and now has an action for another divorce pending in the district court, also an advertisement in a Chicago matrimonial publication for another wife, representing himself to be a wealthy stockman and mine owner.

HEADS OR TAILS?

New Financial Problem For Secretary Shaw.

Washington, June 24.—An old-fashioned nickel game gave Secretary Shaw a new financial problem to decide yesterday. It accompanied the following letter, which was addressed to "Uncle Sam, Washington, D. C.":

"Please find inclosed 5 cents, for which I want you to tell me which side of the nickel is head and which is tails. Use nickel for postage in return."

The nickel was one of the old style, with a large figure 5 on one side and a shield and the date on the other. Ordinarily, date appears on the "head" of all coins, but it struck Mr. Shaw that it was different with this one. He wanted to be fair, so he called in several of his assistants, but they could give him no advice. Finally the coin and letter were sent to the director of the mint, who disposed of the question with a long and formal letter to the anxious inquirer, in which it was stated that the government knows neither "heads" nor "tails," but that each coin has an obverse and reverse side. In the coin in question the figure 5 showed the obverse side, or the "head," in popular parlance. The reply was sent in a franked envelope and the government pocketed the nickel.

PLANS ARE ALTERED

Building Inspector Wins His Fight For Fireproof Theater.

As a result of the protests of City Building Inspector Keilley, the owners of the new theater building which is being erected on East Superior street, have consented to alter their plans to conform with the building inspector's idea of what the safety of the public demands.

The original plans for the building called for a wall between the auditorium and the stage, that was not constructed of fire proof material. The building inspector protested against it, and while the present building laws did not exactly cover the case, he refused to issue a permit for the building until the plans were altered.

The outside walls were also claimed to be too thin to comply with the ordinance. The plans have been altered in both these respects and they now conform with the ideas of the building inspector in regard to what the public safety demands. The permit was issued this afternoon, calling for a building to cost $18,500, and the work will be rushed as rapidly as possible.

UNIQUE DINNER.

Youngest Guest at Foran Home 52 Years Old.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Foran of 207 West Third street entertained at dinner this noon in honor of Mrs. Foran's mother, Mrs. Kate Kirby. The affair was in the nature of a family reunion, only brotners and sisters of the guest of honor, with wives of the brothers, being present. The youngest guest was 52 years of age and the oldest was 70. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. S. Loranger, Mr. and Mrs. L. Loranger, G. Loranger, Mrs. Arno Jachnig and Mrs. H. A. Kiichli. The diningroom was prettily decorated with red carnations. The place cards were hand-painted.

Irving School Unveils Window In Memory of Miss Kennedy.

J. L. Washburn and R. E. Denfeld Speak at Event.

At the unvelling of the Kennedy Memorial window in the Irving school yesterday afternon, the ceremony accompanying the event was impressive and a very large crowd was present. The popularity of the dead teacher, Miss Laura Kennedy, in whose memory the window was put in, was amply attested by the ceremony and by the large number who took part. Roy Murnian unveiled the window while Miss Grayce Francis Turner was singing "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth."

Addresses were made by School Director J. L. Washburn and Supt. R. E. Denfeld. Their tributes to the memory of Miss Kennedy were second in eloquence only to the feeling of reverence in the hearts of the alumni of the school, which prompted its members to install the window. Mr. Washburn dwelt on the splendid qualities in the woman thus honored, which have had such widespread influence on her pupils as to not only make them revere her memory, but which will have an effect on their entire lives.

Supt. Denfeld said that the installing of the window was a fitting demonstration of the esteem and reverence with which the memory of Miss Kennedy was held by her pupils, but that no material tribute, no mater what it was, could equal the monument to her memory ereteced in the hearts of her pupils.

Principal Foster of the Irving school presided at the unveiling of the window and there were present besides the speakers, N. C. Hendricks, a member of the board of education; Miss H. S. Ely, formerly principal of the Irving school; M. E. Alletzhaeuser, instructor of physical culture in the public schools; Miss Belle Calverly, principal of Jefferson school; Miss Katherine A. King, principal of the Bryant school; Miss Francis Ensign, principal of Lincoln school; Mrs. Robert Smith, former principal of Endion school, and Miss Eleanor Thomson, principal of Emerson school.

ENJOYABLE OCCASION.

Irving School Alumni Holds Annual Banquet.

The tenth annual banquet of the Irving School Alumni Association came off as per schedule last evening and the affair was largely attended and greatly enjoyed. The address of Supt. R. E. Denfeld of the city schools was distinctly the feature of the evening. Mr. Denfeld spoke on "Association," commending it and speaking feelingly of the precious memories such associations as the alumni before which he was appearing, carried through life for each member. He said that memories of school days, the pleasantest days of one's life, fade too quickly from the mind, and they should be kept green and revived, and that the only way to do this is through association.

The proceedings were opened with a program, the first number of which was a selection by a mandolin orchestra. This was followed by the address of welcome given by E. George Kreidler, president of the association. The other numbers, all of which were good, were a reading by Miss Effie Brotherton, a piano solo by Miss Maud Gilbert, and a vocal solo by Miss Alice Sjoselius, a ventriloquistic demonstration by William Coughlan and a vocal solo by Miss Allie Piper.

The banquet followed and was begun with prayer offered by Rev. W. J. Lowrie. The repast itself was excellent, but the speeches were better. George Gilbert was more than acceptable as toastmaster, carrying the affair through without a hitch. Miss House toasted "The Graduating Class" and this was responded to by Miss Foster. Reginald Graham toasted "Our Girls" neatly, Miss Effie Eva Sawyer spoke of "Our Boys" with vim and orginality, Oliver Olson toasted "Irving School;" "The Alumni" was the subject of William Coughlan's toast, "Duluth" received attention in an eloquent way by President E. George Kreidler, and "The Teachers and Principals of Irving School" was the subject of a tender eulogy by Miss Leila Sparks. Humane Officer Withrow spoke of truant work in the schools and said that the members of the alumni were exempt from their high school career. The last the class he looked after.

INFORMATION STILL SCANTY

But Little News Allowed To Come From the Front.

St. Petersburg, Junt 24.—Information from the front is still scanty. While the preliminaries are in progress, a general engagement has not yet begun. Gen. Linevitch's latest report is dated June 20, but the Associated Press dispatches from Godzyadani records a reconnaissance in force against the Japanese June 21. The Japanese were found to have strongly fortified in this region three lines of defence, probably as usual strengthened in the center by entrenchments in order to liberate forces to work on the flanks. Sinister rumors continue to circulate that Linevitch is surrounded, but apparently they have no other base than the London Daily Telegraph's dispatch from Tokio. An optimistic feeling prevails at the offices of the general staff.

The negotiations for a meeting of the peace plenipotentiaries are proceeding slowly. There were no developments today. Foreign Minister Lamsdorff is still ill and unable to see Ambassador Meyer, but perhaps they will hold a conference tomorrow.

It is improbable that an armistice will be arranged until the plenipotentiaries are named and the time of the meeting is fixed. The foreign office says it is now awaiting Japan's propositions on these points.

In connection with the present peace movements the newspapers are recalling that half a century ago there was much talk of American mediation to end the Crimean war. The St. Petersburg Zeitung reprints a dispatch of June 24, 1855, connecting the arrival of Former Presidents Fillmore and Van Buren in London with a report that they were about to offer American mediation between Russia and the Western powers.

DULUTH IS CHOICE

Civil Engineers Want to Come Here In 1906.

Duluth Gets 348 Votes—Directors Must Sanction Choice.

Francis A. Cokefair returned this morning from Cleveland, where he was in attendance at the convention of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and where he labored energetically in the interest of Duluth as the place for holding the next convention of the society. Maj. Potter was also there and bent his energies to the same end, and the effectiveness of their missionary work is found in the result of the vote, which was taken Thursday, to recommend to the board of directors a place for the holding of the 1906 convention. It was as follows:

Duluth, 348; Boston, 28; Thousand Islands, 22; Chicago, 16; New Orleans, 11. About twenty other cities received votes ranging from 10 down to 1.

A vote was also taken as to the time for holding the meeting, and 256 favored June, 106 July, and 44 August.

The action of the society means that Duluth will be the place at which the next convention will be held, providing it is found that the city can offer the accommodations necessary. The board of directors is not bound by the expression of the members, but always follows it, unless conditions are found that make it impossible to do so.

Mr. Cokefair found that the prospect of a lake trip is the great drawing card that won the favor of the members for Duluth. That means that some arrangement must be made for an excursion up the lakes from Buffalo or Cleveland. The plan would be to have a boat of capacity ample to allow the holding of sessions on board. Stops would be made at various points of interest on the trip. The important meetings would be held in Duluth, however, probably at the high school, if that could be secured.

It has in the past been customary to select for the place of meeting a city able to accommodate in one hotel building, practically the entire membership represented at the convention. Duluth cannot do this and that is one obstacle against which it will be necessary to work. The idea of the directors is that the members shall be brought into as close contact socially as possibly. If the boat is secured, however, and the members make the trip up the lakes together, the object sought for will be attained in that manner.

Duluth's hotel accommodations are such that in four hotels more than 500 transients can easily be accommodated in comfort. Superior can take care of 150 more. The membership of the society is about 3,000 and the attendance at conventions runs from 300 to 500.

The board of directors will probably make the formal announcemtn of the place of next meeting in a month or so and it is therefore incumbent upon those interested in getting the convention for Duluth to present at once the things which Duluth can offer.

THE STRIKE IS NOW ONLY AN ANNOYANCE.

Chicago, June 24.—Mr. Farwell gave out the following statement concerning the strike:

"Inasmuch as a settlement giving adequate protection to a non-union man seems unlikely, the employers are now preparing to refuse to take back any striking teamsters. In such an event, of course, no further conferences will be held. The strike has ceased to be a strike, but is rather an annoyance. It no longer has any effect on business."

YARDMASTERS INCORPORATE.

Albany, N. Y., June 24.—The Railway Yardmasters' Association Fraternal and Benevolent organization embracing the whole country, with headquarters in New York, was incorporated today with the secretary of state. The directors for the first year are: William Brewer, James McCarrick and Stephen Mitchell of New York city.

TRAPPING BIG WILD BEASTS

Trees Simultaneously Felled About Them and the Big Apes Are Snared In Nets.

The names of Jamrach, Cross and other wild-beast merchants are well enough known, but few people give a thought to the manner in which their strange wares come to pass through their hands, says Pearson's Weekly. A great many wild creatures find their way to this country, of course, in the care of travelers and sailors, who bring them home as pets from foreign parts. But these are the small and docile animals only.

It does not fall to the lot of a Cook's tourist, for instance, to bring alive to the market a three-ton rhinoceros, fierce and untamable, a twenty-tioot python, or a strong-limbed, long-armed ourang-outang.

These spoils of the chase belong to the professional trapper of wild beasts—a man who haunts the lone jungles in the Far East, and pits his skill against the cunning of the creatures that dwell therein. He must not be confused with the ordinary big-game hunter. The latter has before him a comparatively easy task. He seeks but to kill his prey, strip off the trophies, and depart triumphant. The trapper must on no account slay. His business is to catch his quarry:—no easy task when that quarry is a wild elephant or a savage and active rhinoceros. Ani having caught it he must then devise means of transporting it from the heart of the inaccessible jungle to the nearest port, then to be shipped to London or Hamburg.

If the captive dies on the voyage all the trapper's time, labor and trouble is wasted, and since insurance on the lives of wild beasts can seldom be effected (and then only at exorbitant premiums) he has to grin and bear his loss philosophically. On the other hand, should his live consignment of fur, hide, tooth and claw arrive safely at its destination, great is the trapper's reward.

The independent trapper finds his operations somewhat restricted by the laws of civilized governments. British territory, for instance, to a great extent, is barred to him, for in most parts the big game is preserved.

The Malay Peninsula, however, with its conglomeration of native states, is a happy hunting ground, and its jungles yield him valuable quarry of many sorts, from elephants downward.

In the limited space at my disposal I can sketch but very briefly the means by which the trapper practices his wiles. Elephants, are, perhaps, the most profitable creatures to pursue, since the trapper can corner them, not singly, but en massea— herd of fifty or more at a time.

A huge keddah, or inclosure, is built in the midst of the jungle, the walls being of stout, upright logs, well braced. Care is taken not to disturb the vegetation within or without the keddah, the building materials being hewn a quarter of a mile and more away.

The herd of elephants, which has already been marked down, is now surrounded by beaters, and at nighttime driven slowly, by means of uncouth noises, in the direction of the trap. Elephants move slowly, and the business of driving the herd occupies several nights.

At length it is rounded up between the two branching stockades which diverge from the mouth of the keddah. A sudden, terrific din breaks forth from the beaters behind and the whole crowd dashes frantically forward into the trap, the heavy door of which falls as the last one gallops in.

The great danger to the elephant tracker lies in the presence of young calves with the herd. These, when being driven at night, sometimes slip back undetected (as their small size renders possible) and discover the beaters. Running back to their dams they trumpet forth the alarm and the herd breaks back in panic, trampling all before them, wreaking fearful vengeance on any man who cannot get out of the way in time.

The rhinoceros is a formidable brute to tackle. The method of taking these great beasts is by pitfalls. A rhinoceros having been marked down, a series of pits is dug in the tract of jungle through which it is proposed to drive him.

These, when dug, are carefully covered over with branches, leaves and mud, and so concealed. Then the quarry is driven toward and across the honeycombed area. If he falls forthwith into one of the pits, well and good; if not, he is headed off and driven back again.

In this way he is kept moving to and fro, until at length an unwary step precipitates him into a tremendous task, for the rhinoceros is absolutely the most intractable of all wild beasts.

First he has to be roped as he lies in the pit. Then one side of the pit is dug away, until a sloping path has been made from the bottom to the surface. Up this he is dragged, with gangs of natives hanging on to the ropes, and hauled through the jungle to the nearest river. Here a raft is built, and on to this the brute is lashed, so to drift down to the seaport, whence he is shipped abroad.

Tigers and leopards are perhaps the easiest of all creatures to capture, the ourang-outang the hardest. In the case of the former it is only necessary to bait with a goat, or some such dainty, a large trap, built on the same principle as the ordinary mouse-trap, and placed near the spot where the tiger or leopard has been observed.

The beast, scenting the tethered sacrifice from afar, enters the trap, pounces upon the bait, and thus ensnares himself. Once caught the tiger or leopard cannot escape until released by the trapper.

The orang-outang, which can travel from bough to bough in the tree tops with amazing speed, is obviously a very difficult animal to capture. Besides, the "wild man of the woods" is a creature of great ferocity and immense strength.

In Borneo I was once lucky enough to secure the two largest mias (such is the native name) ever seen there.

The method of capture had the merit of simplicity and ingenuity. The apes, I found, frequented especially a certain rather large tree in the midst of dense jungle.

Encircling this with a cordon of beaters, to prevent them from shifting their quarters, I proceeded to cut through the trunk of every tree that stood within a radius of some fifty yards or thereabouts from this central refuge.

No trunk was completely severed, but each was left propped, as it were, by a single splinter. When all had been so chopped, at a given signal (the mias being safely ensconced in their refuge) the last tree was cut in two.

As it fell forward it crashed against the tree nearest at hand. The latter toppled, snapped, and likewise fell, bringing to the ground, in its turn, a third, fourth, fifth tree, and so on.

Simultaneously almost the whole circle of trees collapsed like a house of cards, leaving two very surprised apes treed in an open clearing, with not a branch within reach to which a spring for liberty could be made.

To cut down this last tree and secure the mias in nets as they came to the ground with it was a simple matter—though one brute, it is true, thrusting a hairy arm through the meshes, laid hold of my leg and broke it. In token whereof I carry a scar to this day.

Smaller monkeys fall victims to their own folly. A lump of sugar is placed in on uncorked glass bottle, and the latter left under the tree in which the chattering simians are perched. Presently down comes the whole troupe to inspect.

One, greedier than the rest, thrusts his arm into the bottle and grasps the coveted sugar. But with doubled fist he cannot withdraw his arm—the neck of the bottle is too narrow. He screams with rage and struggles, but, ridiculous as it may seem, has not the sense to unclasp his fist. To do so would necessitate dropping the sugar, and to that his greedy little soul cannot consent.

Encumbered with the bottle, he is easily captured with a net or stunned with a club. Curiously enough, his fellows, though they have witnessed the whole affair, fail to profit by his example, and a round dozn or more will be trapped in the sam way, by the same bottle, under the same tree.

HOW HE KNEW.

A Baltimore man tells a good story of a friend of his who recently became engaged to a charming young girl, says Harper's Weekly.

The happy lover chanced to be in a fashionable shop when his eye caught a glimpse of a jeweled belt that seemed to him an acceptable gift for his fiancee. He asked the clerk to place an assortment of the belts on the counter. "Ladies' belts?" queried the polite salesman. "Certainly, sir, what size?"

The prospective bridegroom blushed. "Really," he stammered, "I don't know." And he gazed about him helplessly for a moment or so. Finally a happy thought appeared to strike him. "Can't you let me have a yard-stick for a moment?" he asked. The yardstick being forthcoming, he placed it along the inside of his arm from shoulder to wrist. Then looking up at the clerk he exclaimed triumphantly: "Twenty inches!"

To lose is often merely not to find—as a business chance or bargain missed, and thus lost, through failure to read the ads.

THE GRAIN MARKETS

Wheat Started Fairly Strong But Had Slow Decline.

Flax Trading Was Dead and the Market Unchanged.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 24.—It was a weather market in wheat today. The opening was fairly strong because of the rains of the night, but the forecast for clearing weather brought some selling that carried the market down somewhat. Trading was light, however, and the decline was not a heavy or rapid one. In Duluth September fell ⅝c, in Minneapolis ⅞-1c, in Chicago, ⅝c, in St. Louis ⅞-1c and in Kansas City ⅝c. The July option in Duluth fell ½c and in Minneapolis ⅝c, while it was down 1⅛-⅛c in Chicago, 1⅛c in New York, 1-1⅛c in St. Louis and 1⅛-½c in Kansas City.

The Liverpool market closed unchanged to ⅛d higher and Paris ¼@1½c lower. Broomhall estimates world's wheat shipments to be reported Monday at 11,200,000 bus.

Car receipts at Duluth were 9, against 40 last year, and at Minneapolis 121, against 297 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 140, against 251 last year. Chicago received 3, against 5 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 109,000 bus., last year 301,000 bus. Shipments 201,000 bus., last year 122,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 101,000 bus.

In the Liverpool market corn closed ⅝d lower to ¼d higher. In the Chicago market September corn closed a shade lower. September oats closed ⅛-¼c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 807,000 bus., last year 501,000 bus. Shipments 502,000 bus., last year 433,000 bus. Clearances were 254,000 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was very dull. The new September option opened unchanged at 85¾c, sold at 85½c within the first half hour and then fell to 85⅜-¾c, just before the closing time. The close was at 81¾c, a loss of ⅝c. The old September opened ⅛c lower at 90⅜c, sold at 90¼c, and fell to 89¾c, closing there, a loss of ¾c. July declined ½c to $1.12.

Cash offerings were almost nothing. Durum wheat fell 2c.

Flax was dead and all options closed unchanged. October was up ⅜c to $1.27 but fell back and closed at $1.26⅝.

September rye advanced 1c and oats declined ⅛c.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board:

Wheat—To arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.12; on track, No. 1 northern, $1.12; No. 2 northern, $1.01. Durum, No. 1, 85c; No. 2, 84c. July, $1.12; September, new, 84⅝c; September, old, 85¾c. Flax, to arrive, $1.48; on track, $1.48; July, $1.46; September, $1.23½; October, $1.20¾. Oats, to arrive, 31⅜c; on track, 31⅝c. Rye, on track, 72c; September, 62½c. Barley—Feed, 30½@31c.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 9; last year, 49; oats, 6; rye, 1; barley, 6; flax, 5; last year, 44.

Receipts: Wheat, 9,361; oats, 2,622; barley, 1,225; flax, 61.

Shipments: Wheat, 160,000; barley, 15,000.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Profit Taking Causes Easier Tone In Wheat.

Chicago, June 24.—Profit-taking caused an easier tone in the wheat market here today notwithstanding additional rain in Kansas and the Northwest. Commission houses were moderate purchasers. July opened a shade higher to ⅜@⅝c lower at 90¾c to 91¼c. After touching 90¾@⅝c, the price rallied to 91¼c, but reacted again to 90⅜c. Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago reported receipts of 143 cars, against 159 cars last week and 256 cars a year ago.

On prediction of clear weather for the Southwest tomorrow selling became more general resulting in still further weakness. For July the lowest point of the day was reached at 89⅝c. The market closed weak with July down 1⅛@1¼c, at 90c.

Liberal receipts had a bearish effect on corn, pit traders being moderate sellers. Another factor that encouraged sales was improved weather conditions. July opened unchanged to a shade lower at 53⅜c to 53¾c. After selling at 53¼@53⅝c, the price reacted to 53¾c. Local receipts were 652 cars with 23 of contract grade.

An easier tone prevailed in the oats pit mainly in sympathy with other grains. July opened unchanged at 32⅜c and sold off to 32⅛@¼c. Local receipts were 95 cars.

Provisions were firm as a result of a fair demand from packers following a slight advance in the price of live hogs. September pork was up 7½c to 10c at $13.12½ to $13.05. Lard was up 2½c at $7.52½. Ribs were 5@7½c higher at $7.95.

At 32c July reached the low point. The market closed rather weak with July off ⅛c at 32⅜c.

Close: Wheat—July, 90c; September, 81⅞c; December, 81¾@⅞c. Corn—July, 53¾c; old, 53¾@⅞c; September, 52¾c; old, 52⅝c; December, 48¾c; old, 49¼c; May, 48¾c. Oats—June, 31⅞c; July, 31⅝c; September, 29½c; December, 31⅛c; May, 32⅞c. Pork—July, $12.55@12.57½; September, $12.87½; October, $12.95. Lard—July, $7.25; September, $7.45; October, $7.50. Ribs—July, $7.67½@7.70; September, $7.87½@7.90; October, $7.92½@7.95. Rye—July, 66c; September, 63½c. Flax—Cash northwestern, $1.43; southwestern, $1.25. Clover—June, $12.25. Barley—Cash, 42@50c. Timothy—June, $3; September, $7.25. Corn—No. 2, 54@54½c; 3, 53¾@54c. Oats—No. 2, 31¼c; 3, 30½@3½c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, $1.04; 3 red, 91c@$1; 2 hard, $1.02; 3 hard, 94c@$1; 1 northern, $1.18; 2 northern, $1.10@1.12; 3 spring, $1.05@1.10.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Better weather prevailing through most of the Southwest territory and predictions for favorable weather over Sunday induced profit-taking and short selling today, market losing practically its advance of yesterday. September was by far the stronger, July being sold by holders and bears on the theory that with improved weather, receipts of new wheat are to be largely increased. The weather is the all-important factor at the moment. Improved conditions for harvesting will naturally weaken the cash situation. On the other hand unfavorable weather will delay harvesting and shipments of new wheat, and likely to make farmers hesitate over rushing wheat to primary points. It still seems to us like a trading market and promises to be broad and active.

Corn—Considering the weak wheat market and larger receipts we must say this market held very strong. Trade, however, was not very broad, market rolling within narrow range throughout the session. The crop in sections is a little backward, but on the whole seems in good shape. We feel it is still wise to be conservative on the buying side. The market seems as if it would drag some lower.

Oats—News received regarding the growing crop seems all favorable, if the crop escapes serious injury some difficulty will be found in holding prices at present level.

Provisions—It was rather an erratic market in this pit today, strong early and subsequently easing off, pressure being largely on pork. Packers are reporting an improved cash demand, but in the speculative list the conditions seem unchanged. It is purely a scalping market. Our former advice of buying on the set-backs still seems good.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Closed Lower With Easier Feeling All Through List.

Weakness Due Largely to the Unfavorable Foreign Situation.

New York, June 24.—Speculation has broadened out on the stock exchange this week under aggressive and organized leadership and prices have advanced substantially through considerable pressure of realizing and in the face of some unfavorable news developments. The movement was encouraged by the repeated demonstrations of the markets resisting power to attack, indicating a "sold out" condition. Extreme ease of money rates and the hope of a July investment demand fostered the movement. An increase in the Reading dividend aroused hopes of other increases. Sentiment in the iron trade was more cheerful. The Equitable Life affair seemed to lose its depressing force and occasional crop scares were ignored.

New York, June 24.—The stock market opened under pressure with large offerings of Reading, Union Pacific and the United States Steel stocks. The decline was for the most part of moderate fractions reaching from ½ to ⅝ in New York Central, Louisville & Nashville, Canadian Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, Metropolitan Street Railway, Locomotive and People's Gas. Missouri Pacific yielded a point.

Opening losses were largely retrieved and Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Reading sold a shade over yesterday's close before the downward movement was resumed. Selling of Southern stocks discouraged buying in other quarters and a number of the most prominent stocks sold lower than at the opening. Declines reached 1½ in St. Louis Southwestern preferred, 1⅞ in Louisville & Nashville, 1¼ in Illinois Central, Canadian Pacific and Metropolitan Street Railway and 1⅛ in Hide and Leather preferred.

Some buying of Baltimore & Ohio, Reading, Union Pacific and United States Steel preferred checked the decline elsewhere in sympathy but realizing was renewed to take advantag of the favorable bank statement. Consolidated Gas rose 2. United States Rubber 1½, the preferred 1¼ and Realty 1, Pittsburg Coal preferred broke 5½ and Ontario & Western, Denver & Rio Grande preferred, Smelting, North American and the United Investment stocks fell a point or more. The close was easy and dull.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed lower and with an easier feeling all through the list. The opening was a little ragged, influenced by lower London prices and easing off in British consols, due to uneasiness abroad over the Morocco matter. Declines in our market were not at all far reaching, in most cases being only fractional. The bank statement came up to expectations in every sense. The market has had a good upturn. A little speculative setback at the end of the week is not at all unnatural. Undoubtedly the foreign situation also contributed much to the desire to take profits over Sunday. The situation shows no change. Stocks appear to be well held and in conservative circles the feeling seems to be that we are in for a period of better markets.

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been heavy today because of the unfavorable foreign situation, which disturbed all European markets. The selling, however, was largely profit-taking, and stocks were well taken on the decline. The bank statement proved to be better than expected. Brooklyn was a firm feature, as the market closed dull and rather heavy.

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today showed signs of realizing. The effort to advance prices during the week has been successful and there have been good gains made in some quarters. The public is slow in coming in, but with easy money and good crop reports there should be no decline of importance. The outlook is decidedly more hopeful.

BANK STATEMENT.

New York, June 24.—The statement of averages of the clearing house banks of this city for the week shows: Loans $1,102,812,700, decrease $2,048,200; deposits $1,145,792,900, increase $5,598,100; circulation $48,069,700, increase $701,700; legal tenders $87,423,300, increase $1,000,000; specie $214,369,099, increase $8,512,200; reserve $301,792,399, increase $9,512,20; reserve required $286,098,225, increase $1,627,025; surplus $15,694,675, increase $7,885,175; ex. United States deposits $18,255,525, increase $7,896,425.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 24.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 2@7 points, in response to higher cables than expected, some demand, through commission houses and a fitful bull support. Trading later, however, was very quiet, with smaller longs taking profits and some of the local professionals selling on continued good weather and improving crop accounts, and the market by the middle of the morning went back to about last night's figures.

Futures closed steady: June, 8.63; July, 8.70; August, 8.77; September, 8.83; October, 8.90; November, 8.94; December, 8.99; January, 9.04; February, 9.06; March, 9.09; April, 9.11; May, 9.14. Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 9.30; middling gulf, 9.55. Sales none.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, June 24.—Cattle—Receipts, 400; market steady; good to prime steers, $5.25@6; poor to medium, $3.75@5.10; stockers and feeders, $2.50@4.50; cows, $2.50@4.50; heifers, $2.50@5; canners, $1.40@2.50; bulls, $2.25@4; calves, $3@5.50. COPPER GOSSIP.

Paine, Webber & Co.: The declaration of the dividend of 75 cents per share payable July 15, 1905, on United States Mining, can be regarded as placing of the stock on an eight per cent basis, as this dividend covers a five months period instead of six months. The next dividend will be paid January 15, instead of Feb. 15, 1906, and will undoubtedly be $1 per share. It will be recalled that the circular to stockholders says that the new property purchased, for which 70,000 shares of new stock was issued, is capable of returning eight per cent on the investment, a rate which the present earnings of the company lend your directors to believe can be paid hereafter.

Paine, Webber & Co.: The directors of the Baltic Mining company, the shares of which are owned by the Copper Range company, have declared a dividend of $1.50 per share on the capital stock of 100,000 shares payable June 23, 1905, to stock of record June 22. This is the second dividend declared by the company and compares with $1 paid March 22, 1905.

LITTLE DOING IN COPPERS

Market Dull This Week —Something As To North Butte.

The market for the Arizona and other copper stocks of local interest has been very dull this week. Prices at the close are about as they were at the beginning except that Pittsburg and Duluth stock is lower, sales of the full paid being made today at $15.50 a share. Calumet and Pittsburg has been a little firmer due to the publication of the fact that sinking in the Briggs shaft is again under way after months of delay and with the water under control. Three shifts are at work which indicates an intention to push matters. Three shifts are also at work on the Hoatson shaft on the Del Norte claim belonging to this company.

North Butte continued firm at around the $25 mark. The Anaconda Standard said of the Speculator mine, now the North Butte, a few days ago:

"The Speculator Mining company yesterday made its annual report to the county assessor for the purpose of taxation on net earnings. It shows a total net profit for the year ending June 1, of $291,285, an increase over the year ending June 1, 1904, of about $52,000. It also shows that the cost per ton of extractig ore averaged $5.85, the high average being due to the heavy expenditure in driving the 800-foot crosscut from the 1,600-foot level of the Speculator through the Edith May and Miners' Union to the Jessie claim. The law permits the cost of such development work to be deducted from the net earnings. That cost is also added to the cost of mining and makes the expense per ton unusually high. It is stated on good authority that the Speculator company is at present earning at the rate of $2,000,000 per year, and if the rate of earnings is continued that figure will very nearly be reached by June 1, 1906."

Race For Supremacy.

It is interesting to watch the race for supremacy among Minneapolis-St. Paul-Chicago trains. First place is securely held by the Pioneer Limited and the second place by the Fast Mail. Both trains are entirely owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway.

There are three other fast trains via this line from the Twin Cities to Chicago every day, and there is no extra fare to ride on them. Address W. B. Dixon, northwestern passenger agent, St. Paul, for further particulars, lowest rates, etc.

Buffalo, N. Y., and Return, $25.50.

On sale, July 7, 8 and 9, via "The North - Western Line," excursion tickets to Buffalo and return, at $25.50. Final limit for return, Aug. 4th, 1905. City Ticket office, 302 West Superior street, and Depot, foot Fifth avenue west.

CHRISTEN SHIP

Miss Jennie Jewell Powell Will Name George W. Perkins.

Second of Big Twins of Fresh Water Goes In Monday.

Miss Jennie Jewell Powell, daughter of L. W. Powell of the Oliver Iron company of Duluth, will christen the giant steamship which will slip down the ways into Howard's Pocket at Superior Monday. The new boat will be called the George W. Perkins, in honor of J. Pierpont Morgan's right-hand man, and she will be launched at the Superior shipyard at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Miss Powell will have the honor of breaking the bottle of champagne on one of the largest boats that have ever floated on fresh water. The Perkins is a sister ship to the E. H. Gary, which is at present the largest boat on the lakes. The Perkins and the Gary are of exactly the same measurements, each being 569 feet in length, 56 feet beam and 31 feet deep. The Gary's ore record is the largest yet made by any steamship.

Some years ago launchings at the shipyard proved very popular events, but of late the attendance has not been so large. It is believed, however, that the launching Monday will bring out the old-time thousands because of the fact that the vessel to be dropped is one of the big twins.

THE COREY LAUNCHED.

Biggest Boat on Lakes Takes to the Water.

Chicago, June 24.—The steamer William E. Corey, a duplicate of the Elbert H. Gary, the largest boat plying the great lakes, was launched today at the yards of the Chicago Shipbuilding company. The new steamer was built for the United States Steel corporation, and is named after the president of the corporation. The boat was christened by Miss Powell of Duluth, Minn.

The Corey is one of the largest freighters in the world, being 569 feet long, 58 feet beam, 32 feet depth and 16 feet deep and a carrying capacity of 12,000 to 14,000 gross tons. Passengers are to be carried by the Corey, five cabins having been provided for their use. The launching was notable in the fact that it brought together probably the largest representation of steel interests ever gathered at a similar event.

Another feature was the participation of the members of the Chicago Press club, who were the guests of the ship building company. Special trains carried more than 300 to the launching.

A banquet will be given at the Auditorium tonight, at which will be gathered the interests represented.

A FEW CHARTERS FOR CORN.

Chicago, June 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two or three charters were made today on the basis of 1⅜c on corn, but the demand was limited. It was believed that the coming week would see most of the improvement gained in the spurt in the grain trade lost, and trade would be down to the old basis.

HAD NO INSURANCE.

Cleveland, June 24.—The Gilchrist Transportation company did not have any insurance on the City of Rome, sunk in the St. Clair river today by the Linden.

THE PARNELL RELEASED.

Port Huron, June 24.—The steamer Parnell, which was aground abreast of Port Huron, was released by the tug Brockway.

WEATHER HINDERS DEALING IN REALTY

Cold and Wet Do Much Toward Dampening Active Interest In Closing Negotiations—Lake Superior & Southeastern Railway Continues Acquisition of Property In Duluth.

Continued cold and wet weather contributed its share this week toward very quiet conditions of the local real estate market. Practically no sales of any consequence were made this week, although some that have been negotiating for some days were closed up. The transfer record shows a steady movement of cheap property, a great deal of which is for improvement. Agencies report a very good demand for small building loans at the present time. Complaints are quite common among the real estate men that copper stocks speculation is the main thing responsible for the sudden falling off in the real estate movement which started out with such a rush during the latter part of the winter and the early spring months.

W. C. Sargent, of W. C. Sargent & Company reports the following sales closed this week: A two-flat building and a small house, known as 615 and 613 East Fifth street to J. W. Collins, of Powers, Minn., for $6,200. Mr. Powers bought with the idea of investment. The property is described as lot 105 East Fifth street, First division. Two lots in Oneota, at Halifax street and Forty-sixth avenue west to M. O. Hanson, for $800. A lot in block 72, Oneota to Charles L. Hyde for an investment. Mr. Hyde is already quite a heavy property owner in Duluth, although a nonresident and his belief is still so strong in the city's future that he contributes to add to his holdings from time to time. A lot at the corner of First avenue east and Missabe avenue, to John Gajewski, for $500, for improvement. Lot 195, Minnesota avenue, Lower Duluth to M. L. Parker, for $540. Lot 194, Minnesota avenue, Lower Duluth to Luther Mendenhall for $450.

Mr. Sargent has made several other sales subject to the approval of the owners, the property being located at Lakeside, Park Point, London addition and on West Third street.

• • •

Deeds covering the transfer of right of way property to the Lake Superior & Southeastern Railway company to the amount of between $18,000 and $19,000 were filed with the register of deeds this week. The railway company is continuing its policy of purchasing as far as possible without resort to condemnation proceedings and it has already secured a larger part of the property necessary for its tracks and yards in Duluth.

No work on the railroad at this end has yet been started nor is likely to be for some time. It is understood that the engineers are looking over the situation carefully with a view of determining the best grades obtainable for its roadbed in Duluth. The road is building north from Ladysmith, Wis., but nothing has been done outside of surveys between here and Gordon, Wis. Some of the property owners in the vicinity of Eleventh avenue west are feeling quite encouraged over the prospect of a slightly enhanced value to their holdings in that locality if the new railway company establishes its depot and freight shed at that point, which it seems quite likely to do. The map of the proposed route into Duluth, filed with the register of deeds shows tracks to terminate at Eleventh avenue west. While there is the possibility that some agreement might be reached whereby the Lake Superior & Southeastern company would use the union depot it is the belief among railroad men that the new depot will be erected at Eleventh avenue. It is claimed that, after all, Eleventh avenue is nearer the center of the city and that with the continued building development of the West end the advantage of the location for a new depot will become more and more apparent, besides it will be located on the street car line.

W. B. Mallough has sold the United States Installment Realty company lots 3 and 4, block 105, West Duluth, Sixth division, for $1,500.

The building movement still continues lively in the West end. Frank Johnson has just moved into his new home at Twenty-eight avenue west and Fourth street and David Adams is about to build near the same location. John Smedberg is starting a store and flat building on West Third street, near Twenty-eighth avenue.

TIME TRIALS OF THE CREWS

Oarsmen Take Advantage of Weather Conditions at Poughkeepsie.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 24.—Favorable water conditions today afforded a great chance for time trials on the Poughkeepsie course and the crews of Cornell, Columbia and Pennsylvania were sent over it at their highest speed. The coaches would not make known the time of their respective crews.

The Pennsylvanian's were the first on the water. The 'varsity and freshmen eights and the 'varsity four started on even terms. The four dropped behind on the second mile but the eights fought it out all the way to the boat house, two and a half miles, the 'varsity being about half a length ahead when the junior crew stopped rowing.

The 'varsity continued on to the end of the course finishing the trial in very good condition. The Cornell crews followed Pennsylvania down the course, the eights racing to the two-mile post and the 'varsity close behind. The crew finished well physically, but there was more splashing in the final spurts than was pleasing to the coach.

Wisconsin and Georgetown also came out, the latter going over the course at an easy stroke because of the lame leg of Stuart, No. 4, who was in the boat for the first time.

Wisconsin rowed four hard miles from the bridge south. No time being taken. Columbia's trial followed soon after Cornell's. There was favorable comment on the form of their crews at both Pennsylvania and Cornell headquarters.

STINE ESCAPES PUNISHMENT

Case Against Scott's Former Secretary Dropped By Court.

St. Paul, June 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The case of the state of Minnesota against William I. Stine, charged with the embezzlement of about $8,000 worth of Southern Pacific railroad bonds from the estate of the late Superintendent Walter L. Scott of the Omaha railroad has been dismissed by County Prosecuting Attorney Kane for lack of evidence to convict. Mr. Kane told the court that witnesses whom he relied on to testify lived in Pennsylvania and refused to come here. Stine was Mr. Scott's secretary.

IN A GREAT HURRY

Twin Cities Want Minnesota & International Completed at Once.

Afraid Delay In Construction Will Give Duluth Business.

Twin City business men are awaking to the fact that International Falls and the tributary country, tapped by the Minnesota & International and the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake railroads, is soon to offer a rich field for the jobbing interests to work in. They are afraid that Duluth, as being the natural source of supply for this northern region, will gain an advantage there, unless the first named railroad is built through before the latter, and it is said that so important is the completion of the Minnesota & International in the eyes of the many prominent men in St. Paul and Minneapolis who have taken up the subject, that before long the matter is to be brought formally to the attention of the jobbers' associations and commercial clubs of both cities, with a view to getting these organizations to lend every effort to persuade the Northern Pacific, which owns the Minnesota & International, to extend the line clear through to the falls at the earliest possible date.

Every effort will be expended by the Twin City interests to get this road built as soon, if not sooner, than the extension of the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road to the falls of the Rainy. Even by the Northern Pacific lines Duluth is just as near International Falls as Minneapolis or St. Paul, but the larger cities figure that, on this equal basis, they would be able to get the lion's share of the business. The other line, however, presents a very serious obstacle to their plans, for when it is completed it will offer direct rail communication with the border town, and the distance from the Head of the Lakes to the falls over this line will be about half that between St. Paul and the falls over the Minnesota & International. This being the case, it behooves the Twins to get busy and use their best influences toward pushing the Northern Pacific through ahead of the rival road.

The power company controlling the great water power at International Falls is owned by a company of which E. W. Backus of Minneapolis is president, and with him are associated the Backus-Brooks company and other influential capitalists of the East. Just as soon as the power of the Rainy can be harnessed they will, it is said, invest $2,000,000 in a great paper and pulp plant, another $1,000,000 in sawmills and other factories. There will be flour mills, elevators and wood working mills of various sorts, giving employment to a vast number of men.

Believers in the town are confident that these things mean a hustling city within a few years, and Twin City men say they will supply the city with all its needs, if only they can persuade the Northern Pacific to build the final connecting link It is claimed that sentiment on the point is becoming so strong in St. Paul and Minneapolis among the great commercial interests that it will bring about the construction of the essential thirty miles of steel.

The Northern Pacific is under contract this year to complete a thirty-three mile extension from its present terminus to the north bank of the Big Fork river. But the completion of this contract still leaves a gap of thirty miles between the new terminus and the falls. This gap has been surveyed but it has not yet been announced when the final stretch of track will be laid. The Virginia & Rainy Lake road, meantime, has surveyed a line from its present terminus to International Falls, although the time of the construction of the final piece of track seems as much in doubt as with the other line.

S. Moody Here.

Samuel Moody, general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania lines, west of Pittsburg, arrived in the city yesterday, in company with Mrs. Moody and their daughter, on the steamship Juniata. The trip is for pleasure alone, and the party returned today on the same steamer. In speaking of the wreck of the Twentieth Century Limited, he said that it would probably have no lasting effect on the time of the fast trains running between Chicago and New York.

Fast Time on Union Pacific.

Topeka, Kas., June 23.—The Union Pacific railway announced today that with the completion of their double track between Topeka and Kansas City, a schedule of a mile a minute on fast trains will be maintained between the two cities.

CONSIDER KICKS

Board of Review Will Hold Session Next Week.

Protests Against Personal Property Assessments Will Be Heard.

Kicks against excessive assessments for personal property, or for what are claimed to be such, may be delivered by indignant citizens all next week, and the proper authorities will be prepared to receive them, in the city council chamber.

The work of the twelve deputy assessors appointed to estimate the value of the personal property in this city, has been completed, and the different property owners have been notified by postal card of the amount of their assessment.

The books have been closed, and turned over to the city assessor, who will take them before the board of review which will meet in the council chamber.

The board is composed of the mayor, the city assessor and the city comptroller, and it is the duty of the board to consider all protests against the assessor's figures.

The board will remain in session all next week or until all the protests have been disposed of.

There are always a large number of kicks received. Some of them are based on just grounds, but many are made solely from a desire to escape a fair share of the taxation. Last year, in many instances, those who protested against what they claimed was an exorbitant assessment, had it raised instead of lowered, as the investigation of the board brought out some matters that the assessor had overlooked.

The total amount of the personal property in the city this year, is not yet known, but the assessor's figures are likely to show a substantial increase over last year. In a great many cases the assessor's figures have been raised to bring the total nearer to the actual value of the property than it was a year ago. This is true especially in the East end of the city, where in most instances the old figure of the assessor placed a ridiculously low estimate on the value of the personal property.

No assessment of real estate is made this year, but the tax rate is based upon the assessment made a year ago. The real estate assessment is made every two years, while the personal property is assessed every year.

Should there be a substantial raise in the personal property assessment, it will mean a considerable increase in the taxes collected without any change in the rate.

WISCONSIN CONFERENCE.

Swedish Baptists In Session at Superior.

The Swedish Baptist churches of the state of Wisconsin are having their annual conference this year in Superior, the sessions being held in the Swedish Baptist church at Sixth street and Weeks avenue. It commenced Thursday and will close Sunday afternoon with a union service of all the Baptist congregations at the Head of the Lakes. Many prominent clergymen of the Baptist denomination will take part, including Rev. Dr. Arvid Gardh of Minneapolis. Mrs. C. A. Solquist from China gave an interesting address yesterday before the conference on mission work in that land. The pastors of the Baptist churches of Duluth with their congregations have been invited to attend the sessions.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Burglars at Escanaba Rob Boat Captain of $240.

Escanaba—Burglars entered the quarters of Capt. E. W. Foster aboard the steamer James Mowatt, while loading ore at the Northwestern docks and took $240 from his desk. The robbery was not discovered until morning. No clue was left by the robbers. The burglars took the key from the captain's pocket as he slept and ransacked the desk without arousing him.

Sault Ste. Marie—While it is estimated that there are 2,000 dogs in the the Soo at the present time, only forty-six tags has so far been issued. Last year the total number was less than 100.

Chicken raisers at the Soo have discovered that crows have been responsible for the mysterious loss of little chicks which have disappeared of late. Crows have swooped down in the morning before people were stirring and have carried off the infant poultry. Precautions have been taken that are expected to put an end to the raids.

Gladstone—A Swedish-Finnish Baptist church is being constructed at Gladstone by the members of that denomination. The building is being erected on the southwest corner of Sixth and Michigan streets, under the supervision of the Rev. Edward Fleming, missionary of Chicago, assisted by Rev. M. Mattson of Negaunee, and J. A. Wicklund of Rhinelander. The edifice will be 26 by 48 feet in size, with an addition 14 by 24.

Manistique—Preparations for harbor work by the government have been started at Manistique under the supervision of Civil Engineer W. K. Means of Milwaukee. It will first be necessary to take soundings in the river, and government machinery used expressly for this work has arrived. Deposits of sawdust and other material cover the river bottom at all points and it is necessary to blow this out by steam apparatus, thereby laying bare the flat river bottom of solid limestone. By this method it will be possible to take accurate soundings.

Iron River—Hay Davidson of Iron River caught a rainbow trout while fishing in Iron river the other day. As far as known, it was only the second ever caught in that vicinity. The first fish of the kind was caught by Mr. Davidson nine years ago.

CONVENTION ADJOURNS

Modern Woodmen Conclude Labors After Transacting Business.

Milwaukee, June 24.—The convention of Modern Woodmen of America came to a close today with the installation of officers and the adoption of the usual resolutions. Among the important matters of legislation decided upon by the convention during the week were the following:

The admission of metal miners and railroaders to membership, the adoption of a table of rates for extra hazardous risks, the admission of employes of brewers and distillers, not directly engaged in the handling of liquors, the adoption of a system of inspection of risks under the direction of the medical department, the adoption of a bylaw providing for triennial instead of biennial conventions of the head camp, the selection of Peoria, Ill., as meeting place for 1908, the unanimous adoption of a committee report recommending that the question of revising the rates of assessment be brought to the attention of the 1908 meeting in form for definite action, the admission of portions of Texas and Tennessee to the society's working territory, directing that no private bank shall be named depository for society funds, increasing the bond of the head banker from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

The colors at Camp Hawes were lowered today and the camp is being dismantled.

MANY NEW LAWS

At Least Three Ordinances Will Come Before Council.

The Free Lunch Measure Source of Much Merriment.

At least three ordinances are due to come up at the meeting of the council Monday evening.

Alderman McEwen's famous free lunch bill, which aims to abolish the free lunch in the saloons, will come up for its second reading.

The ordinance has probably caused more discussion, and been the source of more merriment than any measure which has been before the city council in years. Jokes concerning it are heard on all sides and it is difficult to get any person to discuss the matter seriously. Nevertheless, there is not a little real opposition to the ordinance, and it is doubtful if it will be carried.

One of the chief arguments advanced in favor of the measure is the unsanitary condition in which it is claimed some of the free lunch counters are kept. It is also asserted that the free lunch counter increases the consumption of beer.

The general opinion, however, seems to be that the free lunch does very little if any harm, and that the council is being used as a catspaw to pull chestnuts out of the fire for some of the saloonkeepers who are opposed to the giving of free lunches.

* * *

The other ordinance introduced by Alderman McEwen last Monday night will also come up for discuession. It provides for granting a permit to place receptacles on the street corners for the depositing of papers and rubbish, in return for the privilege of placing advertising signs on the receptacles in question.

* * *

Alderman Waugh's smoke ordinance, altered in several particulars, is also due to come up under a report from the committee to which is was referred.

* * *

Another matter of no little interest will be the application of Joseph Sheehy for an employment license.

Sheehy's latest outbreak in the shape of a diatribe against the assistant city attorney and the clerk of the court, which has been filed with the city clerk, has thoroughly disgusted the members of the council with the former pugilist, and one of them, who has hitherto always voted for him, stated today that he would never again cast a vote in the council in favor of granting Sheehy a license.

WOULD PURCHASE THE HOME OF PAUL REVERE.

Boston, June 24.—Prominent citizens of Boston have undertaken a movement looking to the purchase and the preservation of the home of Paul Revere, which is situated in North Square, this city. It is intended that the building, which is now used as a tenement house, will be restored to its original condition as nearly as possible.

OVERCOME BY GAS.

Two Out of Six Victims Will Probably Die.

Chicago, June 24.—Six persons were overcome by gas, today, in a boarding house kept by Mrs. Katherine Maria at South Chicago. All were unconscious and it was at first feared none would survive. Physicians, however, succeeded in resuscitating all of the six and said all would probably recover except George Maria and Mark Markazich. The gas which nearly caused the death of the six people came from open jets in the kitchen stove.

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE NORTHWEST PHOTOGRAPHERS

Will Be Held In Duluth On July 5, 6 and 7.

Old Masonic Temple To Be Used For the Meetings.

On July 5, 6 and 7, the Northwestern Photographers' association will meet in Duluth in annual convention and it is expected that this will be the most important as well as the most largely attended convention which the association has ever had. The old Masonic Temple will be used for the meetings and exhibits.

The association, taking in as it does, the larger cities of the Northwest, has in its membership some of the acknowledged masters of the art of photography of the territory it embraces and these members are on a par with the best in the country. It is therefore safe to say that some of the exhibits will present the best these experts have yet turned out. There will be some good prizes offered in the various contests which will take place and the Schafer trophy cup will again be offered for competition. Last year J. R. Zweifel of Duluth won the cup. Besides this the executive committee of the association has decided to offer the following prizes:

Class A—Portraits 8 by 10 and larger, will have three medals awarded; first prize, a gold medal; second prize, a silver medal and third prize, a bronze medal.

Class B—Cabinet photographs only. First prize will be a silver medal and the second prize will be a bronze medal.

Class C—Miniatures. One silver medal will be awarded as a prize.

Class D—Landscape only. One silver medal will be awarded as a prize.

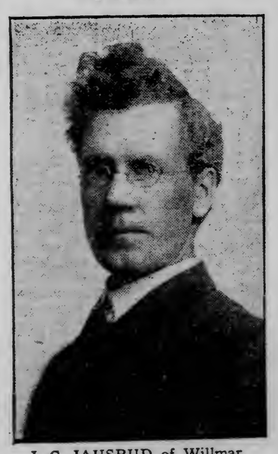
It is believed that there will be a large number of competitions in each class. Local photographers are getting ready for the convention and are making pictures for the competitions. The Duluth members of the association are turning out some handsome things and will enter the competition with outsiders keen to win and with the goods to do it with.

No fixed program has been prepared as yet for the affair, but it is understood that there will be a great many practical demonstrations with flashlights on various subjects, and experiments will be made in the new method of taking pictures by electric light. A good deal of entertainment will be furnished the visitors, but the local photographers have not fully decided upon what that part of the program will be. The convention is really more for work than play, but to prevent Jack becoming a dull boy the locals will see that some foolishness is started occasionally.

OFFICERS OF NORTHWESTERN PHOTOGRAPHERS' ASSOCIATION.

J. R. ZWEIFEL of Duluth, President.

S. P. EGGAN of Minneapolis, Vice President.



J. C. JAUSRUD of Willmar, Secretary.

PROGRESS OF THE WORK ON THE ST. LOUIS RIVER DAMS

VIEW OF ST. LOUIS RIVER WATER POWER DEVELOPMENT SHOWING WORK ON THE CANAL.

ONE OF RETAINING DAMS FORMING PART OF RESERVOIR SYSTEM OF ST. LOUIS RIVER WATER POWER DEVELOPMENT.

Some idea of the progress of the work on the Great Northern Power company's development on the St. Louis river may be had from the accompanying cuts. The picture showing the dam is not that of the main structure across the river, but one of several smaller dams required in connecting up the rock ridge which forms a natural embankment for the reservoir. The particular structure shown in the cut is, however, one of considerable size, being over fifty feet in height and is built of solid concrete. This dam is now complete. Work on the main dam on the St. Louis, as shown in a former issue, is about half finished.

The other two cuts represent the steam shovel work on the main canal, which is being done under contract by Porter Bros. of this city. The work of excavation for the power house foundations upon the bank of the river is now well under way, and the railway spur from Fond du Lac to connect directly with the power house site, a distance of some three miles up the river, will be finished in about ten days.

GET WELL—KEEP WELL

About That "Tired Feeling"—Few People Understand How To Rest—Sitting Or Lying Down Not Necessarily Resting—Rest Before You Are Tired—Don't Let Your Head Get To Business Before Your Body—A Rest Cure That Will Cure—How To Avoid the Encroachments of Old Age—"My Three Pet Exercises"—"Liver Squeezer" For Torpid Liver."

BY EDWARD B. WARMAN.
(Author of Scientific Physical Training.)
(Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Is it possible that there is anyone that does not know how to rest? Yes, strange as it may seem there are very few persons, comparatively speaking, that understand how to economize their forces, how to conservate the vital and nervous energy.

Sitting, when one is tired, is not necessarily resting. Lying down is not necessarily resting. Both are good as far as they go, but they do not go far enough. If you want to rest thoroughly you must let go; let go mentally and physically. Relaxing, however, does not mean collapsing. In my previous article I spoke of the correct position when sitting, but that had reference to brain and bodily activity. If you rest easier and more satisfactorily by leaning back in the chair, then lean back, but do not slide down and try to sit on the end of your spine. When your chest muscles become strong and accustomed to holding the chest in its proper position without any further thought on your part, you will find that it will assert itself even when you relax the body throughout. And it is well that it is so as, in this case, the breathing is not interfered with, the lungs are not crowded, and even the involuntary muscles are not restricted.

If you are tired walking rapidly rest yourself by walking slowly, if you have the time; if not, then run a short distance and you will be rested by bringing into play another set of muscles. Every mountain climber will tell you that "resting on a long climb only fatigues you;" that is, resting longer than a minute or two will stiffen one up and do more harm than good; even if nearly worn out, a minute or two now and then will do more good than an hour at a time.

This reminds me of the man who desired to hire out to a farmer, holding out the inducement that he "never got hungry and never got tired." He was instantly engaged and speedily set to work plowing a field. Long before the noon hour the farmer found his man sitting on the plow in the shade of a clump of trees and eating a large slice of bread and butter. When reminded of what he had said, he promptly replied: "That's true; I never get hungry and never get tired. I always eat before I get hungry and always rest before I get tired."

Believing, as I do, that no one should eat unless he is hungry, I cannot accept his first statement, but I am in full accord with the second—"rest before getting tired. I was fortunate enough to discover this principle years ago, and have applied it ever since with the result that I can average seventeen hours of every twenty-four without knowing or realizing the meaning—mentally or physically—of the little word—t-i-r-e-d.

It is for this reason that I have cited the foregoing incident that I may the more fully impress the force of the underlying principle—rest before becoming tired.

There are moments wasted that might be utilized; just a minute here and there when you can let go that physical and nervous tension. Let go when you ride back and forth to your work. Let go when the car stops, no matter how often; if not, you will find you are expending more force than is required to run the car. Let go as you walk to and from business. See to it that your head does not get there long before the body.

* * * * * * * * *

Good housewife, tired wife and mother, let go. Let go many times a day, if only for a moment. Let go when at work also. Do not work with every nerve tense. No wonder they cry out to you for rest. And when you do sit a few moments, do not delude yourself with the idea that your are resting because you are sitting. You are not resting if you are nervously patting the floor with your foot; you are not resting if you are drumming a tattoo with oyur fingers; you are not resting if you are thinking and planning for the morrow or fretting over the mishaps of the day. Close your eyes, breathe deeply and slowly, relax sufficiently to allow the stored-up energy to find its way to tired muscle, tired brain, tired nerve. Let go. Let go.

I give you herewith my rest cure. Commit it to memory, apply it daily as often as practicable, make it a part of your regular duties and, my word for it, that tired feeling will vanish and you will know it no more forever. Your heart, your home, your life will be full of sunshine.

Relax mind and body.
Ease up on every nerve and muscle.
Shut out all unpleasantness.
Throw care to the winds.

If you become tired when reading, writing or in the pursuance of any mental application; if the mind seems to lose its activity, its quickness of perception, its power of comprehension, it, too, needs a rest or change of activity. This is usually best secured by some form of physical exercise. By so doing the old blood and worn-out tissue may be replaced with fresh, new and nourishing material. Do not resort to drugs, as they neither restore nor furnish natural nutrition, and, not being life-giving, they are an incubus to the system.

To rest the brain, rise slowly on the toes (lifting the heels from the floor) from forty to fifty times, or until the calf muscles ache, then kick vigorously a few times, and repeat the exercise until the muscles ache again, but do not stop at this juncture, but rise three more times. This is a simple exercise, but very efficacious.

It is not my purpose to give exercises in this series of articles (save the three given herewith), but to confine myself to the essentials of health along the lines of right living. However, as a physical training specialist, I heartily endorse the words of that "grand old man" of England, who lived as he talked—"All the time and money spent in training the body pays a larger interest than any other investment."

MY THREE PET EXERCISES.

Why pet exercises? Because of their all-round value and far-reaching results. They are not original, nor are they new, having been practiced from time immemorial, but, like many other exercises, they have been usually prescribed merely as exercises (a tiresome thing and uninviting without a strong incentive). There should be a specific purpose in every movement taken.

Before giving these favorite exercises let us consider the purpose and some of the results to be obtained.

First—By daily practice you will avoid the encroachments of old age. The first muscles to give way are those of the waist, back and abdomen. Therefore, prevent the bent and rigid form.

Second — Preventing and curing obesity by burning out the adipose tissue.

Third—Retaining the suppleness of the waist muscles and the light and elastic step of youth.

Fourth—Keeping the bowels normally active and the liver in a healthful condition.

BOWING.

No, not the dignified bow of the head, nor the society bow, but bowing. Stand erectly and correctly, chest active, knees, hips and abdomen drawn back. Raise the hands high over the head, bend the knees, then sway forward, raising the hands high as if trying to touch the ceiling. Continue the forward movement, arms extended, touch the fingers to the floor without bending the knees. Keep the head up. Inhale on the upward movement, exhale when descending. Begin with five times (forward and backward, counting one) and continue gradually until you repeat fifty times daily.

SIDE MOVEMENTS.

Stand erectly and firmly with weight on both feet. Tense the arms as if holding a heavy dumbbell in each hand. Raise the right arm (fully extended) high over the head, bend to the left as far as possible (without lift-

VALUE OF STATE DRAINAGE TO NORTHERN MINNESOTA

Discussed by State Ditch Engineer George A. Ralph of Crookston.

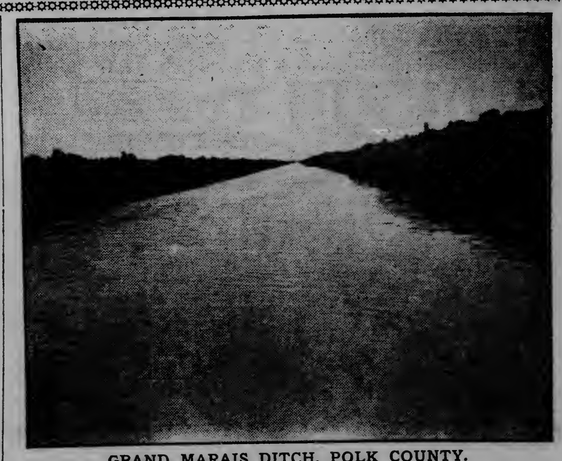
Large Attendance Expected at the Convention to Be Held In August.

Crookston, Minn., June 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Crookston in August of this year will entertain one of the largest and most important gatherings of Minnesota people ever assembled in Northern Minnesota, and the purposes and aims of the convention will have more to do with the future prosperity and advancement of this section of the state, perhaps, than those of any other convention of similar character ever held.

The state drainage convention, at which delegates from every county in the state will be present, will be one of the largest affairs from present indications of any ever held in the northern section of the state. One purpose of the convention will be "the advancement of drainage ideas" in this section.

Legislators and others from the southern portion of the state, who are not at present in favor of an extensive system of state drainage for the reclamation of marsh lands will be shown the error of their way and, if possible, be convinced that the state ditch plan is the best thing possible for the state at large as well as for the homesteaders and tillers of the soil of this rich, fertile North country.

BADGER AND SKUNK CREEK DITCH, ROSEAU COUNTY.



GRAND MARAIS DITCH, POLK COUNTY.

State Ditch Engineer George Ralph last week gave ou the following facts and figures on the importance and value of state drainage throughout the state:

The question of the reclamation of the waste lands of the state, I believe, ranks higher in importance to the people of this state than any other question which confronts them at this time. The state of Minnesota has within her borders large areas of land, which in their natural condition are too wet for agricultural purposes, and which can be reclaimed and rendered highly productive at the minimum cost for such work. Compared with other states, Minnesota would be classed as a level state. Its altitude ranges from 2,400 feet above the sea in the northern part of Cook county to 602 feet above the sea at the surface of Lake Superior. The state is naturally divided into three great water-sheds, namely: The Mississippi, the Red River of the North and the St. Louis river and lake Superior.

The surface slopes on the more level areas are generally sufficient to admit of cheap and effective drainage. The Red River valley, which is the largest area of nearly level land in the state, has an average surface slope of nearly three feet to the mile. The surface slopes of the large swamps and marshes in the northern and northeastern parts of the state, judging from the data obtained from railroad, geological a nd other surveys, will range from 3 to 10 feet to the mile. The surface slopes of some of the swamp areas in the southeastern part of the state are not quite so favorable for good drainage. Sufficient fall, however, is obtainable to insure their reclamation.

Compared with the level areas found in other localities, the swamp and level lands of Minnesota, considered from a drainage standpoint, have a decided advantage.

Many of the large swamps and marshes of Illinois and Indiana have an average surface slope of less than one foot per mile. The level areas of Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and Missouri, where extensive drainage work is now being carried on, have a very slight surface slope, in fact in many places the surface is level and the gradient for drainage channels is obtained by the gradual deepening of the same from source to outlet and in some instances this is impracticable as the outlets are insufficient. The drainage of such level sarfaces is necessarily expensive. The cost of draining

COLORED INK

SOCIETY

The following notice from the Manitoba Free Press of Winnipeg will be of interest to a large number of Duluth people as the groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Holston of this city and is well known here:

"A pretty home wedding was solemnized Monday afternoon when Miss Irene Hazel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Lobdell, was united in marriage to Eugene A. Holston. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Macmillan in the presence of relatives only. The bride looked charming in a gown of white point de sprit over white taffeta with bridal veil and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The bride was attended by Miss Mae Delamater, and G. G. Holston of Duluth, brother of the bridegroom was the best man.

"After the services a dainty wedding supper was served after which the happy couple left on an eastbound train. The bride wore a travelling gown of green taffeta with hat to match."

• • •

Mrs. A. M. Miller and Miss Berenice Crowley arrived home this morning from a several months' trip abroad.

• • •

Miss Gertrude Butchart was the guest of honor at a charming luncheon and bundle shower at which Mrs. J. T. Melvin of Park Point entertained yesterday. The rooms were prettily decorated in ferns, wild flowers and numerous red hearts. A guessing game of hearts was played and the prize was won by Miss Edna Cargill. The guests were:

Mesdames—
J. K. Butchart, Maurice Bywater,
Edward Ingalls, C. A. Wright,
T. E. Bradley, T. W. Wahl,
Morrison of Minneapolis, C. H. Hare.

Misses—

LISTENING STORY

H C Hubert

PROVING HER IDEAL

By Howard Devine.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

She was sure both men loved her honestly and she was sure she was decidedly right. She admitted to herself that Harry was a most warm-hearted and sympathetic and—yes, perhaps the most lovable. But Homer was clearly the better man, the safer man, the man of the higher ideals, decidedly the man of the two with whom she could expect her life to develop along the higher lines and flower into the most perfect fruition. And so, being a girl of common sense and decision she resolved to accept Homer.

To be sure she gave a little sigh as she thought of Harry's sparkling wit and genial countenance, of his flashing black eyes and ardent impetuosity. But, no she did not regret her decision. The good times she would enjoy with Harry would be of the ephemeral sort and would not build toward the better things. Homer, perhaps less brilliant, certainly was more sedate dignified and correct and surely more fitted to become the head of a family.

The thing that really decided her however, was not so much all this abstract reasoning as the concrete honesty of the men as evidenced by their stand in politics. Both were much interested in politics and both were men of influence. Homer Crofton was an avowed and radical reformer. He was prominently identified with all movements in the community whose object it was to elevate and purify politics and uplift the moral sense of the people. He was vice-president of the Anti-Machine federation, secretary of the Civil Service Reform club, a director of the Voters' Reform association, trustee of the Political Independence league and prominent in all the organizations working for the noble end of making politics cleaner and lifting the franchise to a high moral plane.

On the other hand, Harry Sommers was an avowed organization man—"yes, a machine man, by gum," as he put it, and his cardinal principle was to stick to his party willy-nilly. The real issue came during an election where the regular candidate of the party was opposed by all the reform organizations. Crofton was in the very foremost among the leaders who advocated the defeat of Luce and the "ring." And it seemed from the newspapers that it was a justifiable bolt. Luce was an uncompromising organization man. He had been a party leader for many years and was accused of profiting greatly from the passage of many measures by legislature or city council which inured to the benefit of certain quasi-public corporations. He made no specific defense nor did he reply to the charge that he was pledged, if elected, to further the interests of certain great interests asking for valuable franchises. It was a nasty fight, because the newspapers never had been able to influence Luce and his supporters, and they were attacked with spirit and effect. Right into this fight which was nasty with charges of graft and counter charges of mugwumpery and hypocricy Sommers flung himself by accepting the post as Luce's campaign manager. His appointment was everywhere recognized as a shrewd move by Luce, as Sommers' standing was very high in the business community.

Well, the machine won, and the reformers, who were supported by a considerable party of followers, were terribly scandalized. Sommers came in for his full share of criticism from the newspapers, but cared not, as he was in high feather of the result. It gave him high standing in the party councils—this victory over the common foe assisted by the bolters.

Crofton called on the girl in a terrible state. He was evidently deeply shocked and hurt.

"Why, Grace, it's the most awful setback the forces of right have encountered in a decade," he said, walking the floor, hands clasped behind his back. "A straight defeat like this wipes out all the victories and all the progress of a dozen years. It makes me tremble for the republic. Is civic virtue dead? Is political honesty an iridescent dream? And to think that Sommers could have lent himself to those scoundrels. I wonder what promises they——" He paused, glanced keenly at her and resumed his restless pacing up and down the room, hands clasped behind his back.

Grace looked at him long and earnestly. She noted the deep furrows of care on his face and observed his evident earnestness. Then it was that she made the decision referred to. She did not tell Crofton, but her parting with him was characterized with much greater tenderness than ever it had been before.

Next night came Sommers, radiant, triumphant, compelling. Her welcome chilled him. Nevertheless he persisted, and for the twentieth time pleaded his suit and offered his heart and hand.

"No, Harry," she replied in cold disapproval, "I cannot link myself with a man without ideals and without essential honesty—a man willing to be the tool and creature of unscrupulous politicians."

Sommers gasped in astonishment. Then he laughed. "Come, come, Grace, don't be foolish," he said. "I reckon I am as honest in my actions as any other fellow. What's up?"

Then came explanations—not tearful, but nearly so. Sommers sat a long time looking into the grate.

"And you are going to take Crofton because he is more honest than I?" he said finally.

"Exactly," replied Grace in a low voice.

"Will you wait three months to prove it?" asked Sommers. And then if Crofton should not prove so all-fired civicly honest let me come back and renew my suit."

Glad of the opportunity to cut short the interview, and also to give herself breathing time, she consented.

A few weeks later Grace was compelled to visit Mayor Luce's office in regard to some matter pertaining to a charitable institution in which she was interested in connection with her work in the Woman's club. The mayor was engaged, and as she sat in the outer office waiting she heard loud voices and was scurprised to recognize one as that of Crofton.

"What do you mean, sir," she heard the mayor shout, evidently in anger. "You who pose as a reformer and travel up and down town accusing me as a boodler and the head of a corrupt ring, come to my office and offer me a bribe to veto a public improvement because, forsooth, it will cost your firm some money to pay a special assessment."

"You are mistaken, sir," she heard Crofton's even voice say. "The offer to transfer to you these lots is made solely to obtain the use of your name as one interested in the new sub-division and to give you a natural interest in that part of the city. The improvement is wholly unnecessary at the present time and would be a burden upon the syndicate which holds all that vacant property. It would be ruinous, sir, ruinous."

"What about fire protection for those factory people who live just beyond your tract?" asked the mayor.

"Oh, all they've got is a lot of shanties," responded Crofton. "It wouldn't hurt much if they burned."

"It would hurt them a lot more than the giving up of a little tax money will hurt you," replied the mayor hotly. "I don't want your —— lots and won't touch 'em with a pair of tongs. And I won't veto the ordinance and —— you I don't want to see your canting face in my office again. Good morning; get out."

The door opened and Crofton emerged flushed and trembling. He did not see the girl and passed out.

At that moment Sommers came to whistling. He saw Grace and she beckoned him to come to her.

"I have reversed my decision," she said quietly. "Come and see me tonight."

NATIONAL GUARD

Wants Congress to Double Appropriation.

Washington, June 24.—The national guard of the country will ask congress at its next session to amend the Dick bill, re-organizing and making the guard a part of the national defense. The proposed legislation has been carefully prepared. It originated with the officers of the national guard and has had incorporated in it certain suggestions from the war department, thus giving it governmental approval. Its principal feature is the doubling of the annual federal appropriation of $1,000,000 for armament and encampment expenses, which is said to be imperatively necessary to properly equip and instruct the men.

Other features of the bill embrace a provision for paying the actual expenses of officers making inspection tours in connection with the promotion of rifle practice; regulations governing the auditing of accounts incident to encampments, and giving the secretary of war discretion as to what shall constitute proper "incidentals" for such encampments for which the government is to pay.

Stocking demonstration

Monday morning a corps of four experienced ladies will be at the Glass Block Store to show you

BURSON FASHIONED HOSE

Why stockings with seams are bad for the feet.

Stockings can cause foot troubles just as quickly as shoes. Seams on the toe of a stocking cause corns, by continued pressure under the seam, irritating and thickening the skin at one point. Friction thickens the skin, and there is intensified friction under the seam—more than under the rest of the stocking; this often accounts for the callous, often a corn, right in the center of the ball of the foot—the seam through the sole of the stocking foot does it. At the heel the seam often causes tenderness, especially if there is slipping of the shoe at the heel. The seam, being harder and thicker than the rest of the stocking, causes the callous at this point. Don't blame your shoes for these things—look to your Stockings.

BURSON FASHIONED STOCKINGS are knit to fit, without a seam. Here is a Stocking of quality, absolutely seamless, that fits at every point. There is no lump or fold or crease at heel or toe and no seam. These Stockings are not only more comfortable and more healthful, but they look better, wear better and cost less than other stockings of good quality, because the seamed process calls for more hand labor—the BURSON machine does the whole thing as neatly as most beautiful hand-knitting, smoother than most.

Stocking demonstration

Monday morning a corps of four experienced ladies will be at the Glass Block Store to show you

BURSON FASHIONED HOSE

Why stockings with seams are bad for the feet.

Stockings can cause foot troubles just as quickly as shoes. Seams on the toe of a stocking cause corns, by continued pressure under the seam, irritating and thickening the skin at one point. Friction thickens the skin, and there is intensified friction under the seam—more than under the rest of the stocking; this often accounts for the callous, often a corn, right in the center of the ball of the foot—the seam through the sole of the stocking foot does it. At the heel the seam often causes tenderness, especially if there is slipping of the shoe at the heel. The seam, being harder and thicker than the rest of the stocking, causes the callous at this point. Don't blame your shoes for these things—look to your Stockings.

BURSON FASHIONED STOCKINGS are knit to fit, without a seam. Here is a Stocking of quality, absolutely seamless, that fits at every point. There is no lump or fold or crease at heel or toe and no seam. These Stockings are not only more comfortable and more healthful, but they look better, wear better and cost less than other stockings of good quality, because the seamed process calls for more hand labor—the BURSON machine does the whole thing as neatly as most beautiful hand-knitting, smoother than most.

CLUBS AND MUSICAL

The pupils of Mrs. D. H. Day appeared in a delightful piano recital last evening at Steinway hall, assisted by John Milton, dramatic reader. A large audience of the friends of the pupils was present and the program was one of interest and in each number the dainty interpretation and delicacy of touch were commented upon. The pupils who took part were Misses Annie Oreckovsky, Virginia and Marjorie May Harrison, Lillian Westgaard, Esther Gomberg, May Jeffery, Margaret Panton, Maud Hepworth, Natalie Smith, Edith Fitzsimmons, Ruth Maginnis, Jeanette Gomberg, Marjorie Morrow, Bessie Heney, Julia Morrow, Marie d'Auremont, Alyda Flaaten, Bertha Pearce, Natalie Smith, Mae Teske, Sophie Kassmir, Marian Berry and Master Russell Duncan. Mr. Milton gave much pleasure in the reading of two selections.

The musicale given last evening by the pupils of Mrs. Mary Thorburn at the rooms of the Young Women's Christian association was a most interesting affair. The rooms were well filled with the friends of the pupils and the reception rooms of the association proved a most delightful place for an affair of this sort. Decorations of buttercups and snowballs were used and in the program presented by the little folks, work that was a credit to themselves and their teacher was evident. A violin solo was given by Miss Virginia Bean, and Miss Mabel Culkins gave a James Whitcomb Riley recitation. Those who took part are: Irene Keyes, Ella Clark, Dorothy Gibson, Marion Ingalls, Hope Washburn, Selma Moyer, Charlotte Brocklehurst, Susan Stryker, Harriet Stryker, Muriel Hobbs, Charlie Young, Violet Smith, Daisy Smart, Mildred Washburn and Luella Neff.

PROVING HER IDEAL

By Howard Devine.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

She was sure both men loved her honestly and she was sure she was decidedly right. She admitted to herself that Harry was a most warm-hearted and sympathetic and—yes, perhaps the most lovable. But Homer was clearly the better man, the safer man, the man of the higher ideals, decidedly the man of the two with whom she could expect her life to develop along the higher lines and flower into the most perfect truitition. And so, being a girl of common sense and decision she resolved to accept Homer.

To be sure she gave a little sigh as she thought of Harry's sparkling wit and genial countenance, of his flashing black eyes and ardent impetuosity. But, no she did not regret her decision. The good times she would enjoy with Harry would be of the ephemeral sort and would not build toward the better things. Homer, perhaps less brilliant, certainly was more sedate dignified and correct and surely more fitted to become the head of a family.

The thing that really decided her however, was not so much all this abstract reasoning as the concrete honesty of the men as evidenced by their stand in politics. Both were much interested in politics and both were men of influence. Homer Crofton was an avowed and radical reformer. He was prominently identified with all movements in the community whose object it was to elevate and purify politics and uplift the moral sense of the people. He was vice-president of the Anti-Machine federation, secretary of the Civil Service Reform club, a director of the Voters' Reform association, trustee of the Political Independence league and prominent in all the organizations working for the noble end of making politics cleaner and lifting the franchise to a high moral plane.

On the other hand, Harry Sommers was an avowed organization man—"yes, a machine man, by gum," as he put it, and his cardinal principle was to stick to his party willy-nilly. The real issue came during an election where the regular candidate of the party was opposed by all the reform organizations. Crofton was in the very foremost among the leaders who advocated the defeat of Luce and the "ring." And it seemed from the newspapers that it was a justifiable bolt. Luce was an uncompromising organization man. He had been a party leader for many years and was accused of profiting greatly from the passage of many measures by legislature or city council which inured to the benefit of certain quasi-public corporations. He made no specific defense nor did he reply to the charge that he was pledged, if elected, to further the interests of certain great interests asking for valuable franchises. It was a nasty fight, because the newspapers never had been able to influence Luce and his supporters, and they were attacked with spirit and effect. Right into this fight which was nasty with charges of graft and counter charges of mugwumpery and hypocricy Sommers flung himself by accepting the post as Luce's campaign manager. His appointment was everywhere recognized as a shrewd move by Luce, as Sommers' standing was very high in the business community.

Well, the machine won, and the reformers, who were supported by a considerable party of followers, were terribly scandalized. Sommers came in for his full share of criticism from the newspapers, but cared not, as he was in high feather of the result. It gave him high standing in the party councils—this victory over the common foe assisted by the bolters.

Crofton called on the girl in a terrible state. He was evidently deeply shocked and hurt.

"Why, Grace, it's the most awful setback the forces of right have encountered in a decade," he said, walking the floor, hands clasped behind his back. "A straight defeat like this wipes out all the victories and all the progress of a dozen years. It makes me tremble for the republic. Is civic virtue dead? Is political honesty an irridescent dream? And to think that Sommers could have lent himself to those scoundrels. I wonder what promises they——" He paused, glanced keenly at her and resumed his restless pacing up and down the room, hands clasped behind his back.

Grace looked at him long and earnestly. She noted the deep furrows of care on his face and observed his evident earnestness. Then it was that she made the decision referred to. She did not tell Crofton, but her parting with him was characterized with much greater tenderness than ever it had been before.

Next night came Sommers, radiant, triumphant, compelling. Her welcome chilled him. Nevertheless he persisted, and for the twentieth time pleaded his suit and offered his heart and hand.

"No, Harry," she replied in cold disapproval, "I cannot link myself with a man without ideals and without essential honesty—a man willing to be the tool and creature of unscrupulous politicians."

Sommers gasped in astonishment. Then he laughed. "Come, come, Grace, don't be foolish," he said. "I reckon I am as honest in my actions as any other fellow. What's up?"

Then came explanations—not tearful, but nearly so. Sommers sat a long time looking into the grate.

"And you are going to take Crofton because he is more honest than I?" he said finally.

"Exactly," replied Grace in a low voice.

"Will you wait three months to prove it?" asked Sommers. And then if Crofton should not prove an all-fired civicly honest let me come back and renew my suit."

Glad of the opportunity to cut short the interview, and also to give herself breathing time, she consented.

A few weeks later Grace was compelled to visit Mayor Luce's office in regard to some matter pertaining to a charitable institution in which she was interested in connection with her work in the Woman's club. The mayor was engaged, and as she sat in the outer office waiting she heard loud voices and was scurprised to recognize one as that of Crofton.

"What do you mean, sir," she heard the mayor shout, evidently in anger. "You who pose as a reformer and travel up and down town accusing me as a boodler and the head of a corrupt ring, come to my office and offer me a bribe to veto a public improvement because, forsooth, it will cost your firm some money to pay a special assessment."

"You are mistaken, sir," she heard Crofton's even voice say. "The offer to transfer to you these lots is made solely to obtain the use of your name as one interested in the new subdivision and to give you a natural interest in that part of the city. The improvement is wholly unnecessary at the present time and would be a burden upon the syndicate which holds all that vacant property. It would be ruinous, sir, ruinous."

"What about fire protection for those factory people who live just beyond your tract?" asked the mayor.

"Oh, all they've got is a lot of shanties," responded Crofton. "It wouldn't hurt much if they burned."

"It would hurt them a lot more than the giving up of a little tax money will hurt you," replied the mayor hotly. "I don't want your —— lots and won't touch 'em with a pair of tongs. And I won't veto the ordinance and —— you don't want to see your canting face in my office again. Good morning; get out."

The door opened and Crofton emerged flushed and trembling. He did not see the girl and passed out.

At that moment Sommers came in whistling. He saw Grace and she beckoned him to come to her.

"I have reversed my decision," she said quietly. "Come and see me tonight."

NATIONAL GUARD

Wants Congress to Double Appropriation.

Washington, June 24.—The national guard of the country will ask congress at its next session to amend the Dick bill, re-organizing and making the guard a part of the national defense. The proposed legislation has been carefully prepared. It originated with the officers of the national guard and has had incorporated in it certain suggestions from the war department, thus giving it governmental approval. Its principal feature is the doubling of the annual federal appropriation of $1,000,000 for armament and encampment expenses, which is said to be imperatively necessary to properly equip and instruct the men.

Other features of the bill embrace a provision for paying the actual expenses of officers making inspection tours in connection with the promotion of rifle practice; regulations governing the auditing of accounts incident to encampments, and giving the secretary of war discretion as to what shall constitute proper "incidentals" for such encampments for which the government is to pay.

POPPY FLOWERED KIMONO

FROM THE LAND of the CHRYSANTHEMUM

IN THE PLISSE SOLEIL MODE

A BOUDOIR GOWN IN LAVENDER AND LACE

Fascinating Fashions and Novelties in Tea-Gowns, Boudoir-Gowns, Kimonos and Negligees Generally.

The gowns that are euphoniously termed or labeled "For the resting hour" are really and truly taking to themselves the most restful of both outline and suggestion. It begins to look as though the artist designers not only of clothes but of fabrics as well had turned their attention to the boudoir, as well as to the ballroom; and the result is gratifying in the extreme.

Faddists may, and do, talk of the influence of clothes upon temperament and character, and in these latter days of hurry-scurry, when everybody seems to be trying to see just who can lead the most strenuous life, it is "as the shadow of a mighty rock in the desert" to encounter clothes that have been planned, deliberately planned, to promote the pursuit of rest and quietude. Clothes that in coloring and design are so fashioned as to rest the eyes and the senses, that will positively tempt one to "laze" (the latest form active of the passive condition of being lazy) and to lounge, that will invite the hospitable teacups and light chatter, or else the darkened room and the refreshing forty winks that freshen one up so wonderfully for dinner and the entire evening after; these be the gowns and garments that Dame Fashion decrees for her devotees during the restful interludes between social gayeties.

Somewhat misleadingly these are all grouped under the comprehensive and generic title of negligees. Now there is in the minds of some women—and they are not in the great minority either—a strong and a close connection between negligees and deshabille. One glance, however, at the latest productions in those boudoir gowns, as the initiated term them, will at once dispel any such association of ideas. Anything farther removed from the popular acceptance of deshabille than are those same boudoir fashions it were hard to imagine—unless the imagination run to ball and dinner frocks, and the toilette en grend tenue.

And in the general striving after artistic excellence the more practical side of their wearing qualities has not been lost sight of by any means. The gowns themselves are as loose as well may be, so loose, indeed, that the corset may be dispensed with when so desired without at all interfering with the set or the contour of the robe, or with its artistic lines and appearance.

The tea gown is, perhaps, the dressiest expression of this charming and fascinating style. The sheerest of gauzes and chiffons and mousselines—these latter both of silk and of wool—are used for its construction, and the most bewitching effects are fashioned in these transparent materials posed over delicately tinted silks. Laces of many kinds and characters are used for their adorning, and the low neck and fanciful short sleeve are the half marks of the most modish examples in these.

Next come the so-called boudoir gowns, and in these the one seam crepe de chine is often times used to fashion those robes en plisse soleil, to which the Parisienne is so devoted. Boleros of real lace are sold separately to be slipped on over those sunpleated gowns, this little transparent jacket serving to hold the flowing lines of the robe somewhat to the figure, and adding much to its dressiness as well.

The styles of the First Empire are the source of much inspiration to those clever makers of the modes in boudoir wear. In Paris there are several celebrated houses that turn out nothing but those confections and creations for informal wear, and down to the last detail there are authentic copies from the very best examples that picture galleries and historic portraits afford. The familiar short-waisted bodice part, the skirts, more or less scant, attached halfway under the arms to fall in long and straight folds almost to the feet, and the characteristic sash, with its smart, fluffy chou and long floating ends, that comes from the side seams and centers itself upon the bust. There is a hinting of lightness and airiness and youthfulness to this design that makes it favored of all ages and all classes alike.

The kimonos that adventurous travelers brought back from Japan are still in the front rank of what one might term the real negligees. In these fascinating garments two distinct and different styles have arisen. One follows the true Japanese tradition, and is most often an importation direct from the land of the chrysanthemum. The other is occidental rather than oriental in its cut, and is intended to fit the more generous proportions of the American woman better than the Japanese garment can do. One example of this latter seen recently was the most restful thing in suggestion that could be imagined; just a pattern of sleepy looking poppies on a dark green soft silk. It simply wooed one to slumber to look upon it.

Flowers and feathers are noted in conjunction on many of the most modish of the summer chapeaux, and ribbons are the usual concomitant trimming, this reviving a fashion that has been in the background for sometime.

Ribbons a Prominent Feature of the Modes Both Present and to Come.

Somewhat insidiously has the ribbon craze crept upon us, and almost before one was aware the ribbon counters were crowded with anxious purchasers, those "foolish virgins"—to quote the ancient parable—who did not grasp or assimilate those early hints and indications that protended the immense popularity of ribbons in the summer toilette.

Everything from the bedroom negligee to the ballroom toilette is beribboned, and all the frocks that are worn in between these two extremes of dressing are made fanciful and doubly attractive with deft touches of ribbons applied in the most unexpected ways.

Perhaps the most fascinating of all the ribbon effects are the dancing frocks that are merely a foundation of net for innumerable ribbon ruffles. The best of them do not display a single glimpse of the foundation; all one sees is row after row of shirred, quilled or plisse ribbons, with perhaps a plain band or two of velvet ribbon introduced here and there to vary the monotony—though it be a pleasing one—of the shimmering silken strands.

For those extremely modish frocks the bebe waist is the order of the day—or, rather, of the evening. The neck is cut square, heart-shaped or in a deep oval, and a velvet ribbon with a plenteous adornment of lace is the favored framing for the decolletage. The sleeve is merely an ombrelle foundation of net covered with ribbon ruffles, and there is usually a deep celature, likewise of the ribbons, with a splashing sash in the back. The skirt to this is simply a circular foundation covered from waist to hem with a succession of ruffles, and the mode is at its most charming best when a shaded or ombre scheme is carried out—the lighter ribbons at the shoulders and the tint deepening gradually as the gown descends to the feet. Anything more girlish and simple cannot be imagined, and the fact that some hundred to a hundred and fifty yards of ribbon are needed to carry out the design is not by any means a deterrent to its success.

And the present vogue of fancy jackets or coats for all occasions is another field of exploitation for this fascinating conceit. There are charming little breakfast and tea jackets that are fashioned from lengths of ribbon and lace, put together in the most original designs, and there are smart blouses constructed after this very same idea.

The tengowns and boudoir gowns are at their very best in the Empire modes, those with the characteristic short-waist body part, and tied with a broad and splashing sash under the arms, the long ends floating free in front. Some of the sheer woolen weaves, notably the henriettas, make a lavish use of lace and ribbon for banding, flouncing and other devices to secure fluffy trimming effects. One charming boudoir gown is in a pale shade of lilac, and this is plenteously adorned with a yellowish Maltese lace, and a circular volant is fashioned entirely of alternate bands of entre deux and ruffled moire ribbon, both lace and ribbon being about an inch and a half or two inches wide.

And even the kimonos that are supposed to be worn only in the seclusion of the bedroom exhibit their quota of this dainty application. The figured silks and challis are bordered and banded with ribbons in solid colorings that will harmonize with the leading tint of the gown. Sashes, too, are added to these, to tie at the front, the side or the back, just as caprice wills.

The deep tucks, the nun's folds and other trimming devices that appear on the frocks for both outdoor and dinner wear are shown with the quaintest of tight little ribbon quillings, upstanding at the top. A very fetching idea in these is the use of ribbons that have a contrasting border at one edge. For example, a narrow violet velvet ribbon has one border in white satin, just the merest line of white, and this is used most effectively upon a gown of a rosy mauve tint that is lavishly trimmed with a very fine Maltese lace—a web that has taken a sudden spurt into fashionable favor, and the demand for which threatens to completely swamp the rather limited source of supply.

Whole parasols are ruffled with ribbons, the use of graduated widths and shaded effects showing up here to the most delightful advantage. A captivating example showed itself at the races the other day. The parasol proper was in a soft shade of red, and it was entirely covered with ruffles in all of the rose tints, the top being quite a faint blush pink and the series deepening into a rich jacqueminot red, the final row at the edge being in a deep rich red velvet ribbon, applied plain to fit the frame. A bunch of ribbon roses, with buds and foliage, is tied to the long handle.

In spite of the prevailing influence of the short skirt, many of the French importations show skirts that drag along the ground for quite some few inches in the back, and are an inch or more on the ground in the front and sides. In the lightweight materials, of which the most charming of gowns are fashioned, this does not so much matter, for these skirts are then easy to lift and hold; but if this is to be pushed into the realm of tailor-made styles, with their preference for heavy cloths and cheviots and serges, then, indeed, it will become a tax upon the devotee of fashion to hold her dainty skirts from the soil of the floor. One cannot help but hope that by the time the autumn fashions are established this rumor will have faded, like the many hintings of crinoline that have been hovering on the fashionable horizon for several seasons now.

Charming Conceits in Negligee.

Fashions from Many Lands and Copied From Many Different Periods.

After the First Empire Style.

A soft and restful shade of green habutai silk is used to fashion this empire gown, to which a fancy guipure lace and a collar of Irish crochet lend an air of dressiness. There is a shallow yoke over the shoulders, this concealed by the collar of silk ruffling overlaid with the crochet collar. To this yoke the gown is applied with shirrings, these following loosely the line of the figure halfway to the waist and hanging in full and straight folds almost to the ankle, where a further shirred flounce adds to the swirling fulness around the feet. The sleeve shows a shallow puff at the shoulder, some bouillonne shirrings and then a very deep flounce effect that falls from above the elbow to the hand. The throat is cut out slightly, and a smart sash of broad satin and velvet ribbons combined is drawn from the side seams to the center front, tied there and fastened with a handsome cut steel and niello buckle.

In the Plisse Soleil Mode.

This extremely fetching little gown is pretty enough for informal home wear, for dinner as well as afternoon tea when the guests are all members of the family or close intimates. Following the best developments of the Empire mode, the body part is fashioned with a bolero of lace, a real Limerick lace being chosen in accord with the vogue that is given to all things Irish in the present fashions. The plisse soleil, or sun-pleating, extends from the shoulders to the ankle, the pleated crepe de chine showing through the meshes of the lace with a dainty effect. The one-seam, double-width crepe is used, this necessitated by the circular cut that the sun-pleating demands. A very full and circular flounce is applied as a finish, this both headed and hemmed with lace. The sleeve is the favored half length, just a series of billowy puffs with pleating and lace for a ruffle. At the open neck a big splashing bow of pink satin ribbon in sash width and with long sash ends carries out the characteristic Empire lines.

Poppy Flowered Kimonos.

There is rather more than a suggestion of restfulness in this poppy flowered kimono of dark green silk, the gaudy scarlet flowers being posed across a stripe of white, so as to throw their brilliant coloring into bolder relief against the dark background. It is the occidental, rather than the oriental, cut that is followed in this example, the gown being sharply gored in the side seams, the shoulder seams being made to follow the natural lines, and the center back displaying a bias seam that adjusts the fulness of the robe in the most becoming and graceful folds. The sleeves are of moderate size and show a modified pagoda cut, and the entire garment is edged all around with a banding of broad satin ribbon that exactly matches the tone of the poppies.

A Boudoir Gown in Lavender and Lace.

There is always a use for the gowns in some one or another of the sheer woolens, and this example in a henrietta shows one of those faint, pale shades of lavender that are a delight to the eye. This fabric has a silken sheen to the surface that enhances all the charm of its quaint coloring, and the lavish use of a yellowish lace but serves to increase its Old-World air. Its construction is of the simplest. To a round and shallow yoke the gown is applied in deep pleats, the side seams indicated by vertical lines of tucking and a suggestion of a watteau pleat in the back signified in the same way. The lines of lace are disposed horizontally, the monotony broken by the tuckings, and there is a flounce at the foot composed of alternate ruffled moire ribbons in the faint lavender shade and ruched lace, which affords the dressiest effect imaginable. The collar is similarly trimmed, as are the sleeves that hang loose and free from the lace-trimmed cape at the shoulder. Ribbons are used to tie the loose front together instead of the usual and conventional buttons or hooks and eyes.

From the Land of the Chrysanthemum.

A veritable Japanese kimono in pale pink silk is embroidered by hand with tiny sprays of woodbine in all of the natural colorings. The traditional cut is followed, the shoulders being without seam or joining, and the sleeves inserted some half way down the arm. The broad obi or sash is pinned to form a deep corselette effect in front, and brought to a narrower point in the back where it ties in a big splashing butterfly bow. The hem at the foot is padded according to the usual Japanese custom.

A Parisian Tea Gown.

The use of two materials for the construction of the modish tea gown is a fashion that is only just beginning to maintain. The outer material is preferably one of the transparent organdies, mousselines or gauzes, and the inner one is a silk of some delicate tint that will throw a pretty color through the transparency of the other goods. Such is the mode followed in this attractive Parisian tea gown. A sheer mousseline de soie has embroidered polka dots closely scattered over the surface, and large roses with a modicum of foliage are printed in dull and blurred tones over the transparent mousseline. Much black lace is lavished upon this; and the under robe in a rose-tinted silk follows the same cut as the outer. Lace forms an unlined yoke over the shoulders, and the mousseline is applied to this in long, loose lines to the knee. Here a shallow lace-trimmed flounce headed with an entre deux conceals the joining of a very full circular flounce, and a handsome black ribbon sash completes the negligee.

Ornamental muffs for summer use—surely one would not suspect them of utilitarian intent — are fashioned from flowers, ribbon and much chiffon. Usually they accompany a hat to match, and hidden away in the fluffy masses the initiated will know to look for at least two pockets. The one is a regulation purse pocket, with a double ball frame that snaps together, and the other is one of the very latest "vanity" pockets and accommodates a powder puff that slips into a little box, big enough to contain a generous supply; a mirror, of course, and a tiny smelling bottle is often an added accompaniment.

This smart confection is doubtless intended to take the place of the vanity bag, and is carried either slung around the neck with a ribbon string, or else is provided with a long and fancy chain that hangs around the neck. One Parisian elegante carried such a muff pendant from the high ribbon girdle that finishes her smart racing costume.

DRAMATICAL

ATTRACTIONS AT THE LYCEUM

The Pollard Lilliputian Opera Company All Week, Opening Monday Evening in "The Belle of New York."

The coming presentation of the "Belle of New York" by the Pollard Lilliputian Opera company at the Lyceum theater, on Monday evening, will afford the theatergoers of this city an opportunity of witnessing this wonderful aggregation of juvenile performers at their best, as in this play all the little principals are given a chance, and it is one of their best successes. For the benefit of those who have never witnessed this charming operetta, the story is as follows:

Mr. Branson, an aged capitalist of Choes, decides to send his son to the great metropolis to become initiated in the ways of the world. The son, Harry, being matrimonially inclined, soon became involved in difficulties of this nature, he shortly became engaged to a comic opera queen, at the same time making advances to a music hall dancer. A bridal cake is presented to Harry, consisting of an immense candy figure, which later proves to be the daughter of the confectioner. Upon learning this fact the young man is immediately enamored of the young lady. It is here the old man arrives on the scene and learns of the affairs of his son, himself becoming an actor in the complication, being constantly pursued by an escaped lunatic who is also in love with the opera queen, and mistakes the older Bronson for Harry. The old man now thoroughly enraged at the actions of his son, casts him off. Upon hearing of this the opera queen and dancer have nothing more to do with the supposed penniless young man. Harry starts out to spend his remaining capital upon the candymaker's daughter. On the street Harry is attracted by the singing of the Salvation Army, among whom is Violet Gray, known as the "Belle." This light-hearted youngster again falls in love, and the pretty "Army" girl eventually proves to be an heiress.

Act second opens with Harry toiling for his daily bread behind a soda fountain. He receives a visit from his father, and the "Belle," in trying to have the old man look upon her with ill favor in the interest of the young man, disguises herself as a dancer at a fete held at Nrraganset pier. The wise old chap sees through this hoax, relents towards his son, and the young couple are thus made happy.

New and special scenery will be shown, Pell street, New York, on Chinese New Year's eve, the waiting room in the Grand Central station, and the lawn of the Casino, Narranganset Pier.

"The Belle of New York" will also be given on Tuesday evening, Wednesday afternoon, "Pinafore;" Wednesday and Thursday night, "A Runaway Girl;" Friday night, "The Geisha;" Saturday afternoon and night, "A Gaiety Girl."

TEDDY McNAMARA AND MERLE POLLARD IN "THE BELLE OF NEW YORK"—AT LYCEUM NEXT WEEK.

METROPOLITAN AND THE BIJOU

All New Features For the Coming Week, Including Some of the Foremost Vaudeville Numbers.

The Metropolitan will again offer all new vaudeville features next week. The numerous acts to be presented the coming week include some of the foremost vaudeville numbers. The program is headed by Cotton and Darrow, who present a novelty in the comedy sketch line, and also introduce the latest songs on the market.

Frank Walsh, known as the man with many faces, and a feature with the Dockstoder Minstrels for two soasons, will offer something new in the monologue and character singing part of the program.

The Van Der Koors will present their original act, entitled "The Magician and the Yap," introducing burlesque magic, etc.

Claud Rauf, marvelous wire walker and equilibristic wonder, will perform some of the most daring tricks ever seen in mid air.

Arthur Jackson, baritone vocalist, who has made a fine impression, the past two weeks, in illustrated songs, will render the beautiful child-song, entitled, "Nobody Seems to Love Me Now," which is illustrated with handsome colored views.

The moving pictures for the week will be a show in themselves. They are called, "How a French Count Secured a Wife in New York City." The film is 1,000 feet long, and every foot is a laugh.

Matinees are given daily at 3 p. m. The night performances start at 8 and 9:30 p. m.

FINE PROGRAM.

High Class Vaudeville Features at the Bijou.

The vaudeville program at the Bijou, commencing Monday matinee, will be one of the best of the season. A number of excellent artists have been secured, and the show is headed by the clever entertainer, H. B. Riggs, who will appear in songs, comedy stories and character dancing.

Miss Ethel Jackson, charming soubrette, will please the audience in her singing and dancing specialties.

Sig. Franz, the sensational cyclist, will perform some difficult tricks upon the unicycle.

L. O. Whittier will render the latest picture song, entitled "Two Little Orphans Are We."

The moving picture portion of the entertainment will be superior to anything in this line so far shown this season, the management having just secured the late pictures, called "The Mining District." Thrilling Western scenes are shown as well as a host of comic situations.

Matinees are given daily at 2:30. The night shows start at 8, 9, and 10 p. m. Seats are reserved for ladies and escorts at no extra charge.

WEDDINGS IN STAGELAND

Cupid Captured Many Footlight Favorites Last Season — The Love-Honor-and-Obey Specialty a More Popular "Stunt" Than Ever Before.

New York, June 24.—In the neighborhood of two-score stage marriages have been solemnized between September of last year and the 1906 June, many of which are still in effect.

Marie Wilson on September 1 gave the circles in which she moved something of a shock when she let it be known she was again a domestic star. Miss Wilson will be remembered no less for her business acumen and shrewd operations in Wall street than for her successful efforts toward popularizing the "Pretty Maidens" sextet in the original "Florodora." Her ability, her ambition to rise to great heights in her profession, her profound intelligence and generally admirable qualities, aided by her natural attractiveness, won for her the friendship and esteem of the eminent and the influential, and it was on the advice of these that the humble "show girl" made a study of finance, invested profitably and, in short, found herself four years ago this very month in the possession of the tidy sum of $800,000.

It was about this time that Miss Wilson —or, rather, Mrs. Harry Winsett—withdrew from the stage which had so gallantly served its purpose. With her husband she visited Europe and enjoyed the pleasures of the foreign capitals. On the return to New York of the Winsetts disagreemnts, which had been not infrequent, culminated in a separation, Mr. Winsett going to St. Louis and his former partner for a visit to her relatives in Washington, D. C.

They happened to return to New York at the same time, there was a meeting, a revival of interest and the ex-Mrs. Winsett and her ex-husbnad were re-married. They have a handsome home in New York today and most of the $800,000.

"Little Dolly Dimple," otherwise Grace Cameron, prima donna of the "Piff, Paff, Pouf" company, went through her part at the Casino on the night of September 16 in something of a heart flutter. Winslow Kenworthy of Iowa, a sweetheart of the school day period, had persuaded the little singer to accept his name and share his fortunes. Mr. Kenworthy is a prominent "banker," who in his time has put through many important deals from his little silver box working in conjunction with the "case rack."

An interesting object of comment developed on September 22, when the news of the re-marriage of Arnold Daly and Mazie Blythe was made known. Two years previously there had been a divorce, and to Mrs. Daly was given the custody of their baby daughter. Following the sepration many friends tried to bring the two together, but it was not until the summer of last year that success attended these offices.

A WEDDING THEIR FRIENDS DIDN'T SEE.

Ninette Thulten, for two seasons with the Willie Collier comedies, is a young woman who won a husband and a fortune in the Middle West. When the company played Cleveland, the attractions of Miss Thulten made a pronounced impression upon one Kirke D. Bishop, a wealthy business man, and on October 11 news came of their marriage. There was something of a disparity in the ages of the high contracting parties. Miss Thulten being just turned 23 and her adoring swain being 51, but otherwise they were harmonious, in that the bride had been divorced from a first husband taken in San Francisco, and the groom had furnished a nine days' sensation when several years before he had figured in a divorce suit in Cleveland.

That was a curious concession to motherly insistence which was made when Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dean Stickney, wealthy New Yorkers, were remarried on October 18. In December, 1903, they were married. This was while Mr. Stickney's mother was in India. On her return she welcomed her new daughter, but she said she would have one lasting regret, and that was the fact that she had not been present at the marriage of her beloved boy. From this sprang the thought of a second marriage at which she could be present, and so it fell out that Mabel Slocum and Harold Dean Stickney were twice married and never divorced or separated between ceremonies.

After many stage waits and complications which become amusing in the light of time, Florence Worden of "The Scriptic Comic Governess" and Edgar MacGregor, stage manager of the same Cissie Loftus company, were married on October 23 in the rectory of St. Patrick's cathedral, New York. They had apprised their friends of their intention and had named the cathedral as the scene, but in the excitement incident to the occasion had neglected to say the ceremony would be performed in the rectory. As a consequence, crowds of friends assembled in the vacant cathedral and not a soul passed into the rectory, the gathering marveling at the absence of the bride and groom, while the latter wondered why their marriage, so important to them, should arouse no attention on the part of their acquaintances. After the wedding both parties met in the street, and, with explanations, the invitation approprite to such situations was extended by the groom and accepted by the others.

Lyman Wheeler, tenor of "The Princess Chic," invaded the chorus of that organization for his bride, and on October 29 married Mamie Ford in Calumet, Mich. The present Mrs. Wheeler is the only child of a Western mine owner.

Back of the stage of the Fifth Avenue, one of Mr. Proctor's New York houses, there was much congratulating on the evening of October 29, for then it was that Loretta Healey and Albert Howson confessed they had gone and done it. The bride has been with the stock company a matter of four years. The groom is a son of Frank Howson, musical director, and a nephew of John and Emma Howson, acrobats of the olden, golden days.

Considerable of romance has been crowded into the life of Miss Victoria Walters, the leading woman of "The Way of the Transgressor" company, who, on November 15, became the wife of James Dillon, a business man of Buffalo. In 1894 Miss Walters—or Victoria Nathanson, as she was in private life—was married to W. F. Mason. The religious beliefs of the two being dissimilar, Miss Walters being a Jewess and Mr. Mason a Catholic, the bride changed her faith for that of her husband. Mr. Mason, at the time of his marriage, was playing the part of the undertaker in "Sis Hopkins," and to this character a curious fatality attached. Three men who had preceded Mason in the part died while playing it, and this, too, was the end of Miss Walter's first husband.

Annie Evelyn Morse, actress, of New York City and Herbert M. Sprague, lumberman, of Hartwellsville, Vt., sought to be married on December 6, in North Adams, Mass., but the only available clergyman refused to perform the ceremony. At Williamstown, a short distance away, there is a most obliging town clerk in the person of one Grundy, and said Grundy tied the knot as effectively as ever clergyman could tie it, and Mr. and Mrs. Sprague departed well content.

Balking at the formalities of a church ceremony and a subsequent wedding breakfast, Frank E. Havlin, assistant treasurer of the Grand opera house, St. Louis, and a cousin of Manager Havlin of St. Louis and Cincinnati, eloped on December 9, with Allie M. Smith. At the very same hour, Miss Smith's brother, Casper, ran away with Eda Amos. The brothers of the brides had planned a big double wedding with a monster breakfast to follow and had made out a list of the guests to be invited. Havlin and Smith, disliking to face the conventional music, pleaded with their respective sweethearts, picked up a justice of the peace at Wellston, Mo., drove him over to Clayton and there the double wedding took place sans ceremony.

Mabel Frenyear, one of the best known chorus girls in the country, was secretly married on December 12 in Chicago to Thomas R. Finucane, a young Rochester millionaire and prominent official of the Stromberg-Carlson Electric company of Chicago. Miss Frenyear's most recent engagement had been with the "Wizard of Oz" and "The Babes in Toyland" companies. Later this marriage was annulled on each of the parties representing to the court that the ceremony had been performed at a time when neither realized what step was being taken. This statement displeased Justice of the Peace Arms, who married them. It was his testimony that the condition of the bride and groom was normal and that each fully understood the importance of the action. However, the marriage was annulled. The wedded bliss extended to December 31.

A PAIR OF MUSICAL GENIUSES.

The union in wedlock of two musical geniuses is a rarity seldom encompassed in these prosaic days, particularly when each is an acknowledged "star" in his or her given lines. Hence it was mildly startling news to hear that Moses Gumble, the musical composer and ragtime originator, and Clarice Vance, "the vaudeville queen," had exchanged bonds at the altar. Moses Edwin Gumble, otherwise known as the "master mechanic of syncopated melodies," hails originally from Cincinnati.

Lucius Fairchild, leading man of the Katherine Rober stock company, loved Alma Totten, who plays character parts in the same company. It was understood in the various dressing rooms that these two were engaged, and Fairchild was accounted a lucky man. The company was playing in Meriden, Conn., Jan. 19, and the members strolled around the town seeing the provincial sights. Miss Totten was accompanied this time by Roy King, the heavy man, and their way led past the door of Mr. Mueller, who is by way of being a justice of the peace. Mr. King looked inquiringly at Miss Totten, and Miss Totten nodded affirmatively. "Twill serve," said the lady, and they entered the house of that justice of the peace. "Ladies and gentlemen," said Mr. King an hour later as they walked on the stage, "permit me to present my wife." Mr. Fairchild was surprised. However, he was the first to congratulate the happy couple, which was certainly the graceful thing to do.

This is the romance of Rosemary Glosz. Once upon a time Miss Glosz was Mrs. Race Whitney, wife of a young man who alternated between writing dramatic criticisms and getting publicity for Pain's fireworks. Two years ago these were married, and lived happily until the arrival of a mother-in-law, who proceeded to edit the household affairs. One day there came a divorce, and Mr. Whitney removed to Portland, Or., and became dramatic editor of a paper there. Miss Glosz went back to the stage, whence Whitney had won her.

Now it happened that Mrs. William Bernard of the Columbia Theater Stock company, Portland, was friendly with each of the separationists, and she learned that Whitney still had a high regard for his ex-wife. Then the alert Mrs. Bernard, in her capacity of rematchmaker, wired Miss Glosz to go on to Portland from New York, and the young woman's resignation from the Fields' show followed. Rosemary reached Portland Feb. 1, and a few hours later there had been a second marriage, and she was again Mrs. Whitney. In the West, when the question referring to Whitney's identity is asked, he is always described as the young man who wrote the following criticism of Jefferson's sons:

"Those Jefferson children, Willie and Joe, chips of the old block—white chips—played at the Marquam Grand last week. They should be spanked and put to bed."

Another elopement was added, on March 2, to the long list of such specialties peculiar to the Circus Family Robinson, when it was discovered that Miss Pearl, the youngest daughter of John Robinson of Terrace Park, near Cincinnati, had fled to Seymour, Ind., and been married to Henry G. Lamkin. Her father expressed small surprise when told of the occurrence. You see, the father had slipped away with his own sweetheart, the mother of Pearl, and, besides, his own father, "Uncle" John Robinson, had set the same pace earlier in the Robinson history. Miss Saddie Robinson, another daughter, secretly married Harry Stevens, thus faithfully fulfilling the traditions of the tribe.

Friends and relatives of Alan W. Wood, a retired sheet steel manufacturer of Pittsburg, were surprised on March 5 to hear of that capitalist's marriage with Goldie Mohr, who long was the most graceful figure in the front row at Weber & Fields. An odd commentary on this union is the fact that four years ago the bridegroom sent his son, Walter Dewess Wood, into exile abroad because that chip of the old block wished to marry an actress. Mr. Wood has been married before, first to Miss Minnie Knox, a sister of Senator P. C. Knox who bore him one child, and again to Miss Alberta Carrier, by whom he had six children. These children are older than the present Mrs. Wood, their father being past 60. When Mr. Wood sold his interest in the sheet mill and left Pittsburg he built a grent house in Riverside drive, New York, entertained extensively and became a familiar figure at the theaters.

G. THATCHER'S LATEST VENTURE.

George Thatcher, the minstrel man, who in his later years has turned his talents to the part of Sassafras Johnson in "The County Chairman," could not withstand the nightly and two matinee attractions per week of Miss Zenaida Williams of the same comedy company, and the lady herself confessed she could detect under the burnt cork make-up of her admirer a heart as white as the lilies. And so, on March 14, these two, were married in Chicago. Mr. Thatcher's first wife died in New York city last September. The present Mrs. Thatcher was a protege of the late George W. Childs. Later, she joined the A. M. Palmer forces and met Odell Williams, who became her first husband. She created the part of Amelia in the original Mrs. Fiske production of "Becky Sharp."

Robert Adams and Pearl McKenna, stage folks both, were joined in Chicago, March 16. The bride has the satisfaction of knowing that a legacy of $200,000 to which she is heress is in no wise affected by her appearance at the altar.

Fred Titus, once bicycle champion, former husband of Miss Edna May, a graduate from the stage and at present manager of an automobile company, was married March 19 in Jersey City to Miss Maude Harlowe, a member of the company which later appeared in "A Yankee Circus on Mars" at the New York Hippodrome.

Miss Harlowe has appeared in several musical comedies on Broadway under the name of Miss Maude Lillian Rice. She is said to have been on very friendly terms with Miss May, who obtained a divorce from Mr. Titus on Jan. 17 last, Judge Bischoff signing the interlocutory decree. By this decree Mr. Titus was forbidden to marry again within three months.

The time limit expired at midnight March 18, and, with two friends, Mr. Titus and Miss Harlowe went to the residence of the Rev. Mr. Rudolph, pastor of the German Presbyterian church, in Jersey City, where they were wedded, and then returned to New York.

Miss May, while playing a small part in one of the Casino productions seven years ago, went to Manhattan Beach, where she saw Mr. Titus win one of his championship bicycle races. It was a case of love at first sight and a wedding soon followed. Since Miss May obtained her divorce it has been reported many times that she is soon to marry a well known young English playwright.

George H. Thurston of Boston, who plays the part of the Town Bully in "Quincy Adams Sawyer," and Miss Juliet Martin of Roanoke, Va., were married March 20, on the stage of the Lafayette theater, Washington, D. C. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. F. Wilson of the Assembly Presbyterian church. The members of the company and a few friends witnessed the ceremony. The wedding was a decided surprise, as the two had met but once before. The company played a one-night stand in Roanoke late in January. Mutual friends brought Miss Martin and Mr. Thurston together. Before he left Roanoke they were engaged.

Rosa Earle of "The Earl and the Girl" company surprised her fellow actresses the latter part of March by becoming Mrs. Frank D. Dewar in Chicago. The groom is a relative of the distiller, and the bride has a fine flight of poetic fancy, as shown in this happy thought, to which she gave expression immediately following her marriage:

"Love is a great stimulant to the ambition. It helps to round out an actress's life. It is the greatest inspiration to higher acting."

Because her husband, Kenneth D. Merril, a young automobile enthusiast of New York, could not stand the strain of separation, Julia Mooney of "The Earl and the Girl" company, playing in Chicago, was forced, on April 2, to reveal their marriage. Merril is 20 and his bride is only 17. He is the son of a wealthy New York broker, and first met his wife while she was playing with the "Piff, Paff, Pouf" company. "He was badly smitten," said Mrs. Merril, "for he was at the show every night we played in New York—a hundred and twenty nights. Wasn't that a record?"

News developed on April 10, that Beatrice Ingram, who is with "No Wedding Bells for Her," and who was formerly the wife of Joseph Callahan, was married two weeks before to a wealthy Boston broker, and after finishing the season will retire to a pretty little home on the outskirts of the Hub.

MAY LESLIE AND THE RICH MILK MAN.

Another romance in which a young actress and the son of an old and wealthy family play the principal parts became public April 12, when it was announced that Miss May Leslie, until recently a member of the Lew Fields company, would soon become the wife of Charles Rogers, son of the president of the Borden Condensed Milk company, a $25,000,000 corporation. Miss Leslie is, or soon will be, a divorcee, while her intended husband, by persisting in his announced determination to make her his wife, has invited parental displeasure to such an extent that he has been made to understand he will be entirely dependent upon his own resources if he contracts the proposed alliance. Thus far it would seem the threat has been without avail. In fact, the principals' sole source of worry appears to lie in the question of when the present barrier to the wedding would be removed. This obstacle is Miss Leslie's husband, Mortimer Thompson, the only son of a wealthy widowed mother.

After putting down six and carrying two every night and some afternoons for several months, Miss Jennie Wilson, on April 13, solved an important problem, for to William Schnerer, former member of the city council of Cleveland, she gave the answer, which was "Yes." Miss Wilson is young and beautiful, of the blond type, and when Schnerer saw her in St. Louis, in "Babes in Toyland," last December, her light hair and blue eyes played havoc with his heart. Miss Wilson noticed Schnerer, too, from behind the footlights, and began to lose interest in the mysteries and delights of Toyland. They became engaged before the week ended. Miss Wilson comes of a New York family and has been on the stage but a short time.

Betty Belknap, actress, had her fortune told eight years ago, and on April 30 it came true, when she became the wife of Charles S. Carstairs, art connoisseur and man of wealth. The gypsy girl of the occasion was Mary McKenzie Evans, who read the pasteboards on an Atlantic liner. Betty Belknap was on her way to England to appear in "Zaza" with Mrs. Leslie Carter. On the liner was Mr. Carstairs. They were introduced, and to those who saw the introduction it looked like a case of love at first sight.

Mr. Carstairs at that time was married. The Mrs. Carstairs of then is now Mrs. Felix L. Tuckerman. Two years ago she obtained her freedom. It developed on the ship that Mr. Carstairs was married. Miss Evans told his fortune. She ran over the cards, and there was a dark man that seemed to look upon his as a rival for the hand of a girl that at the time he had no right to love. Yes, there he was again. It was in a court. He was being divorced, and then he was going to marry and live happy ever after.

Mr. Carstairs came back to America, and the actress, when her engagement ended, remained in London. She stayed at the Hotel Wellington, and was courted by many men of rank, but did not marry.

Two years ago Mr. Carstairs and his wife were abroad. Mr. Carstairs ran over to Paris, and Mrs. Carstairs went a few days later without taking the precaution to say she was coming. In a cafe she came across Mr. Carstairs. She returned to America and obtained her divorce. Some months later Mrs. Carstairs married Mr. Tuckerman in Philadelphia.

The engagement of Frances Belmont and Lord Ashburton was announced in early May. Preparatory to the nuptials the bride-to-be is being educated in a Paris convent, where she is reported as rapidly unlearning the winks and shrugs which made her a fetching figure in the "Florodora" sextet.

The church and stage came together when a chorus girl selected a minister for a father-in-law, and the minister says he is glad of it. Incidentally Claudia Rogers is married again. This time she selected the Rev. H. C. Swentzel, the rector of St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal church of Brooklyn, as her father-in-law.

Miss Rogers has pulchritude, also a voice of some power. And now she has married a clergyman's son, who not only owns an automobile, but is a dealer in them. Could the most ardent wish of a chorus girl's heart be better satisfied?

At the advanced age of 15 Claudia Rogers was married to Robert Clinton Montgomery, a vaudeville player, now in this city. Six months later Mrs. Montgomery became Miss Rogers once more, through the agency of the divorce courts. Since that time she has played in various companies, presenting light opera.

Manager William Mendelssohn of the People's theater started on May 24 on his honeymoon with Rosa Marks, a chorus girl, whom he married under a strong police guard in the Roumanian synagogue.

Mendelssohn was divorced from his first wife a year ago. He feared her relatives might be on hand to cause trouble.

but Adelaide's is smoothly curved and looks soft. The theatrical almanac used to warn us at about this time of the year to look out for Ibsens and Camilles, but now in June we may expect Ibsen Danes, and if Miss Keim wants to be melancholy Danishly, she has the right, as she pays her own bills—and it is, to her at least, a pleasant detail that her income has exceeded her outgo. When E. H. Sothern first played Hamlet, she was hiding her ambition under the most garb of the Player Queen. She got a step forward later that season when Cecilia Loftus relinquished the role of Ophelia to her. Now that she is Hamlet, are we to expect that, when age creeps upon the plump and fair Miss Keim she will don the beard of Polonius?

• • •

Nature made Miss Keim as blonde as Charles Fechter's Hamlet was, but she has made herself as nearly like Edwin Booth as she can with a black wig curled and parted in close imitation of the great tragedian's hair before it turned gray. Then she puts on a brunette color, but she can't take off flesh, and so her Boothian prince is as buxom as a Prince Charming in an extravaganza. She obliterates her own graceful waist line as much as a heavy girdle, which droops in a straight-front way, will permit. Thus she starts at her head quite mannishly, becomes less so at her middle and lapses into a woman at her feet, which are raised on military heels so like the Parisian that they compel her to kangaroo like a Gibson girl.

There is nothing effeminate, however, in Adelaide's Hamlet's speech. The voice is splendidly rich, musical, flexible, like an echo of Edwin Forrest's, and it is used with elocutionary skill guided by exquisite sensibility. This Hamlet is no joke. Yet is hard to take a sober view of it. Would we treat Mansfield politely if he played Katherine, the Shrew, notwithstanding that his temperament might suit him for the role?

Sarah Bernhardt, the modern authority for female Hamlets, may have reasoned that an old woman is eligible for the imitation of a young man. Yet Sarah didn't quite unsex her garb, but made the habiliments of woe include three or four yards of black silk trailing after her when she walked and draped around her legs when she posed. So her Hamlet in his encounter with the ghost on the parapet was as fluffy as a Juliet in her balcony dialogue with Romeo. Adelaide doesn't pause in the soliloquy to decide whether or no her mantle must be shaken out, nor seem to ask Ophelia if her hat is on straight. And in her acting she is flawlessly orthodox in adhesion to Booth doctrines. She does not shinny up the side of the throne to give the stony stare to the king. That was the best thing, or the worst, in Bernhardt's performance. Having started in the play scene by illustrating the words about Hamlet lying in Ophelia's lap almost literally, Sarah sprawled up to the maiden in poses as sensuous as an Egyptian houri's, and as the action grew intense, she wormed her way as sinuously as a human centipede across the stage to the scared king who sat high in a box suggestive of a judge's stand at a horse-race. At the crucial moment, Mlle. Hamlet seized a torch, climbed up the front of this royal enclosure and waved the flame in the monarch's face. You see, the French regard Shakespeare's tragedies as melodramas, and hardly equal to Sardou's at that.

Hamlet is wearing French heels these warm evenings and looking more like a fair English Rosalind than the melancholy Danish prince. Blame for his effeminate gait, however, should not be borne by his Parisian shoes, but by his graceful unmanliness, for Adelaide Keim is not at all a masculine woman. We are told that Charlotte Cashman's Hamlet suggested more muscle than tissue, but Adelaide's is more than living and looks soft. The theatrical almanac used to warn us at about this time of the year to look out for Juliets and Camilles, but now in June we may expect Ibsen Danes, and if Miss Keim wants to be melancholy Danishly, she has the right, as she pays her own bills—and it is, to her at least, a pleasant detail that her income has exceeded her outgo. NEW YORK THEATERS

"When We Are Forty-one"—Dr. Osler Farcified At Wisteria Grove—Three Comedians Are Coining Money This Summer On Broadway.

New York, June 24.—There is a load of debt on the farm and a lode of copper; also a farmer who knows all about the mortgage, for it makes him poor, but nothing of the metal, which is going to make him rich; and there is a villain who says to himself: "I will take o'er the lien on the lean land, so that the ore may be mine to mine." That is the case presented in "Down Our Way," and if I should declare this to be the thousandth time it has been set forth in a rural play no one could dispute the count, for the truth is therein or thereabouts. Nor could it be contradicted if I asserted further that here is the five hundredth stage farmer whose son has gone to town, become a profligate and broken his father's fortune and his girl's heart, but has come back to home and virtue in the nick of time to save the old man, the young maiden and himself. Of course "Down Our Way" didn't come down our Broadway, but it did get within an eighth of a mile of that theatrical center.

• • •

The seasonably frolicsome new play of the week is "When We Are Forty-One," in Wisteria Grove, on the tops of two big Broadway theaters. A more completely Tenderloin audience never greeted a more thoroughly Tenderloin show. The ostensible subject of the extravaganza was Dr. Osler's notion that men are useless after the age of 40, and the principal comedian went about with a siphon chloroform for persons who had passed their limit of value. Nobody cared for the satire, which was witless anyway. But among the characters were a wine merchant famed for opening his own brand of champagne for advertising purposes throughout the Tenderloin, a vaudeville manager who is a Tenderloin fop and promoter of showgirls, a frisky actress who writes Tenderloin personalities for a sporting journal and others of notoriety so local to the Tenderloin that they are not known even by name to one per cent of the city's population. But they were like boon companions to that Tenderloin assemblage.

• • •

There was Elsie Janus, too. Well did the rounders know that it was going to be Elsie's own night. The tip had passed from mouths to ears that she would come out as a rival of Cecelia Loftus in mimicry. She realized expectation by imitating twenty familiar stage persons with startling fidelity; and not in voice and action only, for she contorted her pretty face into likenesses of such ugly mugs as Eddie Foy's when he grins and Ellie Fay's when she pulls a monkey grimace. All of her portraiture was from the Tenderloin Temple of Fame; and then too, when she was applauded loud and long, she made a fresh-and-ready, hello-old-pals, meet-me - at-the - lobster-house kind of speech that was like shaking hands with her comrades, across footlights that seemed like a row of cold bottles and hot birds.

The scenes were at one of the very yellow restaurants of Upper Broadway and an equally vivid-hued one out on Riverside Drive. Altogether convivial and jocular was "When We Are Forty-One." It was an anti-art pity, of course, yet hardly an immoral show, for no one in it spoke a bad word or made a wicked gesture. But it was very, very fast. For the first act, at the Broadway restaurant, one of that toggle-jointed Daly family, Nellie, had been matched up with a rubber-muscled John McVeigh, and they danced together like deviled dervishes, except that their whirls were mostly heels over head instead of mere pirouettes. Nellie said she was a rural innocent abroad with some rustic girls and John declared that he was the younger Rockefeller taking his Sunday school class out for instruction—an impudent slap at virtue and religion; and the needless offense was useless also, for Robert B. Smith had written no humor into it and the audience laughed at the antics only. Nellie and John's dancing seemed to reach an anti-climax of violence, but that really wasn't so. For the second act, at the Riverside house of gaiety, two knockedabout clowns from vaudeville, Riley and Reno, had been hired to do acrobatic stunts in the guise of waiters. Between the two acts, a wild coach ride of roysterers from a late supper at one of the restaurants to an early breakfast at the other, was shown in ten minutes of moving photographs; so even the intermission didn't show up this fast play, but transformed it to a carousal at a roadside inn right alongside of Grant's tomb.

Some specialties had been imported for Wisteria Grove. One was the girl with the red domino—an elaborate example of showman's craft. On the steamer coming over, and in all manner of public places here—hotels, restaurants, theaters, drives, by day and by night, she hid worn a red mask. Posters had pictured her with her face thus hidden and the newspapers had paragraphed her behavior. What she did in the show was to dance before a semicircle of mirrors, which multiplied her in the manner familiar these many years on our vaudeville stage. The added novelty was an illusive introduction of posing and dancing fairies behind the looking glasses. The looming of the masked woman was something of a boomerang, for the mystery which had been flung out from her came back to hit and hurt her, because she really didn't make us imagine that her face was beautiful. We knew too well the device that is worked at the hippodrome, were 250 hours of Asiatic ballet are barefaced, young and pretty novices, while the fifty who do the difficult dancing are veterans with their faces veiled in Oriental fashion. With that in mind, how could we be sure there wasn't, between the exposed eyes and chin of the girl with the red mask a mouth and a nose too old and ugly for exhibition?

Who can tell why some are funny and other men who do the same things in apparently the same way are not? Harry Bulger is the example in "When We Are Forty-One." He is the Dr. Osler, who tries to chloroform the fortyonesters. The matter given to him is the role itself to force laughter with is all dull, and no one without the natural gift of drollery could brighten it to the faintest glimmer of mirth; but Bulger made it shine at the first time trying, and he is about the worst first-nighter of all the extravaganze clowners. The expert audience seems to scare the language out of his head and the antics out of his feet, no matter how assiduously he has rehearsed. Especially in songs, even those of his own make, does his memory fail him and that is awkward, for the orchestra goes right along with the tune, leaving him away behind with the rhymes. On this occasion he delivered his opening song without lifting his eyes from the book in which it was written, not even looking up at the unvarying refrain—which was Kindly Puss the Chloroform and referred to various public men whom he would like to Oslerize. The fact turned out to be that he had concentrated his study on his one other song of the evening, for when he came to that he stood forth confidently in his customary attitude sidewise to the audience, tipped his hat jauntily, as he does when at ease in a role, and rattled off without hesitation a long ditty making sport of Free Masonry.

It takes one of those men, who, like Bulger, are born to be a human joke, to make a nonsense show go. Sam Jeff and Frank Bernard, De Angelis and Daniels, are funnier than The Rollicking Girl, Fantana and Sergeant Brue, and that is why those extravaganzas are thriving in summertime. Each play is ornamented to the limit of possibility with girls, but the time is past when a beauty show could fill a theater with New Yorkers in hot weather unless it gave other satisfactions. Not one of these three has much merit of its own; all are scant of wit as written and devoid of any sort of originality; and even the alluring sights and entrancing sounds so copiously put into them wouldn't save them from our disregard, so hard is it for singing and dancing girls to divert us when our collars are melting. But Sam, Jeff and Frank make us laugh and thereby three big Broadway theaters are crowded in the middle of June.

• • •

But the work of these funny fellows is not so easy. None of them is a Joe Jefferson, able to tickle us quietly. They have to exert themselves like acrobatic clowns in a circus to make us first grin resistingly, then snicker against our will and finally laugh outright and unashamed.

"You are all right," said Augustin Daly, scrutinizing a comedian at a costume rehearsal, "if you can be as comic as your collar."

The actor's make-up, of which the collar was a part, was bound to get a laugh at sight; but the manager dreaded that the fellow looked funnier than anything he could do, and so he might taper off from that initial hit to a miss before the farce was over. Now Sam Bernard, Jefferson de Angelis and Frank Daniels wear the most comical of collars and so they have to strive with might and main to keep their heads above the level of their necks. Bernard makes his nose bulbous with wax. De Angelis paints his mouth to a double width and Daniels builds his forehead to an abnormal height. Thus, those three paddle fools of Gotham, having gone to sea in a cracked bowl, have to paddle mighty hard to keep afloat.

You will comprehend the violence of the work when I tell you that De Angelis acted a fortnight with his arm in a sling. In one of his songs, That Is Art, he caricatures various "artists," including an equestrian, who leaps through a papered hoop and falls sprawling among overturned chairs; hence a broken elbow. Daniel's funniest five minutes are when, as a police sergeant on trial as a burglar, he throws himself wildly around in the prisoner's box and headlong over the rail. His stunts is likely to be a fractured skull. Bernard falls down so many times and in so many bumping ways that he may knock off a knuckle or a kneepan.

However, we needn't waste any sympathy on those three comedians and tumblers. In the way of proud professional recompense for breaks and bruises they are star actors, do you mind, and able to play summer engagements in Broadway, which is more than Irving and Mansfield can do; and as for the mere dross of money reward, their incomes will range this week from as high as $800 in one case to no lower than $500 in either of the others.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Katie Barry Protests Against the American Idea of the Londoner's Inability To Appreciate a Witticism—"Elysia" Is Name of New Opera For De Wolf Hopper.

New York, June 24.—Katie Barry, the surprisingly clever little Cockney girl who is appearing with Jefferson De Angelis in "Fantana," has been protesting, through the Evening Telegram, at our idea of the Londoner's inability to appreciate a witticism. There is a great deal of good, hard sense in her remarks, especially when she speaks of "the ungraciousness of making fun of a whole nation because its viewpoint is not precisely yours." Miss Barry says: "Sometimes I wonder if it ever occurs to the average American how an Englishman feels when, after having lived and laughed for some thirty years, he comes over here and learns that he has no sense of humor. The conviction of the New Yorker that the Londoner has no power of appreciating a jest is fearful and wonderful, more profound than any other conviction I know except the Britisher's idea that his religion is the true gospel and that everybody else is wrong. Your countrymen are willing to grant us everything—intelligence, courage, industry and persistence—except that same sense of humor.

"It would be difficult to say how that belief in our density reconciles itself to the fact that England has produced a greater number of wits than any other nation in the world. Thomas Hood, Dean Swift, Charles Lamb, Oliver Goldsmith, W. S. Gilbert and a score of others have succeeded in exciting the risibles not only of their compatriots, but of readers everywhere. London has ten comic papers to every one printed in New York. London supplies both countries with farces and musical comedies. London caricatures are reproduced universally, yet Londoners do not know the difference between a joke and an obituary notice!

"The British witticism does not of necessity embrace action, as does the American. It is preferably the export of some bright retort. Dean Swift advised paving London with wooden blocks. 'Impossible!' replied the council. 'Not at all,' returned Swift. 'Gentlemen, lay your heads together and the thing is done.' This is true wit, and among all your countrymen I know only one man, Mark Twain, who is master of it. To me Mr. Clemens' rejoinder to the Frenchman who said that Americans didn't know who their own grandfathers were he knew who their own grandfathers were is always seemed the acme of cleverness. Mark Twain's retaliation was to the effect that, at that, Americans had one generation the better of the French.'

"The most amusing part of Miss Barry's article, however, is that which obviously she does not intend to be amusing. Having censured us for being intolerant she shows her own intolerance, and, having declared that her countrymen are capable of understanding our jokes, she exhibits her own inability to do so, in the following paragraph:

"'Nothing is too impossible or extravagant to be laughed at in New York. I remember hearing a large party guffaw immoderately at a tale about a laboring man who fell ten stories to the sidewalk. A physician felt the pulse of the unfortunate patient and observed: 'The man is dead.' Whereupon the laborer replied: 'You're a liar, doctor; I'm not dead,' and his companion advised, 'Lie still. The doctor knows best.' An Englishman would never laugh at this joke, because he would first say to himself: 'A man who fell ten stories to the pavement would be dead and incapable of making any remark whatever.' Since the thing could not have happened, why give it any thought?'

Notwithstanding which, it appears that Miss Barry is about the funniest of the comedians in "Fantana."

Often the titles of plays are chosen as a result of curious circumstances, but the story back of the selection of "Elysia" as the name of the opera in which De Wolf Hopper is to appear in September seems exceptionally strange. Reginald De Koven wrote the score and Frederick Ranken the book of this piece, and when both were complete neither man had the faintest idea what to call the work. Since the manuscript could not be copyrighted without some designation, the collaborators determined to use "Elysia" Johnny Jones," is quite a baseball enas a make-shift caption which would serve to identify their product until a better cognomen could be selected. In due course of time the announcement of this copyright was published, and newspapers throughout the country began speaking of "the new Ranken-De Koven comedy, 'Elysia.'" Meanwhile, the composer and the librettist still were racking their brains in the effort to find a substitute for this name, until one day the late Sam S. Shubert said to them: "Boys, do you realize that 'Elysia' has had hundreds of dollars' worth of advertising, and that all of it is thrown away when you abandon the trade-mark?"

Neither Mr. De Koven nor Mr. Ranken had thought of that.

"It's true," Mr. De Koven confessed. "Moreover, 'Elysia' isn't such a bad title when you come to think of it. Supposing we do call the piece 'Elysia?'"

And so De Wolf Hopper is really to be seen next September in a new opera by Reginald De Koven and Frederick Ranken named "Elysia."

The business being done by "The Heir to the Hoorah" at the Hudson theater has held up so steadily and the demand for seats three and four weeks in advance is so strong that the management has felt justified in announcing a July 4 matinee. This will be a half-way mark in the sprint this merry comedy is making for an all-summer record. If the play manages to continue to draw paying audiences throughout August, it will be the second non-musical play that has ever lived through a New York summer, the only other run of this kind having been scored by Lawrence D'Orsay in "The Earl of Pawtucket." In this connection Manager Henry B. Harris of the Hudson has great faith in a newly installed plant, which, under the promising designation of a "refrigo-ventilator," has on several recent hot nights kept the temperature of his playhouse down to 68 degrees.

Between Eleanor Duse and the Henry Russell Grand Opera company, the Shuberts have been able to present quite a remarkable series of performances in their new London house, the Waldorf. During the second week of the season no fewer than ten plays, dramatic and musical, were given, matinee and evening interpretations. Duse appeared in "Hedda Gabler," "Magda," "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" and "Camille," while the opera company sang "L'Amico Fritz," "La Traviata," "Don Pasquale," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Maestro di Cappella," and "La Sonnambula." The great Italian actress is not scheduled to come to America next season, but Mr. Russell's organization is booked for an extended tour to begin in October at the Lyric theater, New York.

About the last words spoken by the late Joseph Jefferson, to any person outside of his immediate family, were those addressed to a newspaper correspondent, who called on him at Palm Beach: "I have left the limelight to go into the evener sunshine of a quiet life, and I leave a blessing behind me and pray for a blessing for me."

Another rumor is in circulation that Julia Marlowe is to marry. This time it is a Philadelphia clergyman, who met the actress one evening and was indiscreet to remark afterward: "Miss Marlowe is more charming off the stage than on." Some one put the members of the church "next" and while they point their fingers at him and giggle he becomes embarrassed and finally furious. A friend of Miss Marlowe's told her about the rumor and Miss Marlowe said: "I am very sorry for the poor gentleman."

According to late reports from London, which say that an American woman has completely captured Covent Garden as Gilda in "Rigoletto." Mme. Melba was originally to sing the role, but she took ill before the time to appear and while the managers were tearing their hair Mme. Norelli offered to sing the role which was not familiar to her. Mme. Norelli, in private life, is the wife of Dr. Ernest Borton of Portland, Or.

Ethel Barrymore is to play the title role in "Alice-Sit By-the Fire" next season in this country. Miss Ellen Terry presented it with marvelous success in England. Miss Barrymore will return to America in July to begin rehearsals of the play. She is now spending her vacation in London.

All things considered, it is perhaps fortunate that Sarah Bernhardt need not remain in Europe after November, but is coming to America under direction of the Shuberts. The artistic temperament has been cropping out splendidly in the divine Sarah, who has managed to quarrel with almost everybody in France and England, from Eleanor Duse to Catulles Mendes, the dramatist who wrote 'Sainte Therese.' It is quite possible, however, that there is method in the madness of Madam Bernhardt, whose troubles have been studiously reported in the newspapers on this side of the water. The great actress always had a keen eye out for advertising, which accounts for the fact that she and Lillian Russell probably are more generally talked about at present than any other two women in the world.

Every time the subject of the Russo-Japanese war comes up in his presence, Digby Bell, the star of "The Education of Mr. Pipp," is reminded of a new yarn about Kato, his Japanese valet.

"Yes, great people for negotiating, the Japs," said Bell the other day, during a discussion of the peace terms that would probably be exacted from the Russians. "I had a sample of this when I hired my dresser, Kato. All of the preliminary provisions of our compact as master and man had gone through swimmingly and the only thing remaining to be settled before we signed our treaty was the amount of indemnity, Kato should receive for his services.

"'I like forty dollars a month and trimmings,' said Kato. This was a new one on me and after a few diplomatic side steps I learned that 'trimmings' meant that my cast-off collars, neckties, and socks were to go to the Jap. Further parleying developed the fact that my collars and socks were both too large for Kato and after a bewildering exhibition of higher mathematics, he figured that he could afford to let me keep my own trimmings if I gave him two dollars more a month. I capitulated."

Richard Carle, having thrown aside the worry and care of producing his new play, "The Mayor of Tokio," is now putting all of his extra time to his new book, which he calls "What I Know About Poker." In one part of the book the comedian devotes several pages to I. O. U's. Also he tells what he knows about when one should lay one's hand—run of "The Heir to the Hoorah." During the second act Manager Henry B. Harris, of the theater, spied the empty chair and told an usher to give it to a friend of his whom he noticed among the standees in the foyer.

But the seat remained empty.

"No sir! That seat is mine!" declared the man in the chair adjoining it. "I'm six feet four and I bought two seats so as to have plenty of room to stretch my legs," and re-crossing his visibly long support, the man resumed his roars of laughter at the play.

"BARKERS" EARN BIG WAGES

Men Who Make the Noise Outside the Circus Tent Get Nice Salaries and Are Worth It.

Barkers, the orators of the circus, are among the highest paid and best-known men in the business, says the Chicago Tribune. Over half of the owners of great circuses, of vaudeville houses, of side shows and tent shows began their careers as "barkers," or, as they prefer to be known, "talkers."

A good talker, and they are extremely rare, is paid from $75 to $200 a week by the big circuses, and the "top-notchers" in the profession can command their own prices. To go into the business of "barking" even for the cheapest side show or "freak shop" requires only this for capital: Gab, gall and good sense.

Yet, strange as it may seem to those who have not the smell of tanbark in their nostrils, the "barkers," the men who stand on platforms around side shows, around the ticket booths of circuses, are the best educated class of men connected with the circus profession, the brightest, the wittiest and cleverest. They are there to talk money out of the people who previously had not intended to spend it, and they accomplish their purpose. A good "barker" adds 10 per cent to the business of a good side show, and perhaps 50 per cent to the business of a bad one. They get big money; they are accustomed to "conning" the countryman, and eventually they buy a circus or become a partner in a vaudeville trust.

The business of "barking" has now been reduced to an exact science. It is the system more than the man that pays now, and every good circus carries from four to ten barkers, who do nothing but talk and draw big salaries for it. The men of today are perhaps just as good as the old-timers, but they are not forced to originate so much, they do not acquire the fame of the old-timers.

Just talk may seem like an easy way to earn $150 a week, but those who aspire to draw word pictures of freaks that will entice an unwilling crowd into a tent should first try to get on a stump in the east 80-pasture field and talk seven hours a day, 12,000 words an hour, and "get back" at every wit or wag that asks a question.

A sideshow talker uses up more language and gets off more jokes in one afternoon and evening than a campaigner, even like Bryan, uses in a week. They get so they talk mechanically, and their wits get so on edge that mechanically they answer thrust for thrust with the village cutups who try to queer them.

The business of barking was, I believe, invented by a Chicagoan, Seth Howe, who used to own all the land between the lake and Cottage Grove avenue for blocks, and to Michigan avenue round Twenty-second street. Seth and his brother Frank had a circus and they did the talking themselves, explaining the merits of their old-fashioned circus. They were successful—but they realized when they met a better man.

One day while in Indiana Frank Howe was on his little box making an oration when the Original Rube blew in. He was Joe Cushion. Joe came in made up like a large farmer, driving an ox. Whether he stage farmer, driving an ox or not no one ever knew, but anyhow Frank Howe thought he saw an easy mark and began to guy Joe. Cushion stood it a few minutes while the crowd roared at his expense, then he removed his coat, hung it on one horn of the steer, laid his ox goad across the steer's horns, and proceeded to give Frank the worst wellloping of his life. Seth Howe was so pleased that he hired Cushion to play the Rube and attract crowds, and climb on to the block and talk while he sold tickets. Cushion and Frank Howe took the first American circus to England and came back covered with diamonds.

The old-timers had a harder time than the Come-on Boys of today. They used to get out on the block and exhibit the freaks themselves. The snake charmer never came out. The barker had to adorn himself with snakes and do his talking while a boa threatening to shut off his wind every minute. Their methods have been improved upon, but nobody now-a-days draws bigger crowds than did old George Grinnell, who used to load himself down with snakes and walk around town, lecturing on the side show.

The best barker that ever lived was W. C. Coup. He would have made a bully senator. Coup, I think, used to believe the things he said, and he could talk mother's butter money out of father's jeans before father was aware of it. His talk was beautiful, and no man ever had a better command of language than he, excepting perhaps, John Evans and Jake Townsend. When I was barking as a youngster, I honestly believed what Jake Townsend said until I got under the canvas. He convinced himself that we had the wonders of the world when we were exhibiting the giant, the fat woman, and Wicked Will, the educated hog. Evans got perhaps, one of the best educated men that ever lied eloquently in the interests of his employer. He was educated for the law and was a college man, but one day he threw up his profession and pjoined the old Great Eastern show. His methods were a revelation to showmen. He was a perfect dresser and spent huge sums in clothes. He came to the circus grounds attired in silk hat, startling gloves, immaculate Prince Albert and several pigeon egg diamonds. He ascended his stand, took about five minutes to remove his hat and gloves, and the crowd almost gathered, curious as to what he was going to do. Then he unloosed a flood of oratory that separated Alvin Joslyn from their dimes and quarters faster than their ticket machines separated wheat from straw. He could have talked Russell Sage out of a dollar.

Prof. Wood, who was with me at a Chicago museum, is one of the best examples of the modern talker. He speaks five languages, including Chinese, and was Chinese consul at Vancouver, besides representing one of the biggest ten houses in the world. He has barked in Chinese, English, Spanish, German and French. Besides, he belongs to at least twelve secret societies and he carries a pocket full of charms and insignia. If, while he is talking on the merits of the show, he sees a Masonic charm in the crowd, he suddenly unsnaps his K. of P. charm and begins "unconsciously" twirling the Masonic emblem, and it is four to one his brother Mason divests himself of one quarter at least. The Woodmen, Elks and others come by the same route.

J. L. Hutchinson, originally of Jerseyville, Ill., was one of the best in the business, and he afterward became one of the richest men at it. Hutch, when a boy of 6, was sitting on his mother's lap one day and she was weeping. He inquired why, and she tod him that his father was deeply in debt. "Never mind, mother," said the boy. "I'll pay that all off some day." The father died even deeper in debt, and Hutch ran away with a circus and became a barker. His fame grew and he advanced rapidly, commanding an immense salary and finally getting into the business and growing rich.

In 1876 Hutch went to Jerseyville, Ill., and kept his promise to his mother, paying every cent of his father's debts.

Charlie Bell, of the Bell family, is one of the new type of talkers. He can lecture on anything and talk money out of a rock. I believe he would convince you that a museum of anatomy was a delightful thing for a child to attend. He started in the business as an acrobat and found mental gymnastics better. Hughie Harris, of the Foreyaugh shows, is another circus spellbinder who will persuade a man that it is worth while to see whatever he describes.

Nowadays the barkers do not handle the money in many instances, but in the old days the barker sold the tickets himself. With the Barnum shows, when I was talking and selling tickets, our receipts would run from $60,000 to $100,000 a week, and I handled fully two thirds of it, talking all the time and making change. I earned my salary. If the barkers only attract 1 per cent of the business, they are earning their salaries.

In all my career I never have known of a barker or circus cashier stealing one cent from his employer. There is no case of embezzlement by them on record. They handle thousands of dollars each day, rapidly and without any supervision, and turn over the cash.

GAMES TODAY.

Duluth at Fargo.
Superior at Grand Forks.
Crookston at Winnipeg.

Yesterday was an off day in the Northern league. Rain interfered with the games at Grand Forks and Fargo, and the Winnipeg game was postponed until today, when a double header will be played.

Duluth will finish up at Fargo tomorrow, and will go from there to Winnipeg, returning to Grand Forks for four games with the Tigers. Both Winnipeg and Grand Forks are "laying for" the Champs and if they can take the series it will be done. The seven games will be the hardest the Duluth team has yet played, and if the Champs get four out of the seven they will be doing exceptionally well.

Another home series will be opened here on July 3.

ALL DOING WELL

Members of Last Year's Team Are Making Good.

Most of Them Are Playing In Faster Company.

"What has become of the members of the championship Duluth team of 1904?" is a question that is frequently heard among the baseball fans.

There is not a member of the present Duluth team that played here last year, and the old White Sox are scattered to all corners of the country.

Inquiries among the players, and perusal of sporting records have resulted in the locating of all the members of last year's team, in addition to some of the other players who have been seen on other teams in the league. The following is the list:

"Newt" Randall, last year's left fielder, is with Denver in the Western league, and is hitting at a .308 clip, and fielding his position well.

Lee Quillan, last year's third baseman, is playing with the St. Joseph Western League team, and hitting over .300. He is also one of the most popular men on the team, and is fielding his usual star game.

"Rusty" Owens, the pitcher, is managing the Burlington team in the Iowa State league. The team is at the bottom of the list, but that is not all Rusty's fault.

Gehring and O'Leary form the crack battery of the Wichita, Kan., team, in the Western association. "Hank" has developed an unsuspected faculty as a long distance hitter, and is apparently after the home run record of the league.

Jimmy Hughes, the other catcher of the team, is in business in Chicago, and is out of the game for good, he says.

Koukalik is playing with one of the teams in the Western league.

Big Bill Zink is located in Marshalltown, Iowa, and his telephone pole bat is known to all the pitchers in the Iowa State league.

Shaw, until recently, was with the Keokuk team in the Iowa State league, but he was recently released, being the only one of the bunch that failed to make good.

"Buck" Noldin is said to be out of the game this year, but his whereabouts are unknown in Duluth.

Jack Corrigan, the popular right fielder, is with the Keokuk team in the Iowa State league, and doing nicely.

Joe Wilkes is playing with Burlington in the Iowa State league, and is putting up a star fielding game at short. He is having his usual trouble with the stick, but Joe's fielding and base running will keep him in any team.

Frank Martin, who captained the Duluth team early in the season, is playing second base for Omaha in the Western league, and batting and fielding well.

Artie Ball is out of the game. He has a position in some manufacturing concern in Chicago, and says he can't afford to play baseball.

Jack Lagger has gone back to his old position as a politician in Chicago, and is said to be making a barrel.

Breyette, the star short stop of last year's Crookston team, is with the Decatur, Ill., team.

Scharnweber, who was with Grand Forks last year, is putting up a star game with the Peoria team in the Three I league.

Bemis, who pitched for Winnipeg last year, is with Wichita.

All of the fans are familiar with the success of Sessions and Corbett, two Northern league graduates. Corbett was recently sold by St. Paul to the Coast league, and is pitching good ball. Sessions has apparently taken a slump since he was farmed back to St. Paul by the Boston Americans, and is being hammered pretty regularly, but he is not the only one of last year's stars that is being treated in that manner.

ST. PAUL AUTO CARNIVAL.

The Route Through Iowa Is Changed Materially.

St. Paul, June 24.—The official inspection of the route to be followed by the Chicago section of the 1905 St. Paul Auto Carnival Tour was concluded when the Knox touring car of Robert W. Spangler, carrying the official party of map makers from the Chicago Automobile club rolled into St. Paul. The car was decorated with a huge canvas sign displaying the words, "Blazing the Way' Chicago to St. Paul."

The roads were in the worst possible condition, owing to the continued rain, and some stretches were so soft and muddy that slow progress was made. The past few days however, have been fine, sunny and drying, and the final days' run of Mr. Spangler was accomplished over very fine roads.

The map makers have decided to change the route through Iowa quite materially. The official map of the Chicago-St. Paul section will show a route for the first days run that is identical with that of the preliminary map. The first day out of Chicago the car will run to Rockford, a distance of 93 miles. Rockford has an enthusiastic Auto club, and a rousing entertainment has been prepared in honor of the visitors.

The second night stop will be Dubuque, Iowa, where the Julien hotel has been selected as headquarters. From Dubuque west, the route is changed somewhat. The cars will proceed to Independence, along the line formerly laid down, but from there instead of going to Oelwein, the route bears southwest to Waterloo, and thence to Janesville, Plainfield and Charles City.

At the latter place, the third night stop will be made. Headquarters have been arranged at the Hildreth hotel. The road will be taken up July 3 to Floyd, Osage, St. Ansger, Lyle, Minn. and Austin, with headquarters at the Fox hotel, where the last night stop will be made. Fourth of July the cars will run into St. Paul from Austin.

Mr. Spangler is enthusiastic over the route, and declared that it was very much the best that could have been selected. He expressed wonder at the magnitude of the plans for the carnival. "We will have quite a crowd," said Mr. Spangler. "The idea of taking part in the tour seems to be catching on with vim, and the Chicago section of the tour will be very much larger than we thought it would be."

The official map will be ready for distribution next week.

KEENE'S SYSONBY.

Owner Declined to Take $100,000 For Colt.

New York, June 24.—In the month of August last, after Sysonby had won a valuable two-year-old stake at Saratoga, the very best authority was given for a statement that James R. Keene had declined to entertain an offer of $100,000 for his colt.

At the same time it was thought by some who did not know what Sysonby's engagements were that this offer was an extravagant one, but Mr. Keene and his trainer knew how many valuable prizes were in front of Sysonby, to be won by him if he remained well, and, aside from the fact that no one could buy from Mr. Keene so high-class a racer, the sequel to the declination is that Sysonby bids fair to win nearly $22,000, and has thus far started in only two of his engagements. He was scratched out of the Withers because Rowe did not desire to set the colt back by running him on a track which was heavy. He was not engaged in the Belmont. He was coughing during the Gravesend meeting, but he was all right for the Tidal, and, though he met only colts over which he last year had several pounds pull in form, he beat them in such style as to fairly set his admirers ablaze with enthusiasm.

It it be true that Rowe actually at one time contemplated running Sysonby in the Suburban, despite his weight, 115 pounds, it would appear that the three-year-old may be depended on to start for the Commonwealth handicap on July 1, in which his weight, including a five-pound penalty, will be only 111 pounds. This race ought to be the greatest of the year.

TENNIS CHAMPIONS SAIL

For Europe to Play For Davis Cup.

New York, June 24.—The Kaiser Wilhelm II. carried the four American lawn tennis champions who are to play in England next month for the Davis cup, which is emblematic of the international championship of the world.

The team which carries the hopes of all American players is composed of the first four players in last season's ranking, Holcombe Ward, national champion in both singles and doubles; William J. Clothier of Philadelphia, twice runner-up at Newport; William A. Larned, twice champion of America in singles, and Beals C. Wright, Ward's partner, and one of the national champions in doubles.

The international matches come off a week after the English championships, beginning on July 3. There were four other challenges for the Davis cup, and the Americans will have to play off with the other challengers for the right to meet the English holders of the trophy.

The schedule is as follows: America vs. Belgium, July 8, 10 and 11, at the Queen's club; France vs. winner of the first match, and Austria vs. Australia, both July 13, 14 and 15, at the Queen's club; final matches between two previous winners, July 17, 18 and 19, at Wimbledon; challenge matches between the British team and winners of finals, July 21, 22 and 24.

FOR GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP.

Program of Amateur Event At Glen View.

Chicago, June 24.—Official announcements of the seventh annual amateur championship of the Western Golf association, and for the Marshall Field cup competition, have been published. The Marshall Field contest, to be played at Exmoor, July 8, will be at thirty-six holes against bogey for teams of five. Entries close with Secretary Russell D. Hill at 6 o'clock, Thursday, June 6. No entry fee is required.

The championship will take place at Glen View, July 25-29, and will consist of a qualifying round of thirty-six holes on Tuesday, July 25, thirty-two to qualify. The first and second match rounds at eighteen holes will be played Wednesday and Thursday, the third match round and semi-finals, at eighteen holes each, on Friday, and the finals at thirty-six holes, on Saturday.

Entries for the championship will close Saturday, July 22.

To lose is often merely not to find—as a business chance or bargain missed, and thus lost, through failure to read the ads.

PROSPECT BETTER

Club Is Stronger and on Firm Financial Basis.

Crookston, Minn., June 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—While the ascent of Crookston in the percentage column of the Northern league has not been very rapid during the past week, there has been a marked improvement in the team. First Baseman Schlatter is now captain, and is getting far better team work than before. Kipp, who replaced Leighty at short, is proving a find in every sense of the word, and in addition to being one of the fastest shortstops in the league, is without question the heaviest hitting man in the position. Zieder, Crookston's new pitcher, is proving a whirlwind, and possesses the rare combination of being a good hitter as well. In his initial game he made two home runs and two two baggers, which is the record for heavy hitting in the Northern league since its organization, four years ago.

Crookston, however, is not done strengthening. Leighty, who was switched from short to third base, will not be retained in that position, and will be succeeded, at Grand Forks, Monday, by L. M. Baker of La Crosse, Wis., who is confidently expected to prove the fastest third station man in the Northern league, and in addition is a heavy hitter.

During the past week Grodenich of Minneapolis, who played second for the Crookston team, was released on account of poor stick work, and Livingstone is playing that sack, pending the arrival of Hock of Pittsburg, who is also expected to report Monday at Grand Forks. On his arrival, Livingstone will go back into right field, and it is expected that the season will be played without any further material changes.

Peter Dorn and Dan Collette, who jumped the Crookston team and have been blacklisted, have not proven any loss to Crookston, as Zieder and Smith, who replaced them, are both doing fine work. Smith won the game from the Orphans, which is the only one he has yet pitched.

Financially the Crookston team is in the best shape of any team in the league, which is due to the conservative business like manner in which the team has been handled, and of the further fact that Crookston is the only team that during the first month of the league season kept within the salary limit of $800 per month. While all of the teams are now within the salary limit, all but Crookston spent money with a lavish hand, and this is the main reason why St. Cloud-Brainerd was forced to throw up the franchise to Superior yesterday at Grand Forks. Despite small attendance during the home series, owign to the continual defeats, the Crookston team is on a paying basis, and has been since the season opened. Before the expiration of another ten days it is confidently expected that Crookston will be in the running for the pennant.

BOB FITZ'S LAST CALL

Famous Old Lion Calls Off Match With Schreck.

Mike Schreck is unlucky.

Schreck was a pugilistic "good thing" that unfortunately did not get to the post. When Schreck was matched with Robert Fitzsimmons it appeared as though Schreck, practically an "unknown," would be easy picking for "Lanky Bob." All over the country good pugilistic critics refused to take this view of the bout. Nearly every one "touted" Mike for the best good thing in a long time. All said that he would give Fitzsimmons a hard fight, and not a few picked him as a sure winner. Fitzsimmons and Schreck both went out to Salt Lake City, Utah, where the fight was arranged to take place on July 3. Both did a bit of light training.

Because the club did not post its forfeit on the very day called for, Fitzsimmons packed his grip and called the match off. The management of the club stated that it would positively post its forfeit the next day, but Fitzsimmons refused to listen to anything.

The truth of the matter is that Fitzsimmons is really at the end of his pugilistic career. When a man gets to be well on in the forties he can not expect to hold his own with a man in his prime who is at his best and just coming to the front. Fitzsimmons probably tried to train and found out that at the end of several days that he was not the same man that he once was. Then, realizing that from the opinion of critics all over the country that he was meeting an exceptionally good man in Schreck, "Lanky Bob" jumped at the first opportunity to get out of the match.

Fitzsimmons is lucky. If he had gone on with Schreck the chances are that he would have been knocked out.

Another opponent for Schreck is now desired. Mike claims all of Fitzsimmons' titles—middle-weight, light-heavy-weight and heavy-weight—but that will do him no good. He missed a great chance by not being lucky enough to get Fitzsimmons into the ring with him.

Jack Root, the clever Chicago light-heavy-weight, and John Willie, are now mentioned as opponents for Schreck. Root and Schreck would make a good fight, but it would not attract the interest or draw the crowd that a bout between Schreck and Fitzsimmons would.

COMMENCE PLAY

Endion Tennis Club Will Open Tournament Next Week.

Cold, Wet Weather Has Greatly Interfered With Play.

Drawings for the first club tournament of the Endion Tennis club will be made during the coming week.

The cold, wet weather has kept the members from getting out very much as yet, but every fine evening the courts have all been in use.

Weather permitting the play in the first tournament will commence Saturday afternoon. All of the members in the club will be entered, and the drawings will be made by the committee. The winners of the first round will enter the second round, and will play down for the campionship of the club.

On the basis of the showing made during the tournament, the players will be divided into two classes by the committee, and in the second club tournament held in July, will play these classes. In this way the new men will be given an opportunity to get past the first round.

The open tournament of the club will be held about Aug. 15. Players from all of the cities in the vicinity of Duluth will be invited to take part, and some valuable prizes will be put up for competition. The secretary is planning to communicate with a number of fast players in the range towns, Superior, Cloquet, Barnum, Ashland, Fargo, Grand Forks, St. Paul, Minneapolis and other cities within a short distance of Duluth, and invite them to take part in the tournament.

This open tournament has been gradually increasing in importance from year to year, and it is now the principal tennis event of the year in the district about the Head of the Lakes. It is planned and hoped to make the tournament even more successful this year than it has been in the past, and to do this it is necessary to secure as large a number of outside entries as possible.

BUSY TIMES IN BLUE GRASS

Harness Horse Boom at Lexington—Big Prices Realized.

Chicago, June 24.—Lexington, Ky., is a veritable speed factory these days. No longer do the "Blue Grass" trainers campaign to the extent they did ten years ago. At present they are content to manufacture the speed from raw material and let the other fellow assume the risks contingent to campaigning. Many good sales are recorded every fall and spring, and despite the fact that the thoroughbred element holds the center of the stage, prices for trotters or pacers capable of showing grand circuit quality are skyhigh.

Colt training comes nearly being a fine art, as practiced by "Blue Grass" trainers. They have the intricate knowledge of tutoring youngsters, without which colt training is a haphazard game of chance.

No matter how adept a trainer may be in fitting aged horses, he must have experience, tact and especial adaptability in order to make speed with colts. The brush system is most in vogue nowadays. That is, colts are not jogged to amount to anything. Take, for instance, the case of a yearling: It is broken in January or February; taught the purpose of the reins before being hitched to a vehicle, and later come the lessons on the track. It is at once impressed upon the pupil that he must learn to step fast, and every trick calculated to interest him in his work and inspire him with ambition is tried. After a few weeks of light work the colt is returned to the pasture and taken up along in early June. Usually the "run out" has given him more speed than could have possibly been made had he drilled for a like interval. And when his lessons are again resumed the pupil has not only retained the knowledge already learned, but is able to show a much better way of going and sometimes a lot of speed. This process of alternate work and pasturing is continued throughout the season, and by fall the youngster is ready to show to a prospective buyer. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" applies to colts most aptly, for it's the easiest matter in the world to make them sick of the game and sour-headed.

The most sensational yearling that has shown up at Lexington this, or, for that matter, any season, is a black colt by Todd (2:14¾), dam Paronella, by Parkville. The first week in June he trotted a quarter of a mile in 0:35, and did it in such easy fashion as to make him appear a coming star. No colt at the same time of year ever trotted a quarter at that clip, so far as we know. W. W. Evans, his trainer, has had many fast youngsters, but he pronounces the Todd youngster as the superior of all of his previous pupils.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES

Championship Won By Misses Homans and Neely.

Philadelphia, June 24.—Miss Helen Homans of the West Side Tennis club, New York, and Miss Carrie B. Neely of Cincinnati, won the women's doubles lawn tennis championship of the United States yesterday afternoon on the courts of the Cricket club at Wissahickon Heights, defeating in the final round of the national tournament Miss Virginia Maule and Miss Marjorie Oberteuffer of the Merion Cricket club. The victors exhibited excellent team work and were superior at all points to their opponents, who secured but one game in two sets.

GOOD HEAD NEEDED

A Good Arm Not the Only Requisite of a Pitcher.

Many Twirlers With Poor Mechanical Ability Are Stars.

"Griffith has always been a pitcher and one of the very best, simply because he is a brainy pitcher and uses his head as well as the physical ability with which he is so eminently supplied. Griffith has lasted as a pitcher as long as he has because he has used his brain."

There you have it in the words of a leading baseball authority. A pitcher must be a man of head as well as arm; a pitcher is a living refutation of the old charge that baseball is a game requiring only nimble legs and sharp eyes to play it.

And that's right.

McGinnity of the champion Giants was pitching against the Cincinnati Reds. Miller Huggins got in a scratch hit over to end field. The next time Huggins came to the bat McGinnity gave the sign for an outcurve. The ball was knocked into the left fielder's hands; he did not have to move a step. When Huggins picked up the stick for the third time McGinnity again signed for an outcurve, and again the ball soared into the left fielder's hands.

It takes brains to control the ball in this fashion, for control of the sphere means knowledge of cause and effect, and arm alone cannot impart this knowledge.

"Smiling Mickey" Walsh will always be remembered in New York as one of the two men who won the pennant for the metropolis in 1889, "Tim" Keefe being the other. "Mickey" had a slow ball that was almost unhittable. In addition he had a way of ceaselessly smiling while in the box. Deliberate delivery and studied grin so tantalized the batsmen that most of them would lose their patience and temper and hit at the sphere too soon or too late, with the customary fatal results.

Here were head and arm combined.

Talk to any old ball player about the man in the box and before long he will be telling you of pitchers who have lost their mechanical ability long since, but are still in the game. Express astonishment at the revelation and the reply will come forth:

"Yes, their delivery is dinky, but they've kept their places through headwork. They don't depend on their arms alone. They couldn't. But they win victories where pitchers equipped with splendid arms only couldn't simply because they study the situation and act in the light of it."

Quite frequently these men of head find recourse in displaying immaculate gall, to the disgust, anger, and, finally and logically, discomfiture of their opponents. Right along they do not pitch a single ball without having a certain purpose in mind. In this they are like the brainy pitcher with tip-top mechanical ability, who, if there is a man on first and another on second, will not send toward the batsman the same sort of ball that he would if third held a runner.

It takes head to know how different kinds of balls will act under constantly varying circumstances, and which kind to throw and where to throw, at the psychological moment. It takes head to realize the effect of each different sort of ball on the arm; it takes head so to vary delivery that the arm will not become glass at a critical moment. The ball cannot be controlled without study, any more than book learning can be without it, and study, as we all know, to our sorrow, takes brains. Not practice alone will make perfect in throwing different balls. McGinnity, who holds the secret of the underhand raised ball, spent the greater part of four years in acquiring it. He says that he consumed more gray matter over the problem than he has over any other one thing to date. "Billy" Rhines of Cincinnati, who partially mastered this ball ten years ago, wrinkled his brows over it constantly and finally had to give up the task, because, as he confessed, he could not study it out. And "Billy" had a wonderful arm.

Practically every ball other than the straight ball has been brought forth as a result of diligent study; or if accident has partially led to its discovery, study alone has developed it; the spit ball, for example.

"The pitcher is the most important factor in the actual game of baseball," says a high authority. "He is 80 per cent of the team. A star pitcher can win with a mediocre team back of him."

It is head as well as arm that makes this true to a great extent. But not altogether; for, no matter how wonderful an arm a pitcher may be blessed with, or how active a head, he is always dependent, to a certain degree, on the catcher for his reputation.

It is this way: A pitcher, by reason of his position, has the greater part of the diamond at his back most of the time. But the entire field is spread out constantly before the catcher's eyes. It is as a map unrolled before him. He knows the positions of the various players at all times; he is able to note, instantly, any tendency toward a change; he is supposed to know, better than any one else, the failings of the different batsmen. Therefore, a pitcher time and again depends upon the catcher to give the signs for the balls which in his judgment will produce the best results under the circumstances. If the catcher's judgment is good, up goes the pitcher in public estimation; if poor, thumbs down for the man in the box!

Shortly after Frank Hahn joined the Cincinnati Reds, he was put in the box to pitch against Delahanty, Lajoie, McFarland, Wolverton and other 300 per cent hitters. Hahn was a youngster, from the old Western league; "Heiny" Peitz, the Reds' catcher was an old stager and acquainted with the devious ways of the heavy hitters. He gave Hahn the sign for every ball; next morning the Cincinnati papers hailed with paroxysms of delight the youngster who had not given Delahanty et al a single hit in nine innings.

Pitchers generally recognize the position that the men who catch their deliveries occupy toward them. So do the catchers. When "Tony" Mullane was twirling for the Reds, and the late "Kid" Baldwin was his partner, it was not an uncommon occurrence for "Tony" to rush up to "Kid" after the game and exclaim, hotly:

"You threw me down! You knew he could hit that ball!"

And Baldwin would coolly reply, as he tugged at a stocking:

"Cheese it, 'Tony.' I'm the man who makes your reputation for you."

On the whole, pitcher and catcher are usually on excellent terms, and, quite frequently, are cronies. Matthewson and Bowerman of the champion Giants are examples. They are known among their teammates as inseparables; what's one's tothers, and, besides, swearing fealty in the ordinary way, both are members of the same secret society lodge.

If this friendly condition did not prevail, the lot of the manager would be a great deal more arduous than it now is; for, among other things, every pitcher knows that his catcher watches him with an eagle eye in the preliminary workout, and if he does not come up to his usual form therein, the manager's attention is called to the fact, with the result generally that another pitcher is ordered into the box at the last minute.

Many stories are told of the efforts of team managers and magnates to secure new pitchers; one of the best is from the lips of Charles W. Murphy, assistant secretary of the New York Baseball club.

During the course of one of the seasons, when Mr. Murphy was sporting editor of a Cincinnati paper, he soon noticed that among the telegraphic reports of baseball games played throughout the state there were always sure to be two or three a week, telling of the pitching prowess of a certain Amos Scott. One night the account would run in some such fashion as this: "Amos Scott pitched today for Bethel, and defeated the Batavia team, striking out nineteen men and allowing the Batavians only three safe hits." Two or three nights later the account of Scott's feats would be even more glowing. Naturally, in the course of time, Mr. Murphy conceived a great respect for Amos Scott and his good right arm.

About the middle of the season the Reds, Mr. Murphy's home team, struck a bad streak. Try as they would, the boys were unable to shake off the hoodoo pursuing them. Everybody was in despair, when a news report from Bethel suddenly reminded Mr. Murphy of the redoubtable Amos Scott. Straightway he sought out Mr. John T. Brush, the Reds' owner.

"Look here, Mr. Brush," said Mr. Murphy, "I think I know the man who can pull the Reds out of the hole they're in."

"Tell me about him—quick!" shouted Mr. Brush.

"Send to Bethel for Amos Scott," was the answer, as the editor spread before the magnate's eyes the sporting pages recounting the wondrous feats of Amos Scott of Bethel.

That day an emissary was dispatched to Bethel to make terms with its great pitcher, and in less than a week he was in the city, a full-fledged Cincinnati Red.

The night before he was to accompany the team East, where he was to make his bow as a major leaguer, Amos Scott dropped in to thank Mr. Murphy for suggesting his name to Mr. Brush. Grateful to the core, he took up a valuable half hour of his benefactor's time, then started to go, when Mr. Murphy bethought himself of a question—a natural one for an editor to ask.

"By the way, do you know our correspondent in Bethel?" mentioning his name.

"Do I?" grinned Amos Scott. "Sure! I'm your correspondent there—that is, I was till I came here."

Suddenly a great light dawned on Mr. Murphy. Dazzled by it a moment, he sat silent. Then he said, as he reached out and shook Amos Scott's hand in farewell:

"Well, if you're half as good a pitcher as you are a press agent, you're a wonder."

"But," adds Mr. Murphy, with a far-away look in his eyes, whenever he tells the tale, "he was—a frost."

This tale reveals the fact that there are many ways of discovering new pitchers. One of the surest is for the team manager to keep his eyes on the various occupants of the pitcher's box whenever his team goes on a barnstorming trip at the end of the season. Bob Ewing was found in this way at Wapakoneta, O., where, in the parlance of the game, he made monkeys out of the Queen City boys. Bob had not left the grounds after the game when he was asked to sign with the Reds. He is still with them, and his arm is every bit as wonderful as it was during the game in which he caused the Reds to rub their eyes in sheer astonishment over his cures and their inability to find them. Year before last Bob gave the Giants only one hit in one of the games he pitched against them.

Of late years the managers have learned to watch the various college teams for promising material for the box. Mathewson of the champion Giants, before he went to the Roanoke team, twirled the sphere for Bucknell college. He entered the National league by way of Cincinnati, after he had carried the sobriquet of "The Wizard of the Minor Leagues." It is the exception when a college ball tosser graduates direct into a major league team; the big managers prefer to see him tried out first in a minor league But the moment he proves his college prowess not ephemeral, that moment he becomes an object of intense interest to major league managers.

Not infrequently a manager discovers that a rival has failed to realize the potential twirling powers of a certain pitcher, and a dicker is slyly entered into by the discoverer which puts him in possession of the player, to the subsequent sorrow of the other. A case at point is that of Frank Hahn. When he was in the Detroit team of the old Western league he was looked upon as a fair pitcher. Along came the Reds one day; their manager sized up Frank and the possibilities that lay dormant within him, and in short while numbered him among his players. Frank speedily proved himself to be a star southpaw.

The moral of this is that sometimes it is not necessary for a manager to look further than his nose for a "discovery" that will make the bleachers ring with shouts of hilarious joy.

Whenever a bonafide discovery is made numerous tales always follow of the new and passing strange sorts of balls the "discovery" can pitch—balls which will surely revolutionize the game. Let it all be set down to advertising purposes. Many of the different sorts of balls which are supposed to emanate from the pitcher's box are thrown from the fertile brains of press agents, and nowhere else. Here is a list of the different balls actually being pitched today, some, of course, having their variations:

The out curve, first of the curved balls; the in-shoot, which next developed; the drop ball, which followed the in-shoot; the fast straight ball; the slow ball, which appeared when pitchers began to use their heads as well as their arms; the under-hand raised ball, which only McGinnity of the champion Giants has mastered; cutting the corners, dating back about fifteen years; the cross-fire delivery, which is pitched by very few twirlers, and the spit ball, of recent origin and much potency.

This list was furnished by one of the leading pitchers of the country, and a second O. K.'d it. Both asked that their names be not used. "We don't want to get in bad repute with our fellow twirlers," was the excuse they offered.

TURF EVENTS OF FRIDAY

Memphis, Tenn., June 24.—Favorites were beaten in five of the six events at Montgomery Park, yesterday. Jake Ware, Fargo, Joe Lesser and the Regent, all at less than evens, suffered defeat, while Monaco Maid in the sixth at prohibitive odds, scored for the talent.

Buffalo, June 24.—Silver Sue, Scarfell, Halifax and Don't Ask Me were the heavily played favorites at Kenilworth Park, yesterday. Collegian was overlooked in the betting and won the steeple-chase easily.

New York, June 24.—Go Between, backed from 2 to 1 to 8 to 5, won the Thistle stakes, the feature of the card at Sheepshead bay, yesterday. Go Between was entered to be sold for $2,800 and when he was offered for sale Alex Shields, whose St. Valentine ran third, continued bidding until he secured the horse for $7,000. The track was heavy and four favorites won.

St. Louis, June 24.—Delmar track was deep in mud from the heavy rains, and the mud larks had the advantage. Only one favorite won, yesterday. Mynheer at 1 to 2, in the fifth race. Mark Gumpperts and two assistants were arrested on the charge of violating the anti-betting laws.

AFTER FAKE MERCHANTS.

Dairy and Food Department to Prosecute Them.

The state dairy and food department is evidently strong after that type of business man known as "boxcar merchant." It is claimed that these fellows not only give short weight, but sell adulterated food, and are not as easily located and prosecuted as though they had definite places of business.

The dairy and food department is sending letters to business men in the small towns of the state, urging them to organize against these boxcar merchants, and report their actions to the department. On receipt of such report an inspector will be sent at once to investigate the matter.

The department has a better chance to handle these people since the passage of the Lauritsen law by the recent legislature.

THE RUSSIAN SICK MAY LEAVE MANILA.

Washington, June 24.—In response to a request cabled the war department by the governor general of the Philippine Islands, in behalf of the Russian admiral, Enquist, to be allowed to return his sick and wounded officers and men upon giving their parole not to engage in hostilities during the war, and to be allowed to bring certain material for repairing damaged ships, the secretary has sent the following cablegram:

"You may allow Russian admiral to embark his sick and wounded officers and men on Russian hospital ship, daily expected, upon their giving parole not to engage in hostilities during the war. You may also allow them to bring from Shanghai material for repairing vessels, other than munitions of war, such as cordage, sail cloth, waste and oil, for machinery, etc., but the vessels are still to remain in internment."

BLOOD POISON is the worst disease on earth, yet the easiest to cure when you know what to do. Many have pimples, spots on the skin, sores in the mouth, ulcers, falling hair, bone pains, catarrh and don't know it is BLOOD POISON. Send to DR. BROWN, 937 Arch St., Philadelphia, Penn., for BROWN'S BLOOD CURE, $2.00 per bottle; lasts one month. Sold in Duluth only by Max Wirth, 13 W. Sup. St.

WILL THE TROTTING QUEEN LOWER HER RECORD THIS YEAR?

LOU DILLON, 1:58½, WITH MILLARD SANDERS DRIVING.

The coming of Lou Dillon from her winter quarters in California has caused many of the leading trainers and drivers of the Grand Circuit to enter into discussion as to the probability of the trotting queen lowering her own world's trotting mile mark from 1:58½, and many arguments have been entertained into. Ed Geers, the veteran driver, thinks that Lou Dillon will never equal the record with which she is credited. Neither does he forecast better than a two-minute mark for Major Delmar. Lou Dillon's great rival of last year, but now the property of C. K. G. Billings, owner of the trotting queen.

NOT EASY TO LIFT

Wespers' Hard Task to Win Grand Challenge Cup.

International rowing will receive quite a lot of attention for the next month or so and the eyes of the rowing world will be turned toward the Vesper Boat club crew and its efforts to lift the Grand Challenge cup at Henley. If they are successful the lads from the Quaker City will have achieved a feat unparalleled in the annals of boat racing, for the "Grand," as it is familiarly known is the most famous rowing prize in the world. American, Canadian and German crews have tried again and again for the prize, but all have gone down to defeat.

In 1878 occurred the first Amreican attack on the trophy, when the Shoe-cae-mettes crosser to Henley. They showed wonderful speed on this side, and even in their practice work on the Thames, but when the crucial test came they were found wanting in the true principles of waterman-ship.

Then in succession came the universities of Cornell, Yale and Pennsylvania and the Argonauts of Toronto, and all with the same story. They were very good, but not quite good enough to loosen the Grand from its pedestal. Neither did Yale nor Cornell reach the finals, and only this honor can be credited to Pennsylvania. This crew was the most likely ever turned out from Pennsylvania, and after having beaten Cornell, Columbia and Wisconsin at Poughkeepsie it was trained specially for Henley the following year.

When they appeared on the Thames the Pennsylvanians were greatly admired by the English critics, and admitted to be the most likely crew ever sent over from America. They proved equal to the good opinion and won the first ties in brilliant fashion. Their real test had yet to come, for Leander had also disposed of two opponents and made the final. The tussle between Leander and Pennsylvania was one of the grandest ever seen for the cup. The Quakers led for about 600 yards, when Leander, without any apparent effort, crawled up and took the lead and kept it to the finish, winning by a length.

The Grand Challenge cup is one of the two original prizes presented to the Henley regatta in 1839, and the Leander Rowing club has been closely identified with its history, having won it oftener than any other English crew. But its efforts for the cup have not been all plain sailing. The London Rowing club came to Henley some forty years ago to show that a man need not necessarily be from one of the big colleges to be a good oarsman, and it proved the contention emphatically. In 1857 it defeated Oxford, but was beaten by Cambridge in 1858. In 1859 it trimmed both Oxford and Cambridge for the Grand, and since then no 'varsity crew has been entered as such at Henley, yet the different colleges have figured prominently in the regatta.

In 1875, Leander, after lying dormant for many years, won the Grand with seven Cantabs and one Oxonian in the boat. The next year they tried and failed, but in 1880 were successful with seven Oxonians and one Cantab rowing. Since then Leander has been regarded as a club specially designed for college men, and the crews have always been selected on the plan of 1875 and 1876, but, though good, the pick of the undergraduates did not save them from defeat, for the London R. C. beat them in 1881, and in 1883, 1884 and 1885 they were beaten by Twickenham, though the latter never won the final. In 1888 and 1889 Thames R. C. took a fall out of Leander, but it may be said since 1890 they have had matters their own way. From 1880 to the present day—a period of twenty-five years—there have been only two years —1882 and 1886, when Leander has not been represented by a crew at Henley.

The entry of a foreign crew for the Grand always puts Leander on its mettle, and this year is not an exception. Other crews will, of course, figure in the entry list, such as Thames, London, New College, Oxford and maybe Jesus, so that the Vespers will have the hardest sort of a task ere they reach the final, and the crew will have to be lengths faster than at Paris, St. Louis or at any time during its career.

The regatta takes place on July 4, 5 and 6, giving time to the Vespers for some practice in English water. Out of a squad of twenty who tried for the crew the Vespers have taken eleven oarsmen, with President Thorn and Joe Dempsey as rigger and coach. This makes a party of thirteen, but the Vespers regard the number thirteen as their beacon light. When they went to Paris and won the world's championship they numbered thirteen, sailed on the 13th of the month and incidentally there was a thirteen in everything they did subsequently.

While it is admitted on all sides that the Vespers crew could be a little stronger, and that with more of the old hands, still many people think that those selected will have a fair chance. Each oarsman has had good experience in racing and there is not the least doubt that every one will prove himself out to the last ounce of his power. Of the eleven chosen the most important man is John Ogden Exley, "gentleman farmer" and stroke. From his long years of experience in the position he is suited to the task, being besides a scientific oarsman. He stroked the Paris eight, the St. Louis eight and every big eight the Vespers had for years. He is a tireless, lanky, wiry handler of the ashen blade and knows the full gamut about pace, time and all the fine points of racing.

Charles Ewing Armstrong, who will in all likelihood fill No. 7 seat, is a "salesman to Armstrong, Wilkins & Co." He rowed in Vespers junior crew of 1902 which defeated the Fairmounts in a race on the Schuylkill, winning his spurs for an intermediate eight which won their event in the Grand Army regatta at Washington. In the following year he sat in three winning crews and rowed in the St.Louis crew last year.

Harry Lott is a "medical student" and has been rowing at No. 6. He stroked the Vespers junior crew which was beaten by the Maltas two years ago and was stroke of the Vespers crew of '03 which won on the Potomac at Washington. Lott also occupied the same position in the gig crew which defeated the Crescents and the eight shell which won from the University of Pennsylvania in the American Rowing association regatta last year.

T. Robert Johnson, "attorney and graduate of Yale," is a slashing oarsman and football player. He takes Williams' place at No. 5. His early lessons in sweep handling were at the Wachusett Boat club on Lake Quinsigamond. He showed his worth as an oarsman by earning a seat in the varsity crew.

James S. Flanigan, "clerk in Armstrong, Wilkins & Co.," has been constantly at No. 4 and although but a young man is a powerful oarsman. He rowed in the junior eight which won on July 4. Flanigan rowed on the crew which was sent to St. Louis.

Frank A. Schell, No. 3, "clerk in clothing firm," has been rowing since was a student at the Roman Catholic high school. He joined the Fairmount Rowing club in 1900, and rowed on a crew which won on Memorial day in the Harlem regatta. The following year he joined the Vespers and made one of a double scull which won on the Harlem, and in 1902 one of a four-oared crew which was successful.

Daniel M. Gleason, "assistant superintendent of a contracting firm," rows at No. 2. His history is but a repetition of Armstrong's, as he rowed on the same crews, the juniors and intermediates of 1902, and in the St. Louis crew.

Rosco C. Lockwood, "private secretary to superintendent of public works," is the bow oar. He began his career in 1896 by securing a junior single scull race at Washington and the same year was third to Ed Ten Eyck in the championship. In 1899 he was a member of the West Philadelphia Boat club and joined the Vespers in 1900. That year he rowed on the junior crew which won on navy day.

The coxswain is Louis C. Abell, "salesman for Rhone & Co.," and he has eleven years' experience in the tall of a boat. He steered the Paris and St. Louis crews to victory and has a string of fifty-six wins to his credit.

The two substitutes are Morris L. Williams, "attorney at law," who is a graduate of Pennsylvania, where he rowed in the 'varsity boat and James B. Juvenal, who will probably land on seat No. 5. He is the strongest oarsman in the boat and rowed in all the big races. Juvenal had a try for the big races. Juvenal had a try for the Diamond sculls at Henley, but was unsuccessful.

POSTPONE RACES

Boat Club Regatta to Be Held Next Saturday.

Program of Races Will Be Arranged By Coaches.

Owing to the fact that the alterations in the cafe have not yet been completed and the new racing shells have not been set up, the club regatta of the Duluth Boat club, which was to have been held today, has been postponed until next Saturday.

Four new shells, two four and two doubles, arrived this week, and are being fitted up. The equipment of the club now consists of two eight-oared shells, five four-oared shells and barges, three doubles, and a number of working boats.

During the coming week crews will be selected by the coaches to man as many of these as possible, and a program of races will be arranged for Saturday afternoon. The regular eight will be pitted against a "dub" eight composed of substitutes and some of the old oarsmen who are not rowing regularly this year. The regular course of a mile and five-eighths, will be rowed with the finish opposite the boathouse.

Following the races a supper will be served, and the members will enjoy an informal dance following it.

More enthusiasm is shown in the training for the approaching regatta with Winnipeg and St. Paul, Thursday evening no less than twenty-four men were in the shells. The eight, three, fours, and two doubles were rowing under the direction of three of the coaches in a gasoline launch.

The eight is now being sent over the course every evening, timed by the coaches. The time is kept secret from the oarsmen and none but the coaches know how good or how poor time is being made.

The greatest need of the club now appears to be two or three good four-oared crews. There is only one four which has been rowing regularly together. It is composed of new men, but they all have plenty of weight and steam, and if they continue to improve at the present rate, will be heard from. With the new equipment, however, at least two or more four-oared shells could be entered in the regatta, and all that is wanted is men to man them and train together regularly from now until the regatta.

RESERVE RULE

Must Be Kept By Baseball Leagues, Says Murnane.

Ban Johnson Still on the Trail of Griffiths.

Boston, June 24.—President Ban Johnson is anxious to have the next meeting of the National commission held in one of the cities controlled by the American league, claiming that Cincinnati, a National league stronghold, has had more than her share of these important meetings.

The meeting to be held soon will most likely be the most important held since the adoption of the present national agreement, and the American league has good reason to feel apprehensive, for it will show just where the parties now working under a peace compact stand.

Chairman Herrmann has naturally picked Cincinnati as the meeting place, as it is convenient and one of the liveliest cities in the West, and with Herrmann doing the honors, a good time was assured, and the business, too, went off smoothly. This certainly was good cardplaying from a National league standpoint, but the press reports, while perfectly able and fair, were by writers wholly in sympathy with the National league and often distasteful to the younger organization, and this no doubt is the main reason why President Johnson would like to work a new field.

I doubt if Chairman Herrmann will be called on to vote on any question brought up, as Messrs. Johnson and Pulliam are practically together in their desire to rid the game of any avowed trouble makers, and will consider carefully all evidence against individuals charged with a desire to break the national agreement while working under and receiving the benefits of the same. Strange but true, that every member of the so-called board of strategy has found the going this season anything but profitable from his baseball enterprises. The American league has not been slow to make a note of this fact, and, feeling that all were set enemies of the American, has mapped out a course to pursue in the future toward these people.

The American league has decided to find out, if possible, just who are the men willing to continue in peace.

If a majority of the National league magnates have tired of the peace conditions, and the American league can be assured of this fact, all that Ban Johnson has to do is to raise his hand and another battle will be on in earnest, for the American magnates sometimes chafe under the thought that all parties to the national agreement are not dealing from the top, but working to better their conditions at the expense of the American league.

The scheme mapped out to make trouble for the Johnson organization was to organize a new major league through the Class A leagues, and the move found willing workers in Messrs. Hanlon, Stallings and George Tebeau, with one well-known National league magnate as the chess player of the party. At one time early last fall it was thought possible to launch the new ship this spring, but the planks were not properly greased and the plans must be revised, and no doubt at this moment baseball kite flyers are thinking hard by day and night just how to win this battle against the American league, as it means an ally for the Nationals.

Were Ban Johnson a man who sleeps on his oars the trick might have long since been turned, but the leader of the American is a regular Oyama, and, well knowing the men he has to contend with, is ever on the alert. The American league has nothing to fear from men with clean baseball records, but will be the object for the scheming baseball politicians, who are few but very clever, and can often raise a mountain of smoke out of one little cannon cracker.

Washington was picked out as one of the cities of the new league, but the new management and success of the club in that city have killed all chance of success against the American league there. It has been proved that a winning team will make Washington one of the very best baseball towns in major league company, and from this out the best of the big leagues is what they must have in that city.

I do not agree with Fred Tenney when he says that the two major leagues are the cause of light batting this season, as the great batsmen are scattered, and there are not enough good players to make up two major leagues. The fact is that men with reputations as great batsmen are well down the list this season, and it's the young players who are surprising the fans with their good stick work.

The pitchers are using more curves or speed than ever this season, with the exception of the spit ball, and yet the great players are not finding the ball. In some cases it's a case of working on each man's weakness, and then the pick of the pitchers are gathered into the big leagues, and each pitcher has some particular club that his is effective against. If each club was forced to start the season and go through with the same box men they started with the batting would improve and be an even thing all round.

Something must be done in the major leagues to improve the chances of the batsmen, for baseball without hitting is like eggs without the yolk. Men are not striking out so much as formerly, simply because most players have shortened their stroke, and try to meet the ball instead of aiming to knock out home runs.

Even the great hitters like Wagner and Lajoie, have fallen off, and now are finding much difficulty in meeting the ball fair. Both are free hitters, and give a good line on the department now going to the dogs. Some one suggested that the ball be made a shade larger and the pitcher placed five feet further back. This would, no doubt, increase the batting about 10 per cent, but would make it hard on the pitchers, who are now fit for the hospital after pitching three games in one week. In the early days of the game the hitting was so fierce that an extra infielder was tried playing between second and first, called the right short stop. This brought too many men close together and was soon discarded as a failure, and the ball was deadened to cut down the large scores. Next came the live ball to increase the batting.

The death this week in Boston of Frank Winslow brings to mind the Union association of 1884. Mr. Winslow was one of the original stockholders and finally the principal backer of the Boston club, dropping about $15,000 for his trouble.

The Union grounds were built on a sand pit and are now covered by an armory within two minutes' walk of the public library in the swell Back Bay district.

The members of the Union team were picked up from the open play grounds about Boston. Lew Brown died several years ago; Tom Bond and Dupee Shaw are alive here in Boston. Bond was a famous league pitcher before he went to the Unions. Ed Crane, the greatest distance thrower in the world, died a few years ago. Tom O'Brien, the second baseman, is now managing the Birmingham team in the Southern league with snowy white hair. Walter Hackett, the short stop is a printer here in Boston. John Irwin, the third baseman, is now a college team down in Maine. Tommy McCarthy is running a bowling alley and restaurant in Boston. Mike Slattery died here last winter and Frank Butler is living in Boston. Washington, Cincinnati and Chicago were all in the original make-up of the circuit, Chicago turning a cold shoulder to the proposition from the start, while Washington and Cincinnati finished the season.

KEPT ORDER WITH A BRICK.

Row In Good Roads Convention Over President.

Portland, Or., June 24.—For a time, yesterday, two rival presidents tried to control the Good Roads convention and pandemonium reigned. President Moore having refused to allow an election of officers to be held, Secretary Richardson appointed a telling committee to canvass the vote of the delegates as to the presidency. The result was a vote of 69 to 5 in Richardson's favor. Richardson immediately assumed a position beside President Moore, who would not withdraw. Standing side by side, Moore using his wooden gavel and Richardson rapping for order with a brick, both tried to direct the convention. Finally J. H. Scott, of Salem, Or., was made temporary chairman, and Moore and Richardson withdrew. A committee was appointed to draft a new constitution to be submitted tomorrow.

THE PASSENGERS ON ELECTRIC CAR ROBBED.

Chicago, June 24.—The passengers on a Chicago-Milwaukee electric car, were robbed by two men last night while the car was passing through the suburbs of Winnetka, fifteen miles north of this city. The men stopped the car at Winnetka avenue, a lonely place, and after compelling the motorman to stop the car, they searched the passengers and the motorman and conductor. They took small sums of money from the passengers and all his money from the conductor, obtaining in all about $65. They secured one gold watch from the motorman. After robbing the passengers the men jumped into a buggy which they had in waiting and drove rapidly away.

SULLIVAN TO FIGHT

Britt on July 18 Before the Hayes Valley Club.

Battling Nelson Very Sore Over Being Turned Down.

San Francisco, June 24.—There is no longer any doubt as to who will be Jimmy Britt's next opponent. Choice has fallen upon "Kid" Sullivan. The Hayes Valley A. C. has not only fixed the date, but has forwarded railroad transportation for two to Baltimore. It is expected that Herford and his piebald stable will soon arrive and that Sullivan and Joe Gans will be seen doing work in the neighborhood of Shannon's villa, San Rafael, before many days pass. The contest will take place on the evening of July 18, and the weight is to be 133 pounds at 3 o'clock on that date.

Apart from what the mill itself may develop there will surely be turmoil over the signing of Britt and Sullivan. Battling Nelson gave the first inkling of what is coming when he began to shout a week ago: "Britt is afraid of me. Britt is trying to crawl." This was when he was endeavoring to intimidate Britt and deter him from making the match.

But Bat is a mild-mannered, mealy-mouthed individual compared to his manager, Billy Nolan. One trembles to think of what Nolan will have to say when he reaches San Francisco a week or two hence and finds everything in connection with the Britt-Sullivan match going as merry as a marriage bell.

The last time the contest between Britt and Nelson fell through it was Nolan's fault, by the way, for demanding a rearrangement of the terms. Nolan accused Willie Britt of trying to fix the fight. If there are any other skeletons in the pugilistic closet Nolan will be sure to trot them out when he arrives on the scene. Meanwhile an air of determination envelops the Britts and they declare that they are ready to defend their position with Nelson, Nolan or any one else.

"Here's my side of it in a nutshell," says Jimmie. "Nelson says to me, 'Now you stay home and be good and I'll come back here and box you in August. Meanwhile go East and try and lift a few purses along the six-round circuit.' Isn't that gally? We are all growing old, and money, like time, is a fleeting commodity. I want some of it myself, and what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. If Nelson has a right to make other matches while our affair hangs fire so have I.

"Yes, a nd I'll get around to Nelson after a while, too. We'll meet as sure as fate, and the best way for him to hasten matters is to cut his Eastern tour and come back to the coast."

Willie Britt endorses what Jimmie says, and adds: "Wouldn't that cry of Jimmy being afraid nauseate you? Is there anything in his record since he graduated from the Olympia club boxing squad to suggest that he is afraid of anything his weight that carries itself on two legs?"

As before, the sports are inclined to take sides in this Britt-Nelson controversy. Britt's critics speak of a pugilist's duty to the public," the argument being, I suppose, that the public would rather see Britt and Nelson in action than either man and some one else. Britt has a right to thrust every other consideration aside and make the match.

It appears to me that a full-sized debate could be held on the subject of a fighter's duty to the public. As a starter I should say that a bruiser's principal duty is to box honestly at all times when striving for the money furnished by the public. Whether he has a right to regulate his affairs the same as any other business man and give prior attention to the venture which involve the least risk is one of the debatable points.

There isn't much of a bond between a professional pugilist and the public. A champion goes into the ring bowing and smiling and the public greets him effusively. One little swat on the point of the chin will change it all, though. Then the roars of approval are transferred to the other fellow, and the champion is carried to his dressing room a back number. The knowledge that he always did his duty to the public may be some solace to him, but it won't earn him lasting regard. The sporting world has no use for has-beens. If you don't believe me ask yours truly, always on the level, John L. Sullivan, who is talking himself to death along the vaudeville route while no one seems to listen.

The Colma club, which had Clancy and Peterson for its opening card, is in hopes of putting Frankie Neil and Harry Tenny in the ring next Saturday night. Tenny is one of our precocious amateurs, and, according to the experts, he will make a better match for Neil than Dick Hyland did. Hyland has to fight a few pounds below his best weight to accommodate Neil, but the Tenny youngster won't have to do that. He makes 115 pounds naturally, and, it is said, punches with the vim of a welterweight. He has a dangerous right hand, and seldom fails to get his man early in the engagement. When he posed as a four-round specialist he generally managed to land the decision with a knock-out punch before the fourth round was reached.

The wrangel in regard to the permits still continues, and it may be that this fact more than any other will have to do with keeping Britt and Nelson apart. The Western club wants the August permit and has applied for it. So has the San Francisco club. So has the Yosemite. It is understood that each club has the Britt-Nelson fight in view, but Britt's affiliations with the Western club are said to be of such a nature that that organization may be able to hold him off from signing with one of the others on the plea that if it fails to land the August permit it will surely obtain the one for September.

By throwing up the sponge and hiking back East with his pet lion Bob Fitzsimmons has created the suspicion that he has reached the end of his tether as a fighter at last.

"GET RICH QUICK" SCHEMERS ARRESTED.

Chicago, June 24.—Justus W. Lobb, president of the Continental Finance company, was arrested last night on a federal warrant charging him with using the mails in a scheme to defraud, and in the conduct of a lottery. Henry Wulff, the treasurer of the company and ex-treasurer of the state of Illinois, was made the object of a warrant but was not taken into custody, he agreeing to appear in court with his bondsmen. The Continental Finance company was several days ago placed in the hands of a receiver, on the complaint of people who had invested money in the concern on the promise of quick and large returns which they had, in many instances, never received.

In "Sawdust: A Polish Romance of the Carpathian Timberlands," Dorothea Gerard (Mme. Longard de Longarde) has written a novel which is scarcely less romantic than the story of her own interesting career. The stream of golden sawdust ceaselessly pouring from the sawmill of Josef Mayer, the rich German lumber merchant, runs figuratively through the whole story. "Sawdust" is an unusual and vivid story, intensely modern in its treatment, although the scene is laid in a little-known corner of the world. The German who invades the peaceful forests of Carpathia with his restless industrialism is admirably characterized as a tirelessly working self-made man. His son, Rudolf, with finer sensibilities and with no less strength, proves irresistibly attractive to the daughter of the ruined former landholder. She is a charming girl, Katinka, and the reader's sympathy goes out to her as to a real person. The Count, her father, though impoverished by the business cunning of the German, is finely drawn as a gentleman. Although the masterful German apparently forces his way over all obstacles, he reckons without one hidden force, which brings the story to a dramatic climax. Published by the John C. Winston company, Philadelphia.

"How to Read and What to Read," by Sherwin Cody, is an attractively printed and very daintily bound book from the Old Greek Press, Chicago. We have had advice enough about how and what to read from Ruskin, in his delightful essay "Sesame and Lilies," through Sir John Lubbock (now Lord Avebury), with his Hundred Best Books, Frederick Harrison on books and reading, and half a dozen other eminent personages. The trouble with all these lists has been that they are prepared from the scholar's, not from the average man's point of view. Will the average busy business man leave his daily paper to read Homer, Theocritus, or Thomas a Kempis? Certainly not, and to tell him these are the best books which he ought to read is like telling him of the European royal crown jewels, which he ought to wear. Both are alike beyond the possibilities for him.

Sherwin Cody's little book is not of this kind. He claims to recommend only books that the average man is likely to find interesting. He confines himself to novels, poems and essays within the reach of the English reader, and to be purchased at any bookstore for a few cents, or borrowed from a library. Best of all, he shows in detail just how to read these books so as to find them interesting.

Alfred Henry Lewis, who spent some six years in the Pan Handle of Texas and in New Mexico "punching cows," gained a practical knowledge of the cattle range and the life of the earlier "cow towns," which accounts perhaps in part for the welcome given his new book, "The Sunset Trail," just published by A. S. Barnes & Co. In this case an author is certainly able to write out of experience of which he has been a part.

Frederick Upham Adams' new book, "John Henry Smith," is a golf novel written with the whimsical humor that characterized "The Kidnaped Millionaires." The action of the story takes place in the open, and a love story develops on the links. Millionaires, philosophical farmers, a remarkable "hired man" and pretty girls figure in the story. An incidental feature is a duel between a Panhard Motor car and a bull. The book is copiously illustrated by A. B. Frost, who has done a remarkable group of pictures in that he carried out successfully the somewhat unique idea of making the pictures appear as if drawn by the narrator of the story.

Especially timely, in view of the recent Chicago riots, is a volume by Lyman Abbott, just from the press of George W. Jacobs & Co., entitled "The Industrial Problem." The volume is divided into four sections, dealing respectively with the industrial problem: the political solution—regulation; the economic solution—reorganization; and the ethical solution—regeneration. Dr. Abbott has a masterly grasp of his subject and presents his observations, his deductions, and his theories in such a way that all thinking men and women must give them earnest consideration. His aim is to demonstrate that not in any legislative adjustment, not in any re-arrangement of the world of industry but only in a complete social regeneration lies the true solution of the industrial problem.

Discussion regarding the identity of Sidney McCall has been renewed now that the second book by this author, "The Breath of the Gods," is attracting so much attention. A leading Boston critic states that the pages of "The Breath of the Gods make it definitely clear that the writer who conceals herself under the pen name of Sidney McCall can no longer hide the identity she so successfully kept to herself during the curiosity aroused by the vogue of 'Truth Dexter.' It is perfectly evident that The Breath of the Gods is the work of a writer thoroughly familiar with the Japanese and with the lives they live in their own Japanese homes."

A remarkable order was recently placed by the Mexican government with Charles Scribner's Sons for the printing of one thousand copies of Carl Lumholtz's book called "Unknown Mexico." The book had first to be translated into Spanish under the personal direction of a representative of the Mexican government, but in other respects it was printed and gotten up in exactly the same form and with exactly the same illustrations as the edition in English. "Unknown Mexico" is a record of four years' explorations among the tribes of the Western Sierra Madre—in the Terra Caliente of Tepic, and Taliaco, and among the Tarascos of Midroacan—and the illustrations are from photographs taken by the author, together with some colored plates. President Diaz showed the greatest interest in Professor Lumholtz's expedition, and was of great help to him in all the explorations. They were by far the most important and successful attempts made in recent years to collect information in regard to these practically unknown Mexican tribes.

Philip Verrill Mighels has had a somewhat unusual distinction this past week. An enterprising New York dramatic firm telephoned him at his publishers, the Harpers, to try to secure dramatic rights for his new novel of political life, "The Ultimate Passion," and upon his return home he found awaiting him a letter from a Boston firm requesting permission to dramatize "Bruvver Jim's Baby," which was published a little over a year ago. As a matter of fact, Mr. Mighels was quick to see the possibilities in "Bruvver Jim's Baby," and has prepared the stage version himself, in collaboration with James MacArthur, who, it will be recalled, dramatized "The Bonnie Brier Bush." Those who have read the play declare it to be irresistably funny. All the gems of old If-Only Jim's philosophy are included, and many new bits of humor have been added.

A good deal has been said both for and against the personal character of King Kalakau of Hawaii. Isabel Strong, author of "The Girl From Home," not only in her book but out of it, speaks in his favor. Mrs. Strong may be regarded as an authority. She lived several years in Hawaii and was one of Kalakau's intimate personal friends. She describes him as every inch a king when there was need, but with a little twinkle in his eye for his friends, to show them that he realized he was king of a comic opera empire. Handsome and straight, the flower of the type of Malay manhood, he had the physical qualities to carry off regal dignity. He was a man of infinite accomplishments; above all, a musician, with a fine voice. Often to entertain his court he used to sing native songs to his own accompaniment on the native instrument, the eukalele. Though Mrs. Strong admits there may have been some basis for the stories of his drinking, she feels that they have exaggeratedly belied him. All in all, she found him a true gentleman, a kindly follower of the instincts of noblesse oblige.

A very attractive deaf mute is one of the characters in Charles Egbert Craddock's new novel, "The Storm Centre," which the Macmillan company are about to publish. An interesting story has leaked out in connection with Dwight Tilton's new novel, "My Lady Laughter," that has subjected the illustrator of that romance, Charles H. Stephens, the celebrated Philadelphia artist, to no little trouble and embarrassment. It appears that his search among the models of the City of Brotherly Love for a young woman who would satisfy his conception of Constance Drake, the heroine, was not successful. He was on the point of going to New York to look for what he wanted, when his sister, herself an artist of international reputation, happened to mention her brother's perplexity at a social gathering. A day or two later, Mr. Stephens was visited in his studio by a young woman, who, in addition to being extremely beautiful, enjoys the distinction of belonging to one of Philadelphia's most wealthy and prominent families. She was not noticeably embarrassed, but finally confessed that it had occurred to her to wonder if she would satisfy Mr. Stephens as a model for the work in hand. As both in face and figure she was extremely satisfactory, Mr. Stephens was not reticent in expressing his delight, and the "My Lady Laughter" poster now presents her figure and pose, with such small changes in the face as were calculated to preserve her incognito, this condition having been insisted upon by the young woman's father. When the incident finally became known, Mr. Stephens was besieged by questions as to the identity of his model, but, of course, refused to gratify curiosity. The most peculiar part of the affair is that more than one Philadelphia young woman has tacitly allowed it to be understood that she would not object if she were considered to have been the model in this particular case, although the genuine poser has yet to be mentioned publicly in connection with the affair.

A remarkable collection of photographs, illustrating the development of the Northwest, has been secured by the World's Work for its August issue, which will be a special Northwest number. They represent the best work of a score of photographers, and they interpret every phase of a wonderful empire building. One very unusual group shows, in a series of graphic illustrations, the great activities of the Northwest—mining, lumbering and farming, with all their human interest details. Another shows how the deserts are becoming fruitful, and how a land of waste has become a land of plenty. A third group shows the scenic wonders of the regions, while the fourth is devoted to an exploitation of the cities of Oregon, Washington and Idaho. The Lewis and Clark fair at Portland is the subject of some very striking photographs. Altogether this number will mark the most vivid and picturesque interpretation that the Northwest has yet had.

Recreation for June is filled with good things for the out door people. The leading story, "The Road," by Walter K. Stone, illustrated by the writer and Charles Livingston Bull, contains an urgent appeal to the jaded city sportsman, asking him to turn aside from the beaten paths and explore the byways and highways through the fields and in the woods. The simple story has the tang of unfrequented spots and the lure of wildness, this feeling being well carried out in the number of full page pictures. "Joe's Double Catch," by Don Cameron, is a charming short story, with a country boy and girl and a big trout as the stars. Alvah D. James, the South American explorer, has a short story, "Mr. Peterson of Paris," describing an incident on the Pacific.

An important feature of the current Harper's Weekly is an article exposing the methods by which millions of acres of land are stolen from the United States government, and describing the manner in which the conspirators have been run to earth. President Woodrow Wilson writes of the new experiment in education that is to be tried at Princeton university, with a view to making college work more interesting and profitable. How Japan has thrived on war, commercially as well as politically, is the subject of an informing article. Sydney Brooks writes entertainingly of Mr. Barrie's development as a dramatist. "The Gambler," the exciting new novel by the author of "The Masquerader," is continued in its serial publication; and, in addition to the usual editorial "comment," the important events of the day are described in picture and text. FRANK J. SPRAGUE.

The name of Frank J. Sprague is closely associated with the history of electric traction in this country. He was a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, but his interest in things electrical soon resulted in his resignation from the navy. To Frank J. Sprague belongs the honor of the harnessing of electricity to the street car service. His work in the development of electric traction has been recognized by his appointment as consulting engineer of the Sprague Electric company, of the General Electric company, and of the New York Central; as director of the Societe Francaise Sprague, as a member of the terminal improvement commission of the New York Central, and as president of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, a position from which he has now resigned. To the July Century Mr. Sprague contributes the first of two papers on the electric railway, its beginning, development and future.

CHAS. H. FLETCHER, New York City.

Dear Mr. Fletcher:—I wish to congratulate you on your numerous victories over counterfeiters and imitators of Castoria, and trust the time is not far distant when these inferior and dangerous mixtures will be entirely suppressed.

You are right when you say in your advertisements that it is "Experience against Experiment."

I feel it to be an outrage, and an imposition upon the parents of little children that my name should be associated with imitations of Castoria, dangerous to the health and life of these little ones who too often fight their battles for life in vain.

Let me again commend you for the high standard you have maintained in the preparation of my prescription, and I confidently believe it is due to this scrupulous integrity you are indebted for the wonderful sale of Castoria to-day, and the steady growth it has had since I gave you the details of its mauufacture in my laboratory thirty-three years ago.

THE WESTWARD TREND OF AMERICAN MUSIC

Popular Appreciation of Musical Performances Greater In the West, Although Eastern Schools Maintain Their Leadership—What Calve, Melba and Bimboni Have Said—The Rocky Mountain Voices Excel In Strength and Sweetness.

Boston, June 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Is the musical center of America moving West Mr. Conried director of the Metropolitan Opera company of New York, lately contended that so far as attendance at opera is concerned, San Francisco is far more enthusiastic than Boston. Furthermore, only the other day it was announced that the orchestra conducted by Walter Damrosch would, after a brief outdoor season in New York, go to Chicago, where larger and surer patronage would be found. Immediately some loyal Gothamites set up the cry that Mr. Damrosch would do well if he stayed at home, but to this it was replied that the Chicago engagement was a guaranteed success and the Western city stands ready to support other equally fine organizations during the summer season.

Again, Mme. Calve, the incomparable Carmen, said upon her return to Europe after her last season in this country, that while the East has the best institutions the West has the best sentiment. More recently Mme. Melba, the greatest singer the Orient has ever sent forth to charm the world, remarked that on the whole she much preferred a tour through the United States to a season opera in New York. "You see," she explained, "it is like making new friends to go to a Western city. There is something particularly inspiring in the atmosphere, and the people of the West are so frankly interested in music, too. They remind me of children, they are so lively in their appreciation. I know that Eastern cities, like Boston and New York, are doing the most solid work for the musical art. They have the prestige—the schools and the teachers and the equipment. But so far as the future is concerned I should say that the West is likely to make the greatest progress."

What do the great musical schools show? The oldest and largest one in the land, the New England Conservatory of Music, in this city, was, in the begining, as its name implies, mainly a local institution. Its founder, the late Dr. Eben Tourjee, introduced in to America in 1853 the conservatory system of musical education for the benefit of young people in the northeastern part of the country. At that time no city in the country presumed to claim the title of musical center. Great singers from abroad visited all the important places east of the Mississippi, but bona fide musical institutions, outside of the local singing societies and brass bands, were few and insignificant. It had occurred to Dr. Tourjee that it was time for America to let go the artistic apron strings of Europe. Yet so slow was the public support to rally around him that not until 1870 was he ready to have his New England Conservatory of Music incorporated by the Massachusetts legislature.

Epoch-maker as he was, Dr. Tourjee never dreamed of the tremendous musical development the country was to see in the near future. The first music conservatory in America had a slow beginning. In 1853 Boston was still half Puritan, as New York was still half Knickerbocker, and Philadelphia half Quaker. Washington was hardly more than a political center. Pittsburg and Chicago were villages. Between the Mississippi and the Rockies were rolling prairies and Indian settlements. San Francisco was a small town, with the Vigilantes sternly keeping the upper hand. Today Pittsburg and Chicago have very prominent orchestras, and San Francisco warmly welcomes all the musical companies and virtuosi that care to take the long jaunt across the country.

Before the Civil war the country's only conservatory of music, under Dr. Tourjee's management, found its patronage in and around Boston. That is why, when it came to incorporation it was called the New England Conservatory of Music. For years it had only a handful of pupils. Today it finds support in practically every state in the Union, while its pupils number more than 2,000. Like its great neighbor across the Charles, Harvard university, from a local school it has become a national institution.

For instance, according to its latest summary 23 of its students come from California, 10 from Colorado, 9 from Nebraska, 3 from Nevada, 2 from Montana, 3 from North Dakota, 4 from South Dakota, 3 from Oregon, 15 from Texas, 3 from Utah, 4 from Washington, 4 from Wyoming and 1 from Arizona. So much for the Far West.

The Middle West figures tell an even more interesting story. From Illinois come 21 students, from Indiana 13, from Iowa 19, from Kansas 5, from Michigan 12, from Minnesota 9, from Missouri 8, and from Ohio 41. New York is credited with 65, Pennsylvania with 50, Maine with 50, Connecticut with 31, and Rhode Island 26, while more than 1,200 of the total number in the list represent Massachusetts.

The point that bears on the question of the music center of the country, however, is that whereas half a century ago the country between the Ohio and the Pacific had no pupils in this first of the American music schools, in this latest summary it is given one in about every ten of the 2,000 pupils. The ratio is even more remarkable in regard to the graduating class of 1905, for of the fifty American members eight are from the West. The name of the institution is still justified, for about one-half of the graduates are New Englanders. Nevertheless the growing prominence of the West in music is shown by the circumstance that Iowa, Oregon, Ohio, Michigan, Kansas, Missouri and Texas are represented in the other half.

According to Signor Oreste Bimboni, the celebrated opera conductor, who is in charge of the school of opera at the New England Conservatory of Music, not only is the West to be reckoned with as a powerful factor in the musical development of the country, but the Western singers, he says, have perhaps the most beautiful voices. The American soprano, the English alto, the French basso and the Italian tenor—that is his idea of the highest capacity in music. In the course of a tour made through the United States, a few years ago, Signor Bimboni, then conductor of the Grau-Mapleson Opera company, studied the musical possibilities of the different sections and came to the conclusion that the atmosphere of the West was particularly favorable to the production of fine voices.

The following program is another illustration of the prominence of the West in this conservatory:

Concerto in D major (first movement).....
(Cadenza by Baermann).
Miss Winifred Bryd (Salem, Or.).
Aria from "Herodiade," "Il est doux".....Massenet
Miss Hilda Swartz (Albany, N. Y.).
Concerto in F minor.....Chopin
Miss Georgina Nelson (Colorado Springs, Col.).
Caprice for violin.....Guiraud
Miss Mary Galley (Marion, Ohio.).
Finale of Act II of "Figaro"....Mozart
Miss Grace E. Browne (Cleveland, Ohio.)
Miss Swartz.
Miss Mary E. Williams (Waterville, N. Y.)
Arthur D. Babcock (San Diego, Cal.)
Richard Tobin (Virginia City, Nev.)
Fred Lyman Wheeler (Gardner).
Oscar L. Hogan (Watertown)
Russel G. Randall (Medford)

The records of the New England conservatory show in fact that Westerners themselves are bound to become leaders in music by reason of their success, not as pupils alone, but as teachers. Of course, so large a body of experts as the staff of the New England conservatory must have a cosmopolitan complexion. Many of the professors, therefore, are foreigners. But the graduates of the conservatory are largely American and many of them return home to teach. In this way the West is receiving more and more musical culture through the work of natives of its own mountains and prairies. Besides, Eastern graduates of the conservatory, after their reputation as teachers or virtuosi has become well established, are attracted westward. Boston is to the West in music what Paris is to America in painting and sculpture—the great training school.

It is not likely that there will be any important changes in the valuations of the mining properties of the city at the public meetings of the board of review Monday and Tuesday, as the figures presented by Assessor John Shea at the board's private sessions this week were left practically unchanged. The valuations of a few of the mines have been raised, and those of others have been lowered, bringing the amount to be paid by the mining corporations to about what it was last year. There were no alterations in the valuations of any of the business blocks, nor were there any important changes in other real estate. The board decided to reduce the number of tax exemptions, and has placed the names of all property owners on the roll. Exemptions will be attended to later by the council and concessions will be granted only where they are absolutely necessary. Last year the council decided to publish the names of all persons asking to be exempted. This custom will be continued. CLASS OF 1905 ISSUES THE ZENITH, ANNUAL HIGH SCHOOL PUBLICATION

BOARD OF EDITORS OF THE ZENITH OF 1905.

The Zenith of the class of 1905 has just been issued from the press, and is one of the finest annuals that has been put forth by any class in the high school.

It abounds in handsome drawings, clever sketches, good jokes, several excellent stories, many pictures of the organizations and the class, and much miscellaneous material, and is characterized throughout by new and novel ideas.

The cover is in red and gray, the clas colors, with the body in gray and bearing the word "Zenith" in large red letters, the class numerals, "'05," and a reproduction of the class pin, the whole having a beautiful effect.

Following the frontispiece, an '05 boy, comes a photo of Prof. Church, to whom the book is dedicated, after which is a picture of the Zenith board. The faculty is represented as a wheel, with a pohtograph of Principal Smith taking the part of the hub, while the names of the other members are placed where the spokes would ordinary be placed. The next page contains an excellent view of the high school building, and after this comes the names of the board of education. The Zenith proper is introduced by the words:

"With the greatest of elation at our wonderful creation,
Setting forth to all the nation '05's praise forevermore;
We present this publication, hoping for a salutation
That shall be a compensation for our work, and nothing more;
That in reading you'll be happy, only this, and nothing more."

The class of '05 sets forth its pages of history, jokes, and good wishes, together with the pictures of each member of the class, ocupying about a total of about fifty pages. The other classes have their say, after which the organizations are represented. The athletic association is the principal one of these, about twenty-four pages being devoted to it, conutaining pictures of the football team, the football squad, and of the baseball and hockey teams, each of which is accompanied by a short article written by some member of the association. The Musical society is next, and is followed by the Agassiz and Demosthenes clubs. An account of the preliminary field day is also given.

The programs for the class and commencement night exercises are given, as well as the names of the twelve students who stood first in scholarship for the three and a half years of their high school career. The last part of the annual consists chiefly of miscellaneous material, such as the jokes and chronicles, both of which are exceptionally good.

The prize story is entitled "A Ten-Cent Ring," and was written by Miss Isabelle McLean, while Donald Holmes received an honorable mention for the second best story. James Routh was awarded the prize for the best poem, entitled "The Vikings."

Donald Harris, the editor-in-chief, says that the work of the classes is of an exceptionally high order, both in the writing and the drawing. In the junior class Ruth Ringsted was awarded the prize of $2 for the best story, Madge Miller that of $1 for the best poem, Margaret Mitchell that of $1 for the best frontispiece and Myron Bunnell that of $1 for the best tailpiece. In the sophomore class Margaret Culkins received the prize for the best story, Gerald Eddy that for the poem, Ralph Ely that for the frontispiece and Dale Montgomery that for the tailpiece. In the freshman class Leo Schmied won the prize for the story, Myra Pressnell that for the poem, Mary Weston was given a prize for the frontispiece, and Kathryn Denfeld was awarded the prize for the tailpiece.

Married Women

Every woman covets a shapely, pretty figure, and many of them deplore the loss of their girlish forms after marriage. The bearing of children is often destructive to the mother's shapeliness. All of this can be avoided, however, by the use of Mother's Friend before baby comes, as this great liniment always prepares the body for the strain upon it, and preserves the symmetry of her form. Mother's Friend overcomes all the danger of child-birth, and carries the expectant mother safely through this critical period without pain. It is woman's greatest blessing. Thousands gratefully tell of the benefit and relief derived from the use of this wonderful remedy. Sold by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Our little book, telling all about this liniment, will be sent free.

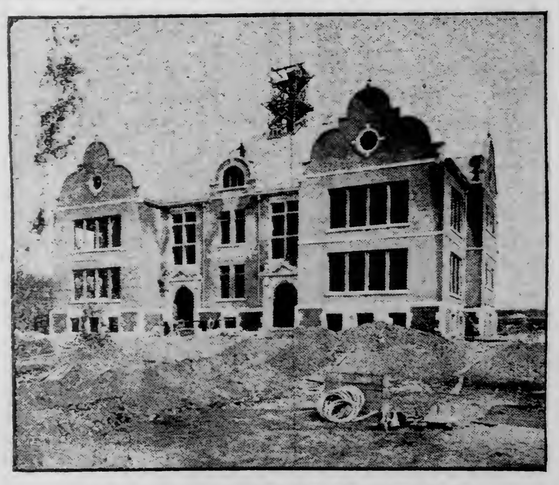
WASHBURN SCHOOL AT HUNTER'S PARK

Will Be One of the Most Beautiful School Buildings In Duluth.



NEW WASHBURN SCHOOL AT GLEN AVON.

The new J. L. Washburn school at Hunter's Park, which is now nearing completion, will be one of the most beautiful school buildings in the city, and a source of pride to the people of that suburb.

The building cost $37,181, exclusive of the lighting, heating and plumbing. With these extras added, the building, when complete, will have cost approximately $50,000.

It contains ten school rooms, in addition to the cloak rooms and lavatories, and will accommodate from 400 to 500 pupils.

A feature of the new building will be the magnificent grounds with which it will be surrounded. A large part of the site was donated by J. L. Washburn, after whom the school was named. The remainder was purchased by the board, and the two pieces of ground combined will give the new school house the largest and most beautiful playground in the city.

The public spirited citizens of Hunter's Park are planning to lay out the grounds in beautiful style when the building has ben completed. Trees, flower and shrubs will be planted, and the beautiful new building will have a most appropriate setting.

Plans for providing a library are also being considered, and when the school year opens in September the Hunter's Park children will, without doubt, have as beautiful and as modern a school buildign as exists in the Northwest.

The building itself is now nearly completed, and the work on the finishing, and the plumbing, heating and lighting contracts is being rushed, under the supervision of the committee on buildings and grounds.

It was planned to have the building completed and ready for occupation by Aug. 1. It is not unlikely that the work will be delayed a little, but there is no question but that everything will be completed before the school year opens in September.

The schol fills a long felt want in the suburbs of Glen Avon and Hunter's Park, and will doubtless accommodate the pupils from that section of the city for years to come.

LITTLE CAUSE TO COMPLAIN

Of Treatment at Hands of the Railroads.

St. Paul, June 24.—In a recent article written by C. J. Whellams setting forth the advantages of the Northwest as a desirable place for the location of manufacturing plants, the writer touches upon the railroad conditions and their relation to the shippers in the state.

Mr. Whellams is secretary of the Northwestern Manufacturer's association and practically voices the sentiment of this body of men which is composed of leading manufacturers of the Northwest. The tenor of his statement is to the effect that the manufacturers have litle or no cause to complain of their treatment at the hands of the railroads operating in the state.

"The average man hardly appreciates the prospects before the Northwest as a whole, with reference to the regions north, west and southwest. The general basis of local and interstate freight rates to and from points in Minnesota is as favorable as any in effect in any state in the union of a corresponding population," said Mr. Whellams.

"Manufacturers will at al times find the railroads not only willing but glad to adjust their transportation charges so as to permit manufacturers within this state to compete with those outside of the state."

ing right foot). As the right hand returns to position, swing the left out sidewise and up over the head, bending the body as far as possible to the right. Do not turn the body, nor learn forward. Inhale and exhale at pleasure. Continue gradually from five to twenty-five times, daily.

LIVER SQUEEZER.

Turn or twist the body, slowly and carefully, left to right and right to left, keeping the body, otherwise, in an erect position. Avoid jerky movements. Continue gradually from five to 15 times, daily. This exercise will stir up a torpid liver and do its work well in one minute.

Resume—(1) 50 times; (2) 25 times; (3) 15 times. Morning, before dressing. Cold bath, or warm, followed with cold. Air or sun bath. Dress. Eat lightly and slowly. Walk erectly. Keep the mouth shut. Be happy and hopeful.

VALUE OF STATE DRAINAGE TO NORTHERN MINNESOTA

given areas will vary nearly in proportion to the fall in feet per mile. In other words, if it casts $1.00 per acre to drain an acre of 14,000 acres having a surface slope of 3 feet to the mile, it will cost approximately $3.00 per acre to drain an equal area where the surface slope is but one foot per mile. The average gradient of the large drainage ditches in Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and Missouri is less than one foot per mile. Some of these ditches have a fall of but 2-10 of a foot per mile; these low gradients must be compensated for by large channels, consequently, the drainage of the swamp lands of the states mentioned costs from three to ten times as much per acre as it does to drain the swamp lands of Minnesota. The swamp lands of Minnesota are more productive than the swamp lands of the Southern states, the sanitary conditions here are much more favorable.

Drainage work in some of the Southern states can only be carried on during the winter months as the unsanitary conditions of these swamps in the summer season prohibits the work being done. Notwithstanding these unfavorable conditions, thousands of dollars is being expended annually in drainage work and the large areas of waste land found in that locality are being transformed to productive farms and the sanitary conditions vary m uch improved.

The department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., has established a department of drainage which is under the direction of Hon. C. G. Elliott, who is one of the very best authorities on drainage and irrigation in the country. It has been given out by this department in a bulletin recently published that there is an area approximating 83,840,000 acres of waste land lying east of the one hundredth meridian which can be reclaimed by drainage. It is also estimated by this department that the area of land too dry for agricultural purposes and which can be reclaimed by irrigation lying west of this meridian is bout equal to the wet lands to the east. From five to six millions of acres of these wet lands are found in Minnesota, every acre of which can be brought under a state of cultivation at comparatively low cost.

Investigations conducted by the department of agriculture in parts of the "Great Everglades of Florida" show that a large proportion of these swamps cannot be rendered profitable for agricultural purposes and will probably remain in their natural condition for all time. The soil, when drained, does not contain nor will it retain the elements necessary for plant life.

It is estimated that fully 10 per cent of the irrigated lands of the West have become too wet for agricultural purposes; another result of irrigation without proper drainage has been the accumulation of alkali on the lawer lands so as to prevent the growing of crops.

The great drainage and irrigation projects being carried on in other lands evidence the fact that we are not the only nation engaged in this reclamation business. The British government has constructed at a cost of over $22,000,000 the great Assuan dam for the purposes of regulating the flow of the River Nile, thus guarding against the inundation of the land along the Lower Nile and holding a reserve for irrigation purposes in time of drought. It is estimated that the cost per acre for the lands benefited by this dam is $26. Extensive irrigation and drainage projects are being carried out in British India, and millions of acres of land along the Ganges, which a few years ago were worthless, disease-breeding marshes, are being changed into healthful and productive localities. The government of Italy has expended millions of dollars during the last decade in drainage and irrigation work and some of the best and most expensive ditches in the world are found in Italy. Russia is keeping pace with the progress of other nations in this line and large areas of swamp and marsh lands have been reclaimed, notably among which is the great Pinsk marsh in Southern Russia. The Canadians are also showing much activity along this line, severl large ditches having been constructed by the Manitoba government and others are being contemplated.

It is evident that the days of exploration and colonization are passing and that an area of reclamation is now on. Our government is expending annually millions of dollars in reclaiming the arid lands of the West, and lands that have hitherto been barren, uninhabitable wastes are gradually being transformed into productive areas. The reclamation of these lands by the irrigation ditches costs from $8 to $15 per acre. The drainage of the swamp lands of Illinois and Indiana, including tile drainage, has cost from $3 to $50 per acre. The drainage of the wet lands of the Lower Mississippi, based on the best information obtainable, is costing about $8 per acre. A conservative estimate would place the cost of draining and reclaiming all the swamp lands of Minnesota, if carried out under a comprehensive drainage plan, at $2 per acre.

The swamp lands of Minnesota are the most productive found in the state. They will produce from two to three good tons if hay per acre; the price of this commodity in the northern part of the state has ranged from $10 to $15 per ton and hay has been shipped in from Nebraska and other states to supply the demand at these prices. The land when reclaimed will produce not only hay but any other product grown in this state. We have reached a stage in our development when it has become imperative that the large swampy areas in the state be drained. The vacant government lands suitable for agricultural purposes are nearly all occupied. The convenience and welfare of the people of the northern part of the state require that roads be constructed and that the swamp lands be reclaimed and occupied. The development of the northern part of the state must necessarily be retarded unless these marshes and swamps are eradicated. To leave this property of the state in its present condition, forming as it does, great barriers in the pathway of progress, means simply the maintaining of an obstruction in the way of the development of the greatest and richest part of the state.

In this connection too much stress cannot be placed on the importance of having the large swamps of Red Lake Indian reservation placed under the control of authorities vested with power to drain and reclaim them. Many of the settlers who have taken homesteads here and whose lands are isolated by intervening swamps are abandoning their claims and looking for lands where the prospects of general settlement are more favorable.

At the close of the year 1904, $282,500 had been expended by the state of Minnesota for drainage work. With this money thirty-four state ditches were constructed, making a total length of, approximately, 200 miles of state ditches. The price per cubic yard for doing the work has varied from 6½ to 29 9-10 cents, depending on the nature of the work. Nearly 91 per cent of the total amount appropriated has been paid the contractors; the balance, or about 9 per cent, was paid for right-of-way, advertising and printing, expense of commission examining ditches, and engineering expenses. The average cost per cubic yard for the construction of state ditches to date, including all incidental expenses, is about 11 3-10 cents. The above figures include the expense of the surveys of a number of ditches that were abandoned.

The bill passed at the last session of the legislature known as the Cole bill is a very important measure. This bill contemplates a topographical survey of all the swamp lands belonging to the state for the purpose of obtaining data from whic a comprehensive plan of the drainage of all state swamp lands can be made, together with maps, plans and estimates of the cost of doing the work. It is expected that this survey will be completed and reports of the work published before the next legislature will convene. The data obtained by such a survey will be very valuable, not alone to the state drainage commission, but to every citizen of the state, and, it is hoped, that with such information available, the next legislature will see the wisdom of a large reclamation of state lands.

The isolated parts of Beltrami, Itasca, Cass, St. Louis and Cook counties require the construction of drainage ditches to give such localities proper construction with other parts of these counties. There is probably not a single instance in the counties named where a public highway could be constructed so as to reach the remote parts of these counties where such roads would not cross large areas of state swamp lands. Ditches can frequently be laid out so that the earth excavated from the ditch can be used to construct a public highway along the bank. Since the Grindeland drainage law took effect, thousands of dollars have been expended by many of the counties of the state in drainage work. Polk county has expended over $500,000 and has constructed 425 miles of ditches. Marshall, Kittson, Red Lake, Wilkin, Otter Tail, Stearns, Douglas, Todd, Meeker, Freeborn, Faribault, Jackson, Murray, Nobles, Redwood, Renville, McLeod, Kandiyohi, Waseca, Steele, Washington, Roseau, Beltrami, Wadena, Sibley, Scott, Crow Wing, Kanabec and Isanti and many other counties have been constructing ditches under this law, and the counties of the state that have swamp lands and are not in the ditching business are behind the times and should waken up.

Drainage work is frequently delayed by reason of a misunderstanding of the workings of the drainage law by county officials. The last session of the legislature revamped the old drainage law and now we have a law under which drainage work can be executed in a much more satisfactory manner than under the old law.

The wealth of the pine forests which has done more than anything else to build up Northern Minnesota is fast disappearing. In a few years the cities and villages in Northern Minnesota that have been built up and sustained by the lumber industry will have to look to other sources for their maintainence, and unless the drainage work in Northern Minnesota is carried on on a more extensive scale and the agricultural and other resources of the northern part of the state are developed, the business interests of these cities and villages will be sure to suffer a loss.

The drainage convention to be held in Crookston Aug. 1, 1905, will undoubtedly be one of the most important drainage meetings ever held in the state. An educational campaign has been carried on by the drainage enthusiasts of the state and public-spirited citizens generally, for the past twenty years, and at the present time the people are only too anxious to get a chance to discuss drainage projects.

Bunkie's Court—Or, How the Policeman Question was Settled.

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

[A Humorous Story for Boys.]

"What are you going to be when you grow up?" asked freckled Fred of Billy.

"A law-yer," promptly answered Billy. "What are you a-goin' to be?"

"W'y, that's the very same thing I'm goin' to be, too," answered freckled Fred. "Ma and pa they both say I'm to be a law-yer. Pa says every other business may be grabbed up by the Trusts or go clean dah-smash, but that just as long as two people live on top the earth to quarrel and go to court there'll be business for the lawyer."

"That's why I mean to be a lawyer, cos there's money in it," said Billy. "But as soon as I get rich—a thousand dollars in the bank, you know—then I mean to go into the business I like best of all."

"What's that?" interrogated freckled

Freckled Fred began to present his side of the case.

Fred, cutting a twig from a hedge bush and settling himself comfortably in the shade to whittle.

"A policeman," informed Billy, with a mingling of awe and reverence in his voice.

"Guess I'll change my occupation, too, when I get to be a man," said freckled Fred, liking the idea suggested by Billy.

"What'll you do after you're through being a lawyer?" Billy asked.

Freckled Fred thought a minute. He could not make up his mind that there was any other calling quite up to the one Billy had chosen, so he decided he, too, would turn into a blue-coated guardian of the Public's welfare.

"W'y, I reckon I'll be a policeman, too," he said.

"You can't do it," remonstrated Billy. "You've got to be something else. You can be a storekeeper, or a conductor on the steam cars—or—or you can be a doctor, but you can't be a policeman. I thought of it first. I don't mind your bein' a lawyer, but I do mind you copyin' off of me all the time."

"Guess I can be whatever I please," said freckled Fred, boldly asserting his rights.

"What's the racket?" asked a voice from the hedge, and looking up freckled Fred and Billy saw Bunkie, the leader of the boys in that end of town, peeping through the green foliage.

"Say, Bunkie, come in here. Fred 'n I are havin' a arguement," said Billy. "You can creep through that gap there at your left—no need to go back to the gate."

"Yep, come in an' settle our de-spute," urged freckled Fred.

Bunkie opened the boughs of the hedge near the gap and entered the yard. He was closely followed by his twin brothers "Tom 'n Tim," who were his shadow. Where Bunkie went Tom 'n Tim went also.

The three sat down on the grass near freckled Fred and Billy. Freckled Fred at once began to present his side of the case. Bunkie, being a fellow 14 years of age, was thought to possess great wisdom. Disputes among the boys were always settled by Bunkie's verdicts.

"Now, Bunkie, this is the way it is," said freckled Fred, sitting up on his heels and becoming excited. "I said I meant to be a policeman, and Bill here says I be a policeman, and Bill here says I dassent—'cause he's intending to be one. But—"

"Hold on!" cried Billy. "Get that straight. I said first that I was going to be a law-yer an' you straight-off said you meant to be a law-yer, too. Then I said I was going to be a policeman after I was through with lawing. You didn't do a thing but pop in an' say—"

"Lookie here," broke in Fred. "I told you that I'd meant for a long time to be a law-yer, for pa and ma—they made up their minds long ago about that. I told—"

"I ain't talking about the lawyer business; I'm talking 'bout the policeman matter," interrupted Billy.

"Stiddy, stiddy!" warned Bunkie, holding up a cautioning finger. "Just be slow. Nothing was ever done in a hurry with two talkin' at once. Now, since you both agree to be lawyers, let us see just how well fitted you are for the jobs. Here's a case to handle; here's as good a place as any for a trial. I'll hold court, act as judge and Tom 'n Tim can round up the other kids so I can panel a jury. This thing's got to be done accordin' to the rules of justice and no foolin'."

Freckled Fred and Billy expressed their willingness to follow Bunkie's advice in the matter, and Tom 'n Tim went off on the run to "round up" the jurors. They found Smithy busy cleaning up his father's yard, but when he was informed that his services were desired in the back yard of Billy's home, where a case was to come to trial, he threw down rake and hoe and went off in answer to the law's summons. Art Brown and lazy Slim were found making a kite in an old stable back of Art's home. When Tom 'n Tim told them they were needed "to set on a jury" the kite frame was laid aside, and, like Smithy, the two took off toward Billy's back yard.

Next Tom 'n Tim found "Catty" Hoover on his way toward the river, where he intended to pass the day fishing. But when informed of the "doings," and that he was to be "a jury," he hid his fishing rod and bait in some weeds near the road and ran off with all possible speed to the place of meeting.

When all had assembled in a group under a big elm tree (four jurors were thought by Bunkie to be enough, for there was less chance of a hung jury when a few comprised it) Bunkie took a seat on a chunk of wood and said:

"Now, we'll swear in the jury."(Bunkie, as well as most of the boys in the group, had attended court a few times, and he felt quite familiar with the business of the courtroom). "I'll appoint Tom to be the clerk of the court and Tim can act as marshal. Marshal, you'll see that good order is kept and that nobody will be allowed to spit on the floor. Gentlemen of the jury, please stand in a row and have your oath took."

Art, Lazy Slim, "Catty" and Smithy quickly formed a row, getting the toes of their bare feet on a line in the grass. Then they waited.

"Well, clerk of the court, ain't you next to your job?" asked Bunkie, the judge. "Here, minister, the oath of of of fi-delity to the juries."

Tom stood up in front of the jurors, grinned and rattled some marbles in his pocket.

"Go on," commanded the judge.

"What'll I say?" asked confused Tom.

"Pshaw! As much as you've been in court with me and don't know how to say the oath. Step to one side; I'll have to do it myself."

"Say just what I say—after I'm done," he said. "I promise to speak the truth, the whole tr— Wait, I'm givin' the wrong oath. That's the one for witnesses and prisoners. Here, this is it: 'I promise to decide in favor of the right man, whether I think he deserves it or not. My mind shan't be bias. Amen.' "

The four jurors repeated the oath in a mumble, holding up hands; then the judge told them to be seated.

"Now, marshal, you may lead the pros'cuting lawyer up. He may—may—w'y, he is to file his side first," said the judge, getting a bit mixed up over the correctness or incorrectness of the proceeding. But, remembering that no one present was the wiser, he quickly recovered himself and went on: "Bill and Fred, which of you is for the pros'cution? Speak up briskly. No time to play in a courtroom."

"W'y, I'm suing him," said Freckled Fred, jerking a thumb toward Billy.

"You ain't, neither," exclaimed Billy. "The complaint is made by me. I'm pros'cuting you."

"Clappers closed," roared the judge. "This ain't a woman's club. One is to speak at a time, and before speaking a feller must raise to his feet and address the court. I am the judge, and must be called 'your honor.' "

The jurors looked at one another and snickered. Their conduct was not lost on the judge.

"Marshal," he cried, turning to Tim, "why don't you keep order in the courtroom? Don't you see the jury laughing?" Then, turning to the row of jurymen, he said: "Gentlemen of the jury, you have shown contempt of court. You are each fined a penny. The marshal will collect the amount at once from you. Please shell out and don't disturb the peace of this courtroom while you are at it." The faces of the jury became grave. One of them looked a bit rebellious. "Marshal, proceed with the collection," commanded the judge, sternly.

Tim presented his fat, dirty palm under the nose of the first juryman. "I ain't got a penny, honest injun," said the juryman, who was "Catty" Hoover. "See?" and he turned his pockets inside out.

"Well, what have you got?" asked the Judge. "You ain't got a cent in your jeans nor you ain't got any sense in your pate. Pass to the next gent, marshal."

"I ain't got a penny, neither," declared the second juryman, who was Lazy Slim.

"Let's see your pock-ets," commanded the Judge. Lazy Slim turned his pockets out. A handful of string, fish hooks, bent nails, etc., dropped into his palm. Shyly he hid a bright, shining bit under his thumb. "What's that shiny thing you hid?" asked the Judge. Guiltily Lazy Slim uncovered the object in question, and replied: "It's a smoth dime what ain't any good. Mamma gave it to me 'cause the vegetable man got it off on her and nobody else won't take it."

"Well, I reckon it's worth a cent," said the Judge. "You can pay your fine by leaving that dime till you do get a penny to redeem it."

Lazy Slim shook his head defiantly, to the astonishment of the court, pocketed his dime and other pocket belongings and said: "I ain't going to give up my slick dime. I didn't do nothing anyway to be fined for. I wasn't whispering."

"Yes, he did whisper," declared Art Brown. "You whispered as much as I did."

"Did you whisper?" asked the Judge, with a frown, addressing Art.

"W'y, none of us really said anything, but we did the next best thing—we snickered and winked. But we wasn't snickering at you, Bunkie, it was Tom 'n' Tim made us laugh. Them two kids looked so funny." And Art smiled in remembrance.

Never mind about Tom 'n' Tim's looks," scowled the Judge. "And your testimony goes against yourself. You accused Slim of whispering, then you say that no one said anything. Guess we'll have to arrest you for forgery—I mean—I mean—per-gery."

Tom 'n' Tim looked frightened. "Fergery!" they whispered in a breath, looking at Art.

"Well, if you arrest me you'll have to be as quick as greased lightning," Art cried out, leaping the low hedge like a deer and leaving a cloud of dust behind him as he flew down the road.

"Lookie here, Bunkie," said Billy in a displeased voice, "this is no way to run a court of justice. Instead of settling Fred's and my dispute you raise a scrap with the jury and break up the whole perceeding."

"Don't talk too sprightly to me," warned the judge, glaring at Billy. "You may find yourself face to face with a nickel fine for sassing the court."

"No, siree!" came a remonstrance from freckled Fred. "You needn't be so sure of your power to fine folks. We'll adjourn court till we find a better judge—if this is your way of doing the law business."

"You bet we will," agreed Billy, a friendly glance toward freckled Fred.

"All right, gents," coolly spoke Bunkie. "Go on and try your own cases; find each other guilty and both get locked up in the jug. As for me—I mean to be the head policeman of this town long before either of you is old enough to vote; so you needn't bother yourselves about fussling over that little job. I've got an end of it in my vest pocket now."

Fred looked at Billy, Billy looked at Fred. Bunkie's words were disquieting. Then Billy said, easily: "Oh, we'll be lawyers, and law you out of your job."

"No, you won't," vociferated Bunkie.

"Tom 'n' Tim will be the two most prom'nent lawyers in this town, and I'll throw all my arrests in their hands. You'd starve for business with them against you."

Then Bunkie rose from the stump seat, slowly shook down his trousers and smashed a mosquito on his nose. "Come, Tom 'n' Tim, let's go swimming," he said, and with the twins at his heels Bunkie walked off down the street, headed for the creek, a mile distant.

The three lingering jurymen looked at Billy and freckled Fred. "Well," said Billy, yawning, what'll we all do?"

"Go fishing," said "Catty" Hoover, remembering his hidden fishing tackle and bait. "All right," they all agreed, and an hour later found the bunch within seeing range of the swimming pool, where Bunkie and Tom 'n' Tim disported their shining bodies in the water like so many fish.

And there on the bank freckled Fred and Billy decided "to make it up" with Bunkie and let the little matter of future occupation wait till they were through vacation.

Answer to last week's cut-out puzzle.

Little Biographies of Big Masters.

In Antwerp, in the year 1599, Anthony Van Dyck was born. Between the ages of 10 and 15 he was apprenticed to the painter, Van Balen. From him Van Dyck went to the studio of Rubens where he pursued his studies under that great master. At the age of 19 he had the honor of becoming a member of the Guild of Antwerp, a distinction which none so young as he had ever before won.

In imitation of his great teacher — or perhaps through his influence—Van Dyck directed his art toward the ideal and sublime. In 1621 Van Dyck visited London, Genoa, Florence, Venice and other Italian cities. While in Rome he painted portraits of the Barberini and Colonna families. Returning to Genoa he was warmly received by the best families there. During his stay in Genoa he painted the 50 portraits which still hang in the Rosso Palace, the galleries Durazzo, Pallavicini, Balbi, Spenola and Cattaneo. To this day no portraits have surpassed these in excellence of execution.

In 1625 Van Dyck returned to Antwerp, leaving behind him innumerable works of art. On his return to his native city he began painting his most celebrated pictures. The wonderful altar pieces which are still to be seen in many of the churches throughout Belgium were executed in rapid succession. His madonnas and the "Holy Family" are repeated many times, and are full of deep religious feeling and ardent enthusiasm.

In the Munich Gallery are many portraits of friends and fellow-artists. Nobility—even royalty—considered it a privilege to sit to Van Dyck for portraits.

And during the time when he was so busy with all this work in oil he was also employed on those celebrated etchings which are known as the "Iconography of Van Dyck."

In 1632 he was granted the favor of King Charles I. of England, who permitted him to paint the large picture of the royal family which still hangs in the gallery at Windsor. The accomplishment of this many-figure portrait placed him on the pinnacle of his glory. He was appointed court painter, knighted and allowed a considerable yearly sum in the form of a pension. The king and queen were most gracious towards him and he painted no less than 35 or 40 portraits of Charles I. and about the same number of Queen Henrietta. Many of these portraits are masterpieces.

During the last two years of his life Van Dyck did little work and spent most of his time in travel, trying to recover the health which had been sacrificed to hard, constant work. But his career was ending—his work was done, and in the year 1641, at the age of 42, Anthony Van Dyck departed this life in London Town.

Of his art William Hazlitt has this to say:

"There is a quality of flesh color in Van Dyck which is to be found in no other painter, and which exactly conveys the idea of the soft, smooth, sliding, continuous, delicately varied surface of the skin. The objects in his pictures have the least possible difference of light and shade, and are presented to the eye without passing through any indirect medium. It is this extreme purity and silvery clearness of tone, together with the facility and precision of his particular forms, and a certain air of fashionable elegance, characteristic of the age in which he lived, that places Van Dyck in the first rank of portrait-painters."

MARY GRAHAM.

The Story of the Old Tree.

BY MAUD WALKER.

Mabel and little Jack had been over to grandmamma's, and as the day was very hot, they stopped to rest under a fine old shade tree on their way home. Mabel leaned against the cool bark, and little Jack stretched himself on the grass in the shade, with his eyes looking up in the spreading branches that were so abundantly covered with green.

"I wouldn't like being a tree, would you, sister?" asked Jack.

"Oh, I don't know, brother," answered Mabel, a bit absent-minded. "I guess if one were a tree one would not wish to be a boy or a girl."

"I would," declared little Jack. "I'd always want to be alive."

"Well, a tree is alive," said Mabel.

"Yes, but it doesn't eat," argued little Jack. "It never knows anything about raisin cake, nor custard. Mercy—think of being alive and not eating, nor having any pleasures at all! To be a tree meaus to stand still in the same spot all its life."

Just as Jack finished speaking a low murmur came from the lower branches of the great tree, and Mabel and Jack distinctly heard these words: "So you think, little boy, that a tree's life is at best a very dull one; that it does not eat nor sleep, nor enjoy any pleasure. Now, if you have time to listen to my story I think you may change your mind about the tree's existence being such an unenviable one. Do you wish to hear me?"

While these words were falling upon the children's ears little Jack had become frightened at such an unnatural thing as a tree having a voice, and had crept close to his sister's side. "What is it, sister?" he whispered, snuggling close to her for protection.

"It sounded like the tree talking," answered Mabel, who was not in the least afraid. She knew that so beautiful and noble an old tree would do them no harm. But she was much surprised at what she heard—or seemed to hear—and she pinched herself to see if she were really awake. Finding that she was not indulging in a fairy dream, she looked up and said: "Certainly, dear old tree, we will be delighted to hear what you have to say. We are in no hurry, for mamma gave us permission to stop and rest along the way both going and coming.'

"Well, to begin, I shall go back to the time when I was a little tree. That was many years ago, for now I am a hundred years old. The country was wild and inhabited by Indians. Many times a powwow has been held here near me. When I was an infant—a sapling—the foot of white man had not pressed this soil. I have witnessed many Indian fights, first between antagonistic tribes, then between the red men and the pale-faces. I have seen the Indian and the buffalo driven out of the land, seen the wigwam give place to the settlers' log and sod cabins, then these have in turn given way for the fine farmhouses that dot this beautifully cultivated land. I have sheltered both weary man and beast. The early settler has pitched camp near me and built his fire with branches and bark that have been cast from me in the course of time. As the years rolled by and I became of important size I was named as a landmark. People would stop on long journeys to camp in my shelter. I was known for fifty miles round as the Big Oak, and I was the only tree that without fear or favor stood the terrible prairie fires half a century ago. Once a cyclone passed over this place where I stand, but I was too firmly rooted in the hard-packed soil to be much injured. True, I was a bit wounded, as I lost several limbs and was badly twisted. But my recovery was rapid, and before the summer was over no one could tell from my appearance that I had ever suffered.

"Forty years ago your grandmother and grandfather came to live near me. They came to pay me a visit the very day of their arrival.

"Oh, what a beautiful tree!" your grandmother cried on coming close to me. And I admired her as much as she did me, for she was a beautiful, slim, girlish bride. And your grandfather was as fine a specimen of vigorous, noble manhood as I had ever beheld. And let me tell you I had seen some mighty brave men; men who took their lives in their hands when they came to open up the frontier; men who never felt fear nor knew the meaning of the word coward.

"Well, your dear grandparents took up the land on which they still live and on which I remain an old sentinel still. The fields were plowed and crops grown all about me, and never but once did I come near losing my life. That was one winter when your mama was a little girl like the little Miss now resting against my side. There was a fuel famine in this part of the state. Continued snowstorms had cut off all traffic by rail and the supply of coal and wood gave out. Then the people began burning corn. Pretty soon this commodity began to dwindle, and this meant starvation to the stock if it continued. One winter morning your grandfather and a hired man came to me with axes on their shoulders. There was other timber on the place, but it skirted the little creek, and your grandfather thought it best to sacrifice me, as I was growing old. Besides, I was right in the middle of this fine wheatfield and my roots crept out for many feet all round to gather the moisture and richness from the soil. You see, my little man, I do eat. Well, as I was saying, here came your grandfather to take my life on that winter morning. As he stood contemplating me he remarked to the hired man: 'I do hate to cut this grand old tree down. It has been a landmark in the county for so long and some of the most notable men of the West have sheltered here in the early days. This spot hovered over by it seems almost like sacred ground.'

Even while your grandfather was speaking I saw coming from the house—not the fine old house they now live in, but their first little three-room frame house—your grandmother. She had seen the danger threatening me and her loyal heart rebelled against the impending doom. Before an ax was raised to cut into my side she had called out to her husband to wait till she should come up. Always granting her wishes, your grandfather put his ax down and waited. 'Don't do it, dear,' your sweet grandmother pleaded. 'I love this old tree like I do the members of my family. Here you and I sat in the shade and planned for the future when we first came to settle here. Here it was that we brought our baby when she was first big enough to crawl. Here she had her first birthday party, and here she loves to come in the summer and build her playhouse. It would break my heart to see this dear old friend gone.'

"Your grandfather sent the hired man to the creek with the order to cut some of the young timber he had been so anxious to save, for in that day timber was more precious than gold, it was so scarce. Your grandmother slipped her arm about me and said: 'Dear old tree, you shall live as long as I do, unless you die from some cause that I have no control over.'

"So the years have glided by and I have been happy. From the top of my branches I can look for sixty miles—away to the Blue Hills. I have seen the springs come and go; the birds have built their nests in my laps for nearly a century. Squirrels often forsake the timber on the creek and come to live in my thick network of branches. The wind sings its most beautiful songs through my foliage, and the soft white snow clings lovingly about me in winter, cloaking me from the cold. During the summer the little ones—you know, my dears, who I mean—play in the shade I furnish, just as their parents played here before them. And, perhaps, they may come here on moonlight nights to woo—and be wooed—in the years that are not so very far off. Just so it was with their mother. Seated beneath my boughs, your dear parents told their love for one another, and I heard their vows of faith, which have been so truly kept. Ah, my dears, much happiness I have witnessed, and some sorrow and disappointment as well. But life is not all summer for the tree any more than it is for the boy and girl.

"But I have talked too long, I fear, for your mamma is looking for you. She has just come onto the porch and is shading her eyes from the sun with her hand as she looks down the road in this direction. But before you go let me tell you that I am happy here. Though I have dwelt in this very same spot for a century, I have seen more than any traveler has ever seen, for so much has come my way.

"Now, my dear little friends—who seem to almost belong to me in a way—I shall say good-by."

Mabel rose and looked up into the branches, sighing gently. Little Jack, wide-eyed, whispered: "I wish it would tell us some more."

"No, no, brother; you must not ask too much. Just think how old it is, dear, dear old tree! Why, it knew grandmamma and grandpapa when they were young, isn't it wonderful? But we must go. It says mamma is looking for us, and it can see from its top branches, you know. Come." "It shall never, never be cut down—while it belongs to this family," emphatically declared Jack, running down the road toward home, his heart full of the wonderful things that had happened.

"I wouldn't like being a tree, would you, Sister?"

We love to hear dear grandmamma
Tell stories of her past.
She tells of times when she was young,
And says: "Time does fly fast,
For just a little while ago
Your mamma was a tot,
And that was—let me see—oh, my!
I really have forgot."

"But tell us of yourself, dear gran,"
We cry, an eager throng,
And gather 'round her armchair
To help the tale along.
Then she will smile and nod her head
And ask: "What shall it be?
A story of the long ago—
Of grandpapa and me?

"Well, well, we met when I was ten,
And grandpa was some older;
He was about as tall as Fred,
And I reached to his shoulder.
He walked to school each day with me,
My books he always carried;
And as we older grew, you know,
Along the road we tarried

"To chat of times when he would be
A man both big and great,
And then we'd stop to talk it o'er
Again beside the gate.
Then as the months rolled into years
Your grandpa chose a wife,
And close they've wal'ed together
Through all their changing life.

"Two sets of little ones have come
And played about my knee,
And helped to put some extra boughs
On our big family tree.
Some tears of sadness we have shed,
But glad songs we have sung;
And in the lives of you, my dears,
Grandpa and I are young." M. D.W.

Letter Enigma.

My first is in velvet, but not in silk.
My second is in cream, but not in milk.
My third is in call, but not in reply.
My fourth is in anger, but not in cry.
My fifth is in tinkle, but not in bell.
My sixth in in dirge, but not in knell.
My seventh is in open, but not in shut.
My eighth is in want, but not in hut.
My whole spells the name
Of a time most dear
To the hearts of all children
At this time of year.

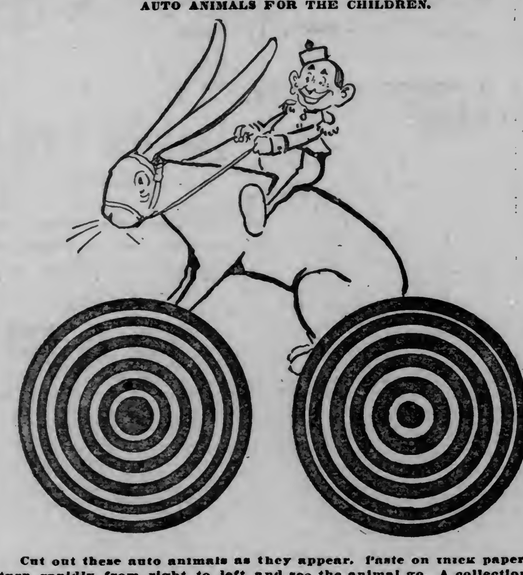
Made-over Nursery Rhymes.

Old Mother Hubbard looked in the cupboard,
And found there a nice piece of pie;
"Who is it for?" asked the old dog, Poor;
And the old dame answered "I."

AUTO ANIMALS FOR THE CHILDREN.



Cut out these auto animals as they appear. Paste on thick paper, turn rapidly from right to left and see the animal go. A collection of these animals will bring delight to the little ones when they have to stay indoors.
